Lad is doing okay on that end when he gets everyone into hot water by trying to play Cupid when the girl and camp director break up over the former's practical jokes. He steals a book on nervous diseases and sends love notes to the girl written in medical terms. Since all have sex implications there's trouble ahead. The ending finds everything solved with the once despised boy the camp hero after he's the deciding factor in winning a ball game.

Everyone in the large cast acts with unbounded enthusiasm. The authors have provided some real laugh lines but the idea of teenagers giving out with wisecracks on love and sex wears a little thin after the first act. Youthful actors take top honors and manage to avoid irritating mannerisms employed by many young thespians. Ronnie Jacobi is especially good as the boy who changes from the studious type of introvert to a regular fellow. Paul White, Donald Hastings, Roy Sterling, Bart Roe and Joan Shepard are fine as irrepressible campers.

A Lady Passing Fair

Bridgeport.

Henri Leiser production, in association with Gribble Prod., of comedy in three acts (three scenes) by Henry Wagstaff Gribble. Stars Hilda Simms, Frederick O'Neal, Earle Hyman; features Richard Angarola. Staged by Gribble; settings, Frederick Fox. Opened at Lyric, Bridgeport, Jan. 3, '47; $3.60 top.

Claude Harper	Ernest Sarracino
Miss James	Judith Allen
Patrick Manico	Richard Angarola
Paul Freeman	Frederick O'Neal
Joan Freeman	Hilda Simms
Dominick Meriwether	George Fisher
Everett DuShane	Earle Hyman
Diane Giles	Basile Spears

Write off this one as a spurious by-product of "Anna Lucasta." The stager of that all-Negro hit, Harry Wagstaff Gribble, strikes out as author-director of "A Lady Passing Fair" and, even more regrettably, wastes the talents of the three original cast-toppers of "Anna"—Hilda Simms, Frederick O'Neal and Earle Hyman.

Except for a delightful display of musical and comic talent in the second act, the Gribble opus is extremely hard to take. It's a confusion of race problem play, FBI melodrama, magic, Shakespeare, Villa-Lobos and upper-class Harlem. A lobbywag suggested "Saroyan in Blackface," but that was during intermission, when there was still hope.

Three of the eight characters are okay. The sympathetic one of these is Pat Manico, young ex-GI flier starting in the New York headquarters of the aeronautical company owned by his father. Before the latter's departure on a long trip he hires a new file clerk, Joan Freeman, who claims she is Creole but is a Negro, the "Lady Passing Fair" of the title.

Joan's husband, a chemist who resents his wife's attempts to "pass," walks out in a burn, and during his absence young Manico and his employees get to understand each other. An accomplished 'cellist, Pat visits her home and joins her young brother, a dramatic actor who would be a sepia Hamlet in Georgia, and their friends in a session of instrumental and vocal classics which is the enjoyment peak of the show. Freeman returns but the split with his wife gets worse, especially after Pat received the news that his fiancee, who was permanently injured during the war, has committed suicide.

The third act goes out-and-out espionage meller, with Joan revealing herself definitely as FBI operative and the villain, an executive of the aero firm, getting her in his clutches (while the audience hisses). Before the finish there is an outbreak of fencing, using weapons from the Shakespearean actor's props. Pat goes to Brazil, leaving Joan to forget and try to start anew with her husband.

O'Neal and Hyman exhibit again their brilliant comedy talent as Joan's husband and brother, respectively. O'Neal's delightful humor and Hyman's superb over-emoting are top flight trouping. The lovely Miss Simms' title role assignment does not pose a challenge to her "Anna" and isn't as convincing. Richard Augarola makes the white youth likeable and credible. George Fisher scores both as dancer and singer, particularly in a musical setting by Heitor Villa-Lobos, South American composer, to a voodoo poem which is a second act novelty.

Basile Spears registers as a jivey comedienne and pianist. Judith Allen overacts as a bigoted white secretary, and Ernest Sarracino does magic and handles the heavy chore. Gribble's direction is uncertain. Frederick Fox's office and Harlem living room sets are simple and apparently not expensive. Elem.

Play on Broadway

Love Goes to Press

Warren P. Munsell and Herman Bernstein production of three-act comedy (two scenes) by Martha Gellhorn and Virginia Cowles. Staged by Wallace Douglas; settings by Raymond Sovey. Opened Biltmore, N. Y., Jan. 1, '47; $4.20 top.

Leonard Lightfoot	Gerald Andersen
Tex Crowder	David Tyrrell
Hank O'Reilly	Warren Parker
Joe Rogers	William Post, Jr.
Maj. Philip Brooke-Jervaux	Ralph Michael
Corporal Croup	Peter Bennett
Daphne Rutherford	Georgina Cookson
Jane Mason	Joyce Heron
Annabelle Jones	Jane Middleton
Major Dick Hawkins	Don Gibson
Capt. Sir Alastair Drake	Nigel Neilson

Authors were newspaperwomen abroad during the war and therefore familiar with Allied press quarters in Italy used by correspondents of both sexes. They know their stuff but their comedy about romance doesn't seem to have much of the McCoy about it. Not enough diversion is offered by the play that was originally done in London not so long ago.

Probably a pompous little British major, the press relations officer in charge of the correspondents camp at Poggibonsi, did fall in love with an American girl correspondent, and doubtless she didn't like the idea of wedlock with the stuffy fellow out in some lonely English countryside, but that isn't so amusing. The story is distinctly on the distaff side because of which "Love Goes to Press" should be much more amusing.

The didoes of an entertainer at the front, a very blonde, very British, pretty girl seems to have been better drawn than the other femmes. She's a recognizable character even to her mink coat amid the grime and ruins of buildings overrun by combat troops.

Several American reporters sit around in rightfully sloppy clothes, playing cards and sometimes aware of the romantic interchanges, but usually paying no attention to that kind of stuff. The press room could have been made exciting now and then but there's nothing like that in this play. Standing out is a scene in the makeshift sleeping quarters of the two girl correspondents from over here, especially when one scrambles into her clothes at dawn to be driven somewhere in the commanding officer's car rather than a jeep. But the play has too few interludes that lift it out of what seems to be mediocre stage fare.

Warren P. Munsell and Herman Bernstein brought six players from London, they having been in the original English showing. Best are Georgina Cookson, an E.N.S.A. entertainer, whose Nordic beauty is alluring; Ralph Michael, who is the dapper little major, and Joyce Heron, who is supposed to represent a N. Y. daily. Jane Middleton, who is on the scene for a San Francisco paper, is good. She quit "Made in Heaven" to appear in the new play. Others in a show that should have been better include William Post, Jr., back from the Coast; Gerald Andersen, and Nigel Neilson. Ibee.

B'way Musical Setup in Sharp Upturn With 'Rainbow' and Sleeper 'Scene'

Since Christmas the musical show outlook on Broadway has taken a sharp upturn, four tuners having been added to the list, all with indicated boxoffice strength. There was some difference of opinion about "Beggar's Holiday" and "Toplitzky of Beggar's Holiday" and "Toplitzsky of Notre Dame" but last week's arrivals, "Street Scene" and Finian's Rainbow," drew the kind of notices that had most of the critics reaching for laudatory adjectives.

Neither "Rainbow" nor "Scene" is a musicomedy as such, the latter being operatic by nature, based upon the melodrama of the same title, while the former is a fantasy or play with music. Neither production is long on scenic investiture, both being virtual one-setters, most unusual on Broadway. There are incidental scenes in "Rainbow" but most of the movement and enactment are within a full-stage exterior. "Scene" also has an exterior setting, depicting the street front and sidewalk of a New York tenement house. It is set in "two," utilizing but a quarter of the stage depth. Credit for the performances therefore go to

Joan Edwards Preps Suit on F-C-B Agency In 'Hit Parade' Bounce

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Joan Edwards, who's set to go off the Lucky Strike "Hit Parade" Jan. 18, is preparing to sue Foote, Cone & Belding for breach of contract. She's taking the cue from Tony Martin's victory over Bourjois on the strength of an oral contract crooner had with the sponsor. Miss Edwards' pact is similarly on the oral side, and she regards the Martin case as a worthy precedent.

Singer points out that she would not have gone out to the Coast from New York for one option period. She also cites the fact that she moved her family with her. Her husband, a musician, is forced to wait six months before he can work in order to conform to rules of the Los Angeles Local of the American Federation of Musicians.

American Tobacco is not planning a replacement for Miss Edwards, but will use different guests weekly.

WASH. BILL WOULD NIX NEGRO TABU

Washington, Jan. 14.

A bill to force theatres, nitteries, restaurants and other public places in the District of Columbia to open their doors to Negroes was introduced last week by Representative William L. Dawson (D., Ill.), one of the two Negro members of Congress.

Bill, which seeks to crack the town's Jim Crow policy, would provide fines of $10 to $100 and 10 days to 100 days per offense. Violators would also be liable for personal damages ranging from $100 to $500.

N. Y. Nitery Biz On Upbeat Again

New York nitery ops, for the first time since the cafe recession started in October, experienced an appreciable business pickup which indicated that 1947 may be a good year despite prophecies to the contrary.

Business, last week, bounced back to near wartime levels, picking up as much as 50% in some spots. Average rise, however, was around 25%, with upped takes fairly evenly spread around town.

Some bonifaces, however, weren't optimistic that it would last. Some attributed the hike to the fact that two major west side boites were temporarily shuttered. The Carnival, which siphoned off considerable trade from many cafes with Milton Berle as the headliner, closed after New Year's eve for refurbish-

UNSHAKEN BY GOVT. WARNINGS

By BOB STAHL

Despite warnings from top Government officials and leading economists on the general state of current U. S. business conditions, survey among sales chiefs of the leading film companies reveals extreme optimism that film business will continue along the merry path of record-breaking grosses it established during 1946. Only word of caution appended by the film toppers is that a premium will be placed on better showmanship and quality of pictures during 1947 if present boxoffice levels are to be maintained—

Wall Street's Dim View

Wall Street continues to take a dim view of the film biz and its profit prospects in '47, grooving its stant to the Government's general industrial jitters. As such, the Street does not share film sales toppers' bright forecasts of maintained solid returns. Stock quotes on the majors' common, along with liquor shares, still lead the parade downward on slipping price levels.

Indicating the Street's bearish streak on films are prices which are now approximately one-half those of last summer's peak. Yesterday's (14) closing quotes show 20th-Fox at 32⅝ from a high of 63; Columbia, 18⅞ from 36; Loew's, 23⅜ from 41, etc. Industrial leaders are comparatively stronger, i.e., U. S. Steel, now 69 from a high of 97, and General Motors, 54 from its 80 peak.

Bookies Set Jones, Stewart As Faves In Hollywood's Academy Futurity

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Hollywood's bookies, who will lay odds on anything from a football game to a turtle race, have turned their attention to the Oscar Derby. They have made Jennifer Jones and James Stewart favorites for thesping honors in their future book.

The sharpshooters can't make up their minds about the production honors, so they have placed three pictures at the top of the list.

Lovely Lively Carole

Memphis, Jan. 14.

Newspaper telegraph editors are still chuckling over the teletyping miscue that went out one day last week in a United Press item regarding the selection by a certain fashion organization of the nation's "best undressed women."

Copy as received at many news desks reported that Carole Landis of the films had been honored as the woman who'd be "liveliest in a nightgown." Few hours later a correction came over the wires. That "l" in "liveliest" should have been an "o."

GOP Stymies Cut Of 20% Amus. Bite

Washington, Jart. 14.

Republican house leaders have ruled out any reduction of the 20% federal admission tax bite, and the wartime rate will definitely continue until at least June 30, 1948. The decision to maintain all excise taxes, including the 10% boost on peacetime amusement taxes, was made at a Republican Party caucus and puts the quietus on industry hopes of an early tax slash.

Republicans intend concentrating on a proportionate reduction in income taxes. With President Truman, Sen. Robert Taft, Harold E. Stassen and other potent figures all definitely opposed to lifting of ex-

Wm. Powell Cleared By Court of Splicing Alimony With Tax Slash

New method by which one could escape both high income taxes and alimony payments in one fell swoop was revealed in New York Tax Court last week, though the case, involving the U. S. Tax Commissioner and William Powell, found the actor cleared of any charges.

Seems that 20th-Fox wanted Powell to star in "The Baroness and the Butler," back in 1937, but Powell refused unless Eileen Wilson, his ex-wife, was hired as an actress. Company agreed and, in a separate contract, signed with Miss Wilson to pay her $150,000 for 10 pictures. When Miss Wilson died in 1942, she had been paid $519.23 weekly for

Attendance 'Off' At Film Boxoffices But Dollar Volume Remains High

While gossip of a tremendous recession currently at film boxoffices is being widely heard throughout the country, the men with the figures declare 'tain't so. Business at the moment, when averaged out over the nation, is just a few percentage points, at most, down from the same period last year—and that's still nothing short of terrific as compared with prewar standards.

The danger signal for the industry, as most film men see it, however, is that attendance is off. While dollar volume remains pretty much on a par with January, 1946, average admission prices have inched up 4-5c, which indicates fewer patrons are shoving their coin across the boxoffice sill.

Despite the strong nationwide average, there nevertheless appears to be more than the usual spottiness about grosses. And that's apparently being accentuated by a product shortage. When strong films are available—"Razor's Edge" (20th) and "Blue Skies" (Par) seem to hold the lead at the moment—biz rises to the sensational category. But there doesn't appear to be a sufficient number of such clicks—if there ever were—to keep b.o.'s constantly soaring.

There's general agreement that the picnic is over and the public is being considerably more choosey than it was, which is also accounting for that spottiness. Another change in the general picture which indicates the country is slipping back into a more normal economic status is the return of the midweek blues as b.o. emphasis swings to weekend biz as against weekdays. Also the upturn in matinee patronage in many locations as the public finds itself with more time on its hands and makes an effort to bent out the higher evening admission taps.

Regionally, the south appears to be below the rest of the nation in the level of grosses. The east is holding its own, while the midwest is good in agricultural and dairy areas, but naturally off in what were inflated wartime industrial territories. The west is down somewhat, but that varies, too, according to the nature of the area. Los Angeles and Oakland are off, for instance, while Phoenix is even with last year and Denver is up.

The last quarter of 1946 was just a little ahead of the same period of 1945, but December saw a slump that was felt right through the holiday period. Grosses generally were disappointing over New Year's throughout the country, with the only really bright spot being Chicago—and that again only because of a surfeit of good product. First post-holiday week and the current week are on about a par with a year ago.

The comeback during the past

Washington, Jan. 14.

Very heavy business at the boxoffice during the Government fiscal year beginning July 1, 1947, is forecast on the basis of the President's budget message to Congress last Friday (10).

While President Truman has requested Congress to continue the wartime excise rates after their expiration date — June 30 next — the budget estimates of receipts were based on the return to the old 10% at the boxoffice and 5% on nitery check tabs. This was held to be an indirect admission from the White House that it did not expect compliance from the legislators. (Chances of the tax slash, skidded today (14) when a GOP caucus nixed lifting of excise taxes in favor of a reduction in income tax rates. Further details on page 1).

The admissions tax estimate is $20,100,000 for the nitery nick at 5%; and $215,800,000 for the 10% levy on ticket sales, or a total of $235,000,000. The estimate for fiscal 1947, already more than half as much in the next fiscal year, despite reduced rates, indicates a belief that attendance in theatres and nightclubs will be even heavier than at present.

Other Highlights

Some other highlights in the budget requests:

Mr. Truman upped the request of the Federal Communications Commission to $9,000,000. It is getting about $7,000,000 for the current fiscal year. However, there appears little chance that the economy-minded Congress will allow additional funds to FCC, no matter what song the agency sings.

A sharp increase in the budget of the Library of Congress motion picture project is also asked. Mr. Truman recommended $370,000 for the new year. The Library will spend about $106,000 on this work in the current fiscal year.

The State Department funds for information and cultural purposes are somewhat uncertain since they are concealed here and there in the overall department requests. However, they substantially exceed the $20,000,000 which Congress allowed for the current period. Here again the Congressional budgeteers are figured to prune sharply. The general belief is that Assistant Secretary of State William Benton will get far less than he is currently spending.

The recently revived Office of Government Reports, which includes liaison with the picture and radio industries for the administration, is asking $538,750 for the next year.

The Department of Agriculture, which does considerable film and radio work, is asking $67,400 for the production of films, an increase of about $8,000 over the current year, and $42,100 for the distribution of agricultural information by radio. The money is entirely for the salaries involved.

Pix Storm Signals

and most believe these two factors towards good business will be forthcoming.

President Truman himself warned last week that consumer savings had dwindled to prewar levels and were no longer able to bolster the high demands for goods and services that would mean continued business prosperity. In an economic report to Congress, the President pointed out that the present high prices on most commodities had materially decreased the purchasing price of the dollar, and that the public, consequently, was digging into its savings to bolster its current income. "It is unsafe to assume," Mr. Truman added, "that most American families still have enough savings in hand to supplement current income for any considerable length of time."

With the President's words echoed by other Government officials, film industry observers believe the situation might cut considerably into film grosses. The public has not had a chance yet to satisfy the pent-up demand for many consumer goods impossible to get all during the war. With few signs of any price cuts on such articles as automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, etc., they believe sustained purchase of these articles will necessarily take its toll of the nation's boxoffice.

Scully's Views

Sales chiefs, however, decry this belief as being contrary to the facts already established through experience. Prewar depression illustrated, they point out, that the film business is always among the last major industries to feel the effects of a depression. Indicative of their general optimism is the view of William J. Scully, Universal-International veepee over sales, who declared that "the public must have entertainment; if people can't find money for other things, they can always find it for entertainment."

There is still "plenty of money in circulation," Scully said, "and everybody is spending it. It's still true that good pictures will always do good business and, with all signs pointing to all companies making better pictures, it's unlikely any business recession will hit the film industry, at least during 1947." With film production costs mirroring upped prices on most commodities, Scully predicted there would be no slice in admission prices during the coming year.

Depinet Optimistic

Challenging directly the cautious words of economists, Ned E. Depinet, vice chairman of the RKO board, also voiced extreme optimism on 1947 boxoffice potentialities. Speaking at a year-end luncheon of RKO administrative and exec staffs at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., last week, Depinet declared:

"There is talk afield of a possible business recession. I do not agree with such prophesies. Luckily, business doesn't operate automatically. Human effort plays the major role. It wasn't just the generally good conditions that built up last year's record. Good conditions helped just as poor conditions would hinder. But good or bad, the determining factor rests with us."

Tom J. Connors, 20th-Fox veepee over sales, predicted that 1947 would see an unprecedented peacetime national income of $165,000,000,000-$170,000,000,000, so that the boxoffice take "can't help but be high." Twentieth's production lineup for 1947, which includes a budget of $45,000,000 for 20 top pictures, is being emulated by most other companies, which means the year should see a record output of top quality pictures. Such conditions mean the national boxoffice figures should be "better by far than in 1946," Connors averred. He also declared that pictures would not suffer from an onslaught of consumer goods on the market, claiming pictures are a necessity and do not compete with other articles.

Robert Mochrie, RKO veepee over domestic distribution, predicted the public would shop more for pictures than it did in 1946 but believed it would spend just as much. Boxoffice level should not vary more than one or two percentage points in either direction from the record-shattering 1946 standards, he said, adding that business in subsequent years would follow the general economic condition of the country.

Stymies 20% Cut

cise bite—cause of amusement industry is lost for the year, anyway.

Maintenance of the 20% bite will also mean that many localities that have been sharpening their knives with the idea of cutting off added theatre taxes will have to turn elsewhere. These localities had expected to move into the void and fix admission taxes which would have replaced those of the federal government. Belief in the trade is that attempts to fasten local taps on top of the 20% federal nick would be unfeasible as close to confiscatory.

Woody Herman Takes Disk Jockey Chore

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Woody Herman has turned to part-time disk jockeying. Starts once weekly stint on Sat. (18) vice Al Jarvis on KLAC. Deal is for moola, though admittedly his platter-spinning stipend is not commensurate with his bandstand-earning capacities.

The clarinetist, who broke up his orch in the east just before the Yule, decided to take to disk jockeying instead of reforming a crew here this month after medicos advised him to lay off for at least eight more weeks and pick up some of the 20-odd pounds he is under weight.

Pix, Tele Seen At Peak in '47

Washington, Jan. 14.

Pictures and television appear set for good year in 1947, according to industrial forecasts just issued by the Department of Commerce.

Theatre receipts are expected to continue high, and the sale of video receivers will be terrific, says the Department's report on industrial trends.

In pictures, report stated:

"There is a trend to higher-cost, longer-playing films in Hollywood. It is expected theatre receipts will hold pretty well to the peak year levels of 1946. A new wrinkle will be the development of 16m theatres built in communities where no regular theatres exist. Thousands of small communities exist which are expected to support such small theatres.

"Visual education will get a boost in 1947, with many firms actively engaged in the commercial film field.

"Television is not expected to become a threat to pictures in 1947, but many major television problems have been solved, and competition can be expected in a few years."

The section on radio predicted that 250,000 or more television receivers will be manufactured and put on the market this year, compared with only the handful now out.

"Distribution of the sets," said the forecast, "will be limited by the areas having television coverage—presently only six cities. However, 38 additional stations have been authorized through FCC licenses and are expected to get into operation in the near future.

"The radio industry expects to hit an all-time high in 1947. It is expected that about one-third of all sets manufactured during the last three months of 1947 will be equipped to receive FM broadcasts. Production of AM radios will fall off to make way for sets having both FM and AM reception."

M-G MAY DO PIC BIOG OF McCLELLAND BARCLAY

Deal is pending by which Metro would do a film biog of McClelland Barclay, famed painter of femmes, who was killed in the Pacific during the war while recording battles on canvas on assignment from the U. S. Navy.

A. Newton Plummer, New York printing exec, has acquired rights to the biog from Barclay's family, and has been doing the negotiating with Metro.

Harold Lloyd Asks 400G For 'Stolen' Prattfall

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

Is a prattfall art, and if it is art, is it worth $400,000? That's what Harold Lloyd is asking from Universal in a suit before the Ninth U. S. circuit court of appeals for using one of his copyrighted comedy sequences in a 1942 film titled "So's Your Uncle."

Both Universal and Lloyd are appealing a lower court decision which awarded the comedian $40,000 for infringement of copyright. Lloyd's attorney, Harold A. Fendler, asked the court to "move the decimal point over one place" to boost the award to $400,000. Defendant's attorneys countered with claims that Lloyd's comedy was slapstick and thus public domain, not genuine drama.

The Berle-ing Point

By Milton Berle

Well, here we are on our way out to the Coast by way of 20th Century ...Limited, that is. That's about as close as I'll get to 20th Century-Fox. Intended to take the Southern Route but my baby Vicki can't say "You-all." Everybody's been so nice to me...why, the minute I got on the train the porter didn't know what to do for me...so he didn't. Have my own compartment. Remember during the war when I traveled by train... I had baggage rack No. 6. So many wolves on the train, I had to put a sign on my baby's door..."Please refrain from making nurse." My brother Frank is coming out later...he's been signed to do additional dialog for Harpo Marx. It's not true that Joyce and I are going to the Coast just to get our names in VARIETY's NY to LA column. Confidentially, Joyce has been called out to complete the "Life Story" series. Like Jolson's, Cole Porter's and Kern's. It's to be called "The Egg and I." Felt so happy, I started singing "California, Here I Come"...until the wheels started clicking "You better go back where you started from."

The Great Wit Way

Army Pays $10,350,000 To H'wood on Rentals For U. S., Overseas Pix

Washington, Jan. 14.

The Army has become one of Hollywood's best customers in the domestic and foreign markets. During the Government fiscal year ending June 30 last, the Army Motion Picture Service paid American distributors $10,350,000 — of which about $7,000,000 was for films screened at Army posts in this country and the rest was for the various overseas Army theatres.

The overall figure would have been higher except that the studios contributed free 16m films to the armed forces during the war, and payments for screenings abroad did not begin until October, 1945. In addition, films shown at Army posts in Panama and Hawaii are not included in the totals. The industry makes a separate deal and collects separately with the Canal Department Motion Picture Service and the Middle Pacific Motion Picture Service.

Hedy Asks Pact Washup Due to Impending Birth

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Hedy Lamarr asked Superior Court for immediate abrogation of her player contract with Arnold Pressburger on the plea that she expects to bear a child this spring and wants to be free from business worries.

Pressburger, according to his attorney, is in Europe and will not return until late in March. Judge Caryl M. Sheldon set May 12 as the date of the hearing.

Warrant for Sally

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Superior Court issued a bench warrant for the arrest of Sally Rand, fan dancer, because of her failure to answer a summons involving a judgment for $5,543.

Judgment was obtained in 1943 by Mrs. Olive I. Kephart, who declares she bankrolled the dancer in a stage venture.

NEWS STRIKE DENTS PARIS AMUS. BIZ

Film and legit grosses are being dented badly this week as a result of lack of newspaper advertising since last Thursday (9).

Press employees went on strike at that time, shutting down all the major Paris dailies.

Cugat Gets 175G Bid For Argentine Picture

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Xavier Cugat has been offered $175,000 to take his band to Buenos Aires and make a picture for Attilio Mentasi, owner of Argentina Sono Films. Bid came as result of recent South American junket of Jules Stein, board chairman of Music Corp. of America, which handles Cugat. In addition to the coin, Mentasi reportedly is willing to cede to the batoneer U. S. distribution rights.

Script of projected pic, written by Hugo Fregonese, already has been forwarded to Cugat. Possibility of leader accepting offer is bright, in view of fact for some time he has been plotting South American tour with his band.

Red-Ted Lather

Apparently Ted Husing and Red Barber just can't keep out of each other's hair.

Barber folded his WHN (N. Y.) office to take over Husing's spot at CBS, with Husing moving into WHN as its marathon "Bandstand" disk jockey. But Barber's identification with WHN continues this summer with his Old Gold-sponsored Dodgers ballcasts, from Ebbets Field. And if game time stretches beyond the 5 p.m. period, when Husing takes over "Bandstand," latter must forfeit the time in favor of Barber. If game goes beyond 5:30, Barber gets a switchoff, and Husing will give the inning-by-inning scores on "Bandstand."

INDUSTRY'S U. S. 'CULTURE' VETO

UA, in Legal Maneuver, Offers DOS 'Duel' Distribution—But Is Brushed

In the midst of its bitter legal battle with David O. Selznick, United Artists is reliably reported to have tendered an offer to the producer last week to handle his "Duel In the Sun." It was no indication of a reapprochment, however, but a legal maneuver dictated by John W. Davis' law firm in its agreement to handle the case against Selznick for UA.

Distrib, in making the offer, was virtually certain it would be turned down—as it was. Davis' outfit, Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Sunderland & Kiendl, in recommending that UA "tender performance" of its contract with Selznick, followed earlier recommendations along the same line by Edward C. Raftery, UA prexy. Contention was that the offer would greatly strengthen UA's case. As a result, the board, at its meeting Jan. 6, adopted a resolution to inform Selznick it was ready to handle "Duel" and furtherr discussed the situation at a board meeting yesterday (Tuesday).

Refusal to distribute the $5,500,000 opus was one of the key points in the original resolution of partners Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin to oust Selznick from his one-third partnership in the company. It was later part of the board's resolution when legal action was decided on to cancel DOS's releasing agreement and cut him off from his stock ownership. Since that time the producer has been setting up his own

Eyssell Gripe On Bleeding Pig Cues 'Yearling' Switch

Metro's Technicolor opus, "The Yearling," is going to make the U. S. theatre rounds in two different versions as a result of a last-minute renovation. The change in the finished work was wrought on the insistence of Gue Eyssell, managing director of Radio City Music Hall, who only recently stirred a tempest at M-G by demanding and getting a sizeable cut in playing time of Metro's musical, "Till the Clouds Roll By."

Sequence nixed by Eyssell in "Yearling" and thereupon amputated in the prints heading for the Music Hall depicted a bear badly mauling a pig on a farm. The MH's director hewed to the showcase's policy of eschewing gory details, and since the pig is lensed bleeding a bright Technicolor red, the MH taboo was applied and accepted by M-G toppers.

Eyssell's axing of "Clouds" brought forth plenty of squawks from M-G's studio execs and for a while cast doubt on whether the film would open at the Music Hall. His nix on the bleeding pig, however, convinced M-G toppers that the scene was n.s.g. Consequently, it was dropped on some 200 prints being readied at the Technicolor plant. The 90 or so already in the can, consideration of costs forestalled revamping and those will be distributed—pig and all.

JOHNSTON TO END ARIZ. RECOUPING NEXT WEEK

Washington, Jan. 14.

Eric Johnston is continuing his stay in Phoenix, Ariz., until the end of this week. It's uncertain as to whether or not the Motion Picture Assn. prez will go to Hollywood early next week, but he's set to return to New York, with a stopover in Chicago, by next Thursday (23) or Friday.

Johnston has been recuperating in Phoenix from the attack of pneumonia he suffered during his recent trip to England. Gerald Mayer, in charge of foreign affairs for the MPA, will remain on the Coast awaiting the possibility of Johnston's meeting him there next week for joint discussions with studio toppers.

Spitz on MPPA Board

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Leo Spitz was elected to the board of Assn. of Motion Picture Producers, supplanting Cliff Work, who resigned. Letter of appreciation was voted by the board to be sent Work for his services.

At the same time, board voted $150,000 for start of a technological research program which AMPP head Byron Price stated would "provide means for blueprinting" program of industry-wide technological research with hopes that eventually independent producers will participate fully. Y. Frank Freeman will be in charge of committee which administers fund.

Selznick Plans 1 Every 2 Years

David O. Selznick's plans are to make only one picture himself every two years, but he will serve as exec producer on six or seven films each season to be turned out by a stable of producers at his Vanguard Studios. Paul MacNamara, Selznick pub-ad chief, said in New York last week. MacNamara disclosed that two more producers will be added to the present staff, which includes David Hempstead, Alfred Hitchcock and Allan Scott. One of the producers may come from RKO in the deal by which Dore Schary was released so that company by Selznick a few weeks ago to head its production.

With Technicolor now said to be working at 60% of capacity, despite the strike, MacNamara said Selznick is counting on receiving 75 prints of "Duel in the Sun" by Feb. 22. Thus, he stated, the new Selznick Releas-

Mason-Korda Pact Gives Actor Profit Share Plus Guarantee

Two-picture deal made by James Mason last week with Sir Alexander Korda gives the British star a profit participation in the films plus a guarantee and is said to be "in all respects comparable financially to the arrangements Korda has with first-rank Hollywood players." British producer has pacts with Cary Grant, Paulette Goddard and Orson Welles.

Masson's services won't be required by Korda before next fall, at the earliest, since pix in which the American stars are scheduled to appear are slated for production this spring and summer. Meantime, Mason and his wife, Pamela Kellino, will star in a Broadway-legiter, "Bathsheba," which is set to come into New York in mid-March, after a break-in tour.

The Mason films may be made either in Hollywood or London, since the contract states they are to be produced in the country "most convenient to the star and producer." No story has been definitely decided on yet for the initial film, but several are being negotiated for.

Costs Too High for Pix On Video—Goldwyn

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Stopping between trains in Chicago, Sam Goldwyn called "impossible" any prospect for having Hollywood-produced features shown on television.

He added that a producer would have to get at least $2-3,000,000 for the single airing to get his money back since the pic would be virtually a dead item afterward, and no sponsor could spend that kind of money.

H'WOOD AID NIX KEY TO BREACH

Washington, Jan. 14.

Thumbs-down stance on a State Dept. plea that the Motion Picture Export Assn. throw its distribution facilities in 13 countries in support of the Government's cultural picture program is behind the hard words currently passing between U. S. officialdom and the Motion Picture Assn. As a consequence of this unpublicized rejection, made several months ago and still in effect, the State Dept. has been compelled to operate on its own, using far less adequate embassy facilities.

Government sentiments have been rubbed raw by the outright nix, but the lid was clamped on hot words until last week while the State's diplomatic unsuccessfully to pry MPEA loose from its bearings. Outburst of the tiff is the tipoff that Government officials now consider their efforts a hopeless one and are therefore determined to swing their punches in the public spotlight.

Sharp retort of Joyce O'Hara, MPA proxy Eric Johnston's assistant, to Assistant Secretary of State William H. Benton's remarks re Hollywood, keys the industry's official position in rejecting the Dept.'s original distribution plea. O'Hara branded the Government's

U.S.-French Deal Nips Stiff Curbs

Washington, Jan. 14.

Deal to stave off the stiff new film regulations which were protested last week by Harold L. Smith, Paris rep of Motion Picture Assn., has been worked out by U. S. embassy there, the State Department announced here last night (13).

Smith attacked new regulations which would have forbidden the dubbing of American pix more than two years old, and which would have required the French ministries of finance and of national economy to approve dubbing licenses.

Word received from the embassy discloses that the French have agreed to postpone the dubbing regulation until the U. S. backlog of pix is used up and to withdraw the regulation that the two min-

CAPRA-STEWART DUE TO PLUG LAGGING 'LIFE'

Frank Capra, producer-director of Liberty Films' "It's a Wonderful Life," is slated to arrive in New York from the Coast today (Wednesday), to be followed next Monday (20) by James Stewart, the pic's male lead. Duo will attempt to bolster the faltering biz being done by the film during its current N. Y. preem run at the Globe through a series of personal appearances and press interviews.

Conceding that the n.s.g. grosses on "Life" in N. Y. were due to a stagnant publicity campaign, the flackery department of RKO, through which the film is being released, claims it was hampered in its plans through inability to get Stewart and Capra to N. Y. in time for the opening. Fact that both the star and producer have been off the screen so long during their Army stints has also militated against the film's early boxoffice success, since a large part of the potential audience, apparently, seems to have more or less forgotten them.

PASTERNAK TRAPS 'WOLF'

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Metro handed Joe Pasternak producer reins on "Daddy Is a Wolf," slated for an early start.

Picture, based on a script by Franz Molnar, will be filmed in Technicolor.

Up to 100 Pix Due in 1st Quarter Of 1947 for Buyers; 8 Major Firms Map 67 Releases, Others Set for 33

Cagney, Saroyan Huddle

James Cagney has been in New York during the past week huddling with William Saroyan on screen treatment of "Time of Your Life," Saroyan's play to which Cagney and his brother, William, recently purchased screen rights. Cagney spent the weekend at Saroyan's home at Millneck, L. I., discussing the treatment and yesterday (Tuesday) went to Maine to visit friends for a week.

Cagney will return to New York and then to the Coast next week, according to present plans. "Life" will be the initial film to be made by the Cagneys at their new headquarters in the General Service Studios. They have pushed back "Stray Lamb" and "Lion in the Streets."

Follow Metro Pruning Lead

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

First of the studios to clamp down on production expenses, Metro, which lopped off an estimated $8,000,000 a year, has been followed by other lots though with less publicity about the axe wielding.

At Paramount, 20th-Fox and Warners the loppage for 1947 will be about $4,000,000 each. RKO and Universal-International are using the scalpel for around $2,000,000 each, and Columbia and United Artists are whittling approximately $1,500,000 apiece.

Sales staffers, meanwhile, are phenagling to rebuild the audience appeal to approximately the spot where it was in 1930, when the cash customers registered an all-time high of 110,000,000. The nearest approach to that figure was in 1944, when the attendance reached 97,000,000.

See Nick Schenck In Another Retrenchment Huddle on the Coast

Metro prexy Nicholas M. Schenck was slated to arrive on the Coast yesterday (Tuesday) after training out from the homeoffice Saturday (11).

Since Schenck returned from the Coast less than a month ago, his current trip was considered unusual. Metro homeoffice execs declined to comment on reasons for his going, but it's believed probable he'll huddle further with Louis B. Mayer and other studio execs regarding M-G's announced retrenchment in production costs and the lineup for the 1947 production program.

Schenck announced following his return from his last Coast trip that Metro would slice its number of pictures to 24 from the 31 it turned out last year.

MacKenna, Vetlugin Replace Fadiman at M-G

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Kenneth MacKenna, in association with Voldemar Vetlugin, moves into berth as story department head vacated by William Fadiman at Metro's story department.

MacKenna, who was story head for five years prior to going to war, just returned from London, where he organized story department for Metro's new London studios.

Fadiman had been at Metro 13 years. Understood Fadiman will return to Hollywood from New York within the month to announce a new major studio affiliation.

Film buyers in the first quarter of 1947 will have some 98-100 newly released pix available to stock their screens. With all the companies shaping plans to distribute that total, releasing tempo of '46, in which some 405 films hit the theatres, will carry over for the initial three months of the new year. Of the number, the eight majors are currently planning the release of 63-67 pix and the three minors, plus Eagle-Lion, the balance of 33 films.

Added to these pix are some strong or potentially strong b.o. draws currently in pre-release and first-run situations but not included in the first-quarter total. Among these are such top-drawer films as "Best Years of Our Lives," "It's a Wonderful Life," "Till the Clouds Roll By," "Duel in the Sun," "Razor's Edge" and "Blue Skies."

Pix set for release also include a cluster of double A films from almost all major studios. Promising heavy grosses for both theatres and distribs are Columbia's "The Jolson Story"; Universal's "Temptation" and "Song of Scheherazade"; 20th's "13 Rue Madeleine"; Warners' "Humoresque"; Metro's "The Yearling"; RKO's "Sinbad the Sailor"; Paramount's "California" and United Artists' "Dark Corner."

Columbia tops the majors on number of films to be released with 13 features plus four oaters on the way.

GINSBERG CALLS MEET OF EASTERN, BRIT. EXECS

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Studio meetings will be held at Paramount starting week of Jan. 27 for company heads from east and England with production chief Henry Ginsberg. Adolph Zukor, Frank Farley, London studio rep; Barney Balaban, Russell Holman, James E. Perkins, managing director for Great Britain; George Weltner, Paramount International prexy, and Alan Jackson, New York story editor, are in contingent due here.

Meeting is to be semi-annual affair called by Ginsberg. European film situation is to be thoroughly threshed as well as completed product.

Few Circuits Intent on Collections For Polio Drive; Winchell's Rap

Apparently following through on the policy adopted last fall by the American Theatres Assn. against its members taking audience collections for the various charity drives during the year, only a few circuits have signified intentions of passing plates for the March of Dimes campaign, which tees off Jan. 24. Most of the major affiliated circuits have ruled out audience collections, with Paramount deciding to let its individual circuit operators decide on whether or not to pass the plates.

Pointing up the touchy aspects of the negative ruling on audience collections, Walter Winchell accused the affiliated chains in his broadcast last Sunday (12) night of reneging on a promise they'd made to the late President Roosevelt of continuing their wholehearted cooperation with the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis (MOD) drive. After a lengthy harangue against the circuit operators, Winchell wound up statement with the charge the operators were "phonies."

In answer to the commentator's accusations, however, Robert Coyne, ATA executive secretary, declared that Winchell had apparently been "misinformed." ATA directorate resolved last Nov. 19, he pointed out, to offer wholehearted cooperation to all charity drives by providing free use of their screens for trailers, their lobbies for displays, etc., but had not recommended audience collections in light of audience sympathy to the system. Moreover, Coyne declared, the ATA had decided plate-passing was unscientific, since many individuals could get away with dropping a dime or a quarter into a plate, whereas they would donate much more through personal contact.

ATA recommended, Coyne recalled, that all member theatres conduct a single collection in 1947, which would serve jointly both the MOD and the Red Cross. Basil O'Connor, Red Cross national director, declined to participate in such a setup, however, and nothing further has been decided on the situation.

Latest circuits to announce audience collections for the MOD, meanwhile, include the Comerford chain, a Par partner in Pennsylvania, and the Kallet chain, an indie outfit in upstate N. Y. In addition, the Abe Collum circuit in Hoopeston, Ill., and the Community circuit in Cleveland will also take collections. To hypo interest in the drive, the motion picture division has announced a list of exhib prizes for top collections.

Despite the paucity of theatres that will take collections, almost every theatre in the country is expected to run the MOD trailer, which is again being distributed this year by National Screen Service. Greer Garson stars in the film, which runs approximately 300 feet.

HAZEN DENIES RANK HAS INTEREST IN 'FURY'

Joseph Hazen, Hal Wallis Productions prexy, is slated to leave for the Coast Friday (17) to see a rough cut of the latest Wallis film, "Desert Fury." He'll stay on the Coast two or three weeks before returning to the homeoffice in preparation for a trip to England April 9, where he'll set final plans for the filming of the first Wallis pic in London, "For Her to See."

London production, starring Ray Milland and Ann Todd and based on an unpublished novel by Gerald Shearing, is slated to go before the cameras at J. Arthur Rank's Denham studios May 12. Hazen claims Rank has no financial interest in the picture, which is budgeted at $2,500,000, though reports from London declare Rank will share heavily in the film for allowing Wallis the use of Miss Todd, his studio and equipment.

"Desert Fury," according to Hazen, is tentatively scheduled as the next Wallis film for Paramount release but it may be held up because of the Technicolor print shortage. If so, Par may release "I Walk Alone," another Wallis picture already completed, before "Fury." Hazen declared that Wallis Productions planned no increase in its number of films for 1947, making only the three called for in its release contract with Par.

Joins Atomic Group

Washington, Jan. 24.

William Wells, former motion picture specialist for UNRRA, has become film consultant for the National Committee on Atomic Information. Committee already has one pic, "One World or None," ready to distribute. The picture was made by Phil Ragen and distribution is being handled by Sherman-Price.

The committee will work on both the theatrical and non-theatrical film levels.

Roosevelts Await FDR Pix Before Making Comment

With the late President Roosevelt figuring in three features now aboard to be released, Elliott Roosevelt declared Monday (13) that the family was taking no general stance on the question of depiction of FDR in films. He'll "talk only about specific cases as they come up," Roosevelt said.

FDR's son denied reports he had made a protest concerning newsreel shots of the late President in "The 16th Bar" (nee "Teheran"). Film, shot in English in Italy by British producer Stephen Pallos, is being distributed in this country by George J. Schaefer, former RKO and United Artists topper.

FDR's son said he had never heard of the film and opined that reports of family objections were invented for publicity purposes. Meantime, two other films are being readied for release. One is Metro's "The Beginning or the End," in which FDR is portrayed by vet actor Godfrey Tearle; the other is a documentary, "The Roosevelt Story," being compiled from newsreel clips for general distribution.

"The 16th Bar" is a thriller built around the attempt on the President's life at the Big Three huddle in Teheran. It takes its title from the alleged fact that the crucial shot was to be fired at FDR when the band hit the 16th bar of "The Star-

'Notorious' Achieves Pittsburgh Notoriety

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Warner Bros. theatre execs here have been taking a drubbing hard on the drama pages as a result of the booking vagaries on "Notorious," which is still to be shown here although it's played every major city in the country months ago. Month ago, WB officials announced picture would go into the Warner, converting that house temporarily over to a first-run site, on Christmas Day. It got a big fanfare on the news.

Just a couple of days before scheduled inaugural, and after film editors had gone all-out on "Notorious," Warners admitted announcement had been premature, that Warners would keep its status for the present and that Ingrid Bergman-Cary Grant drama would go into the Stanley instead on Jan. 8.

Editors were notified early last week that situation hadn't been changed, so they went to town again on art work and release blurbs, only to be told short time before scheduled opening that picture was being pushed back a week because of insistence from N. Y. headquarters that a WB movie, "The Time, The Place and The Girl," be held over at Stanley. That brought some more ridicule on Warners in the columns.

Now the gag is that town papers aren't sure whether there even is such a picture as "Notorious."

Brulatour Head to Coast

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

William J. German, new president of J. E. Brulatour, Inc., arrived in Hollywood for his first visit since he became chief of the organization.

While in town for two weeks German will huddle with his local staff on the construction of a new storage warehouse for film on Santa Monica blvd.

DOS Inks Col. McCarthy

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

David O. Selznick signed Col. Frank McCarthy, currently with the Johnston office, as executive assistant, starting Feb. 1.

McCarthy served on the general staff under General Marshall during the war and moved to Hollywood as public relations counsel under Byron Price last February.

RR 'No Pix' Deal Seen Broken

Belief in Washington is that motion pictures on railroad trains are here to stay as a result of the recent successful demonstration put on by the Chesapeake & Ohio R.R. and Universal pix, on a Washington to Cincinnati run. Films are now a regular feature of the C & O's George Washington, and are expected to be used also on other trains of the line.

This is expected to break the "no pix" deal of the railroads. In the anti-trust suit, which the government filed against the Assn. of American Railroads, it charged that the roads enter into collusion to prevent any screenings of pix on trains. Obviously the boys are going to have to meet the competition of the C & O.

One interesting angle is just how far Hollywood will want to go along. Some companies are reported urging caution. They fear possible exhibitor complaints if pix are screened aboard trains before being shown in many theatres in the territories through which the trains will pass. Question of what this will mean to clearances will have to be straightened out.

It is noteworthy that shortly after the C & O put pictures on its Cincinnati run, the Baltimore and Ohio R.R. came up with a two-reel short on the same run featuring radio. Each car of the new streamliner, "Cincinnatian," is equipped with loudspeakers, hooked together by wires running the length of the train. Thus a radio receiver on the train will be cut into all the cars.

If radio programs may be cut out and the equipment used to carry announcements by the conductor.

20th Sued by Couple For 200G on Basis Of 'Anna-Siam' Incidents

Boston, Jan. 14.

Damages of $200,000 are being sought in Federal court by Richard Monahan and Anna Harriet Leonowens Monahan, both Canadians living temporarily in Quincy, Mass., in a civil suit brought against 20th-Fox Film Corp. for what they claim are damaging incidents in "Anna and the King of Siam."

Each plaintiff seeks $100,000 and costs on the basis of being "well-known in Massachusetts." The suit charges that the picture, which made a high place on the best pix of the year lists, depicts "falsely" a portion of the life of Anna Harriette Leonowens, grandmother of Mrs. Monahan, and of her father, Louis T. G. Leonowens, during their residence in Siam.

Papers read that "the picture falsely, maliciously, scandalously and defamingly depicts that Louis T. G. Leonowens died in Siam at a very young age (being unmarried), whereas in truth and in fact he lived to become a very successful and reputable merchant in London and other countries. In fact, he died in 1919."

According to the plaintiffs, Louis was married to Isabelle Caroline Knox and they had two children, one of whom was Mrs. Monahan. She claims the implications are that Louis was never married, hence never had legitimate children, hence she, Mrs. Monahan, is illegitimate.

Mr. and Mrs. Monahan, still residing in Ireland, aver they were persons using name, fame and credit in Massachusetts until "Anna and the King of Siam" came along.

NOVELLO AIDE 'BETTER'

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Lloyd Williams is reported in "a little better condition" at Cedars of Lebanon following stroke Friday (10) aboard the Superchief enroute to Hollywood.

Veteran secretary companion to Ivor Novello, British actor-producer-composer, was kept in an oxygen tank aboard train from Winslow, Arizona, until arrival here.

U. S. Losing Ground in South America To European Producers, Say Exhibs

Latin-American film market, previously undisputed territory for U. S. product, is being invaded by European producers, according to a group of South American exhibs. American films are losing ground to European pictures, they say, because South American thought is more closely allied with European than with North American, and their tastes in motion pictures run accordingly.

French and British product offer the greatest threat to American film supremacy, say the exhibs, with British in particular grossing very well. "Seventh Veil" has been running for almost six months in Buenos Aires at top b.o., while "Madonna of the Seven Moons" and "Man in Grey" are doing equally as well, Argentina, where anti-U.S. feeling has been growing since the end of the war, has been the leading country in the trend.

Even Russian films have been making marked gains in the South-ern countries, although they are still not generally popular, largely because of the blatant propaganda pitch characteristic of all their product. "Girl 217" was well received in Brazil and Argentina, but marked the first Soviet production to show good attendance.

Spanish film producers announced an ambitious production schedule for 1946-47, but have failed completely to live up to their promises, according to the exhibs, so that their pictures, when they do appear on a large scale, will be of unknown quantity. Exhibs point out that, because there aren't a lot of theatres in South America, there is no need for a mass turnover of films characteristic of the U. S., and a few pictures can readily load the market. In this way, if British films continue to increase in popularity, they can virtually take over the South American theatres with a relatively few quality films.

Lewin's UA Gap

Albert Lewin, co-producer with David Loew of "Bel Ami," arrives in New York next Wednesday (22) for talks with United Artists on distribution and publicity-advertising plans for the film. Lewin directed and scripted the picture.

He's slated to leave New York for England at the end of February to set the opening in London.

Hollywood Views High Tariff Return As Export Threat

Washington, Jan. 14.

Hollywood's export business faces a possible threat from the desire of segments of the new Congress to climb the New Deal's reciprocal trade treaties and restore the old protective high tariffs. While these high tariffs would be for the benefit of other industries than pictures, pix would indirectly suffer from the action. A shift in U. S. commercial policy toward higher tariffs may well stampede the rest of the world similarly.

Films, already hit by numerous special restrictions, is seen being hurt worse than ever. They would be one of the things against which the barriers would be raised in other sections of the world with little delay, aver opponents of the idea.

Rep. Harold Knutson (R., Minn.), chairman of the new Ways and Means Committee, which originates tax and tariff legislation, is a strong believer of the old ways and has expressed the opinions that the nation should get back to high tariffs. The same opinion has been expressed within the past couple of weeks by other midwesterners.

Nothing is expected to be done along these lines in the opening days of Congress but, as the session moves along, efforts will certainly be made to turn back the clock on the tariff situation.

UNITED APPEAL REPORTS 750G IN CONTRIBUTIONS

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Annual United Appeal announced contributions of $756,673 by 14,107 donors in its fourth report. Of this amount, studio workmen donated $316,558, while 20th-Fox led the major lots with $129,419.

M. C. Levee, campaign chairman, declared the amount exceeded last year's fourth report by $161,067.

COMPOSER ROSE, 20TH DICKER EXCLUSIVE PACT

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Talks are going on this week looking toward renegotiation of composer David Rose's pact with 20th-Fox. He currently has a one-picture-a-year deal, with three years to its credit. If present negotiations work out, Rose will shift over to an exclusive 20th contract.

Attorney Arnold Grant, in from New York, is representing Rose in the talks. Grant is also working on a deal for Orson Welles, to follow his commitment to make "Salome" for Columbia. Kerker Kortner negotiations this spring. Welles has no deals set beyond that. He wants a producer-actor or director-actor pact.

Joins 20th-Fox Pub-Ad

Ulric Bell, former deputy director of OWI in Hollywood, has been named to head up a special 20th-Fox publicity research unit.

He'll headquarter in N. Y.

'Outlaw' In 21 Dallas Day-Date Nabes For Record Biz After Interstate's Nix

Dallas, Jan. 14.

Distribs and exhibs throughout the country were watching with tremendous interest—in light of product shortages and the recent court decree—Howard Hughes' experiment here in opening the much-disputed "Outlaw" in 21 neighborhood houses simultaneously last Friday (10), rather than giving it a downtown first-run. Results were nothing short of phenomenal with an aggregate gross of $54,764 for Friday-Saturday-Sunday. Closest a picture (minus stageshow) ever came previously to hitting that mark was $24,000 garnered in seven days by "Going My Way" in its downtown first-run.

Forced into the idea by refusal of Interstate Circuit, which controls the initial-runs here, to play the Jane Russell starrer, United Artists and Hughes determined to make the most of the situation, which gave them a total of 15,351 seats in the subsequent-runners. They employed a helicopter with a loudspeaker system, shot a trailer across the main drag, used a streetcar with two 24-sheets, had gals call most of the names in the local telephone book and did the usual sniping, car cards, billboards, etc.

Result was 106,016 admissions in the three days. City has an estimated population of about 375,000. Practically every one of the 21 houses had a queue standing in a misty drizzle during most of the weekend, with traffic jams caused by motorists cruising from one theatre to another hunting for the shortest line.

Admission scale in all spots was jacked to standard first-run fee.

199G Net in 1946 For Disney, 350G in '45; Big Future Investment

Walt Disney Productions racked up net profits of $199,602 for fiscal 1946, ending Sept. 28, against $350,532 in 1945. Net was disclosed in a letter to stockholders by prexy Roy O. Disney which stressed a $3,308,000 increase in inventories of pix and stories in '46. Stockholders had been previously told, letter noted, that 1946 would be a year of low earnings, since much of his cash would be spent on development of stories and production of films for which income would not be forthcoming until 1947, '48 and '49.

Disney stressed that two features, "Make Mine Music," and "Song of the South," were released last year but that no returns were obtainable during the year. Additionally, Disney said, chief nut of "Fun and Fancy Free" and "How Dear to My Heart" was suspended before Sept. 28 and are reflected in the year-end inventory figures. Income on these two pix will not start coming in until October '47.

Earnings are equivalent to 26c per share on the 652,840 common outstanding. Company's gross income was $4,097,700 in the last fiscal year against $4,350,921 in '45. Working capital climbed to $4,138,981, compared with $3,896,599 the year before. Salaries for hundreds of talented artists cost the company 75% of production nut for pix, Disney said, and he then predicted a profitable future for the company.

GENE AUTRY-REP. CASE MULLED IN CAL. COURT

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Supreme Court of California will decide within 90 days whether Gene Autry will continue to ride thataway for Republic or will shift to Gower Gulch to gallop thisaway for Columbia.

Currently Autry is doing the third of four westerns for Republic, but Herbert J. Yates declares the cowboy owes the studio eight instead of four, under a contract signed before he entered the Army.

Vet Forums

Series of open forums for film industry leaders, critics and educators to air their differences of opinion before the public is being initiated by the Motion Picture Chapter, American Veterans Committee. First of the verbal fisticuffs is set for Jan. 22, with Bosley Crowther, critic for the New York Times; Frank Quinn, Daily Mirror critics; Father McClafferty of the Legion of Decency; and a motion picture exec, to be announced later, as participants.

Initial forum on "The Motion Picture's Place in the Postwar World" will be staged at the Henry Hudson hotel (N. Y.). Forums will accommodate some 350 persons, members of the industry on invitation only according to Walter T. Brown, chapter chairman.

Shelving New Pix Nips Their Draw, Sez Jesse Lasky

Most new pictures today are kept too long on the shelves after completion of production, which cuts into their earning power, according to producer Jesse Lasky. To obviate that, he plans to release "Miracle of the Bells," his next film for RKO distribution, as soon as possible to take full advantage of book sales publicity. Working on a $2,000,000 budget Lasky plans to send the pic before the cameras by April 15 and hopes to have it ready for release by Christmas. He's currently huddling with RKO execs about the possibility of roadshowing it.

Speaking at a trade press interview in New York Monday (13), Lasky said a nationwide search for an unknown actress to play the femme lead opposite Fred MacMurray would be conducted. Poll of readers conducted by Pocket Books, publishers of the Russell Janney novel on which the film is to be based, chose Ingrid Bergman for the part but listed an unknown for second choice. With Miss Bergman unobtainable, Lasky decided to follow their suggestion. MacMurray was third choice for the male star but Clark Gable and Cary Grant, chosen first and second, were also unavailable.

Screenplay by Ben Hecht and Quentin Reynolds will follow the

Picker Picked For Schaefer's Rep. Pix

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Shakeup of production alignment at Republic, following announced departure of Armand Schaefer, has Sidney Picker taking all films formerly assigned to Schaefer, who joins Cornwall-Andrews indie outfit Feb. 1.

Gordon Kay and Mel Tucker were promoted to associate producer status, former taking up reins on series of westerns while latter will produce Monte Hale musical westerns. Kay joined Republic in 1939 and acted as production assistant to sevormal producers, while Tucker, who went with firm in 1937 in sound effects department, later became assistant to producer-director Joe Kane.

MAJORS GANDER ACTUARIAL TABLE

New system of establishing flat rental fees on pictures, based on actuarial tables developed through checking a theatre at various times during the year, is currently being scouted by several major distribs as a further step in the swing away from percentage deals to flat rentals in subsequent-run and small town situations. Trend towards flat rentals in such situations, with 20th-Fox and Warners in the forefront, has been necessitated by the upped costs of checking, which have recently cut heavily into the distribs' take from small-grossing houses.

Tables would be similar to those employed by insurance companies and would be based on the theatre's average gross potentialities. Distrib, for example, might check a house on a weekday and then over a weekend during various seasons of the year, taking into account, of course, the fact that the theatre would gross more during a holiday season than during average playing time and also such factors as the impact on a theatre's gross by competing attractions, such as summer sports, etc. After the house had been checked often enough to determine its potential grossing ability, the distrib would set up his table of figures. Pix would then be sold to the exhib at flat rentals commensurate with what the house had shown itself capable of doing.

Equitable

System, according to distrib sales chiefs, should prove equitable for both distributors and exhibitors. By getting a variety of figures on which to base the tables, the distrib would be assured of getting his full share of the theatre's gross under all situa-

Failed to Get Product For Indiana Theatre, Ex-GI in Trust Suit

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Suit filed in Federal Court here last week by Louis B. Philon, owner of Liberty theatre, Michigan City, Ind., through attorney Seymour Simon, names virtually every distributor and several exhibitors as violating the Sherman anti-trust law after attempting by Philon to get product for his house for several months were unsuccessful.

Philon, upon release from military service, bought the theatre and reportedly sank $50,000 into an extensive remodeling job. Liberty has been unable to open, the suit charges, because the defendants have tied up first run theatre and the town's three other houses, the Lido, Tivoli and Uptown.

Simon said in the suit that the defendant exhibitors have tied up all first runs in Michigan City until March 1 and second run films until June 1. Philon had hoped to open the theatre for Christmas. It is also charged in the suit that Coston, shareholder in the Indiana-Illinois theatres and Warner theatres manager, induced distributors not to sell films to the Liberty.

Govt. to Battle Majors on Plea For Competitive Bidding Holdup, With Year's Delay in Balance

The Dept. of Justice has decided to oppose the majors' application for a delay in the start of the competitive bid sales method, and a bitter court battle is now considered inevitable. Special Assistant Attorney General Robert L. Wright will ask the three judges on Jan. 22, tentative date for argument, to stand by the terms of the judgment and to deny any added delay in applying the anti-trust decree to the industry. The majors are seeking to stall bid selling until 90 days after a final decision by the Supreme Court on appeal.

Should the majors win out, it would mean postponement of that drastic selling method for at least one more sales season, industry circles believe. While the high federal court is almost up to the mark on its calendar, preparation of the voluminous record on appeal makes

Mercey Joins UN

Washington, Jan. 14.

Arch Mercey has resigned as motion picture chief of the Office of Government Reports and liaison between the government departments and industry to join the staff of the United Nations.

Mercey started work in New York yesterday (13) as public information man for the World Health Organization. He expects to remain at the post for six months and then would leave to return to Washington and reenter private business. He will be succeeded at OGR by Dallas Halverstadt, his assistant, who will be acting chief.

Legalites Seek Loopholes In Roadshow Deals

With a flock of important prodtet suitable for roadshowing coming up, film legalites during the past week have been turning the recent court decree inside out seeking loopholes for the two-a-day, upped-admission policy. A number of arguments have been figured out by the attorneys in favor of the roadshows and it appears likely that the two-a-dayers will continue to exist, in one way or another.

United Artists, currently roadshowing "Henry V" and proposing to do the same with "Carnegie Hall," thinks it has the easiest solution, since, being a non-theatre-owning defendant in the anti-trust suit, it is not subject to the same regulations as the Big Five. It is leasing theatres for "Henry" on a four-walls basis and will do the same for "Carnegie" if the decision is made to roadshow the Boris Morros-William LeBaron film.

UA maintains it is legally justified in leasing theatres, since it is not subject to the clause in the decree

Defendants File Appeal In Goldman Trust Win

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Attorneys last week filed an appeal in United States district court here against the decree which gave Lee Loew's Inc., RKO Corp., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 20th-Fox Film Corp., Vitagraph, Inc., Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., Paramount Pictures, Paramount Film Distributing Corp., Columbia Pictures Corp., Universal Film Exchanges, United Artists Film Corp., Republic Pictures Corp., Monogram Pictures Corp., Monogram Pictures, Inc., PRC Pictures of Illinois, Screen Guild Productions, Inc., Film Classics of Illinois, Inc., Indiana-Illinois Theatres, Inc., Dunelake Corp., Lido Amus. Co., Uptown Theatre Corp., Dunes Amus. Co., and James E. Coston.

Defendants were Loew's, Paramount, RKO, 20th-Fox, Columbia, Warner Bros., Warner Bros. Circuit Management, Vitagraph, Stanley Co. of America, Universal and United Artists.

Besides awarding Goldman damages and attorneys' fees, the decree ordered the defendants to break up alleged "monopolistic practices" which Goldman claimed discriminated against the Erlanger theatre, which he has under lease, and which he alleged prevented him from getting first-run product for the house.

Files Claim to Fields Estate as His 'Widow'

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Claiming she's the lawful widow of W. C. Fields, a 66-year-old blind Chicagoan ordered Los Angeles and local attorneys to file her claim to Field's $1,000,000 estate last Saturday (16).

Mrs. Edith Williams, who lost her sight in an auto accident in 1939, charges that Fields deserted her and their seven children after 17 years of marriage, in Galesburg, Ill., in 1910.

Langer Hypo

Washington, Jan. 14.

Snafu condition of the New York anti-trust decree may hype the proposed legislation of Senator William Langer (R., N. D.) for complete divorcement of exhibition of motion pictures from production and distribution.

Langer, who is seeking information from indie exhibitors, has announced that he will reintroduce his bill and push for early hearings at which independent theatre owners would be asked to testify.

Par Pays $2,300,000 In Converting Excess Cash Into Common Stock

Pushing its conversion of excess cash into re-acquired common stock, Paramount has by now accumulated some 73,000 shares of treasury stock at an estimated cost of $2,300,000. New fiscal policy was first gunned late in November, and the company has continued to pick up its own securities during the ensuing two months with falling exchange prices considered a spur to the movement.

Of the re-acquired common, 23,700 shares were bought during November within the range of 32-34 points. Company continued it in December, when an additional 34,600 shares were garnered at a 30-32 range, while business has been bought in the current stanza, with the price now close to the '46 low of 27 and a fraction.

Chief reason for the fiscal re-acquisition policy is the effect of the new anti-trust decree, which orders divorcement on theatres held jointly by majors and indies. Par is the company most affected by the ban since, of its 1,400 houses, some 1,100 are co-owned. Understood that Par expects to buy out a number of its partners by exchanging the parent organization's common for stock of theatre chains held by partners.

Consequently, company is piling up treasury stock for the exigency.

STORY PRODS., UA IN ONE-FILM DISTRIB OK

Releasing pact of Story Productions with United Artists, which has been in negotiation over four months, was finally inked last Thursday (9). It calls for one film, with UA getting 25% of the gross rentals as its distribution fee for the U. S., and higher fees, up to 50%, for various territories abroad.

Contract was okayed at an SP directors meeting last week for which Hal Horne, board chairman, and Armand Deutsch, prexy, came to New York. They returned to the Coast over the weekend to continue prepping "This Side of Innocence," which will be the UA release.

'Ground School' for Exploiteers Suggested by RKO's Terry Turner

By TERRY TURNER
(Chief of Exploitation, RKO Radio Pictures)

Now that exploitation generally has become to mean so much not only to motion pictures, but to radio and all other forms of amusement as well, would it be amiss to propose to at least the major film companies the establishment of a "proving ground" or "ground school" for field or exploitation men for future expansion and to fill depleted ranks?

No, I am not suggesting a school or a course of any kind where some harebrain out of a job generally spouts about how to do something he cannot do himself, but the formation of a staff of likely junior field men, to work out six months or a year with experienced field men, first: to determine from the old heads whether the juniors are promotionally-minded; secondly, whether they can make good and lasting contacts that help the entire industry; and third, whether they themselves feel that they like the work and are fitted for it.

It has been my experience that the field of good experienced field men is strictly limited and it has always been my thought that the reason for that limitation is the lack of adequate proving ground space.

What happens? A producer finishes his picture and wires his distributors that he desires a good exploitation force. Now the field is limited and you can bet that every worthy field man is already at work, so what does the distributor do? Well, in one case let me tell you what happened to a pretty big producer. The distributor hired the finest collection of 20 bums it has ever been my good fortune to see. What good they could do the producer or distributor I do not know, but what harm they did do to the entire industry it was my displeasure to watch.

Forgetful

I met one of these gents in the lobby of a hotel so erocked he had forgotten the name of the picture he was supposed to be working on. Another had to be bailed out by a local manager and the operator of a large chain and a particularly good friend of mine took a half hour to bawl me out about the conduct of these men, not forgetting their woeful lack of ability. Now you might say I could have answered "Well, they're not my men," and shake it off with that, but that is not so. It is my business and my livelihood and the business and livelihood of every man in this business. It is the business of the producer and distributor for their reputations are at stake and it does not do the industry in general any good.

A proving ground would in time cure that. The company would get a pretty good line on a junior man after a year, first through their experienced men under whom he would be taking factual instruction and the head of the department, whom I presume must be almost continuously on the road if he really wants to know what is going on.

The distributors do the same with their salesmen, give them a good break-in period and then hand them a block of pictures to see what they can do on their own, and I for one have never thought that a salesman was any better than a good field man.

Here's How It Works

In these days where producers and even distributors are reverting to the old-fashioned "mittreading" or crystal-grazing to find out just what is going to happen to their picture when it hits the screen, and Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public are asked to confirm or deny the crystal ball in terms of cash, why not cast a few dollars in a kitty to raise the level of exploitation to the highest possible point in the business?

It is the field men who come the closest to the public in the final sale of the picture. It is the field men who must carry on even if a cool half million is thrown down the drain of magazine advertising. It is the field men who must hypo any exhibitor who already thinks Jesse James has slugged him when the salesman bids him adieu, and, brother, he is in no mood for a hypo at that moment. It is the field men that must give that last minute push to nudge the customers up to the little window where the little girl chirps "How many please?"

Sorrell Conspiracy Trial Continued to Jan. 29

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Trials of Herbert K. Sorrell and 13 other film strike leaders, indicated on criminal conspiracy counts by the county grand jury, were continued to Jan. 29 by Judge Thomas L. Ambrose in Superior Court.

Pic Strike Key To D. C. Hotfooting

Washington, Jan. 14.

Legislation aimed at smashing jurisdictional strikes, closed shops, etc., continues to pile up here, with strong indications that the continuing Hollywood strike is one factor which will be responsible for new laws to weaken labor unions.

Several bills, but most particularly the new Case Bill, outlaw jurisdictional strikes. Result of trouble such as Hollywood is suffering would be loss of a union's exclusive bargaining rights for up to two years, plus civil suits for damages, which could drain a union's treasury.

The new Ball Bill, which would prevent nationwide bargaining by unions, would not affect the situation in Hollywood, where all bargaining is done within a single marketing area.

2 PA. CHAINS JOIN IN FIGHT VS. MUNY TAXES

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Stanley-Warner and the Goldman Theatres are joining in a fight against an ordinance passed in Pottstown imposing additional takes on their theatres in that Pennsylvania community.

Both chains, through their local managers, protested inclusion of their theatres in the bill, which proposed tax of 5% of gross receipts, payable monthly, on picture theatres. It was said the measure will be fought in civil or equity courts on grounds of discrimination and illegality.

10% Added D.C. Tax?

Washington, Jan. 14.

A 10% amusement tax for the District of Columbia is one of the number of proposed new levies which have been laid before Congress by the city government seeking additional revenue to meet its expenses. Despite the heavy fight waged a couple of months back by the theatre people to stave off any such tax, it bobbed up with a flock of other suggestions.

Costs Force Mono To Triple Budget

Monogram's segue into high-budget production combined with zooming production costs has forced the company to increase film budgets by three times, according to president Steve Broidy, in New York following the company's first '47 sales meet in St. Louis. Prexy said the ad budget alone for the fiscal year would reach $1,600,000 for the first time in Mono's history.

Despite move to high budgeters, Broidy said Mono would continue B production, adding that they're "proud of their bread and butter films." He said that special emphasis would be placed on series, such as Bowery Boys and Palooka, and that if facilities were available they'd increase B production. Mono, he added, has outgrown its lot, having made "Violence" and "The Guilty" in outside studios after finishing its first Allied Artists release, "It Happened on 5th Avenue" on the RKO, 20th-Fox and Roach lots, plus locations.

Broidy stated that Mono's foreign biz during the past 26 weeks had increased 130% and domestic 24% over the previous year.

Bresler's 'Velvet' Bow

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Jerry Bresler's first producer chore on the Universal-International lot will be "Black Velvet," with Ella Raines, Charles Korvin and Edmond O'Brien in the top roles.

Michael Gordon, also doing his first job for U-I, will direct, starting Feb. 3.

7 Indie Chains In N. Y. Plan Bldg.

Indicating the New York metropolitan area is definitely not overseated and confident that future economic conditions will warrant such steps, some seven New York independent circuits are planning construction of 34 theatres this year or as soon as Federal controls on commercial building are relaxed. Topping 17 circuits queried on point of quantity was the Interboro circuit, whose prexy, Samuel Strausberg, declared his firm is mapping construction of 14 Long Island houses within the next two years.

Of the remaining chains, four toppers were reluctant to discuss any possible expansion they had in mind while six others, who were apparently content to adopt a wait-and-see attitude, had no current plans at all. Among the latter, Sam Rinzler, head of the Randforce circuit, concisely summed it up: "We're not wasting our time; when theatres are able to be built, we will build them."

More optimistic was Joseph M. Seider, president of Prudential Playhouses, whose company is leading the pack with a 900-seater in Islip, L.I., and a 600-seater in Bedford Village, N.Y., which are slated to open within two months. Both have been under construction for the past 15 months. He said Prudential "hoped to build six theatres," but doubted they would all be unveiled this year.

Also contemplating expansion is the Walter Reade circuit, which plans seven within the next 18 months, "depending upon conditions," according to Walter Reade, Jr. Raybond Theatres' prexy, David Weinstock, said his company plans three additional units. One will be in the Parkchester section of the Bronx and another, an 800-seater, will be located in Jamaica. Both houses are designed by w.k. theatre architect John Eberson.

Near Rockefeller Center, Leo Brecher, operator of seven Manhattan houses, recently acquired a plot on the southwest corner of the Avenue of the Americas and 53d Street, where he projects a 20-story office building and a street-level theatre. Major distribs are reported to be interested in taking over the house when completed. Few blocks away, at Madison Avenue and 59th Street, Trans-Lux circuit expects to build shortly after the first of April, when present tenants are expected to vacate the site it's acquired.

Revealing his firm planned two houses, Edward N. Rugoff, of the Rugoff & Becker circuit, reflected the policy of most other theatre toppers when he stated: "We are not prepared to discuss the locations." Samuel Rhonheimer, head of a small L.I. chain, said he had no plans aside from renovating the 620-seat Electra in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn. Irving Renner, of the Endicott circuit in Brooklyn, declared he "had a couple locations in mind."

Those with no construction plans at all are Cocalis Enterprises, Rapf & Ruden, Rosenblatt-Welt, Harris Theatrical Enterprises, J. J. Theatres, Inc., and Kaybern Theatres.

Chi Metro Sales Meet Called Off by Rodgers

Meet of Metro divisional sales managers, tentatively called for Feb. 3-4 in Chicago, has been called off by M-G veepee over sales William F. Rodgers. With the motion filed by the defendants in the anti-trust case for a stay in inaugurating new sales policies until 90 days after the Supreme Court rules on the decree, Rodgers reportedly felt there was no need for a meeting at this time.

Metro sales chief, meanwhile, resumed his Florida vacation last Thursday (9) after a four-day interruption to huddle at the homeoffice with M-G prexy Nicholas M. Schenck and Metro attorneys on the decree. He'll return to the homeoffice for a week on Jan. 20 and then head for the annual trip to the Coast.

A Thumbnose Sketch--Walter Vincent

By JOE LAURIE, Jr.

On Aug. 10, 1868, a man with a little black bag knocked on the front door of the Vincent home at Lake Geneva, Wis. Pop Vincent came to the door, took one look at the man with the little black bag and said, "Come in, and I do hope you're a piano tuner." But the man wasn't a piano tuner and the little black bag contained what was later known as Walter W. Vincent. The Doc said, "If you don't like him you can change him." And they changed him 10 and 15 times a day. Walter was so happy he was born that he cried like a baby.

The first few years Walter kept saying, "Du Du Gu Bu Da." He was in a rut. He went to kindergarden and majored in alphabet soup. It took him 19 years to reach the age of 19. It was then his father read an advertisement from Wheaton College. It read, "We guarantee satisfaction or return your boy." Mr. Vincent sent Walter to Wheaton College and they returned him before he graduated. To him Wheaton College was an institution of yearning. He kept yearning to be a newspaperman. So he went to Denver and joined the staff of the Denver Republican (Republicans in those days had a staff, now they have nothing to lean on). Walter became a special writer. He had a great nose for news, in fact his stories smelled up the paper. But the kid was smart. He was saving buttonholes figuring there would be an opening for him some day in New York.

He landed in New York City in 1889 at two o'clock in the afternoon. He came with three changes of underwear, leave on, take off or go without. For weeks Broadway was his stamping grounds, but he had no money for postage. He was still yearning, now he was yearning to be an actor. As a kid he was an actor. There were seven kids in the family and when they had cake he wanted to take their parts. He finally got a break, if you can call being a Shakespearean actor a break. He played for two years with Alexander Salvini in "Hamlet." He played the part of Horatio. In "The Three Guardsmen," the part of Aramis. Played Pierre in "The Two Orphans," with Kate Claxton and Madame Janauscheck and appeared in many important plays of the period. By now he was tired of being a good actor so teamed up with a very talented one by the name of Sidney Wilmer. They wrote a couple of sketches called "In Durance Vile" and the other "A Strange Baby" and took a Boast-to-Boast tour in vaudeville. During their spare time they would write sketches for others and became writers of considerable importance. They were great friends of George M. Cohan, a friendship which lasted through the years. George was writing those days, too, and when they'd meet him they would say, "Brother can you spare a line?" In later years, Walter's brother Frank became head booker of the Orpheum Circuit and Walter would say, "Brother can you spare some time?"

The boys now branched out as playwrights. They had great success with their plays. They got them back in good condition. Their first play was 150 sheets of blank paper. They brought it to a producer and showed him how cheap it would be to produce. They wrote plays for George Monroe and Johnny Ray and two of their plays, "A Stranger in a Strange Land" and "In New England," were very successful in New York City.

Birth of a Chain

It was in 1901 when the boys acquired a little upstairs theatre in Utica, N. Y. It had to be an upstairs theatre because the town was in a basement. They named it the Orpheum, and booked it through William Morris. Acts would play for cut salaries but Walter would put iodine on their pay envelopes and the wounds soon healed. While Wilmer & Vincent heeled themselves with enough moola to buy another house which they called the Majestic and still another one in Reading, Pa., which they named the Orpheum. The boys were running out of names for their theatres. In a short time they owned a string of theatres that gave many actors a lot of work (four-a-day). They were known to vaudevillians as square-shooters and nice guys. Walter soon was sought for his advice and knowledge of the show business and showfolks. They made him treasurer of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, trustee of the Percy Williams Home, president of the Wilmer & Vincent Corp., chairman of the board of Republic Pictures (they made Westerns while he sat in the saddle), vice-president of Consolidated Film Industries, member of Committee War Board of Motion Picture Defense, member of Men's Board of American Theatre Wing, treasurer of the Theatre Authority, and for two years treasurer of The Lambs.

His great love, the Actor's Fund (he has been identified with it for over 30 years), elected him trustee in 1911, secretary in 1921, second vice-president in 1924, first vice-president in 1930 and president in 1940, a position he still holds. These are not just titles, he really attends all meetings. He uses a gavel for a dinner bell.

He is a handsome guy, with a beautiful head of pure white hair. But snow on the roof doesn't mean the fire has gone out in the house. His favorite recreation is playing cards. When you see Walter without cards in his hand, he looks nude. One look at him and he demands respect, especially when he holds spades.

Helpfulness is a passion with him. He has inexhaustible sources to please his friends. He is so rich now that he puts his interest away and lives on his principle. Quality is never an accident and Walter has quality. There is a personal independence in his every gesture, behind that is a kindness, gentleness, charity and all the milder virtues.

Show business feels the same way about Walter Vincent as Balzac did about Victor Hugo when he said, "He is a great man, let's say no more about him."

Republic Divides Sales Setup Into 3 Districts

In a move to centralize control over sales districts entire sales setup at Republic was switched Monday (13) to divide the country into three general districts, all under supervision of homeoffice execs. New divisions will be headed by Edward general sales manager, in the west; L. Walton, veepee and assistant Walter L. Titus, former vice-prexy of branch operations, over the southern division, and James V. O'Gara, former assistant to exec veepee general sales manager James R. Grainger, takes over in the eastern slot.

Western territory includes midwestern, prairie and Pacific Coast districts, southern covers the southwestern and southern sales districts, and eastern division takes in New England, central and eastern districts. In addition to his new slot, Walton will retain his present duties.

Reason given by Grainger for the move was Rep's determination to break into the "A" bracket on film production. Company is girding itself to break down exhibitor opposition to higher prices of top product after a long history of lesser films.

16M SCREEN TESTS VIA NEW CO. IN N. Y.

With a view toward placing screen-tests within the reach of every aspiring film thespian, new firm has been formed in New York known as the American Screen Test & Film Corp., which plans to record the histrionic abilities of neophytes and others on 16m film. Headed by ex-GI Sol L. Hoffman, Warner Bros. homeoffice employe, and cameraman Jack L. Perrin, company will shortly lease a building in Manhattan where they'll set up a studio.

Investing $25,000 in technical equipment, American Screen Test will also engage in the production of commercial films as well as talent tests, according to Hoffman. Small unit of the firm, he said, is currently shooting a 15-minute documentary film at the City College of New York that will trace the institution's 100-year history.

Financed by contributions from alumni, short's narrative will be recited by Edward G. Robinson, CCNY alumnus, who arrives from the Coast this week. Pic will be screened at an alumni dinner at the Hotel Astor, N. Y., Feb. 12 and is designed to spur interest in the school's current $1,500,000 fund-raising campaign to improve the college's educational facilities.

URGES EAST FOR PROD. 'ESCAPE'

Goldwyn Points to Wow 'Best Years' Biz To Refute Selznick Nix of 'Problem' Pix

David O. Selznick's statement in VARIETY last week, that he disagrees with Samuel Goldwyn in that he feels the public "definitely does not want its problems reflected on the screen," brought a quick retort from Goldwyn and a fistful of figures to show that grosses on his "Best Years of Our Lives"—definitely a "problem" picture—are building, apparently on the basis of word-of-mouth. Goldwyn maintains that's direct refutation of the Selznick point of view.

In light of Goldwyn's repeated appeal during the past few months of pictures "with something to say," Selznick's remarks last week placed the two leading Hollywood indies at opposite poles as the protagonists of the conflicting points of view long argued in and out of the film industry: does the joe who plunks his coin on the boxoffice sill want pix with "something to say" or does he prefer pure entertainment?

Curiously, Goldwyn with his "Best Years" and Selznick with "Duel in the Sun" each has a film representing his view currently in the supreme testing ground—the theatre. Inasmuch as both are doing smash biz, the answer to most trade observers seems obvious—any film, in no matter what category it falls, will do business if it's good.

"Duel" is playing only in the Los Angeles area, with results there, however, definitely pointing to top grosses throughout the country. "Years" is at the Astor, N. Y.; Woods, Chicago; Beverly, Los An-

Massey, Roz Russell To Star in 'Electra'

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Raymond Massey was signed to co-star with Rosalind Russell in the RKO film version of the Eugene O'Neill play, "Mourning Becomes Electra."

Inked for a top featured role is Katina Paxinou, recently working for J. Arthur Rank in England. Filming of "Electra" starts here in March.

'Lady' Lensing Brings Legal Threats to M-G

Subjective camera technique employed by director-star Robert Montgomery for Metro's "Lady in the Lake" has brought down upon Metro a raft of court action threats from disgruntled individuals claiming to have been the originators of the technique. Montgomery himself, however, claims he suggested the camera work to Metro studio execs back in 1938, but his idea was nixed at the time. In addition, M-G reports that at least 50 members of the sneak preview audience who saw the picture on the Coast wanted credit for the original idea.

None of the inventor fringe, however, has any kickback coming, according to Metro attorneys, since it's impossible to copyright or patent such an idea. Moreover, according to Montgomery, the technique was used originally in a French picture several years ago. Latest claimant to the camera method, but one who hasn't threatened Metro with a lawsuit, is Charles T. Littleton, engineer with the American Cyanimide

INDIANA BIGGIE WARNS H'WOOD

Indianapolis, Jan. 14.

Film production at eastern studios is "definitely one way out of the Hollywood wastepots" if Coast outfits fail to provide multi-change houses with necessary B product at reasonable prices, Trueman T. Rembusch, president of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana and member of the board of Allied States, declares.

Rembusch gave warning in letter replying to Harry H. Thomas, president of PRC, who had urged on Rembusch necessity of higher rentals due to increased production costs.

Recent survey has proven that "waste, incompetance, lack of foresight and energy, with topheavy homeoffice overhead are the biggest factors in the song and dance of increased production costs," Rembusch counters.

"As president of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, I also sit on the board of Allied States Assn. That board has been making a survey of the whole production problem, and I can tell you we have definitely come to the conclusion that the making of pictures as now practiced in Hollywood must either be reformed or Hollywood will cease to be the production center of the motion picture industry," Rembusch avers.

Studio Available

Studios are available in the east, Rembusch declares, and talent as well, "due to the lack of work for stars, directors, etc., in Hollywood, through the artificial product shortage." He also states that trade

Allied States Would Break Open Tight Product Situation in Plan To Foster Wide-Scale Indie Production

Allied States Exhibitors' plan for gunning indie production of films is open to any producer who meets the requisites of story and production values, a spokesman for the theatre group said this week. No fixed number of pix has been set and no contracts have yet been awarded to producers, it was said, but Allied is aiming to foster as many films as feasible to bust open the tight product situation currently dogging indie exhibs.

Chief inducing factor which Allied has to promote production is the ability to guarantee a minimum of playdates for any film made under the exhib unit's plan, the Allied spokesman added. Committee, headed by Irving Dollinger, has canvassed Allied members and has bagged a sizable number of commitments to play films. These commitments, according to Allied, warrant production of pix, since the playdates would insure to the producer profitable distribution of Allied-fostered films.

Allied Meet Jan. 31

Latest developments in the production promotion campaign will be outlined by Allied at Allied's board of directors meet in Washington, Jan. 31. Understood that his committee has been dickering with a number of producers and there is no idea of awarding an exclusive contract to any one film-maker.

Plan, frequently aired at Allied confabs, is an outgrowth of charges that Hollywood is consciously creating a product pinch. Theatre group toppers argue that the Allied program will not only supply added product but will also arm indie exhibs with means of wangling better terms from the majors.

Jennifer Jones, Cotten Set for 'Jenny'

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

David O. Selznick nominated Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten as co-stars in his forthcoming production, "Portrait of Jenny," based on the Robert Nathan novel of the same name.

David Hempstead will produce, his first job under the Selznick banner, and William Dieterle will direct, starting Feb. 15.

Chance for Early Strike Peace Dim; British Back CSU

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Peace in the film strike is as far away as ever, according to Roy M. Brewer, international rep of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, after a long distance phone talk with Joseph Keenan, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Brewer declared that Keenan had no immediate plans to shift to Hollywood to mediate in the studio labor troubles. In fact, Brewer said, the strike problems are now harder to untangle than they were last September, when it started. Inter-Faith Council of Los Angeles, which set out to arrange a treaty of peace last month, has given up hope of bringing the local leaders together.

Meanwhile, producers who had hoped to ease their Technicolor problems by sending their films overseas for processing in England have given up that idea. George H. Elven, secretary of the Association of Cine-Technicians in Britain, cabled the Conference of Studio Unions that British members would not work on color prints that ordinarily would be processed in Hollywood.

MARCH OF TIME, SAG REACH COMPROMISE

Ending a three-month wrangle over the use of amateur actors, March of Time and the Screen Actors Guild reached a compromise last week in New York, with MOT signing a basic agreement with SAG. Under the agreement, SAG recognizes MOT films as coming within the definition of a newsreel but the latter acknowledges that, because of certain technique of dramatic re-enactment employed on occasion by MOT, its employment of certain actors falls within the jurisdiction of the SAG.

MOT also signed the standard SAG form covering the production, of commercial, documentary or feature films. As a result of the agreement, SAG lifted its "unfair action" ban on the MOT and notified affiliated organizations in the parent talent unions, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, that they may accept any engagements offered them by the producing outfit.

Sinbad the Sailor
(COLOR)

Hollywood, Jan. 11.

RKO release of Stephen Ames production. Stars Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Maureen O'Hara, Walter Slezak; features Anthony Quinn, George Tobias, Jane Greer, Mike Mazurki, Sheldon Leonard, Alan Napier, John Miljan, Barry Mitchell. Directed by Richard Wallace. Screenplay, John Twist; original, Twist and George Worthing Yates; camera (Technicolor), George Barnes; special effects, Vernon L. Walker, Harold Wellman; music, Roy Webb; editor, Frank Doyle. Tradeshown in Los Angeles, Jan. 9, '47. Running time, 116 MINS.

The sterling adventures of Sinbad as a sailing man and as a romancer have been garbed in brilliant color in this RKO production. The Oriental fantasy of "Sinbad the Sailor" should prove an apt escape valve for ticket-buyers, particularly among the very young and those who have passed the actively adventurous years. Boxoffice payoff should be handsome.

Cast values match production elegance. A return to pictures for Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., after war service, film has actor matching do-and-dare antics of his late father. He measures up to the flamboyance required to make Sinbad a dashing fictional hero. For the males, Maureen O'Hara lends shapely presence as the heroine. Role has little histrionic value but Miss O'Hara's comeliness graces period costumes and color to nth degree.

Story concerns Sinbad's mythical eighth adventure wherein he seeks a fabulously rich island and the love of an Arabian Nights beauty. Major production fault is that dialog and main story points are obscure, making intelligent following of plot difficult. Principal opponents to Sinbad's search are Walter Slezak and Anthony Quinn. Former's character is never clearly explained, and latter's role also is obscured in the writing. These are critical faults that are not likely to be too closely examined by theatregoers seeking pure escapism for film entertainment.

Richard Wallace's direction of the Stephen Ames production treats the adventuring with a light but actionful touch that pleases. Pageantry of the Oriental background lends itself handily to tints, and George Barnes' camera makes the most of the glorified production trappings. Special effects also contribute a large share to display as done by Vernon L. Walker and Harold Wellman.

George Tobias, as Sinbad's boon companion in adventures, doesn't have too much to do. Jane Greer is a comely maid-in-waiting to Miss O'Hara. Mike Muzarki, Sheldon Leonard, good in a single scene as an auctioneer; John Miljan and others fit the action. Brog.

Meet Me at Dawn
(BRITISH-MADE)

London, Jan. 6.

20th-Fox presentation of Marcel Hellman production. Stars William Eythe, Hazel Court; features Margaret Rutherford, Basil Sydney, Stanley Holloway. Directed by Thornton Freeland; music by Mischa Spoliansky. Screenplay by Lesley Storm, James Seymour based on "Le Tueur," by Marcel Achard, Anatole Litvak. At Odeon theatre, London, Jan. 6, '47. Running time, 99 MINS.

It's a far cry from the psychopathic melodrama, "Wanted for Murder," to this airy romantic comedy, but producer Marcel Hellman has provided a good entertainment. To have been more than this it would have needed the finest romantic comedy couple, and William Eythe and Hazel Court are not yet in the Lunt-Fontanne class as artists. Eythe, lent by 20th-Fox, gives a performance that parallels his work in "A Royal Scandal," but director Thornton Freeland, conscientious as he is, lacks the one-time Lubitsch touch, and Eythe, competent actor, is minus the Gallic effervescence the part cries out for.

General level of acting is good, and production has a nice quality, particularly in the duelling scenes, which also owe something to the music of Spolianski. But absence of marquee names—Eythe means more in America than here—may handicap boxoffice, and picture will have to rely mainly on word-of-mouth.

Story is laid in Paris at the turn of the century, with Eythe as a professional duellist ready to take up anybody's quarrel for a financial consideration. Engaged by politicians to insult and wound a prominent senator who is to be put out of the way for a period, he uses Gabrielle as a pretext. The challenge becomes a sensation when a newspaper publisher, not knowing the mystery woman about whom the men are to duel is his own daughter, plasters his paper with lurid stories about "Madame X."

Meanwhile the couple have fallen in love and climax comes when the prospective father-in-law insults him publicly and the boy has to challenge him to a duel. Giving the father a fencing lesson during what appears to be a mortal combat, he turns the fumbling publisher into a hero and ends with the girl in his arms.

Introducing one of J. Arthur Rank's promising starlets in a leading part, producer Hellman took a big gamble which doesn't quite come off. Hazel Court has beauty, but to play such important roles she needs more training and experience. This is most apparent in her scenes with such seasoned troupers as Margaret Rutherford and Stanley Holloway. These two are scene-stealers par excellence and dominate the screen at every opportunity. Cane.

Sudden love for Irish backgrounds has prompted a spate of British productions set in Ireland, much to the benefit of Dublin's Abbey and Gate Theatres, which have been ransacked for talent.

Names of Lockwood, Price and du Maurier should draw customers here, but it will be hard going in America.

First film of the series to reach the screen is "Hungry Hill." Costing at least $1,500,000, this adaptation of Daphne du Maurier's best-seller is a sombre heavyweight created with care, but falling with a sad crash through absence of humanity and real feeling. For painstaking thoroughness the film deserves commendation, but with one or two exceptions the characters have no red blood in their veins and little interest is aroused in the fate of most of the principals. Cardinal failing, as with so many British films, is lack of heart. Too many British producers and directors appear to frown on emotion, and are becoming expert in creating screen puppets.

Story, beginning in 1840 and covering a period of 40 years, tells of the bitter feud between the Brodricks and the Donovans over the sinking of a copper mine on Hungry Hill by John Brodrick, owner of Clonmere Castle. Centuries before the Donovans owned the Hill, and inbred in the family is a hatred of Brodrick. Cursing him, old Morty Donovan declares that no Donovan will work at the mine which will bring nothing but bad luck to the Brodricks. To make his prophecy true, he invites the Irishman to riot, the mine is burnt to the ground, and Brodrick's eldest son is killed.

Next in succession to the Brodrick fortune is John, who has little interest in the mine, but having an affection for the Irish workers believes that mutual regard and understanding could banish hatred. After a hectic courtship he marries Fanny Rose, the much-courted and high-spirited local beauty; is a good husband, raises a family of four and dies. Fanny spoils her eldest son, who grows into a dissipated youth, and on the death of his grandfather, eagerly awaited by himself and his mother, he inherits the Brodrick fortune and the mine.

Realizing she is not wanted at Clonmere by her wild son, Fanny goes to London where she becomes a gambler and a drug addict, but Johnnie's hard heart is touched when he sees the lonely aging woman—he is in London while the scandal of his betraying a Donovan girl blows over. Mother returns happily to Ireland, but the mine soon takes its toll. In a brawl with the workers Johnnie is killed and Fanny charges one of the Donovans with murder. But her philosophical old servant changes her mind. She withdraws the charge, and the end comes with Fanny looking out over Hungry Hill believing that peace has come to the Brodricks and the Donovans.

It's a poor reward for Margaret Lockwood, England's most popular actress, to be given a part that calls for little more than posturing, acting as a clothes-horse, and adding some lines to her young face to denote age. Story of a woman who loses everything she loves should have touched one, but somewhere in the writing and direction the sentiment has been eliminated, and Miss Lockwood can do little with the puppet she plays. Instead of being a tragic figure as a gambler and drug addict, she is ludicrous. Nor, for some unaccountable reason, has the camera been kind to her.

Cecil Parker is monumental as old man Brodrick but his grief is soulless. Dennis Price is the only one who is entirely credible. This is his best work to date, and he enhances a reputation earned by fine performances. Running him close is Dermot Walsh, product of the Gate Theatre, with his playing of Wild Johnnie. He shows much promise, and with his long-term contract from Rank may fill the gap left by James Mason.

F. J. McCormick, father of the present Abbey players, and his wife Eileen Crowe etch a couple of nice studies as faithful retainers. Jean Simmons, Rank starlet, is wasted, and Eileen Herlie (now under contract to Korda and slated for "Salome" with Orson Welles) makes a brief appearance. Cane.

Miniature Reviews

"Sinbad the Sailor" (Color) (RKO). Color fantasy of Oriental adventure; Doug Fairbanks, Jr.; Maureen O'Hara insure b.o.

"Meet Me at Dawn" (British-Made). Romantic comedy provides good entertainment in this Marcel Helman - 20th - Fox pic.

"Hungry Hill" (British-Made). Disappointing adaptation of Daphne du Maurier's best-seller; tough sledding for the U. S.

"Desarroi" ("Distress") (FRENCH). C.F.C. release of Moulins d'Or production; stars Valentine Tessier, Jean Debucourt, Gabrielle Dorziat, Jules Berry; directed by Paul Robert Dagan; screenplay by Paul Achard based on play "Odette" by Victorian Sardou. Reviewed in Paris. Running time, 95 MINS.

Despite names and Paul Achard's expert streamlining of Sardou's old drama, poor direction and antiquated technique cue this one strictly for the local nabes. Story, a complicated romantic drama, wastes a capable cast. No dice for U. S.

"Reves d'Amour" ("Love Dreams") (FRENCH). Pathe Consortium release of Pathe production; stars Annie Ducaux and Pierre Richard Willm; directed by Christian Stengel based on legit play by Rene Fauchois. Previewed in Paris. Running time, 100 MINS.

This filmization of the legit deals with the love affair a century ago of pianist composer Franz Liszt and Comtesse d'Agoult. As a musical, it does not compare with the American product. Musical values are all in the incidental synchronized music with no singing. Aided by good thesping and marquee names of Annie Ducaux and Richard Willm, should do fairly well in France, but has doubtful values for America.

"Farrebique" (FRENCH). Ecran Francais release of Georges Rouquier production. Written and directed by Rouquier. Previewed in Paris. Running time, 95 MINS.

This picture, of a documentary nature, was considered sufficiently good to get a showing at the Cannes Festival. But it is too arty in its description of the life of French peasants. Farmers in the poor French southern country are the sole actors. Lensing is good and film might be improved by cutting into a two-reel documentary since the story itself is of no importance. As a feature "Farrebique" has no appeal for U. S. Maxi.

"Humo en los Ojos" ("Smoke in the Eyes") (MEXICAN). Filmex release of Producciones Rosas Priego production; stars Tona la Negra and Fernando Soto; features David Silva, Maria Luisa Zea, Mercedes Barba and Ruben Rojo; directed by Alberto Gout; camera, Alberto Carasco. At Cine Orfeon, Mexico City. Running time, 75 MINS.

Modest pic shapes up as fair entertainment largely because of music by Agustin Lara, Mexico's big romantic songsmith and warbling of buxom Tona la Negra. Story's a slow moving drama studded with gunplay. Okay acting, direction and lensing help it. Film should do well locally and may do for foreign language spots in the U. S. Grah.

"Le Visiteur" ("The Inspector") (FRENCH). Sirius release of Majestic production; stars Pierre Fresnay; features Balpetre, Michel Vitold, Debucourt, Charensol, Beauchamp, Simone Sylvestre; directed by Jean Dreville; screenplay, Jean Bernard-Luc. Reviewed in Paris. Running time, 90 MINS.

Despite Pierre Fresnay's marquee pull, this looms as a doubtful draw in any situation. Story deals with a shyster lawyer who commits murder and hides in an orphanage. There's little human interest and film's femme appeal is nil. No dice for U. S.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Universal-International's leap with both feet into the narrow-gauge film business, highlighted by its recent absorption of Castle Films, received a journalistic salute from Time magazine in the Jan. 13 issue's Business & Finance section. Matty Fox, sparkplug in U-I's expansion moves, came in for specific mention in the article, which described the U-I exec veepee as "globular little Matty Fox," who started his pic career at eight as an usher in Racine, Wis.

According to the Time script, United World Films, U's narrow-gauge subsid, paid $2,000,000 for Castle Films and then nailed down owner Eugene W. Castle on a long-term, $40,000 per year pact. Bell & Howell's Filmosound Library was picked up for a negligible $600,000 to be paid over a 10-year period, Time says. Filmosound deal was so good that Fox "gloated: 'We'll pay for this cow out of its milk'." Time has it after implying that B & H sold out because it feared it would be cut off from its supply of Hollywood features.

Beacon Pictures Corp., producer of "Copacabana" for UA release, is split five equal ways among Ben Hersh (Ideal Factoring), producer Sam Coslow, Hollywood agent George Frank, N. Y. agent Walter Batchelor, and Monte Proser, boniface of the N. Y. nitery of the film's name. In addition, Proser got $25,000 for use of the title and property, but invested it for a 20% cut. All but Coslow put up money, latter contributing his services as producer, engineering the UA release, writing the tunes, etc., as his share of the deal.

David O. Selznick's "Duel In the Sun" will have to gross about $10,000,000 in this country and abroad to break even. Negative cost was around $5,500,000 and another $1,500,000 is being spent in advertising and exploitation. To that must be added approximately another 25% for distribution costs and Technicolor prints.

cultural program as "synthetic propaganda." When MPA nixed the proposal, it was on the claim that the industry would not tie itself to any propaganda program no matter how salutary it purportedly was.

Government officials sizzled over the reasons given as much as the rejection itself. They charge the industry with attempting to sink the entire program because of the fear of competition from Governmental agencies. Actually, officials claim, there's a need for selling America's better features to the world and Hollywood has consistently muffed its chances to do so. Now, when the State Dept. has stepped into the void created by Hollywood neglect, it's charged, the film industry has retaliated by attempting to scuttle the entire program.

Head-On Clash

Benton's head-on crash with Hollywood last week followed his scrap a few months earlier with the Associated Press and United Press, which he charged with refusal to sell him news for overseas broadcast. Most of the radio people look askance at the shortwave radio program of Benton's division, feeling that the job should be done by private industry.

Benton, who up to now has been a close personal friend of Johnston, brought the situation into the open with a speech in Chicago last Thursday (9) in which he made uncomplimentary remarks about Hollywood's influence abroad, and the fear of it by Europeans. Johnston is in Arizona, recuperating from a recent attack of pneumonia, but O'Hara let go at Benton with both barrels. O'Hara declared:

"What the American people fear is the type of culture which Mr. Benton proposes to spread abroad. It has been a universal experience that synthetic Government propaganda, such as he favors, has always ended in failure or something worse. Perhaps Mr. Benton can do better.

'Have a Right to Be Wary'

"But the American people have a right to be wary of Mr. Benton's plan for the lavish use of Government funds in the fields of press, radio and motion pictures. The American tradition of free expression is based on the positive conviction that no Government bureaucrat, even one as wise as Mr. Benton, is wise enough to impose his own notions of what constitutes American culture on the great media of free expression.

"Mr. Benton would do far better if he followed the traditional policy of his own State Department in opening up world channels of news and information instead of trying to remake the patterns of American culture."

The statement is the last manifestation of impatience with the State Department by MPA. At the beginning of the month, Harold L. Smith, in charge of the MPA Paris office, blew his top at a press conference against the French dubbing regulations which went into effect Jan. 1, claiming they were a flagrant violation of last year's trade agreement. The Smith move was entirely without advance notice to the State Department's commercial policy section. Earlier, MPA would have taken up such a matter quietly instead of letting the newspapers have it first.

As a result of the Smith blast, State Department wired the U. S. Embassy in France to check into the charges. One State spokesman here pointed out that the required dubbing in France, and the order that films more than two years old could not be dubbed, were both old stuff. He said the French had them before the war to protect its home market from dumping. Only thing that was new, he explained, was that the Ministries of Finance and National Economy had to approve dubbing permits. Americans figured this was to keep a check on dollar exchange. (Details on French-U.S. deal on page 3).

'Cultural Imperialism' Cited by Benton

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Fear among foreign politicians and cultural leaders of Hollywood-produced films creating an "American cultural imperialism" in their nations was cited here last week by William Benton, assistant secretary of state, when he spoke before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations.

Benton said United States delegates at the first general conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural organization in Paris last month noted a definite concern among leaders of large foreign countries of the effect the pix have on their subjects.

"The very technical genius of Hollywood which makes its pictures sought after and beloved by the masses everywhere terrifies scholars and politicians in these countries," Benton said.

"They hear their children speaking English with an American accent, using our slang, and discussing love, murder, and divorce in the Hollywood epigrams," he continued.

According to the U. S. diplomat this fear does not result from American books, radio, art, or press associations but rests largely on what he termed a "great worldwide impact of Hollywood motion pictures." This "impact" is not noticed here in the U. S., but seems to be cause for great fear abroad.

In his opinion, Benton said, U. S. films exert a two-fold influence when exhibited in foreign countries. They do harm by conveying many false impressions of the American standards but do give some correct information on the way of life here.

Benton observed that American-produced films have given a great many foreigners the impression that Chicago is a haven for machine-gunning gangsters. He said he hoped that Hollywood, in years to come, would present in their product a better balanced impression of what the United States was really like.

ANN MILLER RETURNS

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Ann Miller, after a brief term in matrimony, returns to pictures as star in "The Pretty Girl," to be produced by Alfred Bloomingdale at Columbia.

Musical will be filmed on a heavy budget from an original by Devery Freeman, who is also doing the screenplay.

B'way Maintains Boffo Grosses Despite Post-Holiday; 'Edge' 109G In Final, 'Life' NSG 32G, 'Clouds' 117G

Broadway's first-run film theatres appeared headed back to normal this week after an ultra-lush holiday season—but the normalcy, from all indications, will continue to be that of top grosses. Indicative is the $109,000 chalked up by "Razor's Edge" during its final week at the Roxy. Figure pushes the film's eight-week total to almost $1,000,000, probably an all-time high for any theatre anywhere for a single picture.

"Best Years of Our Lives" at the Astor continued to ride the crest of strong word-of-mouth and good publicity based on almost unanimous film critics' choice of it as the best film of 1946, raking in a fancy $52,500 in its eighth week, it holds indefinitely. Music Hall offered another solid frame for "Till the Clouds Roll By," which grossed a hefty $117,000 during its eighth session.

"Secret Heart," running with stageshow topped by Tommy Dorsey orch at the Capitol, tumbled to a fairish $62,000 for its final stanza and will be replaced next week by "Lady in the Lake," plus a stage bill topped by Kathryn Grayson and Johnny Johnston. Ensuing week will see a raft of new releases, with "Dead Reckoning" replacing "Love Laughs at Andy Hardy" at the Criterion, "Sinbad the Sailor" following "Song of the South" into the Palace, and "Perfect Marriage" succeeding "Cross My Heart" at the Paramount.

Metro will continue to hold the Music Hall, with "Yearling" slated for its eastern preem Jan. 23. "California" replaces "My Darling Clementine" after the latter's six-week run at the Rivoli and "13 Rue Madeleine" goes into the Roxy as a part of 20th-Fox's effort to ease its backlog jam, despite the apparent continued strong pull of "Edge." Another 20th newcomer, "Wake Up and Dream," succeeds "Beast with Five Fingers" at the Victoria next Wednesday (22).

Among the holdovers, meanwhile, "Time, Place and Girl" continued its strong pace at the Strand where, backed by Vaughn Monroe's orch, it checked off a sturdy $53,000 in its third frame. "Humoresque," in its fourth at the Hollywood, rolled in with a nice $38,000 and also holds. "It's a Wonderful Life" continued its slow pace at the Globe with a mildish fourth stanza take of $32,000, while "Stairway to Heaven," playing three and four shows daily on a modified oadshow policy at the Park Avenue, held to a steady $19,000.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; 70-$2.40)—"Best Years of Lives" (RKO) (8th wk). Holding up solidly in post-holiday session, with ultra-fancy $52,200 estimated for week ending tomorrow (Thursday). Last week was great $53,000. Continues indefinitely.

Capitol (Loew's) (4,820; 60-$1.10)—"Secret Heart" (M-G) plus stageshow headed by Tommy Dorsey orch. (4th wk). Tumbled during third week ending today (Wednesday) to fairish $62,000 after hefty $79,000 last week. Holds one more session, with "Lady in Lake" (M-G), plus Kathryn Grayson, Johnny Johnston on stage opening Jan. 23.

Criterion (Loew's) (1,700; 60-$1.25)—"Love Laughs at Andy Hardy" (2d wk). Chalked up fair $18,000 for first week ending yesterday (Tuesday). "Dead Reckoning" (Col) follows next Wednesday (22).

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 70-$1.20)—"Wonderful Life" (RKO) (4th wk). Continues slow pace on fourth stanza ending Friday (17) with about $32,000; last week strong $41,000 but still below expectations.

Gotham (Brandt) (900; 70-$1.40)—"Ladies Man" (Par) (1st week). Doing nicely with fairish $12,000 for initial stanza ending Friday (17). Last week, third and final frame for "Abie's Irish Rose" (UA), weak $7,500.

Golden (769; $1.20-$2.40)—"Henry V" (UA) (20th wk). Holding strong after lush holiday season with hefty $10,000 in till for 19th week ended last Saturday (11) night; 18th session was strong $13,500.

Hollywood (WB) (1,499; 70-$1.10)—"Humoresque" (WB) (4th wk). Soaring strongly with fine $38,000 for fourth frame ending today (Wednesday). Last week, solid $40,000. Holds.

Palace (RKO) (1,700; 60-$1.20)—"Song of South" (RKO-Disney). (7th wk). Sixth week ending yesterday (Tuesday) looked to be fair $28,000, though kids had returned to school. Holds one more session, with "Sinbad the Sailor" opening next Wednesday (22).

Paramount (Par) (3,664; 70-$1.20)—"Perfect Marriage" (Par) plus stage show headlined by Elliott Lawrence orch, Olga San Juan, opening today (Wednesday). Last week, fourth frame of "Cross My Heart" (Par), combined with Andrews Sisters headlining stage bill, mildish $60,000.

Park Avenue (U) (583; $1.20-$2.40)—"Stairway to Heaven" (U) (4th wk). Holding steadily on modulated road-show policy with strong $19,000 expected for third week ending last (Tuesday) night. Previous week, solid $21,000.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (5,945; 70-$1.25) — "Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G) plus stage show (6th wk). Back to almost normal but still high $117,000 for sixth frame ending today (Wednesday), after boffola $134,000 last week. Holds one more session, with "Yearling" (M-G) opening Jan. 23.

Rialto (Mayer) (594; 35-85)—"Murder in Reverse" (Indie) (1st wk). Bolstered by strong word-of-mouth to about $10,800 for initial stanza ending tomorrow (Thursday). Holds for one more frame.

Rivoli (UA-Par) (2,092; 60-$1.25)—"California" (Par) opens today (Wednesday). Last week, sixth and final frame of "Darling Clementine" (20th) did mildish $15,000, as against fair $20,000 for previous week.

Roxy (20th) (5,886; 90-$1.20)—"13 Rue Madeleine" (20th), plus stage show headlined by Gracie Fields, tees off today (Wednesday). Last week, eighth frame of "Razor's Edge" (20th), continued amazing pace with smash $109,000, meaning the film just missed clearing $1,000,000, for eight weeks, probably an all-time high.

State (Loew's (3,450; 43-$1.10) — "Return of Monte Cristo" (Col) plus vaudeville layout on stage; winds up second week tonight (Wednesday) with good $26,000. "Jolson Story" (Col), with stage bill headed by Thelma Carpenter, opens tomorrow (Thursday).

Strand (WB) (2,758; 75-$1.20) — "Time, Place, Girl" (WB), plus stageshow topped by Vaughn Monroe orch (3d wk). Soaring ahead with strong $53,000 for third frame ending tonight (Wednesday) after solid $65,000 previous week. Continues.

Victoria (Maurer) (720; 70-$1.20)—"Beast with Five Fingers" (WB) (4th wk). Okay $13,500 for third frame ending last (Tuesday) night after fair $18,000 previous week. "Wake Up and Dream" (20th) opens next Wednesday (22).

Winter Garden (UA) (1,312; 60-$1.20)—"Wicked Lady" (U) (4th wk). Fourth session ending Friday (17) should hold to mildish $20,000 after okay $24,000 previous week. Continues.

Detroit H.O.'s O.K.; 'Jolson' 28G for 2

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Holdovers are dominating key houses with "Jolson Story" in its second stanza, garnering a solid $15,000 at the Adams and a good $13,000 at the Downtown. "Time, Place, Girl" and "It's a Wonderful Life" are also staying a second round at the Michigan and Palms-State.

Estimates for This Week

Adams (Balaban) (1,791; 70-95)—"The Jolson Story" (Col) (2d wk). Solid $15,000. Last week, $25,000.

Broadway-Capitol (United Detroit) (3,309; 70-95)—"Notorious" (RKO) and "Vacation in Reno" (RKO) (3d wk). Big $16,000. Last week, a lusty $27,000.

Downtown (Balaban) (2,683; 70-95)—"The Jolson Story" (Col) (2d wk). Good $13,000. Last week, $18,000.

Fox (Fox-Michigan) (5,100; 70-95)—"The Razor's Edge" (20th) (3d wk). Still a good $20,000. Last week, $28,000.

Madison (United Detroit) (1,908; 50-60)—"Gallant Bess" (M-G) and "Suspense" (Mono). Usual $2,400 for three days. Last week, "Kid from Brooklyn" (RKO) and "Swamp Fire" (Par), fair $2,300 for three days.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,049; 70-95)—"The Time, the Place, and the Girl" (WB) and "Criminal Court" (RKO) (2d wk). Lusty $18,000. Last week, $32,000.

Palms-State (United Detroit) (2,800; 70-95)—"It's a Wonderful Life" (RKO) and "The Story of Kenneth Randall, M.D." (Liberty) (2d wk). Neat $17,000. Last week, $28,000 for nine days.

United Artists (United Detroit) (1,973; 70-95)—"Song of the South" (RKO) and "The Falcon's Adventure" (RKO). Nice $23,000. Last week, "The Secret Heart" (M-G) and "Bringing Up Father" (Mono), okay $24,000 for nine days.

'SKIES' 15G, 'CLOUDS' 12G OK IN INDPLS. HOLDOVER

Indianapolis, Jan. 14.

With two holdovers on card, pix grosses have levelled off from lofty New Year week peaks but results are still good. "Blue Skies," in second week at Indiana, is top straight filmer again, "Till Clouds Roll By" also holding up well at Loew's. "Falcon's Adventure," paced by Connee Boswell, Freddie Slack orch, and Freddie Bartholomew on stage, is okay at Circle.

Estimates for This Week

Circle (Katz-Dolle) (2,800; 48-74) "Falcon's Adventure" (RKO), with Connee Boswell plus Freddie Slack band, other acts on stage. Neat $18,000. Last week, "Never Say Goodbye" (WB) and "Little Miss Big" (U). Fair $10,000 at 40-60 scale.

Indiana (Katz-Dolle) (3,300; 40-60)—"Blue Skies" (Par). Strong $15,000 in second stanza after terrific $27,000 New Year's week opener.

Keith's (Indie) (1,300; 40-60)—"Temptation" (U). Modest $10,000. Last week, "Magnificent Doll" (U). Mild $5,000 in second stanza.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,450; 40-60)—"Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G). Excellent $12,000 in second week, on top of sock $21,000 first stanza.

Lyric (Katz-Dolle) (1,600; 40-60)—"Somewhere in the Night" (20th) and "Dangerous Millions" (20th). Okay $7,000. Last week, "Margie" (20th) (m.o.). Fine $8,000.

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

After breaking all local boxoffice records for a straight film by skyrocketing to a huge $38,000 its first week, "Blue Skies" continues to be the local pace-setter. Newcomers are unusually conspicuous by their absence, the lone major entries being "Notorious Gentleman," which is hitting a fast clip at the RKO-Pan, and "Gallant Bess." The holdovers, having another big inning, include "It's a Wonderful Life," which takes its place among the boxoffice champions here, "Time, Place and Girl" and "Count of Monte Cristo," in their third weeks, and "The Secret Heart" in its second.

Estimates for This Week

Aster (Par) (900; 30-44)—"Falcon in Criminal Court" (RKO) and "Singing in Corn" (Col), dual first-runs, reaching good $2,000 in five days. "Driftin' River" (PRC) and "Lady Chaser" (PRC), also dual first-runs, opened today (14). Last week, "Alias Mr. Twilight" (Col) and "Bohemian Girl" (FC) (reissue) split with "Cuban Pete" (U) and "Mr. Hex" (Mono), first runs, duals, okay $2,300 in eight days.

Century (Par) (1,600; 50-70) — "Gallant Bess" (M-G). Well-liked horse picture suffers from lack of cast names. Mild $6,000 looks about all. Last week, "Time, Place and Girl" (WB) (2d wk), good $8,000 after fine $17,000 Radio City week.

Gopher (Par) (1,000; 44)—"Child of Divorce" (RKO). Mixed opinions on this one. Tepid $3,000 gait. Last week, "Decoy" (Mono), fair $3,500.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 50-70)—"Time, Place and Girl" (WB) (m.o.). Third downtown stand and week for this elaborate musical. Winding up to good $5,000. Last week, "Man I Love" (WB) (2d wk), light $4,000, making good-enough $14,000 for loop fortnight.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,800; 50-70)—"It's a Wonderful Life" (RKO) (3d wk). Has come through in topnotch fashion, with critics and customers raving. Another big $13,000 in prospect after smash $16,000 last week and tremendous $20,000 first stanza, latter figure including New Year's Eve takings at advanced admission.

Radio City (Par) (4,000; 50-70)—"Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk). Alltime high for this sensational boxoffice performer. Very big $15,000 after stupendous $38,000 first week, new alltime high for straight film in Minneapolis, with figure, however, including midnight New Year's Eve opening showing at $1.20 for entire house and more than $3,000 copped.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (1,600; 50-70)—"Notorious Gentleman" (U-I). Very well-liked picture helped by Rex Harrison's prestige and scarcity of newcomer opposition. Climbing to good $8,000. Last week, "Return Monte Cristo" (Col) (2d wk), good $8,000.

State (Par) (2,300; 50-70)—"Secret Heart" (M-G) (2d wk). Has given good account of self. Good $11,000 in prospect after hefty $14,000 first week.

Uptown (Par) (1,000; 50-55) — "Two Years Before Mast" (Par). First neighborhood showing. Big $5,000 indicated. Last week, "Rage in Heaven" (M-G) (reissue), satisfactory $3,500.

World (Par-Steffes) (350; 50-99)—"Return Monte Cristo" (Col) (m.o.). Third week downtown for this one. Moderate $2,000 in prospect. Last week, "King's Row" (WB) (reissue) (m.o.), good $3,000, making fine $10,000 for loop fortnight.

Chi Biz Holds, but Honeymoon's Over; 'Woman,' Herth 62G; 'Time, Place' 20G

Grosses Are Net

Film gross estimates, as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net, i.e., without the 20% tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U.S. amusement tax.

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Although biz continues to hold up well, the honeymoon seems to be over for the top grossing holdovers which dominate the Loop scene. The lush opening week crowds are gone and signs of wear are starting to show at the b.o.'s. Daytime b.o.'s seem to be doing o.k.

Three new pix this week are topped by "Strange Woman" bowing at Oriental with Milt Herth Trio on stage for swell $62,000.

"Time, Place, Girl," at Roosevelt, isn't too much to shout about with an estimated $20,000 in initial frame, ditto for Rialto's "Yank in London" plus "Wanted for Murder" with $15,000. "Temptation," teamed with "Joe Palooka" at Palace, bows with around $18,000.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (B&K) (1,200; 65-95)—"Jolson Story" (Col) (3d wk). Holding up particularly well with sweet $25,000. Last week, $32,000.

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 65-95)—"Blue Skies" (Par) plus Burl Ives heading stage layout (3d wk). Fine $55,000. Last week, $60,000.

Garrick (B&K) (900; 65-95)—"Return of Monte Cristo" (Col) (3d wk). Fairish $15,000. Last week, $18,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,500; 65-95)—"Wonderful Life" (RKO). Worth keeping with brisk $20,000. Last week, $25,000.

Holdover Week for K.C.; 'Clouds' 20G, 'Skies' 13G

Kansas City, Jan. 14.

Town has a bevy of holdovers, all doing well. Surprise is "It's a Wonderful Life" at the Orpheum which didn't look to hold for even a second week. It pulled up strong and the current (third) week will tie or pass the second. "Till the Clouds Roll By" will play a long second week of nine days in the Midland, also an unusual procedure. "Blue Skies" winds up third week today in the Newman, but is cinch for a fourth week. "Razor's Edge" likewise showing staying power in the Esquire-Uptown-Fairway combo, and playing out an eight-day third week.

Estimates for This Week

Esquire - Uptown - Fairway (Fox Midwest) (820, 2,043, 700; 45-65)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (3d wk). Plays through Wednesday, an eight-day week bringing house back to regular Thursday openings. Smash $13,000. Last week (2d wk) film did socko $20,000.

THE BIG ONES COME FROM M-G-M

(TBOCFMGM)

March of Dimes—Jan. 24-30

Lotsa Moola for London's Legit Looks Like Lift in Public Taste

By HERBERT SMITH
(Managing Director, Keith Prowse & Co., biggest ticket agent in London.)

London, Jan. 10.

All possible boxoffice records in the annals of show business in Great Britain were broken in 1945. But 1946 reveals an even bigger record by at least 10%.

The reason for this phenomenal situation? The answer may perhaps be coming of peace and demobilization, but actually it goes somewhat deeper. There seems to be no doubt that during and since the war a new and very large public, both theatre-going and music-loving, has come to stay. Several productions, which at this time last year had already had a long run, are still playing to capacity.

First and foremost, Ivor Novello's "Perchance to Dream;" also "Lady Windermere's Fan," "Is Your Honeymoon Really Necessary" and Cicely Courtneidge still starring in "Under the Counter."

As far as new productions are concerned, perhaps the outstanding one is "Sweetest and Lowest," Jack Pemberton's revue at the Ambassadors, which has been running for many months and is still essential to book two or three weeks ahead to obtain a seat. And just to mention a few of the other outstanding successes—Charles B. Cochran's "Big Ben;" "The Guinea Pig;" "The Winslow Boy;" "Song of Norway;" "Follow the Girls;" "Clutterbuck" and "Piccadilly Hayride."

The failures, or comparative failures, could be numbered on the fingers of one hand.

The year has been noteworthy for the opening of Covent Garden. Packed houses have been the rule for the Sadler's Wells Ballet for the first time in years we have had grand opera (the San Carlo Opera Co., with a few special appearances of Beniamino Gigli), and the Old Vic Co. has scored heavily with "King Lear" and "Cyrano de Bergerac."

An important production is Noel Coward's new "Pacific 1860." The reopening of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, which has been closed since September, 1939, is also an outstanding event, evidenced by the fact that the seats have been applied for 10 times over.

The U. S. Invasion

With the new year an invasion by American plays is taking place. "Red Mill," being produced by Emile Littler, and Jack Hylton's "The Gypsy Lady" are two. Also, "Annie Get Your Gun," "Oklahoma!" "Voice of the Turtle," "Deep Are the Roots," "Harvey" and "Life With Father," which Firth Shepherd hopes to produce in March, are here or due soon.

The Christmas season was particularly interesting, as, in addition to "Mother Goose," "Peter Pan," etc., there was the revival of Bertram Mills Circus at Olympia, a big hit as it was many years since there was a circus in London. Of course, in that time a new generation of children arose which never saw a circus.

Taking a view of the prospects for 1947, it appears that the theatre is well set for a very prosperous 12 months. In addition to the reasons above, going to the theatre provides a channel for spending while there is still so little goods to be bought.

Mex Pix Unionists Sound Off Vs. Upped B.O. Prices

Mexico City, Jan. 5.

Unionized film workers, mostly members of National Cinematographic Industry Workers Union (STIC), have gone on record as being opposed to any hikes in theatre admit prices.

Declaring that films are by far Mexico's most popular form of public diversion, unionists demand that municipal and federal governments call a halt to "the unbranked upping of charges that is being indulged by film operators." They urge a check on revenues and costs of all theatres and say that examination will reveal that theatres can cut admittance charges by 40% and still make "huge profits."

There is strong sentiment among legislators to enact laws to force exhibitors to slash prices, now at the new high of $4 (Mex) regular and $5 Mex) for musical events, in first-run houses. Exhibs contend current charges are definitely neither inflation nor profiteering, for costs, important among which is labor, are plenty high.

Ask English Quota Rise

London, Jan. 14.

Sir Henry French, director general of British Film Producers Assn., told the press today (14) that his assn. intends to approach the Board of Trade with proposal that present English film quota which expires April, 1948, should be raised from 17 to 23%.

Assn. will also ask that exhibs' quota be abolished.

The assn. is also demanding that the Government de-Americanize the Associated British Picture Corp. now partly owned by Warner Bros. French, when questioned, refused to divulge the de-Americanization procedure.

Argentine Meg Offers To Pagnol; 'Baker's Wife' In New B. A. Lease on Life

Buenos Aires, Jan. 2.

Marcel Pagnol, who directed the French picture, "The Baker's Wife," is dickering with two of Argentina's major studios to direct Argentine pix. San Miguel Studios and Argentina Sono Films are competing for the French meggier's services, with Jaime Prades, Argentine film mogul, acting as go-between.

"The Baker's Wife" had the longest run of any film in Argentine history. Recently new copies of the picture were received from France and it is again being exhibited in nabe theatres, although subject to mutilating cuts due to the severe moralistic censorship imposed by entertainment czar Alfredo Bolognese. For some time there has been a move on foot to produce "The Baker's Wife" as a stage play, with Luis Sandrini anxious to get the production rights. It is thought now that Pagnol will direct the stage production, if a theatre is available. Sandrini, however, is in Mexico on film commitments and might be replaced by Pepe Arias.

French Amusement Biz Hit by 5% Price Slash

Paris, Jan. 3.

Beginning with the new year, a cut of 5% on all prices was ordered by the Blum cabinet in an attempt to combat the spiraling cost of living. Cut affects admission prices.

Legit, where a week's advance sale is permitted, will cut down their scales from Jan. 8. Picture theatres had to cut down their scales immediately, and find it difficult to comply due to having to use old tickets priced higher than the new rate, and to the lack of small currency to make change.

Hotels for the present are standing pat, claiming that their current rates don't correspond to the average increase in prices during recent months. Except some of the cheaper restaurants which operate on a minimum scale, eateries are adopting a tongue-in-cheek attitude. Niteries so far are taking no notice and enforcement there is wellnigh impossible.

Besides the much heralded 5% immediate cut, another one of same importance is scheduled as due within two months. Idea is to create in the public a psychology of resistance to continuous increase in prices, and affects mostly stores and services sold for standard prices.

Nitery Biz

ing. Carnival reopened last night (Tuesday) with the Olsen and Johnson show. Some of the Broadway spots are believed to have benefited by the Zanzibar's temporary closing Jan. 3. Spot reopens around Jan. 28 with a show headed by Gertrude Niesen, Jan Murray, Bob Williams, and others.

The east side spots picked up appreciably. In fact The Versailles with Jean Sablon as headliner, claims spot is doing SRO business. The Copa's new show which showed signs of faltering picked up to near capacity business, and La Martinique showed a hefty gain.

Out-of-town buyers accounted for much of the increase, but most operators declare that the general public was just tired of staying home waiting for better conditions.

High B.O. Prices 'Upset Workers' Homes'; Probe Set by Argentine Solons

Buenos Aires, Jan. 5.

Argentine exhibs are worried over a bill introduced in Congress recently by Senator Gomez del Junco calling for a reduction in the price of admission scales in Argentine theatres on the plea that "many a worker's home faces insecurity because the labor classes can no longer get entertainment or instruction through the movies, due to the high admission scales ruling." The Senator stated that films are "a cultural form of entertainment to which all workers are entitled to have their share."

The Senate approved a request for investigation through the Secretariat of Industry and Commerce of all admission scales in force throughout the country as compared to those ruling in 1939, with a view to fixing the maximum prices which should be applied for all entertainment fields throughout the country. The investigation is also to take in the system of distribution and exhibition and ways and means of protecting national pictures. The Senator seems to be under the impression that distributors and exhibitors are in league to operate a trust and his bill is intended to smash any monopoly that may exist.

Hollywood distributors in Buenos Aires feel that this section is intended as a weapon to be held over their heads for political purposes. Nevertheless they can only anticipate a period of tough bargaining while patrons are anxiously consulting their friends behind the boxoffice wickets as to how they will be able to circumvent the new measures.

Fight for Fight Films Enlivens British Scene

London, Jan. 3.

There's been spirited bidding here for film rights of Baksi-Woodcock championship fight due at Harringay Arena sometime in January. Films for last scrap between Lesnevitch and Woodcock, at the Arena last September, were disposed of by promoter Jack Solomons for $6,000, considered a record then. Rights were acquired by Dan Fish, indie picture producer, and formerly film salesman.

Fish made new offer of $13,000, but Solomons, after dallying for some time, finally disposed rights to opposition buyer who is understood to be paying a bigger sum against releasing royalties. Meanwhile Fish is sore and claims he has been doublecrossed.

Swiss Draws British

London, Jan. 3.

Film making in Switzerland by British film producers is becoming a habit. First is Sydney Box, who is to film "Snowbound," based on bestseller "The Lone Skier," with director David MacDonald now in Switzerland getting exterior shots.

Two-Cities Films is now scheduled to make "The Abyss," which will star Luise Rainer and will be directed by Brian Desmond Hurst.

STRAY BULLETS WOUND JEWISH OPERA TROUPE

Jerusalem, Jan. 2.

A bus driver and a musician were seriously wounded and eight other members of the Palestine Folk Opera were slightly injured last week when a Bren gun mounted on the leading vehicle of a military convoy was accidentally discharged shortly after midnight.

The opera group was returning in a convoy of buses from a performance of "Madame Butterfly" (starring Anna Vera, prima donna formerly with La Scala in Milan) at Hadera when it was stopped at Ramatayim by a military patrol. The passengers in the first two buses were ordered to alight and show their identity cards. It was when the third bus pulled up that the gun was accidentally discharged.

The driver was hit in the face and head by splinters, and Mordechai Rechtman, a bassoonist, was struck in the face by a bullet. All the injured were taken to the Bellinson hospital.

U.S. Lawyer's View Nixes Paris Bill to Ban Sartre Jim-Crow Prostitute'

Paris, Jan. 14.

For the first time in Paris history the city fathers have acted on an American lawyer's opinion. This was delivered by Charles Campbell in reference to "Respectful Prostitute," the Jean Paul Sartre play current at the Antoine on a double bill with his "Dead Without Burial."

The Jim Crow theme resulted in a controversy about its offensiveness to Americans, causing the city council to fear it might damage Gallist trade, and culminated in alderman Frederic Dupont moving that the prefect of police be instructed to have the run of the play stopped. Latter had already had some cuts made in the torture scenes of "Burial," which created disturbances in the audience.

Campbell opined that since freedom of expression was held by Americans as a basic principle, they would far more deprecate being involved, even indirectly, in a curtailment of freedom of the stage than having the play kept on, even if objectionable. This killed Dupont's motion.

Campbell, who first came to Paris for Paramount and is regarded as an authority on showbiz and copyrights, is a personal friend of Sartre and received from him a copy of the play autographed "from the grateful playwright—the corpus delicti."

U.S. DP Documentary Shown in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Jan. 2.

"Home Are the Hunted," a film pic produced by the United Palestine Appeal of America, is being shown in the Palestine Foundation Bldg. in Jerusalem. Photographed by Laser Duenner in Technicolor, the pic records the arrival in Palestine of refugees, some still in concentration camps after liberation by the Yellow Star of Judah and the partisan's cap, and their welcome by their kin.

The picture is the first of a series, of which the next will be called "The Jewish Agency," and the third "Tel Aviv—From Refugee to Citizen." The commentary, written by Meyer Levin, was read by actor Ralph Bellamy. Musical background is from Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" and Smetana's "Moldau."

Metro's Shanghai Buy

Metro, adding to its string of new theatre acquisitions abroad, has purchased the Roxy theatre in Shanghai, will convert to a first-run house under the supervision of Tommy Farrell, Metro manager in China.

Theatre seats 1,500 and is air-conditioned.

five years but had never appeared in a picture. Powell, meanwhile, had ceased the $500 monthly payments he'd been voluntarily making to her.

Tax Court, however, overruled the Commissioner's charge that Powell had merely assigned part of his income to Miss Wilson to escape high taxes, declaring the actor had never directly or indirectly received any of the income paid her.

Emelco Buys Out B.A. Pampa Pix For Latin Prod.

Long a leader in the production of advertising films in the Argentine, Emelco Co. recently invaded feature production in Buenos Aires by acquiring the Pampa Film Studio there. Reason why plant was purchased, Federico W. Lowe, director general of the firm, said in New York Monday (13), was that "Emelco was already a stockholder in Pampa and we decided to buy it outright and go into production ourselves."

Studio, Lowe said, now has two sound stages and under an expansion policy his company is embarking on a modernization program which calls for construction of two additional stages. Lowe, who arrived in New York by plane last Monday (6) after a week's stay in Europe where he visited France and Switzerland among other countries on an equipment junket, planed to the Coast yesterday (Tues.) on a purchasing mission of new production gear. He stays there a week, then goes to Mexico and thence to Argentina.

Teeing off a program of some 10 features this year will be "El Retrato de la Abuela" ("The Grandmother's Portrait") starring Mirtha Legrand, Emelco will also transfer its advertising production activities to smaller film studio elsewhere in Buenos Aires, Lowe revealed. Company annually produces some 200 advertising shorts with very a length from one to five minutes. Unlike most U. S. advertising films, he said, Emelco's ad pix have a plot.

Currently Emelco has outlets for its ad pix in some 500 theatres in Argentina, Chile and Uruguay. Company also produces newsreel shorts and documentary films. These, however, are released through an organization known as Empa, of which 400 leading Argentine exhibs are stockholders.

Discussing the projected Argentine quota where the importation of U. S. films would be fixed in proportion to Argentine films used in America, Lowe said the measure is still being argued and for the present, unrestricted importation of U. S. product is permitted.

Canada Lifts Ceilings On Theatre Admissions

Montreal, Jan. 14.

Ceilings on admissions to motion pictures were lifted by the federal government Saturday (11) in a sweeping order which included the end of price control on many other articles.

Hard to say yet what the immediate effect will be on general b.o. figures, but it's no secret that for a long time exhibs have been lobbying around Ottawa to try and get controls off theatre admissions. Order lifting ceilings applies to all amusements.

Lifting of ceilings may also aggravate current tiffing between Canadian exhibs and distribs. The way the matter stands now, exhibs are fighting distrib attempt to cut in on profits not directly derived from flicker showings, e.g., candy concessions, etc. If the various indies and circuits can't agree on new prices, it's not unlikely that the distribs will ask a bigger percentage from the gross.

No Price Hikes for Canada

Toronto, Jan. 14.

Despite the fact that the Canadian government has announced the lifting of ceilings on theatre admission prices, J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has no intention of increasing prices in the immediate future in the company's 333 houses across the Dominion. The same decision has been announced by Odeon Theatres of Canada (Andrew Rank), which has 106 houses here.

"Although our operating costs have gone up considerably," said Fitzgibbons, "we believe this is not the proper time to make increases in admission prices. If they become necessary later, they will be very slight; we intend to maintain the present admission prices as long as our volume of business remains at the present level.

He pointed out that admissions are much lower than those prevailing in the United States or Britain.

Can. Pix Rentals Seen Crimping Exhibs by Outracing B.O. Ratio

Montreal, Jan. 14.

Claim that film rentals in Canada have increased disproportionately with boxoffice receipts has been made in a report to the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries by B. C. Salamis, QATI's rep on the advisory council of the Federal Wartime Prices & Trade Board. WPTB function is similar to the now defunct OPA in U. S.

Report said that in three years before 1945, rentals went up 25.6% where b.o. receipts have gone up only 19.3%. Salamis claimed that even if it's assumed that flicker rentals should increase in the same ratio as b.o. receipts, then the distribs governed by the 19.3% figure, should have received $17,076,487 in 1945 instead of $17,976,467, a difference of about $900,000 since the beginning of price controls.

Release of these figures is taken in some quarters to be a straw in the wind, released by exhibs, to see what reaction would be toward attempt to raise admission prices which have been frozen for years.

Salamis report also pointed up the increasing tiffing between Canadian distribs and exhibs recently manifested by the exhib protests against attempt of distribs to cut in on profits of items not directly connected with film showing, such as candy concessions, etc.

Contention on part of Salamis is that U. S. exhibs rentals come to about 30% whereas in Canada cost is 32.41c on every dollar. It's pointed out that since most expenses are constant and cannot be cut, profit in theatre operation will nosedive if film costs increase and attendances decline.

Salamis claimed that French pix out of Hollywood should be rented at very little increase over regular films, since it takes little extra coin to dub in the French talk.

REPORT FILM STUDIOS SLATED FOR IRELAND

Dublin, Jan. 9.

With curtain drawn and reporters so far on the outside that nobody yet knows who's who, film interests in Dublin are reportedly working on plan to establish film studios in Ireland. Project is said to have the blessing of the De Valera government, but official sources have no information on the subject.

The name of J. Arthur Rank was rumored in connection with the project but a spokesman of Metropole & Allied Cinemas—representatives of the Rank organization here—said that they had no information about it. A similar denial has come from Korda interests.

Only Irish producing unit operating at the present time—and mainly on advertising shorts—is Hibernia Films, headed by Desmond Egan, with George Fleischman as chief technician.

Rank Acquires Rights To More Irish Stories

Dublin, Jan. 9.

J. Arthur Rank producing units have acquired rights of three more Irish story properties, according to director Brian Desmond Hurst, now here on vacation. Properties are James Stephens's "Crock of Gold," Liam O'Flaherty's "Famine" and Sean O'Casey's "The Shadow of a Gunman."

Directors of the J. Arthur Rank organization have shown considerable interest in Irish stories over the past 18 months, starting with the Frank Launder-Sidney Gilliat production of "I See a Dark Stranger," starring Deborah Kerr, now in Hollywood. This was followed by Hurst's "Hungry Hill" (tradeshown in London last week). Carol Reed's "Odd Man Out" (James Mason starring), with Launder-Gilliat now working on "Captain Boycott" at Pinewood Studios. All four pix have employed a high percentage of Irish talent, much of it new to screen work.

The Anchorage, Little Theatre, only incorporated little theatre group in Alaska, organized last fall with $10,000 subscriptions, recently completed its first season, having given four productions.

New Producing Unit Set For France, U.K. by Glass

Max Glass, French pix producer before the war, is launching a new producing outfit, Arkadia Films, with units being set up in France and England. Glass, who is also an author, is currently in New York awaiting publication Jan. 23, by Beechhurst Press of his first non-fiction work, "Liberation From Yesterday."

Arkadia has two films on its schedule for '47 and '48, both based on scripts written by Glass. Initial film, an historical romance entitled "Napoleon IV," will be lensed in France this summer. The second, scheduled for '48 for production in England, is titled "Suicide Altitude, 12,000" with story based on veterans' postwar problems.

British Isles Set for Oscar Feb. Polling

London, Jan. 5.

The National Film Award, Britain's approximation to the U. S. Academy Awards, is set for all-island polling during February, with the London Daily Mail behind canvassing of the public. British are to vote their preference as to the top native film released since Sept. 4, '45, and the outstanding actor and actress playing in any of the 44 Anglo pix which hit British screens during the period.

Half million votes were recorded in '46 when Britishers plunked for James Mason, Margaret Lockwood and "The Way to the Stars." Problem was then complicated by necessity of chosing from film output of six war years. Silver Star statuets are the British form of Oscars, with one apiece going to actor, actress and film producer.

Obbligato to the month of polling will be some typical Yank tubthumping. A series of exhibitions are to be staged in leading stores in many British and Scottish cities while a mammoth film festival is planned for London. British stars now in Hollywood are to be linked up via radio to stars still at home in a nationwide broadcast set for Feb. 2.

Stockholm, Jan. 3.

With 265 films released in Sweden last year, American product accounted for 170 features or 64% of the total. Leading the U. S. importations in point of b.o. success were such pictures as the Ingrid Bergman starrers "Saratoga Trunk," "Bells of St. Mary's" and "Spellbound," while "House on 92nd Street," which featured Swedish actress Signe Hasso, also drew strong biz.

Runnerup to the U. S. were Swedish producers with 35 pix exhibited. British pix followed with 23. Others included France, 19; Russia, 6; Denmark, 5 and Norway, Italy, Belgium, Mexico, Switzerland, Germany and Hungary with one apiece. Topping Britain's pictures were "The Seventh Veil" and "Henry V." However, much British product failed to do better due to lack of proper exploitation.

Improvement was seen in the quality of Swedish films, observers noted, and it was evident that local producers are pointing toward the international market. Much Swedish product saw distribution abroad last year and it is anticipated that 1947 will find additional outlets. It is recalled that Swedish films were well rated in other countries in silent screen days.

DANES VS. DOUBLE TAX

Washington, Jan. 14.

Treaty with Denmark for elimination of double taxation, similar to those with Great Britain and several other nations, is now in the making.

A Danish tax delegation is due here shortly to work on the details with the State Department.

Clair, Chevalier 'Gold,' 1st French Pic Aimed For General U.S. Market, Due

Paris, Jan. 8.

Though getting very little publicity here while rolling, "Silence est d'Or" ("Silence Is Gold"), currently under production here at the Pathe studio, constitutes an experiment which if successful will open a new era to the French picture industry by permitting it to break into the American market in a big way and thus get out of its present rut.

"Silence Is Gold" is bankrolled half by RKO and half by French Pathe under a co-production deal, with RKO's Jack Votion producing the picture here. French rights go to Pathe, and American rights to RKO, who plan to give it the first general release a French picture will have had in the U. S. since silent days.

To effect this, both subtitling and dubbing have been given up. The picture is shot in the one French version, the dialog fading out in some of the scenes, to be replaced by a translation in English, and in others by a commentary explaining the action. The script has been prepared to permit the picture to retain its interest, and some scenes are specially prepared to facilitate the processing of the American version. For the latter the technical work will be done in Hollywood, where translations and commentary will be voiced by Maurice Chevalier, who will go there as soon as the picture is completed.

Directed by René Clair, the picture stars Maurice Chevalier in the part of a middle-aged picture producer of pioneer days, Francois Perier and Marcelle Derrien. Latter, a 20-year-old brunet, is a Clair discovery. Photowork is by Armand Thirard, crack French cameraman. Originally budgeted at $560,000, the picture, which includes some big mob scenes and extensive sets, will be turned out for a total cost of about $720,000.

Picture, which will have taken about 16 weeks to make, is almost completed. It will permit Pathe to own on the French market, which is the main source of revenue of local production, a picture of which they pay only half the cost, which is a huge advantage considering that up-to-date French product has only derived paltry returns from the American market.

Tax Closes Mex Houses

Mexico City, Jan. 5.

All five theatres of Torreon, in heart of Mexico's cotton belt, have closed as a result of the special tax of 10% of gross enacted by the local civic fathers.

Closure is the first of its kind in Mexico. National Exhibitors Assn., however, isn't going through with its threat to close all of Mexico's 1,245 houses in sympathy. But Assn. and other filmers are trying to induce the Torreon municipality to rescind the tax, which became effective Jan. 1.

Argentine Pix Production Bullish For '47 With Coin, Material on Hand

Buenos Aires, Jan. 5.

Argentine film studios are looking forward to a prosperous year in 1947 and especially to renewal of studio buildings and equipment. Plenty of coin is available and San Miguel, Sono Film and Emelco (recently merged with Pampa Film) are all building apace, while studio technicians are clippering to the U. S. in search of cameras, technicians and material of all kinds. The supply of raw stock from Europe is coming in without hitch and the days of raw stock shortage are a thing of the past.

In the meantime, obstacles directors have to overcome in antiquated studios would be enough to drive any Hollywood director nuts. At one of the major studios recently, production was held up for a whole day while authorities were contacted to get an injunction against operation of a motor in a nearby factory, vibration from which was so deafening that sound cameras in the studio a block away were thrown completely out of gear. On another occasion, it was found that the studio roofing was so full of gaps that birds had nested under the rafters and their chirping cut into the sound, ruining miles of footage. It took three days to find the offending nests.

In yet another studio a constant sound of hammering upset shooting schedule for two days, because studio hands off duty were using surplus lumber to build themselves shelves for their own homes.

San Miguel has begun shooting on "La Cumparsita" at the Bella Vista studios, with Hugo del Carril in the lead and Antonio Momplet directing. Lumiton has everything set at its Munro studios to start work on "Con el Diablo en el Cuerpo," with Juan Carlos Thorry and Susanita Freyre teamed. Carlos Hugo Christensen will meg.

Marshall Pic

Argentina Sono Film has put forward production of its next Nini Marshall pic, as the star has a contract with the CMQ network in Havana for radio and theatre performances early in the year. Lumiton's much discussed picture, "The Naked Angel" ("El Angel Desnudo"), which rocketed Olga Zubarry to stardom, has run for five weeks at the Gran Cine Ideal, and encouraged by this success Carlos Hugo Christensen is to make another picture with the actress in the lead. Sono Film is blue-printing a production to start in March, teaming Zully Moreno with Arturo de Cordova, directed by Luis Cesar Amadori. Story will be an adaptation from the Joracy Camargo stage play "Que Dios se lo pague" ("God Bless You").

AAA (Artistas Argentinos Asociados) has signed director Luis Saslavsky, who was responsible for "La Dama Duende" ("The Ghost Lady"). In this way this major production unit, which has turned out such outstanding pix as "La Guerra Gaucha" and "Su Mejor Alumno," adds to its roster of directing talent. Saslavsky's first picture for AAA is slated to be "Un Tal Servando Gomez," adapted by Homero Manzi from Samuel Eichelbaum's play. Saslavsky has some chores to finish up for Sono Film before going to AAA.

A newly-formed studio, Alfar, starts work this month. Its first picture is to be directed by Fregonese. Just after the latter had signed up with Alfar he received a Metro offer to direct pix in Hollywood and Alfar granted him leave of absence to accept. However, Fregonese will plane down to Buenos Aires early in the year for a three-month chore at Alfar.

India Producer Homing After Setting Pix Deals

Indian producer C. Shantaram and his wife, Jayashree, Indian film star, leave the United States Saturday (18) on the first leg of their return trip to Bombay. They'll take the Queen Elizabeth to England and fly from there.

Shantaram, while in this country, set a deal with Mayer & Burstyn for release of two of his films, "Shakuntula" and "Journey of Dr. Kotnis." Distribs are understood to receive 50% of the proceeds. First pic will be released this spring.

Producer has named Al Margolies to represent him here.

Film Biz Booms In France; Prod. Costs Up 1,000%

Washington, Jan. 14.

Film business is starting to boom again in France, according to figures received from our Embassy by the motion picture office of the Department of Commerce.

A new survey discloses that 4,650 regular commercial motion picture theatres are now operating in the country, of which 340 are in Paris and 450 in the nearby suburbs. In addition, there are 1,100 permanent 16m theatres and 1,700 touring 16m theatres serving some 10,000 localities in France. During the fiscal year 1945-'46, the gross biz of the 35m theatres totaled 8,000,000,000 francs, representing a weekly attendance of about 8,000,000 persons.

The report adds that another 349 theatres are set up in French North Africa—224 in Algeria, 72 in Tunisia and 53 in Morocco.

Interesting figure is the average cost of producing a feature, showing a tremendous jump over prewar days. Average cost in 1946 was 25,-883,000 francs, contrasted with 2,-610,000 in 1938. The cost has jumped almost 1000% in the nine-year period.

There are now 14 studios operating in France, of which 11 are in the Paris area, one at Bordeaux, one in Marseilles and one in Nice. In addition, there are 11 laboratories. The government report shows that since the liberation, France has turned out 141 features by 93 producers.

SIRITZKY TO FRANCE TO RECOVER 63 HOUSES

Sam Siritzky, veepee of Siritzky International Pictures, sails to Europe on the America tomorrow (Thursday) to complete legal action in the company's suit against the French government for return of its theatre chain. The 63 houses were originally expropriated by the government following the liberation, on the basis of their having been held by the Germans, making them enemy alien property. Eighteen houses have already been returned. Justin Godard, former cabinet minister under Herriot, is representing the plaintiffs.

Siritzky will return in February, bringing with him Marcel Pagnol, French producer, who will begin work on a Technicolor feature in Hollywood shortly after his arrival. Film, called "Birth of Love" and written by Pagnol will be made in two versions, French and English. Company owns U. S. rights to distribution of all of Pagnol's 11 films, with one, "Well-Digger's Daughter," entering its fifth month at the Avenue. N. Y., arty theatre. Film was picked as one of the 10 best of 1946 by N. Y. critics.

Dolores Del Rio to B.A.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Dolores Del Rio, currently working in the Argosy production, "The Fugitive," in Mexico City, will hop to Buenos Aires on completion of that picture to star in an Argentine film.

Mexican actress is due in the U.S. late in spring for personal appearances with "The Fugitive."

'Night, Laughter,' Costing 250G, Lagging at B.O.

London, Jan. 7.

Emile Littler's mammoth revue, "The Night and the Laughter," at the London Coliseum, which is reputed to have cost over $250,000 to produce, and the most expensive show ever staged at this house, is failing to hold up at the boxoffice.

Show has not proved hit expected, primarily attributed to too much glamor and not enough comedy, with Robert Nesbitt, London ace show producer, having given Bud Flanagan, one of the best local comics, not enough to do. Show is in its 13th week, having played several weeks to a loss.

Friedl Retires As Minn. Amus. Co. Prez After 15 Years; Other Exchange Briefs

Minneapolis.

After 15 years in post, John J. Friedl has resigned as president and general manager of Minnesota Amus. Co. (Paramount circuit of 97 Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota theatres). He's retiring from show business to fulfill lifetime ambition and become Texas citrus grower, having acquired two groves, Leonard Goldenson, Paramount Theatres head, announced.

Replacing Friell, Harry B. French, his assistant who pinch-hit for him during his recent long illness, has been promoted. French has been in film business in territory since 1912 and joined Finkelstein & Ruben circuit in 1923. When Publix acquired F. & R. chain he went with former company and has been with Paramount Theatres ever since.

Before coming here, Friedl was Publix division director in the south. During the war he was cited by the federal government for untiring efforts as northwest chairman of War Activities Committee and through his efforts the industry developed national plans resulting in theatres selling more than 15% of all E bonds.

Kane Allied Counsel

North Central Allied has appointed Stanley D. Kane executive counsel, a newly created post, replacing executive secretary Donald Guttman, recently resigned. For past three years he has been employed by National Labor Relations Board here, but in 1935-'37 was executive secretary of the Independent Exhibitors organization here, resigning to become executive managing editor of Dental Laboratory Review.

Directors set April 21-22 as date for annual convention here.

Steffes Twin City Mystery

Minneapolis.

A local mystery is the identity of the associates of George Granstrom, owner of two St. Paul de luxe neighborhood houses, in the purchase here of the late W. A. Steffes' World and Alvin theatres at a reported $225,000 price. The only associate so far divulged is Ted Mann, owner of several Twin City theatres and interested in an out-of-town circuit. It's stated that there are other associates, but their names are being kept secret for the present.

Sale of the World and Alvin liquidates the Steffes' theatre holdings, another loop theatre here, the Bijou, previously having been sold to Harry Dryer, its longtime operator, for $65,000. The 1,400-seat Alvin is under lease to the Minnesota Amusement Co. (Paramount circuit) for 21 months longer and now is sublet for burlesque. The Minnesota Amusement Co. has a booking deal for the 300-seat firstrun and moveover World which also will not expire for 21 months. New owners announce no change is contemplated in the World policy.

Liquidation of the Steffes' estate was necessitated when the widow decided to take her property rights under the law, instead of abiding by the will's provisions.

First Prefab House

Los Angeles.

National Theatres will open the first of its proposed string of prefabricated houses, the Crest, in Long Beach, Jan. 23, with a preview, guest stars and other ballyhoo. Theatre will serve as a pattern for mass production of prefashioned houses throughout the country. Idea, conceived by Charles P. Skouras, was worked out in cooperation with Henry Kaiser's engineers.

Crest is fashioned with gypsum panels in steel frames based on a concrete foundation, soundproof and fireproof to meet the most stringent safety laws. More such houses will be prefabricated in California for small towns throughout the U. S. and wartorn cities in Europe and the Far East.

Lust Increases D. C. Chain

Washington.

Ground is soon to be broken here for the newest of the Sidney Lust theatre chain. House will be a 900-seater in nearby Kensington, Md., designed by John Eberson, of N. Y.

Project, which should be ready in the spring, will include three stores as part of a shopping area. Building will be air-conditioned and include a private parking lot for theatre patrons. It will be the first new theatre to be started in this vicinity in several months.

Syracuse Gets Foreign Language

Syracuse.

Alfred DiBella, who long operated the Palace Theatre in Eastwood, is starting foreign film policy at the Happy Hour, North Side grind house which he took over this year.

Dixie Film Sells 50%

New Orleans.

Sale of 50% of the stock of the Dixie Film Corp. to John Jenkins and O. K. Bourgeois of the Astor Pictures Co. of Texas, Oklahoma City, Memphis and Atlanta was announced Sat. (11) by Jack Auslet, prez of Dixie. Auslet, who owns 50% of the stock, will continue as prez and general manager.

Dixie Film simultaneously announced that a contract has been closed with Madison Picture Corp. of New York to release in the New Orleans territory a large number of features and westerns.

PRC's Frisco Takeover

PRC has closed a deal to acquire the company's San Francisco franchise from Sam Sobel, original franchise holder in the Bay area. Company steps in immediately under an arrangement which hoists Sobel to the post of PRC's district manager for the Coast, Ralph Clark, formerly of United Artists, has been named branch manager of the San Francisco exchange.

WB's Stephens to Coast

Richard Stephens, formerly field public relations rep for Warners in been assigned to handle the Coast upstate and western New York, has territory. New headquarters will be in San Francisco. Art Moger, New England field rep, takes over Stephen' eastern territory.

Don Woods, formerly WB branch manager in Milwaukee, has been promoted to manager of the Dallas office, working under supervision of Norman Ayers, southern division sales manager. He succeeds J. W. Loewe, resigned. Successor in the Milwaukee branch managership is Nat Marcus, former salesman.

Mark Silver Upped

Shifting to the Pennsylvania-Washington territory, United Artists' New York branch manager, Mark N. Silver, was named district manager of UA's Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Washington branches, according to J. J. Unger, general sales manager. Post was previously vacant. He'll headquarter in Philly.

2 Theatres Open in NW Area

Minneapolis.

Despite building restrictions and shortages, two new theatres in this territory have been completed and will open shortly. They are the independent Village (W. J. Glaser), a 622-seater, at Fairbault, Minn., and the Minnesota Amus. 600-seat Cameo at Eau Claire, Wis. Each cost approximately $100,000. Another Minnesota Amus. Co. 1,000-seat house planned for this area is partially finished. Indie theatre that Sheldon Grengs has under construction at Eau Claire, Wis., has been delayed because of trouble in getting material.

Shafer Expanding Chain

Huntington, W. Va.

W. R. Shafer, of Morehead, Ky., took over the Roxy and Westmore theatres Jan. 1 to add them to his chain—two houses at Morehead, one at Olive Hill and one at Flemingburg, Ky. He brought the Huntington theatres from C. B. Hukle who came here 14 years ago and reopened the closed Roxy.

Selznick Plans

ing Organization, which will distribute Vanguard product, will be well along in operation by May 1 and going full blast by July. Reissue of "Intermezzo" will follow "Duel" into release, with "Paradine Case," "Portrait of Jenny" and "Little Women" coming later. Product of outside producers may be sandwiched between these releases, MacNamara said.

Selznick aide admitted that dealings were in progress with National Screen Service as a possible agency for physical handling of SRO pix. Couple other deals are also cooking, he said, with a decision possibly to be made later this week, since Neil Agnew, distribution chief for Selznick, and Milt Kusell, sales manager, left for the Coast over the weekend for huddles to jell the SRO setup.

MacNamara also left for Hollywood over the weekend, after spending several days in New York interviewing candidates for the organization's eastern advertising-publicity post, from which Sid Alexander recently resigned. No final decision was made, with MacNamara due back late next week to finally set his appointee. Some 15 to 20 candidates were interviewed.

MacNamara admitted that after all the battling between Selznick and Samuel Goldwyn over occupancy of the Astor, N. Y., it still might become the Broadway home of "Duel". That will depend on how long Goldwyn's "Best Years of Our Lives" continues to do substantial biz. If the film doesn't run much beyond April or May, he indicated, "Duel" may well go into the house.

Dallas 'Outlaw'

That's 60c evenings, 50c matinees and 12c for kids at all times. Initial day's combined take was $19,870, with second day $19,768 (a drop because of number of kid admissions, it being Saturday) and third day $15,126. No squawk developed from ecclesiastic or civic circles on the moral qualities of the film, latter having been the basis of contention wherein its nation-wide sanctions have been concerned.

Because of the success of the Dallas experiment, Fred M. Jack, southern division manager of UA, and Harry Gold, Hughes' sales chief, are planning to duplicate it in other Texas towns and may extend the scheme to other cities throughout the country where they can't get circuit time. Only other Texas key to play the film was Houston, last July, although 532 small towns in the state have completed runs.

Deals were made independently with each of the Dallas houses, all of them calling for 50% of the gross to the distrib. Many of the theatres playing the pic are in considerable disrepair, but that didn't seem to stop them over the weekend from doing in the first two days double what they usually do in a week.

Following are the day-and-date houses: Airway, Arcadia, Beckley, Beverly Hills, Capitan, Casa Linda, Cliff Queen, Ervay, Gay, Granada, Grove, Haskell, Hill, Kessler, Maple Peak, Rita, Sunset, Urban, Grand Prairie and Garland.

Insurance Sales

tions. Exhib, on his part, should have no kick, and should even be able to benefit by the arrangements, since, if a sleeper came along, he could materially increase his business with added publicity. He would then have all the benefits of the upped take which, distribs concede, is due him through his showmanship abilities.

Opponents of the plan among both distribution and exhibition personnel, however, predict it will run into many snags that might preclude its ever operating smoothly. Some stars, for example, might mean more in certain territories than they would in others. Wallace Beery pictures, for example, are heavy grossers in the southwest but fall flat in other situations. For exhibs in the other situations, to get a break on such pix it would be necessary for the distrib to check practically every picture with a different star, setting up his tables on each. This would mean, it's pointed out, merely constant checking of each theatre and a reversion to the same old system.

Cheating

With the proclivity for cheating on percentage pictures already evidenced by many exhibitors, some distribs are also afraid the exhib would have too good a chance to lower his potential flat rental fees by cheating, especially during the time his house is being checked. Blind checking, of course, would be the answer to these fears.

French Deal

istries would have to okay the dubbing licenses.

The American embassy in France, on directions from U. S. State Department went into huddles with the French authorities last Friday and strongly supported the complaint of MPA. The French agreed to maintain the status quo all along the line but this does not settle the ultimate issue of whether imposing the regulations would be in violation of the Byrnes-Blum trade protocol of last May.

Officials here say it will take about 18 months to use up the backlog of product more than two years old, except for Technicolor, for which the period will have to be longer. After that, the French would install their regulation against dubbing import films more than two years old.

The French also agreed that only the Film Commission of the Ministry of Information would be required to approve dubbing licenses, as in the past. The embassy telegram explained another point in the new regulations, namely that in the past, on a few occasions, after films were dubbed in France, the French censors then rejected them. Now they will be censored first.

Bolstered by predictions from various foreign sales managers that distribution of 16m prints overseas will add at least 10% annually to foreign grosses, almost every company in the industry will probably be well-started on narrow-gauge distribution abroad before the end of 1947.

Paced by Loew's International, which launched the industry's newest offspring on its foreign career, and RKO, which followed soon afterwards, both Warners and Universal have already begun distribution of 16m prints of their regular product to foreign exhibitors. Paramount and 20th-Fox, currently engaged in an intensive survey of situations in which they plan to begin narrow-gauge operations, rounds out the Big 5 picture. Smaller companies, such as Republic and Columbia, have indicated an early decision to enter the program, with every probability that they'll also be actively engaged in 16m distribution before the end of the year.

Inclusion of all companies in the program scuttles the chief stumbling block in the path of an all-embracing 16m venture—that of a lack of sufficient narrow-gauge product to keep 16m theatres in operation for a full 52-week year. Indications of such fear on the part of foreign exhibs were brought back to this country by Seymour Mayer, sales manager of Loew's 16m division, from a recent survey of Metro operations in Europe and the Near East. Pointing out that Metro was carrying the ball alone in many countries, Mayer noted his company was prepared to offer only 20 or 25 pictures a year on narrow-gauge stock. Because of the small audiences from which they can draw, exhibs would probably need at least two changes of program weekly. Without that, they couldn't hope to operate throughout the year.

Chief reason for the optimistic predictions of high grosses to be earned by 16m distribution is that American distribs can reach a new and as yet untapped public with the narrow-gauge pix. Utilizing mobile units of installing specially-built 16m theatres, the majors believe they can expand their foreign markets to millions of customers who have never before seen a motion picture of any kind. The Philippines, which has served as the guinea pig for all company operations, has offered the most lucrative market to date, but the industry is looking ahead to the time when conditions will permit them to truck the films into the farthest hinterlands of China, India and other such densely-populated lands. Metro, for one, has already teed off its program in India.

Companies will not permit exhibition of narrow-gauge prints in foreign cities in order to protect 35m accounts. System is a certain assuager for the fears of 35m exhibs, most of whom have welcomed the idea after their first gripes had been overcome. Exhibitor associations in such countries as England and Sweden, moreover, have even gone so far as to help campaign for the industry's newcomer and have set up special regulations to insure there will be no competition.

Program has opened up avenues of entertainment for the first time to millions of people, and so far has been welcomed by these new customers with open arms.

'Joke' Bow for Texas

Austin, Texas, Jan. 14.

Eagle-Lion's "It's a Joke, Son" will have its world premiere here at the Paramount on Jan. 21. Date is also inauguration day for Governor-elect Beauford Jester.

Following the opening here, film will bow in San Antonio at the Aztec on Jan. 22; at the Metropolitan, Houston, Jan. 23, and at Dallas' Majestic, Jan. 24.

Kenny ("Senator Claghorn") Delmar, featured in the film as well as other stars and executives of Eagle-Lion, are expected to be here for the inauguration and premiere.

RKO-PATHE MAKES EXECUTIVE CHANGES

Swing into full production of the new RKO-Pathe New York studios brought about a switch in the company's top brass, giving prexy Frederick Ullman, Jr., a free rein to set corporation policy while detail work is assumed by new appointees. Studios will have their formal opening Friday (17).

Topping the changes is the move of Walton C. Ament, former veepee and editor of Pathe News, into the spot as veepee and general manager, where he'll supervise newsreel, documentary and commercial picture operations. Alfred Butterfield, former news editor, will take over Ament's old duties in addition to his own current spot as promotion head for RKO Pathe. Meanwhile, William K. McClure has been named assistant publicity manager.

In the "This Is America" division, Phil Reisman, Jr., is in the newly created post of editorial manager, overseeing scripts and writers for the shorts series. Ament was wartime chairman of the U. S. newsreel pool, and was named veepee and a director of the corporation in 1942. Butterfield was with the radio March of Time and an associate editor of Life mag before going with the company in 1942.

Company is planning increased emphasis on commercial and industrial films for advertising sponsors in the future, with probable resultant de-emphasis on attempts at feature pix.

Mayer Puts Stable On Auction Block

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Louis B. Mayer, Metro production chief, is reported negotiating for the sale of his racing stables and breeding farm to eastern interests. Mayer is said to have declared that running the bangtail project leaves him insufficient time to devote to his Metro interests. Reported offer is $5,000,000 for his properties at Perris Valley, Calif.

Syndicate comprising the prospective purchasers include Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham, cosmetic manufacturer; Warren Wright, industrialist; Ed Moore, racing stock owner, and Brownell and Leslie Combs, Kentucky horse owners.

COMET'S 'SUSIE' SEQUEL

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Comet, headed by Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn, will make a sequel to "Susie Steps Out," with Nita Hunter continuing in the title role. Picture will be the sixth on Comet's program for United Artists release this season.

story as closely as possible, and Janney leaves for the Coast next month to huddle with the duo on the final draft. Lasky said that a number of stars might do spot appearances in the picture in the final sequence where the heroine is buried, adding that Eddie Cantor had already proffered his services.

Lasky declared he'd postponed production of "Intermission," originally slated as his next picture, in order to get "Miracle" started. Intermission" now is slated to roll in July, to be followed by a filmization of John Galsworthy's "Apple Tree" and "Caruso Sings Tonight," latter a biopic of the late Metropolitan opera tenor.

House Reviews

State, N. Y.

Jimmy Palmer Orch (13), Jean Carroll, Ben Dova, Roy Smeck, Olsen & Joy; "The Return of Monte Cristo" (Col).

Current State show represents one of the minor lapses in the string of strong layouts the house has been having. Theatre seems to display a failing in presentation of bandshows, probably because of lack of equipment to properly show-off a musical stage layout. It's been evident during the past few times when the pit-band moved to the higher level.

The podium occupant this week, is Jimmy Palmer, whose crew of 13 seems sparse both in musical calibre and in numbers. Arrangements aren't properly tailored for this comparatively sparse detachment as the band tries to emulate the effects of larger bands and doesn't quite hit it off. Palmer is a likable lad, although he displayed nervousness during show caught, and baritone fluttered frequently. For added entertainment, three bandsmen in fright wigs do "I'm a Big Boy Now" but effort is too borscht-beltish to be effective here.

The rest of the divertissement has its moments, although there are occasional lapses. The acts do comparatively well, but routining doesn't quite hit it off. Olsen and Joy, a personable dance team (New Acts) provide a good opener, while Ben Dova's standard drunk turn hits the crowd nicely.

Roy Smeck gives the crowd a glimpse of what the banjo looks like. About the only place they're seen these days is in pawnshop windows and when Gene Sheldon and Smeck are working. Smeck's opening number on that instrument gives an idea of why the banjo has passed into limbo. Fortunately he discards it after the opening to work the electric steel guitar and a uke. He's virtuoso on these strings, but act shows insufficient modernization, and Smeck must go into an undue amount of hoke to get across.

Oriental, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 9.

Milt Herth Trio, Fred Lowery & Dorothy Rae; Paul Remos & Toy Boys (3), Terry & Ralph Rio, 3 Wiles, Ray Lang Orch (15); "Strange Woman" (UA).

Hedy Lamarr in "Strange Woman" with an "Adults Only" tag is the magnet that will attract them here for the next three weeks. However, customers will also see a vaude show that's a pleaser.

Bill opens with the Three Wiles, two men and gal who do a tap routine while flashing magic tricks. Do some Hollywood impreshes which are weak but finish strong with "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers."

Fred Lowery and Dorothy Rae follow and register neatly. Lowery's whistling of "By The Waters of Minetonka," and "Holiday for Strings" gets solid returns. Miss Rae sings several numbers to nice response and closes with Lowery in a duet.

Paul Remos and his midgets are always a crowd pleaser with their smart acrobatics and clever comedy. Heavy applause is given flash finish of two small guys atop 15 foot pole; one pounding on xylophone while other does acro stunts. Terry and Ralph Rio clown around with femme pulling a got-to-go routine a la Fannie Brice, which while old stuff, gets heavy yocks.

Closer is the Milt Herth Trio, with Les Wavrinek on piano, and Loring Gilmore on drums coming up from the pit to put on fast 15 minutes of swing. Herth at the Hammond organ kicks the pedals around for fine effects on "Dark Eyes" and "St. Louis Woman." Finishes with "Shine," which features sustained drumming by Gilmore, for plenty applause.

Tower, K. C.

Kansas City, Jan. 10.

Major Bowes All-Star Graduates with Sid Raymond, Crandall Sisters (3), Jack Murray, Jesse James, The Crawfords (2), Chet Clark, The Okies (2) and Tower Orch (9) with Jack Parks; "Land Rush" (Col) and "Lone Star Moonlight" (Col).

Unit takes over the Tower stage this week in place of the usual variety bill. Major Bowes label helps out considerably at the box-office, but troupe otherwise has no name value. Leans heavily toward the novelty side, but scores neatly on entertainment.

Sid Raymond doubles as m.c., giving the Crandall Sisters trio the nod for the opening spot. Hadn't worked out all the details of registering through the house mike, at the Friday night show, but not enough to bother the customers. Threesome are lookers, but are so-so in a duo of songs. Jack Murray in the deuce has a try at vocally imitating name band instrumentalists, rating pretty fair on Tommy Dorsey's trombone but missing the mellowness of several trumpet men.

Crawford couple dance out their inning, upping the pace of the show with a trio of snappy precision routines, much to the patrons' liking. Harmonica specialist, Chet Clark, follows. Long on boogie; swings it solid on trio of pop songs and plays a more difficult Hungarian dance straight.

Jesse James, Negro lad, does his stint on crutches; comes on whistling, winds by beating out rap-tap with his feet and crutches. Two Okies pull the stops on hillbilly musical instruments, and inject some much-needed comedy into the show. They run the gamut of musical saws, jugs, rubber gloves, inner tubes and guitar tunes for comedy effect.

Raymond has the closing spot for session of impersonating established names such as Bert Lahr, Clem McCarthy, Raymond Gram Swing. Facial resemblance helps him in copying Edward G. Robinson, but also registers strongly on Cantor and Jolson. Quin.

Capitol, Wash.

Washington, Jan. 11.

Stan Kenton Orch (19) with June Christy & The Pastels (5); Meribeth Olds, Steve Evans; "Black Beauty" (20th).

Capitol rarely shells out for top name bands, but when it does, ante pays off. This week, Stan Kenton has the hookey gang, plus hep fans from miles around and a surprising number of oldsters beating a path to find out what makes the outfit click.

Smooth rhythms, novel arrangements, hot jazz, and appealing batoning seem to be the answer. To this reviewer, band seems heavy on the brasses, but roof-raising returns indicate payees think otherwise.

Standouts in an unusually long program were drummer and trombonist individual stints, plus a flashy jazz "Concerto to End all Concertos." Ray Wetzel's trombone and vocalising of "Best Man" and a comic version of "Trees" make solid fare. Drummer Shelly Mann does some dazzling work in "Artistry in Percussion," if the ear drums can take it. Kenton's solo of "St. James' Infirmary," with heckling from the bandstand, pays off with plenty laughs.

June Christy, sultry blonde blues singer, with a husky voice to match her looks, does neatly with "It's a Pity to Say Good-Night," "She's Funny that Way" and a fast scat number.

The Pastels, recent addition to the Kenton troupe, seem to be just another quintet of harmonizers. Group—four men and gal—do okay with a trio of songs.

Fillers-in on bill are emceed by Kenton, who works to get them share of appreciation. Meribeth Olds is tops in her field, and does all sorts of twists with her body. Gets rousing returns for her contortioning. Steve Evans, in the comic spot, impresses better in a trimmed down routine than he did when he appeared at local nitery some weeks ago. Customers indicate impatience to get back to the business of the day, except for Evans' laughing imitations, which get warm reception. Lowe.

Hippodrome, Balto

Baltimore, Jan. 12.

Murtah Sisters (3), Ray & Nardo, Jack Leonard, Felice Iula House Orch (12); "The Jolson Story" (Col).

Abbreviated stage layout employs only three entries but they are well selected. A bit top heavy on vocalizing, combined talents nevertheless provide sufficient variety to make brief time allotment count.

Ray and Nardo, male mimics, share impressions of Cagney, Barry Fitzgerald, Vaughn Monroe and other familiars for okay starter after which Jack Leonard, singing comic, takes hold for a portion. Whacks out parodies and comedy songs along with gags good for laughs.

Murtah Sisters, trio of smart-working femmes, lean on personality vocals and travesty treatments of "Chiquita Banana" and "The Hawaiian War Chant." Make for bill's highlight and a perfect clincher. Biz big. Burm.

Earle, Philly

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.

King Cole Trio, Luis Richardson & Orch, Ernie Williams, Edwards Sisters, Lee Richardson, Dusty Fletcher; "The Falcon's Adventure" (RKO).

The Earle is in for heavy business this week with the King Cole Trio show, an all-sepia bill that packed the customers to standing room on opening day (10).

The audience was reminiscent of a Frank Sinatra show, as plenty of squeals, screams, giggles and comments from the audience interpolated the routine of the King Cole Trio, and a vocalist with the band, name of Lee Richardson.

Richardson is a youthful crooner who knows how to put over a song with a bang. His "Lonesome Road," "Don't Take Your Love From Me," and "The Very Thought of You" garners plenty applause.

King Cole Trio pleases with presentation of "Route 66," "For Sentimental Reasons," "Best Man," "Beginning of the End," and a medley of excerpts from some of their more popular recordings.

Edwards Sisters, a fast-stepping tap team, and Dusty Fletcher, comic, round out the bill. Ernie Williams steps down from the bandstand to do a solo.

Luis Richardson's band runs through "1280 Jive," "Tea for Two," and "Boogie in the Basement," with Richardson performing at the piano. Russell announced the feature acts. Show should play to fine biz for run, if opening crowd's any indication. Shal.

RKO, Boston

Boston, Jan. 10.

Duke Ellington Orch, Peck & Peck, Marion Cox, Freddie Douglas, Howell & Bowser; Kay Davis, "Nocturne" (RKO).

As usual, Duke Ellington puts on a wow band show—his is the standard used in judging others—and takes the current big houses at the RKO right into camp. Supporting numbers gain in value on Ellington's band wagon, too.

Band gets off the mark from the outset with "Just You," and musical numbers from then on include "Happy Go Lucky Local," "Mood Indigo," "Sophisticated Lady" and others, all in rich, individual and inventive idioms, with the Duke taking off from the piano.

Plenty of soloists, too. Kay Davis warbles "Minnehaha," Ray Nance gets "Just Squeeze Me," Albert Sears does a sax solo on "Hiawatha," Marion Cox sings "St. Louis Blues," and Albert Hibbler, blind singer, gets an ovation for his stint. Thus musical part has plenty of contrast and interest and registers very big.

Howell and Bowser, song and patter team, click the best of the vaude offerings, but Freddie Douglas, with sleight-of-hand novelty added to his dancing routine, and the slow-motion pantomiming of Peck & Peck are equally solid with the customers. It's a top ranking show with pace and variety.

Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops orchestra, made presentation of Esquire's Gold award to Ellington on the stage of the house Friday night, with kudos also for Harry Carney, baritone sax, and Al Hibbler, vocalist. Elie.

Circle, Indpls.

Indianapolis, Jan. 11.

Connee Boswell, Freddie Slack Orch, Freddie Bartholomew, Leonard Barr & Helen Estes; "Falcon's Adventure" (RKO).

Freddie Slack plays subordinate role to other headliners in this show at Circle, providing only background music for more than half the running time, and that in one big lump. Result is rather one-sided affair in which Connee Boswell is a brilliant standout. The husky-voiced thrush offers 10 or 12 songs without a break and has customers still asking for more when she finally calls it quits. Her solid repertoire includes "Five Minutes More," "Stormy Weather," a lengthy "Show Boat" medley, "Ole Buttermilk Sky," "South America, Take It Away" and a fine version of "Dinah" in which Slack provides a snappy boogie accompaniment at the piano. These, and more.

Freddie Bartholomew impresses as a likeable chap with versatile talent in better than average personal appearance turn. He has a clever routine suited to his needs as an ex-child star, a pleasingly rich singing voice and a clever way of telling a character or dialect story. Much of his gab is devoted to telling how he came to be making the tour, but it's well done. His song, a special, is "Growing Up." Leonard Barr and Helen Estes get a few laughs with their comedy dance routines and pantomime.

Show was handicapped at start when illness of Ella Mae Morse made last minute changes necessary, but soon settled down to smooth running order. Slack, who has his inning first, impresses most with his boogie-woogie piano style. Band gets fair response to "Play, Fiddle, Play," "It Had to Be You," "This Is Always" and "Stardust." Biz was moderate when caught Sat. p.m. Corb.

Million Dollar, L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 10.

Carmen Cavallaro Orch (13), Gloria Stewart; Doodles Weaver, Babs and Bobby; "Shadowed" (Col).

Piano work of Carmen Cavallaro is solid pleaser on this week's offering. He participates in all of the 10 numbers allotted orch and snagged sock reception at show caught. Opener is the oldie, "Lullaby of Broadway." Cavallaro then goes into medley from film, "Time, Place and the Girl," in which he appeared. Numbers showcased in top fashion are "Through a Thousand Dreams," "Oh, But I Do" and "Gal in Calico." Midway, leader does special workout on "Dizzy Fingers" that was well-liked. "Warsaw Concerto," "Carioca," "Toselli Serenade" and "Sorrento" were others that clicked. Cavallaro brings curtain down on "Polonaise" to great palm-pounding.

Gloria Stewart, orch canary, does pleasing selling job on "Temptation" and "For Sentimental Reasons" but doesn't shine as well on "The Coffee Song." Doodles Weaver takes care of comedy on bill with zaney impressions, clicking with baseball pantomime, an auto race, and his version of "The Flying Trapeze." Babs and Bobby, young terp team, display good taps. Male needs better costuming, making appearance at show caught in outsize sports jacket and slacks that distracted. Brog.

Govt.-Majors' Decree Battle

it unlikely that the case could be heard before the summer recess, the legalities now say.

Postponement of three months after an early winter decision by the Supreme Court brings the industry into the spring of '48 before the system could be applied. While many company lawyers are fairly confident that the new method will be upset on appeal, it's still more than probable, it is said, that some, if not all, of the majors will pre-test the bid method of selling in selected situations before final word comes down from the nine judges. Sales toppers want to avoid being caught flatfooted, and 90 days is hardly considered sufficient time to iron out wrinkles in a highly complex sales machine.

Big Five petition points out that exhibs will be protected by two other decree provisions on which no delay in operation is being sought. Those are 8(b), which provides that each license is to be granted "solely upon the merits and without discrimination in favor of affiliates, old customers or others" and 8(d), which compels theatre-by-theatre and picture-by-picture licensing.

Prize Legal Puzzler

Clarification on the prize legal puzzler—whether the statutory court intended an absolute theatre expansion freeze against the Big Five except in the breakup of partnership holdings—is also sought in the application. Petition asks a decree amendment so that Big Five members may acquire houses to protect investments or to enter a competitive field. This would be in addition to buying out current partners under partial divorcement proviso.

Two-year deadline on pooling agreements and leases in which theatre is turned over to another defendant or indie on profit-sharing basis is also sought in the Big Five petition. Situation in which majors in some instances have operated indie houses for many years is "involved and complicated," petition notes. Determination of rights following dissolution of pools and shaping of other arrangements for theatre operations will require the full two-year period, it is claimed.

Separate Moves

Separate clarification moves by United Artists, Universal and Columbia were not as all-inclusive as the Big Five petition. UA joined with the theatre-owning defendants in seeking delay in initiating competitive bidding until the Supreme Court has ruled. Columbia is seeking postponement not only of bid selling but also imposition of the blockbooking ban pending appeal determination.

Envisioning that its program for acquiring showcases will be hamstrung by the ban on long-term franchises, Universal has asked the court to redefine its terms. Specifically, U would like permission to grant franchises to non-affiliate theatres in chosen spots where such deals will not mean restraint of trade. U points out that the decree preserves rights of defendants to showcase their pix in their own houses, and that a ban on all franchises will compel the company to buy houses rather than arrange for exhibs.

New Acts

JULES MUNSHIN
Comedy
25 Mins.
Cafe Society Uptown, N. Y.

The new crop of GI comics is now beginning to assert itself. The N. Y. cafe scene has already been given a lift by appearances of Peter Lind Hayes, Harvey Stone and Sid Caesar, and numerous funnymen have been aided considerably by the added experience of working before service-audiences. Latest cafe entrant who's made somewhat of a rep in the service is Jules Munshin, a minor nitery and vaude performer before induction, and who showed potentialities during his run in the Army-projected "Army Play by Play."

He's completed his conversion to peacetime comedy with his long run in the current "Call Me Mister" and his postwar boite preem at the Barney Josephson bistro indicates that he'll do extremely well before class audiences.

Munshin is a clever and personable chap whose comedic efforts are fresh and literate. He has a hep line of routines with satiric viewpoints. His material strikes a fresh note opening with a bit calculated to satirize performers who make a fetish of their lingual abilities. He also satirizes psychological films, cowboy songs, opera and does an extremely funny flamenco number.

His work is polished and he shows a highly developed sense of comedy. Currently, he's doing the late show at the cafe as during the early hours he's working in the legiter. Jose.

MONS. CHOPPY & MODELS
Novelty
10 Mins.
Latin Quarter, Miami Beach

Delayed by customs restrictions on his costumes, Mons. Choppy, one of Lou Walters French importations didn't show at opening night nor for a week afterward. Which was too bad for the show, for here is one of the better novelty acts to be brought over in many a year.

Containing all the Gallic sauciness associated with Parisian tradition, the artist utilizes the nifty show-gals backs on which to paint his caricatures for what he calls a "Marriage In Brittany." When all the characters from the Mayor and in-laws down to the bride are drawn and costumed (to the waist), he brings on the zest with the groom, full front and breastily funny. It must be seen to be appreciated. There is no offensiveness and all adds up to top novelty.

Though not for vaude-family houses, the act looks a bet for any nitery using production gals, or for a Broadway musical which needs an extra filip. Aud reaction to the stint was terrific. Lary.

OLSEN & JOY
Dance
10 Mins.
State, N. Y.

Olsen and Joy are a pert pair of terpers who apparently have been around, but weren't caught for VARIETY's file. The duo are energetic and personable and display likable routines interspersed with a good amount of acro work.

O&J do a jitterbug version of apache dance with the lad in gob's garb and gal in a sexy midriff outfit. There are some song interludes, but it's virtually a stage-wait, as their real forte is their dancework. They're okay for vauders and cafes. Jose.

Lightman, 8 Major Firms Seek Separate Trials In Memphis Trust Suits

Memphis, Jan. 14.

M. A. Lightman, his associates of the Malco circuit, and the eight major distributors moved in federal court this week for separate trials of the joint suit for $3,000,000 brought against them by six local indies under the Clayton and Sherman Acts.

Motions for separate trials were filed by Warner Brothers, Universal, United Artists, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Loew's (Metro) Columbia and Paramount; the L. & L. Theatres, doing business as the Capitol Realty Company, M. S. McCord, Edwin Sapinsley, Herbert Kohn and Lightman.

The motions ask that the indie film houses suing under charges of conspiracy to monopolize should separate their claims into separate complaints or in separate counts of the joint suit.

The suit was brought by Chalmers Cullins, Nate Evans and E. O. Cullins, of the Idlewild theatre; Kemmons Wilson, Mrs. Ruby L. Wilson and Louie A. Weaver, of the Airways theatre; Augustine J. and Agnes Cianciolo, Luciann theatre; James West, Hollywood theatre; E. R. Gillette, Bristol theatre; Mrs. Lebora Cianciolo, Rosemary theatre; and Chalmers Cullins and Evans as individuals formerly operating the Orpheum theatre, now Lightman's first-run Malco.

Judge Boyd is taking the motions under advisement.

Film B. O. Continues Strong

fortnight is attributed to a drop in general commodity price levels. With the end of the Office of Price Administration, sending living costs soaring in late November, public was seen as frightened and retrenching by cutting down on theatre attendance, among other ways. As normal economic brakes began to slow down the inflation, the panic was off by the beginning of January and results started to be favorably felt at the b.o., as showmen see it.

Following is a roundup of film b.o. status in typical spots throughout the country.

L. A. Slips 10-15% Matinees Worst Hit

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

It's generally admitted by representative exhibs that grosses are down slightly. Percentage guesses run from 10-15%, but any slack is fastened on type of product available. For example, Pantages-Hill street hit a very big $192,900 for December, 1946, as compared with $133,800 for same month of the previous year.

Difference results from the fact that this past December "Jolson Story" was screening to big grosses. January, 1947, will be under the previous year for these two houses, as a year ago "Belle of St. Mary's" was dragging them in. January, 1946, hit a big $313,300, but the two spots are not expected to approach that figure this month.

The two first-run Paramounts are about the same story, "Blue Skies" giving them a big December, 1946, with a total for the month of $231,600 as compared to $177,200 for the same previous December. January, 1946, accounted for $167,000 in the two houses and about the same is expected this month.

The three Warner theatres, with "Humoresque," hit a fine $262,200 in December, 1946, as compared to $197,800 for the year previous. Current January outlook is bright to equal last January's $216,100. A representative Fox-West Coast unit, playing 20th-Fox pix, came through with a hefty $264,000 in December, '46. as compared with $173,900 in '45. In January, '46, because of "Leave Her to Heaven," it clocked a socko $232,200 and "Razor's Edge" run is figured to keep this month's total up. Latter film is playing four houses compared to three by "Heaven" and take is not quite so great.

Weekends all over town are still big, but weekday trade, particularly in the downtown sector, is about 10% under a year ago. Matinees are most affected by the slight slump. Post-New Year's trade augurs well for the year if product keeps coming in strong. Los Angeles has always been known as a town of discriminating filmgoers, so it's less affected than other spots where war years saw public buying of most any type of film.

War Plant Closings Hit Oakland

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 14.

Business here has fallen off considerably, but it's figured to be due principally to closing down of many wartime industries. Weekdays are spotty, with the average down 20% or more from a year ago, depending mainly on the attraction at the moment.

Christmas biz was about even with 1945, but New Year's Eve and Day were 7 to 10% off.

Everything's Nifty in Denver

Denver, Jan. 14.

Film biz is holding excellently here. Grosses for December and January are up from 15 to 20% over the same period a year ago.

Good product has contributed to the situation.

Phoenix Sees New B.O. Marks

Phoenix, Jan. 14.

Phoenix biz continues generally staunch, with overall picture auguring well for 1947. Grosses suffered inevitable letdown during December, but drop wasn't as bad as expected, and firstruns more than recouped during first half of January.

Orpheum had bonanza Christmas week with "Blue Skies," clipping previous house record by 23%. Film shifted to Palma the following week, where it also chalked up new standards. Fox enjoyed banner Yuletide sesh with "Time, Place, Girl," while Visia and Palms did okay with "Lady Luck" and "Nobody Lives Forever," respectively. Fox checked in "Razor's Edge" for New Year's week and reaped wallopping grosses, including record $3,800 for a single day.

Matinee trade continues to lag in all situations, although evening biz is brisk, with heavy accents on weekends.

Strong Pix Give Chi Great Holiday B.O.

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Christmas and New Year's Day showed a fantastic all-time high for the city due to a record breaking aggregate of first run pictures.

Last take for the week was approximately 470 grand, an increase of 30% over the take for the holiday week a year ago. Post-holiday period showed a drop to approximately 365Gs, which is still far ahead of the figure for the same period of the year before, topping it by 22%. Nine new film releases pulled the crowds in so that most of the 17 houses grossed improved figures. Four of the houses, Chicago with "Blue Skies," Oriental with "Show Off," State with "Razor's Edge" and Woods with "Best Years" did close to sensational business during the holiday week for both matinee and evening shows and actually had a return of the sidewalk queues which had disappeared during the preholiday slump.

A couple of the houses, the Palace with "Song of South" and "Falcon's Adventure" and the Roosevelt with "Never Say Goodbye," saw a drop in their take as against that of a year ago. Fall was 37% in the Palace and 26% for the Roosevelt.

Increase in gross of the Chicago over that of last year's Christmas period was 30%, Oriental 40%, State-Lake 20% and the Woods 25%. Nevertheless great as these increases are, they still are not as much as expected from such a strong array of top productions. Extremely bad weather, with snow storms, was a vital factor in keeping them down.

Sioux City Doing Nicely

Sioux City, Ia., Jan. 14.

Grosses in key theatres for December and January were very satisfactory. Christmas, New Year's Eve and New Year's Day were better than last year, though the weather was bad..

There has been no general change in status of matinee, evening and weekend business. Subsequent runs have not been doing so well as the keys.

Madison NSH, Studes Shop for Cheapies

Madison, Wis., Jan. 14.

Four Fox-affiliated Ashley theatres report December business approximately 10% below that of a year ago. Christmas biz was slow and year-end take not peppy, due largely to vacation absence of 18,000 University of Wisconsin students.

Currently the Orpheum is doing peak business with "Razor's Edge," to hold for two weeks, a long run for the hinterland capital. "Razor's" two-week gross, it is estimated, will be between $22,000-$25,000. Early fall business was brisk due to record university enrollment, but January is not promising, say Ashley interests.

Warner's Capitol business for December was upon shade over that of December, 1945, and January is holding at level of year ago. Majestic, Warner's second-run house, was off in December and is down a mite this month.

Wisconsin Union Play Circle, operated by University of Wisconsin, along with two other student neighborhood residential show houses, report tremendous weekend business with midweek and matinees very slow. University scale at high of 30c prompts many a GI, on $65 subsistence, to seek out these campus houses.

Cincy Same as Year Ago

Cincinnati, Jan. 14.

In this city of diversified manufacturing, grosses of downtown and suburban motion picture theatres for early January are practically duplicating those of a year ago. In December the volume of business was slightly better than for the same month in 1945.

Christmas week was hellish, but there was a general falloff New Year's Eve. Attendance at firstrun houses is normal weekday matinees and nights and consistently stronger on weekends.

Minn. Topping Year Ago; 'Skies' Sets New Mark

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

Brisk start to which 1947 got off is generating optimism here. Film grosses have been running ahead of the corresponding period in 1946, a record-breaking year. One picture, "Blue Skies," already has set a new all-time local high for straight film, roadshow or otherwise, $38,000, at Radio City. This mark, in fact, was only exceeded on two occasions in the theatres early days, the 1928-29 boom period, with vaudfilm at much higher admissions. One of-such occasions was the theatre's opening week when, with Paul Whiteman as the stage attraction, $45,000 was chalked up.

Contrary to expectations, Minneapolis supper and night clubs, with few exceptions, had-the biggest New Year's Eve business in their history. "The Glass Menagerie," legiter at the Lyceum here, pulled a lusty $14,000 for four nights and a matinee New Year's week. Wrestling, boxing, basketball and hockey are also getting a big play this month.

For the ensuing year a high level of employment in the territory is foreseen by the Minneapolis Federal Reserve system here, pulled a lusty in construction work expected to offset a decline in manufacturing.

Detroit Off 15-25%; Dec. Particularly Bad

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Grosses for December and January are generally off from 15 to 25% from the corresponding period last year. Especially disappointing was the December business, which took an even greater post-Christmas nosedive than expected.

The post-Christmas comeback was practically wiped out when a two-day blizzard buried the entire city streets. One exhibitor called the two days the worst for business since the race riots of 1943.

Theatre men have agreed that the "easy money" days are over and henceforth they will have to dig with the digging becoming increasingly difficult as the year progresses. Fox theatre topped the December-January business with "Razor's Edge" although the film failed to reach the high figures predicted for it. Its best week was $52,000.

A rush to beat the change in prices from matinees to nights returned in December and has been more evident since. A year ago the average patron didn't give the price tag a second thought, one manager said.

Christmas and New Year's business was slightly below a year ago, but these days were the only ones that came near meeting expectations.

Pitt Skids From Year Ago

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

December and January so far are just fair. Business is being concentrated on weekends. Matinees are up, but evenings declining.

Overall picture is a substantial decrease over the same time last year, although managers don't seem to feel that a question of national conditions so much as local ones, pointing out that the town still hasn't really recovered from devastating power and hotel strikes of three months ago.

Boston Keys Up 10%; Nabes Below Average

Boston, Jan. 14.

Film grosses here are running about 10% ahead of last year in key spots, with no indications thus far of either film or legit biz dropping off. It's too early to tell about 1947, but optimism among theatre operators is generally high.

Chief problem in the film houses has been product, rather than business. The Metropolitan is off as against last year, but did great biz when it had "Blue Skies," which did as well over $50,000 the first week. RKO-Boston has been doing better than last year. State and Orpheum, both Loew's houses, are keeping up to pace. Paramount, Fenway and other houses are a little above average, while "Henry V" did solid business in 36 weeks at the Esquire. "Best Years of Our Lives," current at the Esquire, is doing fine but is off slightly at matinees.

Biggest surprise is the Exeter, an indie house specializing in British pix, which is clicking. Outlying houses, nabes, etc., however, are well below average this season.

Philly Holiday Biz Bloocy

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Philly holiday biz got a body blow New Year's Eve when combination

Picture Grosses

PITTSBURGH

Work" (RKO). Reissue of Grant-Fontaine thriller the main pull here, of course, and looks like it'll fill house into nice dough at $3,500. Last week, in 6 days, m.o. of "Return of Monte Cristo" (Col) was over $2,500.

Stanley (WB) (3,800; 40-70)—"Time, Place and Girl" (WB) (2d wk). Picture liked well enough but too much competish and taking it on the chin. Poorest of the big holiday pix. Won't get $12,000 this week and only $32,000 last, on a holiday at that and with a New Year's Eve midnite at $1 top tossed in.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 40-70)—"Her Sister's Secret" (PRC). Brought in at last minute when Stanley decided to hold over "Time, Place, Girl" and push "Notorious" (RKO) back a week. Only new pix in town and getting some biz as a result. Pushing in direction of $8,500. Last week, "Man I Love" (WB), on m.o., pretty weak for a holiday at barely $6,000.

'PLAINSMAN,' STAGE 38G, 'PILGRIM' 16½G, CINCY

Cincinnati, Jan. 14.

Clicks of two new bills and above par returns on holdovers have downtown houses in velvet for third consecutive week. Albee is fronting first-pack currently with "Plainsman and Lady" and Kathryn Grayson, Johnnie Johnston and others on stage. Other newcomer is "Shocking Miss Pilgrim." "Razor's Edge" and "Song of South" are strongest holdovers.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 55-95) — "Plainsman and Lady" (Rep) plus Kathryn Grayson, Johnnie Johnston, others on stage. Sock $38,000. Last week, "Two Smart People" (M-G) plus Alvino Rey orch, others on stage, good $22,000.

Capitol (RKO) (2,000; 55-70) — "Secret Heart" (M-G) (3d wk). Also-ran $6,500 following fine $10,000 second round.

Grand (RKO) (1,430; 55-70) — "Shocking Miss Pilgrim" (20th). Socko $16,500. Holds. Last week, "Song of South" (RKO) (2d wk), sensational $12,000.

Keith's (UP) (1,542; 55-70) — "Wicked Lady" (U) (2d wk). Okay $5,000 after good $8,000 first week, during which Ann Blyth did a p.a. at one night screening linked with Johnnie Johnston stage show.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 55-70) — "Kings Row" (WB) and "Wild Bill Hickok Rides" (WB) (reissues), solo $5,000. Last week, "Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (m.o.), $6,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 55-70) — "Razor's Edge" (20th) (2d wk). Excellent $16,000 on heels of enormous $29,500 opening week.

Shubert (RKO) (2,100; 55-70) — "Song of South" (RKO), Moveover for third consecutive week. Continues to rock 'em, whammo $9,000. Last week, "Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (m.o.), nifty $7,000.

Holdovers All OK, L'ville; 'Sue,' 'Brennan' Big 7G

Louisville, Jan. 14.

H.o.'s are holding down the overall take this week, with Strand only firstrun to get new movie here. Newcomer is "Sioux City Sue" and "That Brennan Girl" are big. Couple reissues at the Brown are making nice, if middling good showing. "Captain Caution" and "Captain Fury" pulling 'em in. H.o.'s are healthy.

Estimates for This Week

Brown (4th Ave.-Loew's) (1,000; 40-60)—"Captain Caution" (UA) and "Captain Fury" (UA) (reissues). Middling good to town for swell $7,000. Last week, "Song of South" (RKO) (m.o.), neat $6,500.

Kentucky (Switow) (1,200; 30-40) —"Martha Ivers" (Par) and "Black Beauty" (20th). Satisfactory $3,200. Last week, "Plainsman and Lady" (RKO) and "Time of Their Lives" (U) split with "Runaround" (U) and "Black Beauty" (20th), about same.

Mary Anderson (People's) (1,100; 40-60)—"Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (3d wk). Holding up good $6,000. Last week (2d) okay $7,500.

National (Standard) (2,400; 40-60) —"Magnificent Doll" (Rep) and "Rolling Home" (Screen Guild) (2d wk). Fair $7,000 after first week's sturdy $10,000.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,400; 40-60)—"Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk). Looking for healthy $14,000 after initial week's big $21,000.

State (Loew's) (3,300; 40-60)— "Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G) (2d wk). This is a big one, and currently indicates solid $16,000. Last week same film came through for smash $26,000.

Strand (Fourth Avenue) (1,200; 40-60)—"Sioux City Sue" (Rep) and "That Brennan Girl" (Rep). Only new bill among the firstruns, and getting strong play at the wicket, likely big $7,000. Last week, "Sister Kenny" (RKO), mild $5,500 on eight days.

'Rage' Fine 12G, Seattle; 'Time, Place' (2d) $10,200

Seattle, Jan. 14.

"Blue Skies" is rolling into seventh and final week at Music Box, after starting with record-smashing stanza at the Paramount. Liberty is going okay with "Jolson Story" in third week. Fifth is holding "Razor's Edge," following great opening week over New Year's. "Time, Place and Girl" is at Orpheum for second week. Elsewhere it's new fare.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (H-E) (800; 45-80)— "Blue Skies" (Par) (7th wk). Eight days, steady $5,500. Last week, swell $5,300.

Fifth Avenue (H-E) (2,349; 45-80) —"Razor's Edge" (20th) (3d wk). Great $12,000. In second week got great $18,300.

Liberty (J&vH) (1,650; 45-80)— "Jolson Story" (20th) (3d wk). Good $9,000. Last week, same figure.

Music Box (H-E) (850; 45-80)— "Bedlam" (RKO) and "Wanted for Murder" (Col). Okay $4,000. Last week, "Nobody Lives Forever" (WB) and "Great to Be Young" (Col) (2d wk), $3,000.

Music Hall (H-E) (2,200; 45-80)— "Rage in Heaven" (M-G) (reissue). Good $7,000. Last week, "Show-Off" (M-G) and "Phantom Thief" (Col) (2d wk), $8,000, okay.

Orpheum (H-E) (2,650; 45-80)— "Time, Place and Girl" (WB) (2d wk). Excellent $10,200 in eight days. Last week, lunded great $17,900.

Palomar (Sterling) (1,350; 45-80)— "Accomplice" (PRC) and "Singing on the Trail" (Col), plus vaude. Good $7,000. Last week, "Roll on Texas Moon" (Rep) and "Lady Chaser" (PRC), plus stage. Good $7,500.

Paramount (H-E) (3,039; 45-80)— "Undercurrent" (M-G) (2d wk). Moderate $8,000 after getting immense $16,800 in opener.

Roosevelt (Sterling) (800; 45-80)— "Blue Skies" (Par) (7th wk) (reissue) and "In Old California" (Rep). Slow $2,200 in five days. Last week, "Never Say Goodbye" (WB) (3d wk). Bad $2,500.

Winter Garden (Sterling) (800; 35-50)—"Step by Step" (RKO) and "Holiday in Mexico" (M-G) (3d run). Slow $2,800 in five days. Last week, "If I'm Lucky" (20th) and "Gallant Journey" (Col), split with "Monsieur Beaucaire" (Par) and "Rebecca" (UA) (all third runs). Mild $3,100.

'Undercurrent,' 'Day' 20G, Denver; 'Skies' (3d) 15G

Denver, Jan. 14.

"Undercurrent" with "Great Day" packed Orpheum to best grosses here. "Blue Skies" still fine at Denham and holding for fourth week. Polics to run films only at Denver, Esquire, Webber reacted against second week for "Razor's Edge." Folks who wanted to see picture tried to get in first week so second took big drop.

Estimates for This Week

Aladin (Fox) (1,400; 35-74)— "Margie" (20th) and "Perils of Pauline" (Mono). Good $5,000. Last week, "Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (m.o.), big $6,000.

Bonfoglio (Cockrill) (1,750; 35-74) —"Blue Skies" (Par) (3d wk). Fine $15,000 and holding. Last week, big $20,000.

Denver (Fox) (2,525; 35-74)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (2d wk), day-date with Esquire, Webber. Poor $9,000. Last week, (7d; 742; 35-74)—"Razor's Edge" (20th), day-date with Denver, Webber, 2d week. Poor $3,000. Last week, $4,000.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,600; 35-74)— "Undercurrent" (M-G) and "Great Day" (RKO). Big $20,000. Last week, "Secret Heart" (M-G) and "Dick Tracy vs. Cuebali" (RKO), fine $17,500.

Paramount (Fox) (2,200; 35-74)— "White Tie and Tails" (U) and "Dead of Night" (U). Okay $9,000. Last week, "Scandal in Paris" (UA) and "Spook Busters" (Mono), fine $11,000.

Rialto (Fox) (678; 35-74)—"Time, Place, Girl" (WB), after week at each Denver, Esquire, Webber. Okay $5,000. Last week, "Nobody Lives Forever" (WB) and "Wife Wanted" (Mono) (m.o.), fair $4,500.

Webber (Fox) (750; 35-74)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (2d wk), day-date with Denver, Esquire. Fair $3,000. Last week, big $5,300.

of bad weather and lethargic celebration put a crimp in b.o. grosses all over town.

Matinee midtown as well as nabes got the brush-off from celebrants. Midnight shows were way off.

Christmas biz and post-Christmas biz was okay, however, about on par with Christmas and post-Christmas of 1945. General week-end grosses here have been good. Week-day matinees, especially during Christmas shopping period, were down compared with 1945.

Roadshow Deals

which states that defendants are "enjoined and restrained from expanding present theatre holdings in any manner whatsoever." Fixing minimum admish prices thus does not become a problem, since UA is its own exhibitor and has no agreements to make on this score.

Decree makes no mention of roadshows at all, thus impliedly forbidding them. A second brake is the prohibition against fixing minimum admission prices in contracts, since an upped b.o. tap is virtually fundamental to a roadshow.

In addition to UA's plans, David O. Selznick rep last week stated flatly that his outfit would roadshow "Duel in the Sun." He said since the company was an indie and not historically guilty of any of the acts which the decree aimed to correct, DOS felt free to go ahead with the two-a-day policy. Likewise, he said that in consultations with the Dept. of Justice it was indicated there would be no opposition.

Attitude and Vigilance

It was agreed by all attorneys, as a matter of fact, that the whole business of roadshows hinged on the attitude and resultant vigilance of the D. of J., and it might well be the Government had no objection whatsoever to the special runs if indies weren't harmed thereby. On the other hand, there will always remain the danger of an indie suing for triple damages on the basis that he is being injured by such a policy in a competing location.

Problem of minimum b.o. levies was getting most attention from the legalites, with a couple explanations prevalent of what could be done in this regard. One attorney suggested that nothing in the decree prohibited a distrib from stating the minimum bid he'd accept for licensing his film while knowing full well that the price he was asking would force an exhib to up his admish.

Another Blackstone declared the court "didn't mean" that the minimum admission fee couldn't be placed in the contract, but meant that a distrib couldn't force a minimum on an exhib. There was nothing, however, he said, to stop the exhib from volunteering, and inserting in the licensing agreement, that he'd charge no less than so-and-so.

How, the attorneys were asking, could a distrib know what was the highest percentage bid without knowing what the various bidders were going to charge at the box-office. If Theatre A with 2,000 seats and Theatre B with 2,000 seats were both offering 35% of the gross, obviously the admission price would be an important factor, they pointed out.

Situation on roadshows for the Big Five via UA's process of leasing houses may be clarified by their request last week for modification of the clause in the decree prohibiting expansion of theatre holdings. In any case, whether through greater leniency in this clause on theatre acquisitions or in interpretation of the minimum admission clause, roadshows appeared to be here to stay.

UA-Duel

company, Selznick Releasing Organization, to handle his pictures, so it was known that last week's tender would be meaningless in everything but a legal way.

Who Walked Out?

Point on which Davis' firm concurred with Raftery's opinion is that UA's whole dispute with Selznick revolves around the critical point of who walked out on the contract first. Chaplin and Miss Pickford maintain, of course, that Selznick did, but by refusing to handle "Duel," in the view of the attorneys, UA would give the producer a great chance to maintain the reverse.

Acknowledging that UA might have a case in its claim that Selznick breached his contract in selling package deals to RKO, the attorneys pointed out, nevertheless, that under the law a breach or several breaches are not, per se, reason for abandoning a contract. Whether they are of proportions important enough for abandonment is for a court to decide in a declaratory judgment, the lawyers asserted, and UA's decision to abandon the pact (which included not accepting "Duel") was called "rash."

30-Day Clause

UA's reversal of its original resolution to withhold distribution from "Duel" was okay legally and did not leave it open to a suit by Selznick—say the lawyers—in that the company under its distribution contract has 30 days in which to "rectify violations and comply with this agreement" after notice of alleged breaches has been served on it.

Selznick has already filed suits against the company, Chaplin and Miss Pickford, asking for a total of $13,500,000 in damages.

Davis' law firm, after finally agreeing to represent UA, appears destined for no more than a consultant's role, since the battleground has since moved from New York to the Coast. Selznick's suits were filed in Los Angeles and UA's likely also will be instituted there. As a result, a Coast outfit likely will be chosen this week or next to actively represent UA in the courts. Just as in N. Y., it very probably will be a firm that hasn't before been close to the film business.

'Lady' Lensing

Co., who told VARIETY he'd suggested use of the technique to producers Kenneth MacGowan and Wesley Ruggles as far back as 1933, but both scoffed at the idea.

Going a step further than the other inventors, Littleton developed a 24-page thesis titled the "subjective filming technique," which he filed with his attorneys in August, 1944. Thesis outlines in detail 15 variations of the method, with a note that "in view of the fact that the public has to be reeducated to an appreciation of the final forms to which STF (subjective filming technique) can be developed, it is imperative that a definite order of presenting the various types be maintained."

Groucho's 'Ziegfeld' Offer

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Groucho Marx, currently playing in "Copacabana," goes to New York on completion of the picture to huddle with the Shuberts on an offer to star in their forthcoming "Ziegfeld Follies" on Broadway.

While in New York, Marx will confer with Norman Krasna about his new play, "The Middle Ages."

unions in the east are less demanding than in the west.

"I do not cry depression, but I do say be prepared for business to return to its normal level. That means that film rentals must also return to normal levels."

Homeoffice Execs Scoff at Exhib Threat

Threats of Trueman T. Rembusch, board member of Allied States, that unless Hollywood reforms its film production methods, production would move to the east coast, were scoffed at by industry homeoffice executives. Moves to shift production eastwards have always fallen through, they point out, for the simple reason that no eastern studio offers equal facilities for film-making that can be found in Hollywood.

Newest and most-completely equipped New York studio — the RKO-Pathe studio in Harlem — is only large enough for "average" pictures by admission of Pathe execs themselves, and several Hollywood producers who've glimpsed the new setup have expressed doubt that it's big enough for any major film. Attempts to produce feature-length pix in other N. Y. studios have never succeeded, with the Paramount stages in Astoria the only ones probably large enough for large-scale production, still in the hands of the Army.

Rebutting Rembusch's accusations of "Hollywood wastepots," homeoffice execs cited the fact that most major studios had already embarked on large-scale retrenchment programs, with Metro in particular leading the way with attempts to slice production costs all along the line. Rembusch apparently failed to take into consideration, they declared, that costs have practically doubled during the last several years and not even the most economically-minded producer today can predict with any degree of certainty whether he'll be able to bring his picture in under the original budget estimate.

Spangled Banner." Big Three are pictured via newsreel shots.

"Roosevelt Story," which will run 80 minutes, is now being edited for release in late February. As with "Beginning or End," it has the Roosevelt family's okay. Elliott Roosevelt was an editorial consultant. It's being produced by Martin Levine and Oliver Unger in association with Harry Brandt. Major release is being sought.

Negro actor Canada Lee will be among the narrators. Theme song, "Toward the Sun," has been composed by Earl Robinson and Lewis Allen for the film.

Roosevelts gave Metro comparatively little headache on "Beginning or the End," atom bomb story, but the White House requested that the scene in which President Truman is depicted be reshot with a different actor. Roman Bohnen played Mr. Truman in the initial version and was replaced by Art Baker, a radio announcer. Final okay on the picture was given last week.

Okay "Beginning"

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Metro drew the official nod from the White House and the War and Navy departments for release of the revamped version of "The Beginning or the End," which deals with the atom bomb. First version was turned down because President Truman's approval of the dropping of A-bombs on Japan was not treated seriously enough.

In the remake, Art Baker replaced Roman Bohnen in the Presidential role, and Edward Earle subbed for Harry Carey in the part of Charles Ross, Presidential secretary. Bohnen was unable to resume his role because of another commitment, and Carey was ill at the time of the reshooting.

geles, and Esquire, Boston. Each of the houses is getting a top of $1.80, which in Goldwyn's viewpoint proves that the public is not only willing to pay for "significance," but pay well.

Goldwyn sees his argument proved primarily by the manner in which the picture has built. It opened Nov. 22 at the Astor, for instance, and did a first week's gross of $52,236. Last week, its seventh, the week following the holidays, it did $52,976. That was only $5,000 less than the $57,634 it did the previous week, which included the New Year's holiday period. Here's the complete lineup of Astor grosses, showing what "Years" did each week and on opening days (Friday) and Saturdays of the respective weeks.

Week	Total	Opening Day	Saturday
1	$52,236	$6,799	$9,829
2	49,436	7,464	9,716
3	43,697	5,888	9,180
4	40,753	5,322	8,799
5	44,229	4,537	6,691
6	57,634	7,657	9,255
7	52,976	8,059	10,256

Astor suffered at the teeoff by a $2.40 top for evenings midweek. That was cut down to $1.80, with the $2.40 reserved for Saturday evenings only, improved results being seen almost immediately at the b.o. Pic's length, limiting it to six shows a day, of course, severely cuts down the maximum potential of the 1,300-seat Astor.

Pic opened at the Woods, Chicago, Dec. 18 (Wednesday) and the story has been pretty much the same. Here's the tabulation:

Week	Total	Opening Day	Saturday
1	$44,819	$5,305	$7,011
2	50,896	†7,200	7,963
3	50,031	‡9,137	7,664
4	*46,000	6,303	.....

(*Estimated.) (†Xmas Day.) (‡New Year's Day.)

While b.o. results have been equally good in Boston and Los Angeles, situation is different inasmuch as pic is being roadshown in both cities. Most significant factor is the manner in which the advance sale has built up, latter increasing right along.

Beverly, L. A., has 850 seats and gives two shows each day, except Sundays, when there are three. Evenings are $1.80, matinees $1 and $1.25. Film opened evening of Dec. 25 and first week did $16,782, second week $16,159 and third week (current) an estimated $16,000.

Esquire, Boston, is a 941-seater and gives two shows every day, including Sunday, at $1.40 and $1.80 evenings and $1.20-$1.40 matinees. Pic likewise had a Christmas night opening there and did $12,216 for the first week, $12,394 for the second and is hitting the same mark, which is capacity, for the current third week.

Next opening is tomorrow (Thursday) at the Colony, Miami.

100 Pix In '47

M-G is next, since 9-10 are lined up for first quarter release. Other major plans are as follows: UA, seven or eight; Paramount and RKO, seven each: Warners, 20th and Universal, six each.

Eagle-Lion has definitely set three pix for first-quarter release. PRC plans 11 films, three of which are westerners, Monogram is due for 10 releases and Republic for five features and four westerns.

Newly launched industry decree will not affect the releasing pace, sales toppers say. Impact of single pic selling has been absorbed during the long period between the court's decision and the handing down of its final expression in decree form. New gimmick, bid sales method in competitive areas, doesn't go into effect until July 1, 1947—if then—and therefore won't slow down first-quarter releases. Pace may bog considerably, however, sales toppers say, if untried sales method does become effective at the summer's outset.

NAB Board Nixes Net-AFRA Plan, Local Outlets Tangling Miller; Move Widens Breach in Industry

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

Tempers are still flaring over the manner in which the NAB Board of Directors at its three-day session here last week repudiated both prexy Justin Miller and the networks in refusing to go along on the proposal for a 16-man industry-wide committee to study the AFRA situation.

If anything, the board meeting served to point up anew the widening breach within NAB ranks between the networks and the local stations. But beyond that, the fact that the directorate slapped down prexy Miller in nixing his proposal for a committee of network, local and national AFRA, as well as local station representation, left a decidedly sour note. It was the AFRA impasse that consumed most of the emotion and time at the three-day parlay.

The networks, whose chieftains struggled for weeks to effect a working compromise with AFRA, feel that the NAB, in refusing to go along with the proposal for a committee so as to acquaint the stations with AFRA's problems and AFRA with the station problems, has put the networks in a position where AFRA can throw a "bad faith" tag back at them.

The networks in drawing up negotiations with AFRA had stressed the industry-wide study, with Miller giving the go-ahead to the plan. The webs were anxious to avert a strike and succeeded, obtaining a year's grace on the "secondary boycott" issue pending a full study. Nor were the networks oblivious of the fact that, during the 12 months of grace, Congressional legislation (such as Sen. Ball's proposal last week which would reduce such negotiations to a purely local level) might automatically nullify the validity of any such "secondary boycott" issue.

That's why the web representation on the NAB board did a burn last week when the board-in language that implied that it didn't care whether it meant a strike or not but that the local stations didn't want any truck with AFRA and its proposals—wound up by naming a committee of its own. This was interpreted to mean that the whole thing would get the brushoff instead of that nothing further would come of it.

At worst, it meant that AFRA, on the "bad faith" premise, could decide to open up again the whole matter of negotiations. At best, AFRA could take the position that it isn't particularly vital what the NAB board does since the four networks have agreed to the terms. The middle course could well be that each of the four webs, now existing the problems, will make committee appointments from their affiliate advisory boards and so undertake the study.

What About Radio?

Austin, Jan. 14.

Radio as an occupation has been overglamorized, a group of educators were told here as they were discussing the future of radio at a Univ. of Texas conference on radio and audio visual education.

Sherman Lawton, radio director of the University of Oklahoma, told the group: "Radio has been overglamorized. There are not as many jobs in radio as students think, and the jobs in radio are not as well paid as most students think."

The conference agreed that a student entering the field of radio needed to study history, government, journalism, speech, drama, psychology, advertising and the arts and sciences.

NAB Nods to BMB, But Where's Coin For New Survey?

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

The Broadcast Measurement Bureau got a vote of confidence from the NAB Board of Directors in session here last week, and before adjournment the directors started the ball rolling toward a second station measurement survey. But apparently there's a little question of money that'll have to be solved before a new yardstick is undertaken, not to mention finding new techniques.

It appears that BMB has practically exhausted its $1,250,000 on the initial nationwide survey, and it's reported that there are only sufficient funds to carry the BMB through to April. The NAB board adjourned without approving an okay on going to the stations to refill the cash kitty, and since the Board isn't scheduled to meet again until May, by which time the new survey would have to get rolling, the budget problem seems to be in a state of flux.

It could well be that 10 or 15 of the larger stations will agree to advance their share of the coin, which would be enough to carry BMB along.

Despite the NAB voicing of commendation for the work already accomplished, it's apparent that new techniques will be applied to a second survey, to satisfy BMB critics.

Frank Stanton, CBS prexy; Frank "Scoop" Russell, of NBC; and J. O. Maland, of WHI, Des Moines, resigned from the board, latter because of illness. Succeeding them are J. H. B. (Jimmy) Jarman, Mutual; Hugh Terry, of KLZ, Denver; and H. M. Beville, Jr., of NBC, latter filling Maland's unexpired term.

Int'l Radio Gets Cap and Gown

Increase of interest in international radio as result of the United Nations, postwar problems, etc., has brought about the scheduling of a series of 15 lectures on international broadcasting this winter at the New School for Social Research in New York. Believed to be the first experiment in this field, series will be conducted by Arno Huth, consultant and author of several books on international radio.

Series will be given weekly for two hours, Tuesday evenings, starting Feb. 4, and will embrace political, social and economic aspects of broadcasting, structure of broadcasting in various countries, international networks and programming, radio and propaganda, etc. Guest speakers will also be used for part of the evening, guests lined up already including Benjamin Cohen, UN; Kenneth Fry, State Dept.; Christopher Emmet, UN; Fred Bate, NBC; Lyman Bryson, CBS; and Douglas Ritchie, British Information Service.

JORDIE McLEAN BACK

Jordie McLean, radio and legit actress, is back in New York all cured after a bout in Saranac.

She's resumed her radio contacts interrupted couple of years back.

Syrup Sweetens Ride For 'Hop' on Mutual

"Hop Harrigan," last sponsored on ABC network by General Foods and more recently a sustainer on Mutual, will be bankrolled over the latter web by Taylor Reed on behalf of its Koko Marsh syrup. Sponsorship gets under way Feb. 3 with an approximate 40-station hookup.

Taylor Reed will pick up the tab three days a week (Monday, Wednesday and Friday) with a contract proviso that show remain on sustaining the other two days without benefit of local co-op sponsorship deals.

Walter O'Keefe's Quiz Spot

Walter O'Keefe makes his comeback in radio via the CBS daytime audience participation show, "Winner Take All."

He moves into the quizmaster spot next Monday (20) succeeding Bill Cullen, "Winner" is heard cross-the-board in the 3:30-4 o'clock slot.

CBS had originally auditioned O'Keefe for a nighttime show, but it didn't pan out.

'Hill' Pot Boils With FCC Hopes

Washington, Jan. 14.

Several signs point to a speedy White House appointment to fill the vacancy created by Paul Porter's resignation from the FCC.

For one thing, powerful GOP Senators Wallace White and Owen Brewster of Maine, saw President Truman last week to boost their candidate—Marion Martin, of Bangor, Me., former head of the women's division of the Republican National Committee. White is chairman, and Brewster a member of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, several of whose members have proposed an FCC investigation and for new radio legislation.

On the same day, FCC Chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr., was called over to see Mr. Truman, presumably to talk over potential candidates for the vacancy and the fate of FCC on Capitol Hill this session. Denny turned off all queries on his visit with a terse "no comment" but did say that Mr. Truman could appoint a man or woman of any political complexion he chose under the present FCC membership. The commission is made up of three Democrats, two GOP'ers and one independent. The law merely limits membership to no more than four of one party, which means the President may appoint either a Democrat, a Republican, Independent, or what have you.

Another Martin rumor was revived again later in the week with a report that she met Friday (10) with FCC Chairman Denny. Her appointment would aid FCC in staving off an investigation, and probably would help the agency in stopping a GOP cut in its budget, already low what is needed to staff FCC with enough inspectors and engineers to process the record flow of applications.

Meanwhile, it was speculated, that Mr. Truman may hold out for a Democratic appointment. In this case, a Democrat "lame duck" Senator is the most probable bet. Former Sen. James Mead (D, N.Y.) leads the candidates here, and is conceded a good chance of winning a two-thirds vote necessary for confirmation in the GOP-controlled Senate. Former Sen. Hugh Mitchell (D., Wash.), was reported offered the job but refused it. Another Democratic name in the picture is that of ex-Congresswoman Chase Going Woodhouse (D., Conn.), who refuses to comment on the source of her support.

Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.), has acknowledged endorsing Brenda Brown, Jr., a radio attorney, whose father served on the FCC in the early '30's.

Coca-Cola Retrenches Further, Downey Off

Mutual has lost another Coca-Cola show, following on coke's recent bow-out with "Spotlight Bands."

Morton Downey's "Coke Club," on Mutual five days a week, Mondays-Fridays, 12:15 p. m., is going off at the end of this month. Reason for the exit, says the sponsor, is the sugar shortage, which has affected Coca-Cola sales.

Downey's show has been on Mutual two years, and before that was on the former Blue (ABC) net.

Downey will do personal appearances, going into the Wedgwood Room, N. Y., this week (17) for a four-week stretch.

FM Hits Fast This Is It' Stride With Washington Confab of Assn.; Real Production, Shows Now Seen

Washington, Jan. 14.

First get-together of the brand new FM Assn. got off to a rousing start here last Friday (10) with 300 FM enthusiasts in attendance, and FM inventor Edwin Armstrong and FCC Chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr., acting as godfathers at the christening. Over 100 new members paid out their $100 yearly dues in the course of the Hotel Statler meeting.

Four pioneer FM boosters won offices in the new organization, Roy Hofheinz, KTHT-KOPY (FM), Houston, was elected president; Everett Dillard, consulting engineer with FM stations KOZY, Kansas City, and WASH, Washington, D. C., vice-president; Arthur Freed, executive vice-president of Freed Radio Corp., trepsurer; and Frank Gunther, Radio Engineering Laboratories, Secretary. J. N. (Bill) Bailey becomes executive director of FMA on Feb. 1.

"Promotion from within the industry is all that is needed to put FM out in front in 1947" was keynote of the FMA meeting. The sessions were sparked by attendance of all six FCC commissioners, with chairman delivering the keynote address. Also on hand were Rep. Clarence Lea (D., Calif.), former head of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, and Sen. Edwin Johnson (D., Colo.), member of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. Senator Charles Tobey (R., N. H.) author of a resolution to probe FCC's FM allocation, was expected to attend but was detained by a last minute committee meeting on Capitol Hill. Highlights of the FM sessions were:

Denny reaffirmed FCC's support of FM as the finest aural broadcast service, predicted 700 stations on the air by next Christmas, and told FM broadcasters their toughest and most important job of the moment is selling dealers on the advantages of FM. Denny acted on a suggestion of Arthur Freed, manufacturer, and said the commission would distribute monthly lists of FM station grants to set-makers to aid them in sending their receivers into FM-rich markets.

"Don't turn FM over to the advertisers," Denny urged his luncheon audience, reminding them FCC stood by its Blue Book charges that AM radio is over-commercial-

FMA and NAB

Washington, Jan. 14.

Parallels between NAB and the new FM Assn. are already being drawn. Not to be outdone by NAB, FM'ers started out by electing a former judge as their prexy, He is Roy Hofheinz, a Texas broadcaster, who at 21 was the country's youngest judge—a county judge in the Lone Star State.

Like NAB, FMA will have a standing liaison committee with FCC and has an invitation from commission chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr. to lunch with FCC members on a regular basis. A similar agreement was reached with NAB last October in Chicago.

What's more, NAB is showing signs of willingness to cooperate with FMA to promote the new radio service. This week NAB coincident with the first meeting of FMA, distributed to its members a brochure on "How to Promote FM."

Commission Spurs FM Broadcasting; Mulls 'Duopoly'

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC moved on three fronts last week to speed up the process of getting FM stations on the air, and to clarify the duopoly picture in both FM and television.

The commission first named Feb. 7 as date of oral argument to decide when FM and television applicants may or may not own two or more stations whose service areas overlap. Commission said the rule which forbids one licensee from owning more than one standard broadcast station in any one community is comparatively clear. However, some 21 FM bidders are held up on grants until FCC decides whether they may have two FM stations close by, with service areas that partially overlap.

Only similar situation in television is Crosley Broadcasting Corp.'s bid for stations in both Dayton and Cincinnati, O. The FCC hopes, Chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr., said in an address last Friday (10), to fashion a "consistent and intelligent" duopoly rule to apply to all radio services.

On another front, FCC opened the door to requests for metropolitan type FM stations in towns not assigned Class B channels under a tentative allocation plan released in Dec., 1945. Commission said it has no intention of rearranging its 1945 allocation plan, but will entertain requests for a shift in channels wherever there appears to be a need for FM service.

FCC's final move was to encourage holders of FM construction permits to go on the air with temporary, makeshift equipment pending construction of their stations and delivery of their high-powered transmitters. Commission said that such interim operation "is important in the interests of providing FM program service at the earliest possible date." Authorizations for such temporary operation will be issued for 90 days, and FCC will check the progress of the regular construction before reissuing them.

Denny warned FM'ers, however, not to try to make the public believe they were getting the best there was in FM with this temporary equipment. He urged applicants to go on the air with as much power as possible, particularly in the big cities.

James Quits FCC

Washington, Jan. 14.

H. Irvin (Red) James, assistant to FCC's general counsel and former assistant to Commissioners C. J. Durr and Paul Porter, leaves FCC Feb. 1 to set up a private law practice in Montgomery.

James came to FCC in 1941.

Clears Fear Foggy Future

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC's high hopes for FM as reflected in its proposal for clear channel broadcasting on the AM band of the future may dynamite ambitions of the bigtime, big city AM'ers to continue raking in the dough.

The FCC is expected shortly to release its own plan for clear channel operation and, with its avowed reliance on FM to replace AM in the big cities, the clear channel men are fearing the worst. The FCC proposal will be released in time for the final round of hearings due to open the latter part of February.

Some industry prophets say FCC's plan may center entirely around the use of FM stations to cover the populous east, including the radio-poor South Atlantic states. In the Rocky Mountain area, on the other hand, the commission is supposed to favor use of superpower AM stations to cover the wideopen areas. FCC is rumored ready to go along with 25 kc Channel Broadcasting Service proposal for 750kw power in this section of the country. But fear is that use of superpower stations in the Mountain states may eventually surrender one of two channels by networks and big city operators in New York City, Philadelphia, etc.

Although no final blueprint has been drawn up at FCC, clear channel representatives are already preparing an attack on the alleged coverage of FM stations. They will marshal facts to show that FM service areas are overestimated and FM cannot be counted on to reach rural areas now served by AM east of the Rockies.

SEE STARS IN THE AFTERNOON

Status of Heller Seen Next On AFRA Agenda; Lotsa Gripes on Tap

With a half dozen loose ends still dangling—most of them in the West —the networks and American Federation of Radio Artists are, nevertheless, practically ready to sign a new series of contracts to replace those that expired last Oct. 31. And, with that done, the AFRA national council as well as leading members in various key chapters are reportedly ready to turn to the next major point on the agenda, which is the status of national exec secretary George Heller and his type of AFRA leadership.

Inquiries are going to be made into what happened to Heller's promise to divorce himself from his doubling in brass as executive chief of both the national and New York chapter offices; gripes will be voiced on allegations that he is too dictatorial; and above all he will be challenged on why he built the AFRA-net negotiations on a basis of strike threat when, it's said, the other side was quickly convinced AFRA wouldn't strike at any cost.

These matters, however, are being held in abeyance, for the sake of union unity, until the new codes are inked and the other loose strands gathered together.

Trouble spots on the West include refusal of Seattle stations to go along with the networks' acceptance of the proposed new national codes; slowness on the part of Earle C. Anthony of KFI, Hollywood, in discussing the new terms with the local AFRA people; and the threatened withdrawal from AFRA of sound men.

Sound men have been unhappy for weeks about the deal they are

Mutual's Moppet Mob in Chi Meet

An effort to establish a common approach to a strip of five shows, each handled by a different agency for a different sponsor, will be made by Mutual at a meeting to be held in Chicago tomorrow (Thursday) to consider the web's late afternoon kid shows.

With "Hop Harrigan" now sold on Mutual for Koko Marsh, the network's moppet parade will be continuous from 4:45 to 6 p.m., the shows in order being "Buck Rogers," for General Foods; "Harrigan"; "Superman," for Kellogg; "Captain Midnight," for Ovaltine; and Tom Mix, for Ralston-Purina.

The agencies handling these shows, respectively, are Benton & Bowles, Ruthrauff & Ryan, Kenyon & Eckhardt, Hill Blackett, and Grant.

Dorothy Kemble, director of the net's continuity acceptance, has arranged the Chi meeting at which reps of all the agencies will toss around the content of their shows, commercials, contests and offers, promotion, etc.

In addition to Miss Kemble and the agency reps, those attending the meeting will include Mutual prexy Edgar Kobak, and Ade Hult, net's veepee in charge of the midwest.

This is believed to be the first time that those responsible for a strip of shows similar in audience penetration, although differing as to bankrolling and agency handling, will have got together to discuss their common problems.

Mpls. Radio News Famine

Indianapolis, Jan. 14.

While some cities are getting more coverage in their newspapers, this town is down to only one radio column, the one by Martha McHattan on the News.

The Times had no columnist of its own, but ran a paid ad in the form of a column sponsored by WFBM. Latter has now cancelled that ad.

The Star has dropped the Molly Star column, and uses no radio news at all now. Irony is that the Star is owner of the local NBC affiliate, WIRE.

Just Like Old Times

Bob Hope and "Fibber and Molly" have moved back into 1-2 position on the Hooperatings on the basis of advance tallies, both shows copping a 30.2. That's a new listening high for the season.

Jack Benny, who led the Top 15 on the previous (Jan. 1) tally with a 27.5 rating, is in the No. 3 slot with a 28.5. Other advance Hoops include Charlie McCarthy, 27.4; Red Skelton, 25.4; Fred Allen, 24.9; Lux Radio Theatre, 23.8.

Lucky Strike's 'Operation Com'l' Joins Coast Trek

American Tobacco Co. has finally decided to save itself a cool $100,000 a year by switching its five-man "Operation Commercial" from New York to the Coast. The 100G has been the tab for the N.Y.-to-L. A. line shenanigans the three American Tobacco shows, Jack Benny and "Hit Parade," both plugging Lucky Strike, and the Frank Morgan program on behalf of Pall Mall.

Decision to move the auctioneering F. E. Boone-Speed Riggs & Co. west stems, of course, from the fact that all American Tobacco shows now originate from the Coast. Originally it was intended to keep the commercial origination in New York because Foote, Cone & Belding, agency on the tobacco account, wanted to retain complete control of the commercial copy in the New York office. The tri-hammered plugs have been subjected to the same painstaking production as the shows themselves, with pre-broadcast recordings, playbacks, etc.

Even with the commercials going West, plan is to continue putting them through a platter rehearsal sufficiently in advance so that the recordings can get a final New York okay. Boone-Riggs Co. shove West on Feb. 1 under present plans.

Meanwhile, F-C-B agency continues in the process of overhauling the Saturday night "Hit Parade" format, with a rotating guest vocalist policy getting the final nod. Dinah Shore has been set, with Betty Hutton, Dick Haymes and Judy Garland also being lined up.

LaG. Looks Good To Labor, Co-ops

Things began looking up for Fiorello H. LaGuardia last week in his new co-op Mutual network deal. The anticipated emergence of labor-cooperative groups into the radio sponsorship picture on a large scale has already started to take definite shape, with the Farmers' Co-operative of North and South Dakota buying the LaGuardia 15-minute weekly show on a six-station splurge of farmers' cooperatives into bankrolling air time.

There was a deal cooking for the Amalgamated Bank in Chicago to buy the LaG. stanza on the McCormick, WGN station in Chi, but the deal looked cold as of last week. Nevertheless, labor groups around the country are reported as setting their sights on the commentary program aimed at co-op sponsorship.

LaGuardia bowed in on Mutual Saturday, Jan. 4, with a check currently being made to determine how many affiliates are picking up the program.

WHCU SETS NEW PATTERN

With more and more talk being bandied about in the trade as to where the future pattern lies for daytime radio and what will take it out of its present day doldrums, sponsors are cocking an attentive ear in the vicinity of Ithaca, N. Y., and the commercial daytime operation that's been promulgated by WHCU for the upper New York State listeners.

WHCU, a CBS affiliate, signs off daily at sundown. And like many another affiliate, the station takes stuff off the line and transcribes and plays it back later. But going a step further, WHCU has evolved a programming pattern of sponsored shows that virtually transfers nighttime listening appeal to daytime audiences. In place of the usual afternoon soap sagas and audience participation shows, the station has punctuated its daytime skeds with the big-league, after-dark top coin production — and with increasing evidence that audiences prefer it that way.

The station has wrapped up deals with the sponsors of half a dozen nighttime CBS shows and has shifted them daytime space on WHCU. Three of these, "Sparkle Time," (Canada Dry), Ginny Simms (Borden) and the and Sloops (Rexall) are slotted on Saturday afternoons, with the result that the station has managed to put together a 90-minute afternoon segment of top nighttime radio. In addition the station has sold Friday afternoon time to Hallmark for "Radio Reader's Digest," and Tuesday afternoon time to Frigidaire for "Hollywood Star Time."

New Daytime Appeal

To the sponsor it means that nighttime shows can be played daytime, providing there are enough of them to set a program pattern, which is what WHCU has effected on Saturday afternoons. And it saves money for the sponsor on billings. But of toon importance to the trade is the fact that such programming appeals to daytime listeners.

The segue-to-daytime on major league programming was inaugurated during the station when daylight saving faded out (station is on until 9 in the summer). The sponsors apparently are satisfied that it's paying off. In the case of Borden's, the commercial copy has been adapted to the new audiences, with the local announcement plugging chicken so that's right down the farmer's alley.

Station also airs the Bing Crosby Philco show on Sunday afternoon; the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scout" show on Thursday afternoon; and has reserved a Wednesday daytime slot for the new Norman Corwin "One World Flight" series.

That more and more attention is being paid to evolving a nighttime pattern of radio for the daytime has been reflected of late in the holiday programming on the networks, with sponsors joining in the parade of top flight talent spotlighting before dark.

Prof. Morgan, Kyser's Kollege Run Into Rating, Gubernatorial Jams

Frank Morgan hopped into New York from the Coast for a one-day quickie last week, with the visit cued to reports that American Tobacco Co. may wash up Morgan's Wednesday night NBC show. Both Morgan and the sponsor have been reported for some time as unhappy over the show's audience pull.

The Morgan-Pall Mall program is bracketed with the Kay Kyser-Colgate stanza on the all indications, not all's serene on the Kyser front, either, and the Ted Bates agency, which handles the Colgate account, is said to be wrestling with the problem of keeping Kyser happy.

Situation is believed in some quarters to stem from Kyser's anxiety to get his campaign started for the Governorship of North Carolina, which has been in his craw for a long time.

ABC Net Tightening Money Belt As Noble Experiment Faces 1947 With Shifts, Cuts, Curtailments

Parr's Censorship Squawk

Looks like the Jack Parr comedy buildup via the Vaughn Monroe, Saturday night, CBS, Camel show has hit a censorship snag.

Parr yesterday (Tuesday) asked Tom Luckenbill, of the Wm. Esty agency, which produces the show to release him from the program, which he joined as a regular only last week after a couple of previous guest shots. Parr claims that the agency's censorship of his scripts is "impossible." Esty agreed to a parting of the ways.

WJZ 'Capture' Reverses Trend Of Key Stations

Exit of John H. McNeil as manager of WJZ, the N. Y. flagship of ABC network, with the web deciding to merge the station's operation with ABC departmental activities, has occasioned considerable surprise not only in New York but in industry circles in general. For ABC's decision comes at a time when the entire trend of key station operation is toward autonomy and away from too close identification with the network.

On the other hand, WJZ reverts to the status of a station completely dependent on the network for programming, etc., much in the manner that WYBC (then WEAF) was being fed NBC programming right down the line.

In the five years that McNeil headed up the station's operation since the web's divorcement from NBC, WJZ's autonomy in terms of local sales (distinct from share of network income) paid off in billings that spiraled from $600,000 to more than $2,500,000 a year.

McNeil is taking a vacation, then plans entering the FM-tele field. Murray B. Grabhorn steps in as manager of WJZ, increasing the number of specific assignments held by Grabhorn to five. He is also manager of the net's O. & O. stations, head of spot sales, chief of the co-op sales dept., and head of station sales.

Don Rich has also bowed out as publicity director of WJZ, which now operates out of Earl Mullin's office, and several other resignations are reported pending.

Let Me Take You Out of All This

Mercedes McCambridge, one of the most-in-demand radio performers in New York, whose income in recent years has spiraled into the $25,000-$30,000 annual bracket, has decided to chuck it all to live in the West Indies with her husband, William Fifield, and their five-year-old son, John.

Miss McCambridge, who has been acting in radio for the past nine years, has also made a number of excursions into the legit theatre, all with discouraging results. While she herself has been singled out by the crix for standout performances, all the legiters wound up as flops.

Currently Miss McCambridge is most prominently identified with the lead role of "Big Sister," daytime serial, and is also acting in "Inner Sanctum," "Thin Man," "Gangbusters" and "The Falcon." At one time or another she's clreuited all the air faves, daytime and nighttime, emanating out of New York.

She quits N. Y. the end of January and heads for San Juan, where her husband will write a book.

The ABC network appears to be going through a general tightening up process—financially and otherwise—cued to an overall "watch and see" attitude on the part of Ed Noble & Co. as to what 1947 has in the offing.

It's regarded as one of the chief factors in bringing WJZ, ABC's key station in New York, back into the web fold and dissolving its autonomous operation. But the tightening up is embracing even wider areas. The resignation of Keith Kiggins, who was veepee in charge of station operations until a year ago, when John Norton stepped into the spot, is also viewed as part of the new modus operandi pattern. Kiggins' duties in the past year involved that of a general troubleshooter for the web. His future plans appear to be indefinite but he may open his own agency in the near future.

Meanwhile there's considerable speculation as to ABC's role in the television picture. The web execs say they are switching the emphasis in 1947 away from programming and into exploring the engineering po-

Samish's Status

Despite denials from the ABC hierarchy, don't be surprised, is the word from authoritative quarters, if the web's programming dept. undergoes a drastic upheaval soon, with veepee Adrian Samish bowing out.

Several weeks back ABC exec chimed in with a vigorous 'taint so and announced appointment of Samish to also head up television, but the Samish divorce is said to be on the upcoming agenda.

'Pacific Story' Headache to NBC

NBC is thinking hard these days about folding one of its top, wartime public service shows, but execs can't agree on whether the war is over or not. Show concerned is the Sunday, 11:30 p.m., "Pacific Story."

One reason, reportedly, for the hesitancy is that nobody in high quarters at NBC is anxious to start another "Words at War" squabble from which, it is still felt, the net came out second best through public reaction against closing out that show.

"Pacific Story" has been on the air since shortly after Pearl Harbor, when the net was convinced that it should help dramatize the importance of the Pacific front at a time when most American eyes looked toward the European war front. Since V-J Day, the show has continued, being lauded as one that contributes to the peace.

One high NBC exec feels definitely that "the war's over" and that the Sunday slot should be devoted to other matters. The net, however, stood, will not make the mistake it did with the "Words at War" time which was switched to music. This time, plans are under way to revive a solid public service stanza, perhaps putting on the air again the old "Unlimited Horizons" show. Latter was a sock sustainer done prewar with the help of six Western universities, dramatizing scientific advances.

As of this week the tentative schedule is to drop "Pacific Story" as of the end of this month. But word has got around, emanating chiefly from the Coast, that this show is threatened, and the network is moving cautiously.

As one exec phrased it: "We may drop it anyway, but we're not going to get caught in any charges that we're not interested as much in the peace as we were in the war."

N. Y. Indies See Thackrey Technique As Applied to WLIB a Potential Threat

New York City's indie picture, already splotchy with a multiplicity of stations which range from dead losses to veritable gold mines, was further complicated last week when Mrs. Dorothy S. Thackrey took over personal managership of WLIB, which she owns. She's the third general the station has had in a year. Jackson Leighter, latest incumbent as WLIB prexy and g.m., resigns officially as of Feb. 1.

Mrs. Thackrey's assumption of the general managership (plus the presidency) of WLIB was seen by the trade as opening the possibility that that station, which had been losing coin, might make a real run for its money in the next year or so. This would be true, especially, if the station gets the FCC's green light for extending its present daytime operation into the night hours, and for upping its power to 5,000 watts daytime and 10,000w nights.

As owner of the New York Post, Mrs. Thackrey took that paper out of the red a few years ago. The paper lost $1,250,000 in 1940, and is a money-maker now. Since then, she has extended both her newspaper and radio properties, being owner of KLAC, Los Angeles, and KYA, San Francisco, and being strong in the lineup for an FM license in New York City.

The manner in which WLIB has been chopping heads of late has irritated many among New York's radio paid people. Some feel that the station had used some experienced radio brains as long as it needed them to work up FCC presentations for higher power, FM, etc., firing them when they were no longer needed for such purposes.

Thackrey Technique

Fact is, however, that, regardless of the justice or injustice of these feelings, Mrs. Thackrey has shown in the past that she knows how to pyramid losses into neat profits. And the trade was watching carefully to see just what she would do with WLIB.

An interview with Mrs. Thackrey in her penthouse office atop the N.Y. Post Building showed her to be a woman with plenty of business savvy who, at the same time, is deeply interested in the theatre and looks on radio, as she says, "primarily as showmanship."

Mrs. Thackrey has angeled two profitable Broadway productions in her time—"Dead End" and the current "Call Me Mister." She is also a heavy investor in the Playwrights Co. At the same time, she knows radio, not only as an operator, but, she insists, as a listener.

One of the few people to come out openly in defense of the much-criticized soap opera, Mrs. Thackrey insisted there was nothing wrong with the serial format but only with the manner in which it's being handled.

"The soap operas," she said, "were swell during the war. . .It's since then that they've gone down hill, becoming mystery stories and dealing in forms of life that's unrealistic. Soap opera could be improved, and I hope it will be. Let the kids on the serials be brats-

AM Licensees, Papers Still Dominate in FM; Only 19.2% Brand New

Washington, Jan. 14.

Standard broadcasters and newspapers still loom as majority groups in FM. FCC revealed in the latest of a series of status reports on FM, released here.

Commission said that, as of year-end, there were 901 bids for FM operation on file, 603 conditional grants and construction permits outstanding, and 136 FM stations actually on the air.

Continuing a trend reported earlier, standard broadcasters accounted for 69.7% of all FM bids, 19.2% of the applications were from persons with no radio or newspaper affiliation, and 33.1% from newspapers, many of which were also in AM radio.

Of the non-AM-newspaper bidders, FCC said, most common type of application came from corporations composed of persons with diverse business interests, Engineers, lawyers, doctors made up next largest group of FM bidders. Six labor unions are represented in FM, but only one bidder is found in the entertainment field.

Gillette's Hialeah Deal

Gillette Razor Co. is going to sponsor two Hialeah Park race broadcasts on the Mutual network, both to be voiced by Bryan Field. Events are the Widener Cup Race, Feb. 22, and the Flamingo Stakes Race, March 1.

Both shows will air on those dates, both Saturdays, 4:30-4:45 p.m. Deal placed by Maxon agency.

Guedel Keeps 'Party' On CBS Despite GE Bow, Hoping to Bait Coin

John Guedel, who owns the "House Party" package on CBS, has changed his mind about pulling the show off the network until a new bankroller is found. General Electric bowed out of the sponsorship picture last Friday (10), and originally Guedel said "no dice" to efforts by CBS to keep the show running in the 4-4:25 afternoon slot on a co-op basis. But, at the last minute, Guedel gave the 'go-ahead sign to the web, with the result that when Monday (13) rolled around "House Party" stayed intact, on a sustaining basis, with stations hanging out the co-op shingle to woo local bankrollers.

Temporary electric during the past year sponsored the show three days a week, and on the other two days it was being sold on a co-op basis. Guedel figures that, since the show has a wide station acceptance and has built up a sizable audience, it would be the better part of wisdom to retain that audience sans the CP commercials until a new coast-to-coast client comes along, rather than yank it.

CLEVE. MELTING POT GETS WGAR SUSTAINER

Cleveland, Jan. 14.

A new public service program, "Inside Story," designed to crack the problems of racial difficulties, is making its appearance over WGAR. Scheduled to run for eight sustaining weeks, the show dramatizes problems in the city's racial and religious backgrounds without pulling punches.

Dave Baylor, program manager, and Frank W. Baldau, director of the city's Community Relations Board, thought up the idea. Sidney Vincent is the author, and John Saunders producer. Supporting the project are the Jewish Community Council, Urban League, National Council of Christians and Jews; and the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

Sinatra Exit May Cue New Crosby Slot on ABC

Possibility of an early Frank Sinatra bow from his CBS Wednesday night show for Old Gold last week cued speculation on whether Bing Crosby's ABC show will move down to 9 o'clock if Sinatra flees for CBS.

When Crosby was signed up by Philco, dope was that he refused to let the sponsor or network spot him opposite Sinatra, feeling that such opposition would do neither of them any good.

Now the 9 o'clock Wednesday spot on the ABC net is becoming vacant, the current incumbent, "Ann of Scotland," bowing out next week (22). That would leave the time open for Crosby and Philco, if Sinatra vacates.

Triumph' Triumphs

In seven weeks of new show-ides tryouts aired by Mutual, Saturdays 5-5:30 p.m., on the "For Your Approval," program, one show has worked up enough interest so that it will be given regular network time.

The show is "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?" which will be spotted by itself on a Wednesday night, 10:30 slot late this month.

Next Saturday's (18) "Approval" tryout will be given over to a jazz session. Following week (25) will preem "I Hate Divorce," by Robert Jennings, producer of "Married for Life." The week after that (1) will try out a new quiz show based on the Richard Pack-Joe Ranson book, "The Seven Arts Quiz."

D'ARTEGA

In "Variety" (Dec. 11th) this column announced that Lang-Worth's 400 station platter-net was enthusiastic in its praise of D'Artega's new composition "Dream Concerto." Jack (BVC) Bregman read the announcement, telephoned D'Artega . . . heard the concerto and signed contracts same day. Concert orchestras throughout the world will feature it.

KSTP Pot Boils, Pro & Con AVCO Advocates Tiff

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

Two bids for 75% of stock in KSTP appeared here to be stirring up a civic controversy. After a group of Minneapolis and St. Paul businessmen had made a bid countering that of Stanley Hubbard, president and founder of the station, who owns the remaining 25% of stock, arguments began to pile up.

A. G. Bush, vice-president of Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co., revealed in a letter printed by St. Paul Pioneer Press that another group of industrialists had approved deal by which Hubbard planned to purchase the stock, previously held by two estates.

Hubbard's bid would be financed by Aviation Corp., owner of the Crosley Broadcasting Corp., AVCO retaining option to purchase the stock from Hubbard at an increased figure.

Bush said his group, assembled to discuss financing of Hubbard's bid, had voted he accept the AVCO deal because it provided, in event of exercise of option, that Hubbard be retained as chief station executive for a period of at least 10 years thereafter.

Bush letter said, "Only the peculiar regulations of FCC prevented closing of the deal at that time. . . . Hubbard has been responsible for development and growth of the station and has done much for the community. . . ."

Bush implied that had his group disapproved the AVCO deal, it would have made an effort to supply financing itself. Subsequently, he said, he was asked to join another group opposing the Hubbard application, but refused in view of his faith in Hubbard and his belief that purchase by the group would mean Hubbard's leaving the station.

Hand of Ridders

Meanwhile, other critics of the businessmen's bid were pointing to a possible finger-in-the-pie on the part of the Ridder family, which owns a number of newspapers, including the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch, and an interest in station WTCN.

One of the group o. bidders, it was pointed out, is W. F. Johns, Chicago, former general manager of the St. Paul Ridder newspapers and former president of WTCN. He is now reported to be partner with the Ridders in a Chicago advertising agency.

Still another bidder is William F. Johns, Jr. The group has asked the Hubbard bid of $825,000 be denied by FCC on the ground of the AVCO tie-up, and has itself bid $740,000, of which Johns and his wife are listed as buying $111,000 in stock, and Johns, Jr., $14,000.

St. Louis—WIL has applied to FCC for permission to change its broadcasting frequency from 1230 to 1430 kc and increase its power from the present 250 watts to 5,000 watts.

FCC Freezes Applications in Try To Break Bottleneck on AM Bids

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC has clamped a three-month freeze on the filing of standard broadcast applications in a final effort to catch up with its heavy backlog of AM station bids. Commission announced it would consider no requests for standard stations filed between Feb. 7 and May 1, but by May hopes to have acted one way or another upon all of the applications for AM operation now in its files.

The idea is said to have originated with FCC Chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr., and met with approval of most industry engineers at a pre-Hindsight conference last week. FCC will continue to accept AM bids of all kinds until Feb. 7, but any received after that date will be placed in a pending file and not acted upon until May.

FCC said it has managed to keep abreast of the simple station requests, but has 188 applications involving complicated engineering which, in the normal course of things, stand no hope of decision for another nine months or a year. Many of them have been on file for a year. Bottleneck is lack of staff, FCC explained.

In the Feb.-May freeze period, FCC will accept only applications to modify permits which it has specifically granted, or those which do not involve change of power, frequency, or hours of operation.

First Come —

Commission said it will continue to act periodically on applications filed prior to Feb. 7 during the freeze period. Procedure on complicated engineering applications will probably call for channel surveys, with oldest applications taken up first, and studies made of all conflicting bids on the same channel.

The freeze policy is expected to have little impact on FM, Denny said, since FM and television requests will continue to be filed. Commission has always kept abreast of these applications, through it has taken several months to decide FM contests in the big cities.

The Commission also released with its freeze announcement a list showing status of all standard broadcast applications on file. As shown 820 cases still to be decided, a figure slightly under earlier lists put out in July and October.

Hires Title Switch

Because a number of CBS stations plan doing a delayed broadcast later in the week of the Hires "Sunday Party" show after it moves over from ABC later this month, N. W. Ayer Hires-CBS execs went into a huddle this week on switching title of the program.

It's been changed to "Here's to Ya."

'Fat Man' Nets Fat Morsel to ABC Net Via 9G Overall Nut

ABC's sale of its "Fat Man" sustainer to the Norwich Pharmacal Co. represents a neat coin turnover for the web, which gets a fat chunk on both time and talent in view of the fact that the Dashiel Hammett show is an ABC package.

Deal involves an approximate $9,000 weekly talent-time nut, with the web cashing in on both ends, and grabbing itself a reported 10% take on the package in view of the fact that it developed the show as talainat property. Only requirement reputedly was getting somewhere around $8,000 for the show under non-commercial auspices, but the fat, too, moves into fancier digs.

"Fat Man" moves into the Friday at 8 slot. It was formerly heard Monday nights at 9.

RADIO EXECS CLUB JOINS IN HUNT FOR TALENT

An effort to improve live programming and, especially, to help develop new, young talent, will be made by the Radio Executives Club of New York through a new contest to be announced at this week's (16) meeting by prexy Robert D. Swezey.

At this meeting, tomorrow (Thursday), the National Laugh Week Foundation will present an award to the best young comedian developed during the last year. Harry Hershfield will emcee these proceedings.

Swezey's idea, however, is to go beyond comedians, to embrace various types of talent, from singers and musicians to actors. The contest, open only to local New York stations (web-owned flagships eligible only for talent used on non-net airers) will allow each station to make a maximum of six submissions. Deadline will be April 30.

Submissions will have to be platters, and judging will be done by a jury of radio editors. The winner will receive the club's official award, plus a cash prize of $250.

Hope is that if the contest indicates there's a possibility of hypoing new talent development, it will become an annual event.

Doughten Into L&M N.Y. Managership, Vice Mullen

Reshuffle in Lennen & Mitchell radio dept. puts Thomas P. Doughten in as manager of the New York office. He succeeds Bill Mullen, resigned. Doughten takes over the business end, with Mann Holiner continuing to head up production on the Coast and John Loveton in the east. However, it's strictly an all-Coast L & M setup today with the two Old Gold shows, now that "Mr. and Mrs. North" is off in New York.

Doughten has been with L & M since 1944 as asst. to exec veepee Ray Vir Den on the Old Gold account. He'll continue with that, too.

Mess of Mesa Stations

Phoenix, Jan. 14.

The small desert town of Mesa, 16 miles east of here—was on the receiving end of a radio windfall last week when two stations popped up where none had been before.

KRIZ went on the air with 1,000 watts, which began operating Jan. 6 as 250 watter on 1400 kilocycles. Station is owned and operated by Arizona Radio and Television, Inc.

KTYL bowed Friday (10), offering immediate competition in burg which is geared to population of only 9,000. KTYL is also 250 watter, operating on 1490 kilocycles. Outfit belongs to Sun Valley Broadcasting Co.

St. Loo Looks for Row As New 50G Cards Deal Nixes Dizzy as Gabber

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

Ruthrauff & Ryan, through Oscar Zahner, veep i/c of the 25 years, last week tied up the Cardinals baseball club for the exclusive broadcasting of the 154-game 1947 schedule, both at home and on the road. Falstaff Brewing will augment Pact removes Dizzy Dean as a baseball gabber during the forthcoming season.

Harry Caray and "Gabby" Street, former big league player and manager, have drawn the gabbing assignment for the third consecutive year for Griesedieck. It is reported that the Cards will receive approximately $50,000 from the ands maker for the exclusive contract.

Zahner, who arranged an eight station web in Missouri and Illinois for airing the local ball games last year, added the number would be increased for the forthcoming season.

It also was announced that KSD, owned and operated by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, (Pulitzer) will telecast some of the local games. The station expects to start televising in March.

Under Zahner's deal WEW will carry the daylight games while WIL and Falstaff St. Louis will carry the night contests. The games will be aired over both AM and FM frequency. Both stations are making intensive improvements that will be completed by the time the season gets under way.

The Browns, who sold their broadcasting to the Falstaff Brewing last season and hired Dizzy Dean and Johnny O'Hara of KWK to do the mike work, have not announced any broadcasting plans for the forthcoming season.

It's expected that the absence of Dean, with his continuous slaughtering of the King's English, will raise a row among local baseball fans.

ONCE UPON A TUNE
With Dort Clark, Richard Leone, Howard Smith, Billy Linn, Art Carney, Hedley Rainnie, Lee Brady; Olin Tice, announcer; Joseph DeSantis, narrator.
Music: Morris Surdin
Lyrics and Script: Ray Darby
30 Mins., Sun., 2:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WCBS-CBS, N. Y.

Out of Canada and the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has come something new for radio, a series of musical narratives written and composed by Ray Darby and Morris Surdin. They've been delighting Canadian audiences for the past couple of years, and now CBS has lined up the Darby-Surdin duo and their unique presentations for a once-weekly network airing of a 13-week series. After a four-week Sunday afternoon showcasing, the programs will be switched over to the Columbia Workshop Saturday period.

"Once Upon A Tune" preemed Jan. 5 with the tuneful saga of "Tugboat Danny," wherein the gifted Canadians presented in prose and music the innermost soul of a tugboat that yearned to be an ocean liner, its frustrations (all that the Navy could lout for it was the life of a minesweeper) and its blissful satisfaction (when the tug finally emerges a hero). In technique, Darby and Surdin have hued to the pattern of Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf" and the more recent "Tubby the Tuba." But whereas "Tubby" is geared strictly for juvenile appeal, "Tugboat Danny" is offered for adult consumption.

The first in the series left doubts as to its maturity as adult fare. In "Danny" there were tessing moments, particularly in the delightful musical sequences and bridges. But they tended to exasperate, because of their lack of fulfillment. The format, new to radio, gives evidence of affording delightful, relaxing moments and as such "Danny's" chief merit lies in the potentialities that fantasy promises.

One of the principal shortcomings in the initial presentation was its lack of imagination. The idea was there; but, in treating of it, Darby and Surdin were fettered by too much reserve. The finished job was standbound. Its fantasy remained a promise; its thoughts didn't soar and weren't sufficiently intriguing. But if "Once Upon a Tune" should encourage its writers to cut loose and really improvise, and if other composer-lyricists throw out their inhibitions and let their ideas take excursions into this new realm, there are limitless possibilities for imaginative radio fare without necessarily resorting to the oversimplification of childhood. MURDER AND MR. MALONE
With Frank Lovejoy, Francis Robinson, Tom Collins, Bill Conrad, Pete Leeds, Betty Winkler, Ann Thomas, Frank Graham; Dick Aurandt and oreh; Art Gilmore, announcer
Producer: Bill Rousseau
Writer: Craig Rice
30 Mins.; Sat., 9:30 p.m.
GUILD WINES
WJZ-ABC, N. Y.
(Honig-Cooper)

First radio series of the well-known writer of whodunits, Craig Rice, ("Home Sweet Homicide," "Having Wonderful Crime") is familiar stuff, patterned on a by-now well-used radio formula. But the writing is breezy, and incidents dramatic, so that the program—judged by Saturday's (11) premiere—is fast and still intriguing. It will do.

Miss Craig employs too many glib wisecracks, while her characters, too, are stock. Such as the smooth private investigator, the smoother gangster chief, the dick's loyal secretary, the gangster's dumb henchmen. Some of the gang's voices are too soft and gentlemanly for their occupation, too. But in the main these faults are hidden in a script that is written lightly, that moves fast, ending up various factors intriguingly, and working up to a trick finish. It's what the customers want.

Saturday's session (each episode, presumably, will be complete in itself) dealt with a double or triple cross among gangsters and horses.

There were two commercials, dovetailed into the yarn instead of at either end. First, commercial breaking in just at the first murder was a little unexpected, thereby making a definite impression. Effect was dissipated by spiel being a little overlong. Bron.

"MEL VENTER'S PICTORIAL"
15 Mins.; Mon.-Wed.-Fri.
S & W FOODS
KFRC, San Francisco

Using an adroit choice of stories of the great and near-great, which lend themselves to treatment in profile-dramatic form, Mel Venter is an engaging yarn-spinner, using usually three stories of approximately four minutes each to regale his listeners. Approach is in serious vein and his easy style and good diction make them good listening.

Some of his stories are slightly needled to achieve a super-dramatic or eery appeal, but the sum total is okay and Venter is cutting a good listening audience in the network area. Yarns include hardy perennials such as Mata Hari's apprenticeship as a vamp, Neil McDonald's bank robbing and Jean Lafitte's privateering. Ted.

You Put 'Em On; We'll Review 'Em

In a desire to spotlight local live programming, VARIETY invites stations throughout the country to send in transcriptions or recordings of their new shows. One sampling of each series, preferably the premiere, would be sufficient.

We'll review them.

In this way VARIETY can let everybody know of the contributions being made by stations toward improving programming on a community level; of tackling problems peculiarly native to their locale, and of the attempts being made to foster new talent for radio.

You send them in. We'll review them.

ONE WORLD OR NONE

WMCA, N. Y.

The chain reaction of radio shows touched off by the A-bomb that fell on Hiroshima a year-and-a-half ago is still popping with unabated sound effects and fury. Latest in the cycle is this new series of dramats presented by public service-minded WMCA, in contribution to the solution of the world's most complex and dangerous problem. Prepared with the aid of an impressive advisory board of physicists and staged with the panoply of a topnotch network feature, the series was launched last Friday (10) with a documentary-style fantasy entitled "The Death of Manhattan."

Despite the expressed intention in the program's preamble to inform public opinion, the preem dramat failed to make a point, or, at least, a point not already familiar to any primary school student. Reduced to its simple meaning, it was the story of Hiroshima and Nagasaki transplanted to New York City minus the break of a hypothetical third World War about four years hence. In his attempt to bring the meaning of atomic warfare closer to home, scripter Dexter Masters indulged in a lot of morbid rhetoric full of hysterical sobbing, tumbled landmarks, the dead, the dying and the rest, the non-dead.

It was florid, but routine stuff done many times before. Scripters ought to declare a moratorium on describing the effects of the atomic bomb, especially, as in this case, where it becomes a pretext for pure indignation untempered by any positive intelligence beyond a few platitudes about the necessity for world cooperation. The new, fourth dimension slice of horror now running amok has been unshakably established in the public consciousness by the bomb itself. And if anything is calculated to paralyze the general will in face of the Frankenstein, then it's these endlessly reiterated prophecies of doom which never get around to defining a practical way out. Perhaps the question of atomic power just can't be discussed in dramat form.

Productionwise, the show was handled flawlessly. A group of expert radio thespers, headed by Mercedes McCambridge, in a particularly eloquent piece of hysteria, and Paul McGrath as narrator, squeezed the last ounce of violence out of the script. Special music by John Gart also added effectively as did the sound effects, while played one of the prominent parts in the show.

As an epilog, Dr. Philip Morrison, one of the atomic physicists who helped assay the damage at Hiroshima, came on to testify to the accuracy of the broadcast and attacked the narrow nationalist bias with which some politicians and scientists approach the problem of atomic control. WMCA is offering this series, in platter form, to other indies on a cost-share basis. Herm.

YOUNG AMERICA SINGS
With Jerry Reed
Producer-Writer: Jerry Reed
15 Mins.; Sat., 1:45 p.m.
Sustaining
WLIB, N. Y.

A batch of singers seem to be latching onto the ballad bandwagon since such notables as Burl Ives and Richard Dyer-Bennett discovered that they're potent boxoffice. Latest entrant is Jerry Reed, whoso sister Susan has already established herself in that field. However, Reed has far to go to get the true feeling of the ballad.

On his preem program, accent seemed to be on voice rather than interpretation. He has yet to get the ease and rhythm that top-notchers get into their renditions. He's also too self-conscious, a fault which may be corrected on subsequent airings.

On the plus side, he seems to be a serious student of this song form. His spoken backgrounds to the various numbers are concise and authentic. Vocally, he's okay albeit a bit too precise to get that folksy feeling into his work. He varies his tunes with an eye to tempo and origin and thus creates sufficient variety.

With further experience, Reed should work out nicely. Jose.

WCBS-CBS, N. Y.

Last year, CBS put on a "Cross-Section" show which, for varying cycles, was devoted to presentation of viewpoints on important problems by reps of the National Assn. of Manufacturers, AFL people, CIO members, etc. This year, the net reshuffled its "Cross-Section," appending "USA" to the tag and making it a quizzer. As heard on its preem Saturday (11), the show covered much too much ground geographically and not enough ideologically, turning the title into something pretentious and unfulfilling.

Using its facilities for remotes as if the mere fact of switching from New York to Washington to Cleveland to Denver was in itself a fascinating feat, the show failed to pay attention on this debut to the quality of the material being brought in with each successive switchover.

The subject for discussion was the labor situation and Washington plans for tightening labor legislation. But instead of having from a letter carrier, one heard from the prexy of the mailmen's union; the general manager of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce was interviewed, rather than the owner of a haberdashery on some Main Street; no machine-shop owner really worried about day-to-day problems, but the president of the National Assn. of Manufacturers was heard. And so on.

This was not a cross-section of American opinion, but a dossier of the publicity released handed out by the organizational publicity guys—even though the boss in each case voiced the release. Cars.

HATS OFF TO MUSIC
With Jimmy Bunn, Ken Heady; Marie Green, guest vocalist
Writer: Ann Fitzgerald
Producer-Director: Ken Heady
30 Mins.; Mon., 6:30 p.m.
STEVENS HAT CO.
KCMO, KANSAS CITY

A variation on platter shows, this one frequently used in other areas, but new to listeners here. Idea is a combination of live vocals over some of the more established transcribed and recorded tunes. With Jimmy Bunn, who rates a good baritone and ballad lines, as the vocal regular and a femme guest singer, half hour comes off as a neat local entry and even fair competition against the Sunday eve net programming.

As the only straight music show available here at this time of day, it's one of the few with which a sponsor could hope to get a commercial in edgewise against the heavy competition of the Sunday nets. That it's having some success is evident from the fact the show has already stood the gaff for four months.

MAXWELL HOUSE COFFEE
WOR, N. Y.
(Benton & Bowles)

Another and participation show based on the deflated standards for early afternoon airers, this program's sole capital is in its emcee, Eddie Dunn. Dunn is a snappy, witty, off-the-cuff spieler who dishes out the queries to the visiting hausfraus and their ever-loving hubbies —all of whom are subjected to a prying search into some of the most intimate details of their love life. As a result, this program probably packs more embarrassing moments for dialers as well as participants per rating point than any other show extant. That's program value, brother.

Sample question to a married man: "Why did you pick your wife to marry as against your other girl friends?" Typical answer: "I dunno." Another question to a middle-aged housewife: "Do your husband's kisses still thrill you?" etc., etc. Four long commercials for Maxwell House during the quarter-hour session definitely did not thrill. Why a Radio Agency Should Own a Radio Station

1. Test programs and campaigns under controlled conditions.

2. Help sell your clients that you know radio from the ground up.

3. Gain valuable experience for your personnel.

4. Make money.

Here is a station in a key wholesaling city, isolated from outside influences. It delivers a whale of a signal over a compact, populous, primary market just a short plane hop from New York. It is a basic network affiliate. Although fairly new, the station's first year's billing approximates $100,000.

The present owner is willing to sell his controlling interest for what it cost him provided the buyer is acceptable to the station management which will continue and will own remaining interest.

You don't often get a chance to buy at cost. Drop a note to Advertiser, Room 258, Park Square Building, Boston, Mass., and our management will give you the whole story confidentially.

sociated with sponsors other than the ragtag and bobtail peddlers of deodorants, laxatives, special shoes, etc., and yet the "Columbia Record Shop" format would seem to be the most obvious connection with record programs. What better way for a company to sell its records than by playing them?

Robbins, who is better known for his generous use of abstruse jazz terminology during an evening session on WOV's "1280 Club," made like a normal citizen for his morning network audience; so normal, in fact, that at times the patter sounded like it came straight from a script. But then, this jock is an ex-lawyer, as good an explanation as any for the fast gab.

Records played were mostly pash material by Dinah Shore, Frank Sinatra, Frankie Carle, Les Brown and other Columbia artists, with each acting, in effect, as a commercial. Robbins gilds the lily with adjectives after each record. Other than the fact that only Columbia platters are spun, this is pretty much a standard record program. Engineering on preem show was bad in a couple of spots. Tomm.

WCBS-CBS, N. Y.

CBS completes a continuous Sunday-through-Thursday schedule of serious music in the 11.30 p.m. to midnight slot with this program. Lineup now has Columbia Concert Orch in "Music You Know," Sundays; Eileen Farrell, or substitute singers, Mondays; Rochester Civic Orch, Tuesdays; "Invitation To Music" with CBS Symphony Orchestra under Bernard Herrmann, Wednesdays, and Juilliard School, with a chamber music program, Thursdays. Lineup is an impressive segment of late-evening longhair fare, and a worthy rival for such established purveyors as WQXR (N.Y.) etc.

Rochester Civic, a 45-musician core of the Rochester Philharmonic, has established its own entity and reputation in the past 25 years as a superior symphonic ensemble. Evidence was ample in Tuesday's (7) premiere, when conductor Guy Fraser Harrison led the organization in attractive presentations of Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Rubinstein's "Valse Caprice" and a Minuet and March by Gluck-Mottl. Bron.

WNEW, N. Y.

Here's an indication of either some fast footwork on the part of WNEW or surprising laxity on the part of the networks and their N. Y. flagships. For slotted into her first radio show in six years on the local indie is Maxine Sullivan, a singer who has been, for some time, rather large potatoes on the nitery wheel.

Recognized as one of the outstanding exponents of jazz and blues chanteusing, Miss Sullivan swung out in her characteristic free and easy style in the opening show of the series (12). Little of her nitery warmth was lost in the airing and the tunes, from the "Loch Lomond" theme through "Come Rain or Come Shine" were right in the Sullivan vein. Announcer Joe Bolton acted as narrator, interspersing Miss Sullivan's biography between songs, telling mostly how she wowed 'em wherever she sang. This probably will stand as the listeners' intro to a new radio chirp. A plug was stuck in for her current appearance at the Village Vanguard nitery.

Claude Morgan, Miss Sullivan's regular accompanist, backed her on the piano and Hammond organ in fine style. Would probably be a good idea for Morgan to have one tune to himself to break the vocalistics. Beside the theme and "Rain or Shine," she tuned "I Want a Sunday Kind of Love," "Surprise Party," and "Molly Malone." This is a topper on the local listening list. Tomm.

FOOTLIGHTS FORUM
With Sid Andorn, Sol Heller, Anthony Blair, Ted Goldsmith; Tom Armstrong, announcer
Producer: Sid Andorn
15 Mins.; Sat., 11:15 p.m.
ZUCKER'S
WGAR, Cleveland

This is another phase of the stump the experts quiz, bringing key stage and drama persons to the mike to answer questions submitted by listeners. What makes this a bit different, is that it is staged in a room just off the main stem of the Hanna theatre and is held after the final curtain comes down on the Saturday night performance.

A live audience is assured as theatre-goers stop to watch the act. The experts change each Saturday night, depending on what show is in town or who is available. On the night reviewed, Anthony Blair, of "Blossom Time," Ted Goldsmith, advance p.a. for "Magnificent Yankee," were two of the three, while the third was a Clevelander, Sol Heller, who promotes many outstanding features and shows.

The questions are adroitly handled by Sid Andorn who keeps the 15-minute stanza moving. The questions are sticklers, with those stumping the experts bringing a pair of ducats for the next Hanna performance to the sender. The show caters to a select clientele—which it must do in order to compete with the jazz demands and disks on other stations at that hour. Finally, the experts so far have fluffed few questions, thus presenting more of a challenge to listeners submitting queries. Mark.

WQQW PREVIEW
(One Shot)
Producer and Commentator: Paul Martin.
180 Mins., Sunday 2 p.m.
WQQW, Washington, D. C.

WQQW, D. C.'s latest candidate for a share of radio's audience and advertisers, and heralded as the first station patterned along lines of the Blue Book, made its debut in a three-hour pot pourri of plugs, greetings, music, and dramatics. General effect was good, and interest surprisingly well sustained throughout such an oversized stretch. It is doubtful whether many listeners stayed with the program all the way, but format was such that the thread could be picked up at any point and dropped at will.

WQQW has announced it will use no more than four commercials per hour and the purpose of the initial airer—to give an idea of the kind of fare the station would offer—was well achieved by the program. Any half-hour would give a concrete idea of the type of show the station will put on display.

Paul Martin, station manager, who produced and announced, wisely spotted the samples, giving a taste of early ayem programs, moppets' hour, symphonic offerings, etc. Most of the programs in the early stage of this small watter will be recorded, so the debut was an accurate preview.

Opening show format avoided monotony. Musical recordings, mostly longhair, which station will feature, but with a sample of its weekly "hot jazz hour," were interspersed with reproduced greetings from such Hollywood figures as Gregory Peck and Margo, plus live well wishes from locals, and plenty of house advertising by Martin. Also worked in were selected dramatic and narrative features, such as Jimmy Stewart's rendition of Norman Corwin's "We Hold These Truths......" a plattered performance of a 1941 script.

Music included some folk singing plus platters of Hans Kindler conducting the National Symphony Orch.

Station is making its bid with the slogan, "free speech, good music, unbiased news and limited commercials." If it keeps this stance, it has a chance to click. It sets an experimental pattern which other, more commercially-minded outlets will watch with interest. Lowe.

Follow-up Comment

"The Warrior," one-act opera with music by Bernard Rogers and book by Norman Corwin, which the Metropolitan Opera gave in its world preem Sat. (11) over ABC, proved a succes d'estime — and little else. Book (a modern treatment of the Samson-Delilah story) was written originally as a radio drama, although the music was subsequently composed for the operatic stage, not for radio purposes. Either way, the business didn't jell. The music is pedestrian, written on one, monotonous level; the libretto is persuasive rhetoric rather than poetry, and the combination is dreary, uninspired stuff. Opera sounded static and wordy throughout, with only a few moments—such as the shearing of Samson's hair scene; the closing scene of blind Samson pushing the pillars down—being dramatic. A slow operatic bout, this.

John Reed King's ebullience provides the mainspring of the "Give and Take" CBS show now being bankrolled by the Toni Co., but which shares commercials with the firms which contribute a multitude of prizes. Show is no better (nor worse) than the flock of similar programs which attract big studio audiences consisting mainly of housewives hoping to get in on the valuable loot being distributed. Most dependable feature is King, who knows how to handle the quizzes to get the most out of each contestant. Questions are fairly simple, and method of distribution isn't too involved. The studio audiences seem to have a gay time, which is more than can be said of the fireside listener.

MELODY BAR RANCH

Producer-Director: Harvey Marlowe
Writer: Malcolm McGlasson
Set: Rudy Lucheck
30 Mins.; Thurs., 8 p.m.

WABD-ABC, N. Y.

"Melody Bar Ranch," one of the first live oatuners to hit the videowaves, represents ABC's attempt to snare part of the Thursday night tele audience usually attuned to NBC's "Hour Glass" show. An ambitious and high-budgeted production, it doubtless would have succeeded, given a few more sessions to iron out the wrinkles.

With WABD, ABC's only available N. Y. video outlet, shutting down for a month on Jan. 27 to install its new transmitter, ABC has decided to sever all relationships with the Du Mont web. Last Thursday (9) night, consequently, constituted ABC's swan song in N. Y. television until it gets its own Manhattan station. "Ranch," therefore, will have to be judged on its merits to date.

Show was packaged by Hal Horton, who also starred in the production. Format, consisting of songs and dances pegged to an innocuous story theme, resembled a variety show more than anything else, and therein lay the wrinkles. Horton reportedly wants to bring true western music to video but he certainly overdid it on this show. Cast gave out with at least 10 different songs during the half-hour, which is too much to take no matter how well they're presented. More stress on the story, regardless of how insipid that was, would have aided considerably.

Young cast did much to perk up the proceedings, with Horton making out okay as the romantic cowhand. Elsa Miranda, radio's "Chiquita Banana" girl, shone in her songs and Eddie Manson provided excellent accompaniment with his harmonica virtuosity, ABC's method of skirting the ban on live musicians. Rest of the actors were competent, although Nick Persoff, as the bearded and rustic old ranchhand, caricatured his role too much.

Producer-director Harvey Marlowe made good use of WABD's four camera setup for the most part. He still has a tendency, though, to overaccentuate his camera work to the detriment of the show, and his method of panning in for a closeup of one character while cutting out another one is n.s.g. Direct cut to the closeup would be much better. Rudy Lucheck's indoor-outdoor set was a faithful reproduction of a Hollywood ranch. Stal.

BERT ALLERTON, MAGICIAN
With Bert Allerton, Jimmy Savage
Producer-Director: Beulah Zachary
15 Mins.; Thurs. (9), 8:30 p.m. (CST)
Sustaining
WBKB, Chicago

This attempt to bring more variety to WBKB's programming by aiming their cameras at a polished magician falls short of really good television entertainment but it does show, for experimentalists, that the video screen is no place to prove the hand quicker than the eye.

Strictly a low budget affair, set uses as prop a few tables with lamps borrowed from the Hotel Ambassador East's Pump Room, in an attempt to create the atmosphere of the lush nightery. No mention is made of the Pump Room and the only way the listener would be able to get the point is if he were a frequenter of the place and was able to recognize head waiter George Sotos, also borrowed to wait on "guests" who were to be amazed by Allerton, who performs nightly in the room.

Format has Allerton pausing at tables, with camera taking one table at a time, and dispensing some idle chatter along with some nifty bits of magic. Guests were comprised by WBKB staffers who didn't have anything else to do when show went on. One exception to this was Jimmy Savage, Balaban & Katz theatre publicity staffer, who dominated most of Allerton's time.

Magician unfolds to Savage's apparent amazement, several card tricks which are lost to the television camera in that the viewer cannot distinguish the numerals on the cards. It is practically impossible to tell an ace from a jack, even though the camera comes in for extreme close-ups, cutting, everything but the cards from the picture.

Other gimmicks include placing a sponge in a girl's hand to have it multiply into several smaller sponges when she opens her paw, several variations of cutting a piece of rope, and the disappearing bird cage.

Although the magic is tops the effect isn't too startling as it is difficult for the listener to realize that the stooges weren't prompted or the props weren't planted prior to the show's airing. This, in itself, keeps the show from coming through with better quality. Surprise is the performance of head waiter, who lends a professional touch to the scene. Donn.

Bonus Payments to Station Execs Draw Criticism at WTOL Hearing

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC may clamp down on radio contracts which provide for payment of station and/or program managers on a percentage of gross or net earnings basis. Such an arrangement, the commission apparently feels, tends to overcommercialize a station's program format and disregard public interest.

This, at any rate, was indicated by FCC Commissioner Paul Walker last Friday (10) in a hearing on the license renewal of WTOL, Toledo. WTOL was one of seven stations placed on temporary license following citation in FCC's Blue Book last spring.

Counsel for WTOL, J. Theodore Pierson, agreed that bonus arrangements for station supervisors were not in the public interest. WTOL's principals were away from the station during the war, which accounted for a percentage-contract made with temporary manager Arch Shawd. Station manager Thomas Bretherton, Pierson said, is now paid on salary basis only.

Station, which was on the mat for over-commercialization and failure to live up to program promises made in various renewal applications, now has no more than four spots in a 15-minute period. When Shawd got a cut on the amount of time sold, WTOL had as many as 10 in a quarter-hour segment. Some form of bonus-payment to managers is a common practice in radio, it was pointed out, since otherwise salesmen would often get more money than station directors.

WTIC Loses Lone Status In Conn. Gov. Office, All Stations Now In

Hartford, Jan. 14.

New policy of radio relations has been inaugurated by the Governor's office here, meaning that the WTIC stranglehold on utterances of Governor has been snapped. During the tenure of Gov. Raymond Baldwin, he favored WTIC to the exclusion of remainder of stations in the state. Latter took a terrific burn but were unable to do anything about it.

Now with Gov. James McConnaughy in office, the new policy of radio press relations has been laid down by Charles Keats, press secretary. All stations of the state will have opportunity to carry the Governor's voice.

However, according to Keats, stations will get same treatment as press. If a station approaches with an exclusive idea, it will be that station's privilege to carry it out in the form of a scoop. Keats is interested in the goodwill and grace of all radio stations.

Understood that WTIC had approached the Governor's office for exclusive airing of his voice, and told that it will be given cooperation on any ideas for coverage but cannot, as in past, have Governor as property.

Plans are being laid for a weekly fireside chat by the Governor. This will be carried by any and all stations interested in it. Plans are still in formative stage, however.

WCPO's New Exclusive On Cincy Reds Games

Cincinnati, Jan. 14.

As for the past two seasons, WCPO will do exclusive airings of the Cincy Red's baseball games this year and in 1948, with the Burger Brewing Co. continuing as sole sponsor. Waite Hoyt, former big league pitcher, is to do the play-by-play accounting, which he started here in 1941 with WKRC, switching to WCPO in 1945.

New two-year contract was signed last week by Mortimer C. Watters, general manager of WCPO, and Warren C. Giles, president of the Cincinnati Baseball Club. It permits WCPO to continue linkings with several Ohio and Kentucky stations on the baseballcasts.

No. 16 for Red Barber

Red Barber's cross-the-board co-op sports program on CBS has been bought on WCBS, key outlet in New York, by Reid's Ice Cream, through Doherty, Clifford, Shenfield agency.

Deal brings to 16 number of co-op sponsorships of Barber stanza.

WCAU EXIT PARADE

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Resignation of three men from WCAU was announced last week. They are Philip J. Sharkey, treasurer; Boyd Lawler, of the program department, and Al Taylor, newscaster and staff announcer. The resignations are effective this month.

Taylor will become station manager of studios in Haverhill, Mass. WCAU also announced Joan Myers has joined the program department.

Henry Morgan Vs. Hockey In Cleve. Sweepstake

Cleveland, Jan. 14.

The battle of comedy versus sporting event for popular appeal continues to spark the local scene. Latest are the Cleveland Hockey Club broadcasts by WJW. The pickups come the same time as the Henry Morgan show.

So far, the hockey fans are ahead, according to News radio editor Elmore Bacon, who says since the station broadcasts the hockey games, apparently more hockey fans are writing letters favoring the move than Morgan fans. Bacon, however, seems inclined toward Morgan. Both shows are commercial.

Station Can't Abdicate Program Control by Contract, Sez Court

Washington, Jan. 14.

The U. S. circuit court of appeals for the 10th circuit ruled in Denver last Saturday (11) that a "radio station may not by private contract limit its right or duty to select programs that are in the interest of the listening public." The decision spared KOB, Albuquerque, from upsetting choice NBC talent shows to clear time for the Univ. of New Mexico, which under a 1935 contract has an option for an hour a day on the station.

This is the first time a federal court has ruled on the validity of contracts which may impair a station's control over its program time. As such, it is of importance in pending court appeals by the Churchill Tabernacle of Buffalo against WGR and WKBW, Buffalo, and by A. J. Felman, a former owner against WJOL, Joliet.

In both cases, the FCC questioned the license renewals of the stations because of contracts which turned over control of program time to outsiders.

Here are the results of independent block programming initiated on WCKY, April 15, 1946. Let's look at the record—the Hooper record.

In December, 1946 —

WCKY was No. 2 in Cincinnati, 8 A.M. to 12 Noon, Monday-Friday.
WCKY was No. 2 in Cincinnati, 12 Noon to 6 P.M., Monday-Friday.

Co-ops Looking Up

Network placement of web option time on a local co-operative basis, given a hypo last week when ABC turned over "Town Meeting" to its co-op dept., received further impetus this week when Mutual lets its co-op division start selling "Fishing and Hunting Club of the Air" to local sponsorship.

"Town Meeting," which is on the ABC net at 8:30 p.m. Thursdays, snagged 17 local sponsors in one week. Mutual's "Club" is on Mondays at 10 p.m., and is sponsored on 45 stations by Mail Pouch tobacco.

Further significance in these co-op deals is seen in fact that the co-operatives are getting away from the 15-minute stanzas to which they had been largely confined until now. "Meeting" is an hour show, while "Club" is 30-minutes.

WINS Revamps Program Setup; 35 New Shows

WINS, N. Y., which was taken over a few months ago by the Crosley Broadcasting Corp., has reshuffled its entire program content, putting into effect this week (13) an entire new show setup, with 35 new stanzas ranging from 15-minute slots to two hours across the board.

It is one of the most ambitious program reshuffles undertaken at one time in a long time. The new schedule has been worked out by Jerry Danzig, program director, with help all the way up and down the organization.

Personalities and groups tied in with the various shows include disk jock "Red" Benson, Ruth Moss Taylor, Jack Lacy, Archdale Jones, Dolores Craeg, Bert Shefter and orch, Jeff Davis, Pru Devon, Lucille Ryan, "Three Beaux & A Peep" quartet, and Thomas Sugrue.

Don Lee Refused Peek At FCC Charges, Mat Spread Out on Coast

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC last Friday (10) turned down flat a petition of the Don Lee Network for a declaratory ruling spelling out the specific violations the net is alleged to have made of the commission's chain broadcasting regulations. As a result, hearing on renewal licenses of the net's four o. o. stations was due to go on as scheduled today in Los Angeles, with Don Lee on the mat for violation of five chain regulations rather than the two originally cited by FCC.

Commission's first charge against Don Lee was for infraction of the chain rule which forbids nets to option time without 56 days' notice, and for optioning more time than the rules prescribe. After examining some 416 documents in the web's files, the FCC enlarged its charges to include alleged violation of the chain rules forbidding exclusive affiliation contracts, territorial exclusivity, and giving a station the right to reject network shows.

FCC said it was turning down the Don Lee request for a declaratory ruling since it would present its case first at today's hearing and, in any event, the net had been given "a very complete opportunity" to know in advance the basis of FCC's charges against it.

Inside Stuff—Radio

It was her contrib at an all-night charity stint for Sydenham hospital, N. Y., that resulted in Maxine Sullivan being inked for her weekly show on WNEW, New York indie. Program preemed under her own name Sunday (12).

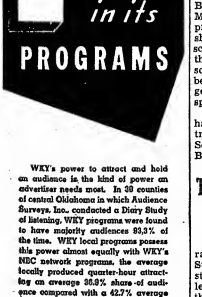
Earlier in the week Miss Sullivan appeared on the Art Ford "Milkman's Matinee" at midnight and sang until 5 a.m. with hardly a break, on a special program for Sydenham hospital, currently conducting a fund drive to remain in operation. While she sang various members of the station's music staff moved in and out of the studio as accompanists, one taking his turn when the other tired.

Following the show Miss Sullivan and station flack Will Yolen huddled at the latter's home over a cup of coffee, and the sepia chanteuse favored the idea of her own radio show. Now she has a 15-minute stanza every Sunday, her first in six years. Also as a result of the program she's been made chairman of the Maxine Sullivan Committee for Sydenham hospital.

Bill Davidson, program manager of ABC's KECA in Hollywood, hit upon a stunt to help along the March of Dimes drive that was snapped up speedily by the network and Hollywood Citizen-News. Idea is to collect a mile of dimes—87,960—by stringing a tape up and down the film capital's Vine st. Coins will be pasted on the strip by passersby and stunt given a touch of glamor by having him and radio stars contribute their thin ones while microphones pick up their comments. ABC will make a special event of the stunt with various exploitation devices. Ribbon goes up at 6 a.m. Jan. 23, and won't be taken down until the tape is filled. Boy Scouts and other youth organizations will police the strip to see that no sticky-fingered gent puts one and takes two.

The prexy of a Florida station wishes he hadn't heard certain gossip about his chief competitor. The prexy was told that Mr. Competitor had put on a gabber who read racing predictions taken right out of the columns of a certain paper—without credit to the paper. "By all means, notify that paper and let 'em sue," yelled the prexy in glee, without further checking. The paper was notified and got ready to sue. When it called for recordings of the plagiarizing spieler, and listened carefully—it turned out that the call letters were of that very prexy's own outlet. The prexy had advised some one too fast, and was just as fast trying to pull strings to kill that suit.

Music Corp. of America is tiffing with Ted Husing because of his failure to pay MCA commissions on his disk-jockey job at WHN, N. Y. Husing claims that he was bound only verbally to the talent agency and doesn't feel obligated to them inasmuch as he got the WHN job himself.



WKY's power to attract and hold an audience is the kind of power an advertiser needs most. In 30 counties of central Oklahoma in which Audience Surveys, Inc., conducted a Diary Study of listening, WKY programs were found to have quarterly audiences 53.1% of the time. WKY local programs possess this power almost equally with WKY's NBC network programs, the average locally produced quarter-hour attracting an average 36.9% share-of-audience compared with a 42.7% average for NBC quarter-hours.

There is no substitute for Program Power to attract and hold an audience . . . that's why, in Oklahoma, there is no substitute for WKY.

London-to-N.Y. Shuttle Job on British Disk Series for U.S. Market

A new British-U.S.A. radio tiein has been worked out, whereby shows will be written in London, edited in New York, transcribed in London for the American market by an American producer, then sold on platters in this country.

Deal is between British radio package producer and consultant Harry Alan Towers, and Oliver W. Nicoll, of Radio Features of America.

Nicoll is reportedly dickering with Bob Novak, recently resigned from Mutual net as director of talent and program development, to do the shuttle job of editing the London scripts in New York, then producing them and directing them for transcription in London. Purpose will be to wrap up London shows with genuine British flavor but aimed specifically for the American market.

First of the Towers shows being handled by Nicoll for the American transcription market is "Secrets of Scotland Yard," starring Clive Brook.

TYLER TO GERMANY, SUMMERS HEADS IER

Columbus, Jan. 14.

Dr. I. Keith Tyler, head of the radio education department at Ohio State Univ. and director of the Institute for Education for Radio, leaves for Germany at the end of the month as a member of the educational mission which is to draft an instructional-materials program for German schools.

Tyler, a leader in educational radio circles, will have the status of special expert adviser to the United States Military Government on educational matters.

Dr. Harrison B. Summers, formerly public service manager for ABC, and now professor of speech at OSU, has been named director of the 1947 Institute to be held May 2-5 in Columbus.

It is expected that a tentative institute program will be completed before Tyler reports to Germany, Feb. 1. He is expected to return sometime in April.

KDKA's Femme Appointment

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Mrs. Victoria Corey, assistant supervisor of public service programs at KDKA, has been appointed educational director of the Westinghouse station here, succeeding Robert E. White, who was recently made general manager of KYW in Philadelphia.

In addition to her broadcasting work, Mrs. Corey conducts the University of Pittsburgh's class in radio writing.

Voice's Vox Pop

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Frank Sinatra has put the bobby soxers on probation and if they behave at Wednesday's broadcast he'll let them come to his other shows. On his return from the east he ordered the age minimum at 18 and the kids practically picketed him outside the theatre. Smarting under the criticism of columnists and feature writers, he relented and gave them one more chance.

If they whinny and scream while he sings the bars go up again and they will again be excluded from his broadcasts—what few remain before he powders the Old Gold account.

5 Pitt Colleges' Soapbox of Air

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

A program to include five local universities in a college forum kicks off next Tuesday (21) and every week thereafter over WWSW when college students will participate in a University Soapbox of the Air.

Designed to give undergraduates a chance to blow off steam on controversial subjects in the news, forums will be handled on a rotation system, with only one student participating from each school. Two students will be assigned to each side of the problem to be presented by a fifth. Station figures there might be some kickback to school over opinions of its undergrads on a hot potato so the student's affiliation won't be announced.

First two subjects have already been announced, "Will Taft-Ellender Bill solve the housing crisis?" and "Should the steel-workers get a raise?" University Soapbox will be broadcast, 8 to 9 every Tuesday evening, from ballroom of University Club, which will seat 400. Format is to follow generally that of Town Meeting of Air with presentation of both sides of subject, some rebuttal and then questions from audience.

LOTSA WATTAGE IN 'MELODY HOUSE' HOOKUP

Houston, Jan. 14.

Three 50-000-watt stations—KRLD, Dallas, KTRH, Houston, and KABC, San Antonio—are being used by the South Texas Cotton Oil Co. for a new show, "Crustene Melody House."

The special network ties in three powerful outlets located within a radius of 200 miles, believed to be one of the largest concentrations of higher power for such a radio campaign in the South.

Shows air Tuesdays and Thursdays, 11:15 to 11:30 a.m. Deal is handled by Steele advertising agency here.

Coast Musickers Turn Down Council Idea, But Directors Keep Wooing

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Musicians' union here apparently wants no part of its fellows and—perhaps with homeoffice instruction—has refused to ally with now-forming Council of Radio Arts and Crafts. A letter so stating has been received by the shepherding Radio Directors Guild here over the signature of J. K. "Spike" Wallace, Local 47 prexy, who respectfully and gratefully declined.

Rebuff, however, will not be taken lying down. RDG and others eager to set up an all-embracing labor group in radio will make another stab at Local 47, probably asking for particulars—which were not defined in replying letter. The reply stated only that the union was not in agreement with several phases and could not therefore join in with others which had already tentatively approved it and agreed on signing up. Among the latter are the RDG, the Radio Writers Guild, the National Association of Broadcast Engineers and Technicians.

Stand of Local 47 is the same as that assumed by the San Francisco musicians' group, which refused to join. Feeling here is that the attitude is typical of the AFM and its lone wolf game, particularly since tentative constitution, prepared by RDG but submitted to all for revisions and/or recommendations, specifically stated that no privileges, bargaining rights or other infringements on individual activities would be included.

The AFM was lukewarm on the matter from the start, offering only token participation of a representative at the first meeting and failing thereafter to show any interest. The reply was, therefore, it concluded, a foregone conclusion. If the AFM was really interested, it's felt, it would have, as others did, suggested revisions. However, since this was not done it's thought that the AFM was never serious about the alliance.

If the AFM remains adamant in its attitude the others, including the Office Employees International Union, the American Federation of Radio Artists, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Screen Publicists Guild and possible others will go ahead. All now hold copies of the agreement and are studying them before returning them to RDG. Overall program includes mutual discussion of related problems, possible support and tackling of television.

7-Station Ohio Net Airs New 'Phone Show

Cleveland, Jan. 14.

"The Ohio Story" a new 15-minute program sponsored by the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. is being carried from WTAM and relayed to six other stations in this state.

Carried Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at 6:30 p.m., the story features an outstanding yarn of Ohio events, either dealing with history, people or institutions.

Narrator is Robert Waldrop, formerly with "Treasury Salute," and one-time NBC announcer. Producer is Stuart Buchanan, who had served as guest director of "Lux Radio Theatre." "Hollywood Hotel" Scripts are prepared by Frank Seidel of Cleveland. Music is under the direction of WTAM's music director, Walberg Brown, and cast members are from the station staff.

Other Ohio stations carrying the show include WBNS, WSTV, WSPD, WFMJ, and WHIZ. McCann Erickson is the agency.

Crosley Sales Powwow

Cincinnati, Jan. 14.

More than 30 officials and staffers of WLW and WINS, from Cincy, New York, Chicago and Atlanta, will attend the Crosley Broadcasting Corp. annual sales meeting here Jan. 17-19, with James D. Shouse, president, in the chair. Only guest speaker will be Frank Haas, representative of "American Homes."

In the absence of Harry Mason Smith, veepee in charge of sales, who is undergoing treatment in Chicago for a circulatory ailment, visitors will be welcomed by Neal Smith, assistant sales manager.

REGARDING MR. BIEVER

By IRVING SPIEGEL

Curtis Biever's all motivating occupation these days is creating music for CBS's "American Portrait"—a program every Saturday night (6:15), devoted to the ideals and deeds of the nation's historical figures who molded American democracy.

It is a chore which Biever particularly relishes and rightfully so.

The "American Portrait program," he said, "is a fine musical challenge. This nation is rich with its illustrious pioneers and achievements, and the incidental music must at all times blend with these narratives —music that is light, serious, dramatic and jocular."

He might have mentioned that the guiding fathers of the program are more than satisfied with the Biever creations.

CIRCLING THE KILOCYCLES

Denver—"Mile High Farmer" program, KOA sustainer for two and a half years, has been taken on by Sears Roebuck & Co., on a year's contract. KOA Agricultural Director Hal Reno'diet conducts the program six days a week at 6-6:30 a.m

Topeka—Joe Farrell is new announcer for WIBW-FM, the new Arthur Capper FM outlet here. Ferrel took a long vacation after his recent discharge from the Army at Ft. Benning, Ga., before joining up at WIBW. He had earlier been with WEW, St. Louis, WSPA and WORD, Spartanburg, S. C.

Kansas City—Dave Bain, head of the broadcast equipment division for RCA, has moved his headquarters here from Chi. Bain handles territory including Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska and section of Illinois.

Miami—FCC this week granted license to Biscayne Broadcasting Co., newly organized Miami outfit, to operate on an f00 kilocycle, one kilowatt powered band in this area. New outlet will broadcast on a sunrise to sunset schedule.

Houston—"Design for Grand Living," a listener participation show, will tee off here from KXYZ and be aired for a quarter-hour each Monday, Wednesday and Friday over stations of the Lone Star Chain. Programs will be sponsored by the Gulf Brewing Co.

RADIO O.O. SERIES DOWN FOR 8 WEEKS

Success of the "Radio and You" lecture series at Town Hall, N. Y. this fall, has prompted expansion of the course for the new eight-week series starting tonight (15). Course titled "Behind The Scenes Of Radio," and running one and one-half hours, will include a well-known half-hour show as done on the air, with audience then discussing show. Producer, writer and actors on show, as well as a representative of the agency or sponsor, will be grilled by audience on any topic pertaining to the show or to radio in general.

Bob Hawk's quiz show will open series tonight, with "20 Questions" following next week (22). Jinx Falkenburg and Tex McCrary will follow Jan. 29; "Juvenile Jury," Feb. 5, and House Jameson, Milo Boulton, Charles Collingwood and others on subsequent sessions. Director of the course is Gretta Baker, scripter and lecturer on radio at N. Y. U.

the way they often are—and the woman listener shown dramatically how to cope with children's problems. Let the husband be occasionally a drunk, a ne'er-do-well or a guy who roams—and the drama help solve those problems. In other words, let's bring the serials back to the type of realism they had during the war.

"I hope radio will be able to put more, real cultural and educational programs—without those horrible tags."

A hint of some of the programs mulled by Mrs. Thackrey was seen in her recent FCC presentation for hiked power and nighttime operation. There, while much of the hoped-for night programming for WLIB showed little that was new, some fresh ideas were noted. There was emphasis on radio drama experimentation through two projected shows, and some special plans for shows aimed at young people of high school and college level.

But Mrs. Thackrey was frank in saying that those shows will not go on unless the station gets its nighttime permit.

When Mrs. T. gets going, Indie people feel, she may give some real opposition in the N.Y. market.

ST. LOUIS THREATENS STRIKE AS KMOX BALKS

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

Should KMOX, local CBS outlet, continue to refuse to sign a new contract, members of AFRA will call a strike. A vote of 54-14 to use this means to obtain the new contract was voted Sunday (12) at a meeting called by Sterling Harkins, president of the local.

KMOX's contract with the union expires Jan. 31. The chief demand is the fixing of a $90 a week minimum to replace the present $55, and standard fees for all newscasts, instead of merely for those made out of schedule, as provided in the present contract. New contracts between the union and stations KWK, KSD and KXOK will begin within the next 60 days, Harkins stated.

FMA

ized. "Let's not use FM's high-fidelity just to sell soap," he said. Denny said FCC stood pat on its allocation of the 88-108mc band to FM.

Hofheinz pointed to FCC's long-time support of FM, and pledged the new organization to "cooperate" with the commission all up and down the line. He pointed to a half-dozen FM stations that have been in the black since they first went on the air, and urged members to follow their example in promoting FM as a "better mousetrap."

"Despite the 15 times as many FM receivers delivered each month, and all the other advantages FM enjoys over television, advertisers are scrambling to get into television and overlooking FM altogether," Hugh Lavery, of McCann-Erickson agency, told the audience. Urging promotion all along the way, Lavery said agencies definitely need to be sold on fact that choice time available on FM represents better advertising investments than marginal time on weak AM outlets. Some "FM stations jumping with jive for the bobby-sox brigade" were urged by Lavery who said too often FM has become associated in the minds of time-buyers with long-hair music.

Five Advantages

Lavery listed five advantages of FM over AM for advertisers: Better time to sell, less competition, audience-quality of higher income and culture levels; FM can be used to test new types of advertising and its technical advantages can be used to experiment with new program techniques. He urged local promotion of FM with dealers, agencies and the public, and warned FM broadcasters to set fair ad rates and to stick to them. Above all, he said, FM'ers should not dissipate their efforts by competitive selling.

Other specific promotion schemes were headlined by Preston Pumphrey, of Maxon agency. Pumphrey said that, without good promotion, a lot of FM broadcasters would go broke before they were on the air a year.

Armstrong declared that FM is a potential $100,000,000 a year business, but warned against production of inferior receivers which rob FM of its high-fidelity and harm it with the public. W. R. David, of General Electric, and Ray Manson, president of Stromberg-Carlson, estimated that between 150,000-180,000 sets were turned out in 1946, a little over 1% of the total set production. Between 2,000,000 and 4,500,000 FM units—around 30% of the total—will be produced in 1947, they estimated.

RMA will plug FM heavily in its "Radio-in-every-room" drive, Edward Taylor, sales manager of Zenith Radio Corp., told FMA. He said 20,000,000 prewar sets were in need of replacement, and bulk of these would be AM-FM sets.

Directors of FMA were elected at conclusion of the sessions. They are: C. M. Jansky, Jr.; W. R. David, General Electric; Hofheinz; Dillard; Leonard Asch, WBZA, Schenectady; R. F. Kohn, WFMZ, Allentown; Frank Gunther; Gordon Gray, WMIT, Winston-Salem; Ira Hirschmann, WABF, New York; Wayne Coy, WINX-FM, Washington; and E. J. Hodel, WCFC, Beckley. An executive committee for liaison with FCC is yet to be named.

Denver—Francis A. Nelson, who has carried a commercial license since 1912, and was an operator with Marconi Wireless, is retiring after 22 years with KOA. Nelson helped install the initial KOA station and transmitter in 1924 and has since been with the station as transmitter engineer.

Heller Status on AFRA Agenda

getting under the new codes. In Hollywood, last week, 14 CBS sound effects men took a vote on whether to withdraw from AFRA and join, instead, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The vote was 10-4 in favor of IBEW.

That move is expected to spread to other sound men in the principal production centers. There was a feeling among some AFRA people that the thing to do is go through the motions of challenging IBEW's jurisdiction over these men, but that it might be best to let them go. The sound men griped over AFRA's failure to wipe out their wage differentials, which make them low-paid by comparison with other AFRA members.

One other bit of trouble faced by the nets as well as AFRA concerns the labor-management committee in which the NAB was supposed to join. The NAB board's refusal to sanction such a committee, at its San Francisco meeting, last week, doesn't bother AFRA. It was the nets, at the negotiations, who had insisted on such a committee. But the NAB failure to go along is just another indication, it's said, of the general idea that's got around—that AFRA bluffed in the first place when it talked the strike sword.

It's that kind of policy—threatening strike, building the idea of strike among the members, and getting them steamed up merely as a tactic, without intending to go through with it—that bothers some national board members of AFRA. They feel that AFRA had, perhaps with good intentions on the part of leaders, given itself as a union that blusters, instead of one that speaks softly but uses its fist when it really means to fight.

At least two members of the national board are ready to toss these queries at Heller, as soon as the contracts are signed. These, and others, want to remind him also that a year ago he promised to decide whether he wants to be national chief or New York head—but that he agreed he can't carry both burdens.

The AFRA national board met in N. Y. last night (Tuesday), but none of those inner union matters was scheduled, the feeling being that pending the code problems, and perhaps sanctioning local Hollywood chapter action against KFI, must take precedence.

RWG Tackles NBC

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Radio Writers Guild will meet with NBC biggies on new wage demands for news room staff on or immediately after Jan. 20, depending on return and availability of Sam Moore, national president and local resident, who will be on negotiating committee.

Guild board met with writers concerned last week to determine terms to be asked of the net, which has agreed to negotiate, according to permitting clause in the existing two-year contract.

ABC

tentialities of the web's future stake in video. But there's talk that ABC may pull out of television in the coming year.

That Stock Issue

Similarly, some are asking what about that stock issue ABC was preparing to float last year and which has yet to come off, but with no immediate signs of action? Again the web execs say they're waiting to see what the market does.

Within the web itself, there's a consciousness of the general tightening up condition, with some stirrings of uneasiness and anxiety. Business-wise, the network more than held its own last year over '46, with a slight increase in billings.

However, there appears to be some speculation as to what the switchover of the 50,000-watt WWVA in Wheeling from ABC back to CBS will do to important network accounts that put great store in the vital Pittsburgh-W. Va. steel-coal market. Noble, for one, kicked up quite a fuss over the web losing the powerful outlet.

The network's elimination of web feeds in the east from midnight to 1 a.m., beginning Sunday (12), and the cut of eastern-originated net feeds between 6 and 7 p.m. effected a week earlier (6) are other steps described by some as economy measures. In each case, net execs have explanations. They say that only six or seven stations were taking net shows anyway between 6-7 p.m. in the zone, while Central Division and Mountain-Pacific affiliates were devoting that hour to kid show repeats. As for the midnight-1 a.m. curtailment, the blame is laid on the claim that nitery and hotel spots won't share in the cost of remotes, due to bad business and the break-up of some prominent bands.

Nevertheless, when all the cuts, curtailments, resignations and shifts are added up, the feeling is that the ABC is currently playing its economic cards very close to the cuff.

Catholic School Forum Set by WWSW in Pitt.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

In an effort to describe the philosophy and methods of teaching in the Catholic schools and their relation to the public schools—principally to acquaint non-Catholics with the subjects—WWSW has set a series of weekly broadcasts by Rev. Thomas J. Quigley, superintendent of Catholic schools here.

Quarter-hour airers every Thursday evening at 8:15 have been scheduled for balance of school year.

CBS-RCA Color Squabble in Plain Talk Stage As Murphy Hits Rival

CBS television veepee Adrian Murphy, challenging directly RCA claims that the latter's recently-unveiled all-electronic color method offered a solution to the teletint controversy, pointed out last week that RCA's simultaneous system would make even the lowest-priced set a three-tube projection model. Pointing to the high cost of black and white projection sets, Murphy predicted that any set incorporating the RCA system would be comparable in price to a Cadillac in the automobile price scale.

Prepping for the resumption in N. Y., Jan. 27, of FCC hearings on Fight Just Begun

Washington, Jan. 14.

RCA and DuMont are marshaling for a fight-to-the-finish with CBS on the question of color versus black-and-white television now, according to reports reaching Washington.

FCC's decision to incorporate an actual CBS color demonstration into the hearing record on television is rumored behind the new do-or-die attitude.

Meanwhile the commission announced that it will resume its hearing on a CBS request to commercialize color tele Jan. 27 in New York, where Columbia will conduct a demonstration for the record. Hearing will continue Jan. 28 in N. Y., where DuMont may put on a show and switch to RCA-Princeton, Jan. 29 for another demonstration. Final days of testimony will then be resumed Feb. 10 in Washington, with CBS director of research Peter Goldmark, RCA and DuMont witnesses on the stand.

CBS' request for the immediate establishment of commercial standards on its sequential system of color video, Murphy declared that the mass market in tele receivers lay in medium-size tube sets and small table models, not in large-screen projection sets. Small and medium-sized sets would not be possible under the RCA method, he claimed, whereas CBS' sequential system would allow the manufacture of a direct-view set ranging in price only about $50-$100 higher than the present black and white sets of comparable tube size.

Murphy also took issue with RCA claims that the latter's set converter had punctured CBS' biggest talking point for color now—that all sets manufactured now for low frequency black and white reception would become obsolete when the FCC ultimately moves to the ultra-high frequencies. Combination low-and-UHF set devised by CBS can be built for only slightly less than the straight color set, he declared. In addition, he said, the combo set is even better than RCA's converter, since it picks up all three colors for conversion to low frequency monochrome, giving a truer picture than RCA's converter, which picks up only the green from a color camera.

If the FCC comes through with the CBS request, Murphy said, the web will start limited commercial transmission in color immediately. CBS plans to convert as rapidly as possible and will have a "substantial amount" of programming in color within a year.

Rates to sponsors will not necessarily increase for color transmission, he declared, adding that color may even lower programming costs. As an illustration, he cited the recent CBS live color demonstration in which only one camera was used to televise a singer during the entire three minutes of her song. Fact that audience interest was held to a high pitch without any of the cutting and trick camera effects necessary in black and white indicates, he said, that programmers may be able to operate with less studio equipment when they begin working in color, which would materially lower their operating costs.

OMAHA VIEWS VIDEO, BUT WANTS COLOR TOO

Omaha, Jan. 14.

First practical demonstration of television ever given in this area was disclosed last Friday night (10) at Creighton Univ. auditorium under sponsorship of the university's radio-television department - and WOW (NBC).

Lyle DeMoss of WOW was present in the capacity of lecturer. There were four home sets placed in front of the audience. Subject televised was the Creighton - Wichita basketball game, played in the gymnasium a block away. The game was received by co-axial cable. Images came in clearly.

The audience asked many questions. Chief matters of public concern were: "Is television coming soon?" "Will there be color?" and "Will there be an announcer?" An audience check revealed that it wanted television soon, wanted color, and liked the idea of an announcer in addition to the televised subject.

University and WOW officials called the test a success. Station will ultimately go into television.

WNBT Preeming New Emlyn Williams Play

Television becomes the medium for a legit play tryout for the second time next Sunday (19) when the latest Emlyn Williams drama, "Thinking Aloud," preems over WNBT, N. Y. NBC outlet. Williams, who also wrote "Night Must Fall" and "The Corn Is Green," has never presented this one-acter to a civilian audience before, although he acted it himself in England for service audiences during the war.

First legit preem on video was "Mr. Mergenthwirker's Lobblies," which played to an audience that included several motion picture and stage execs, and was finally purchased by S. Sylvan Simon for Hollywood production for his Radio Cinema Theatres Corp. "Mergenthwirker" was sponsored by the Dramatist's Guild for producers to audition the show.

Washington — Contract has been let by Bamberger Broadcasting Co. for construction of a foundation and tower base for its new television station to be ereeted here. The work will start shortly at the site in the northwest section of the city, one of the highest locations in Washington. Station's call letters will be WWBR.

Par Goes All Out For Tele in One Big Swoop

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Paramount Pictures is now—but definitely—in the television business. It's wholly-owned subsidiary, Television Productions, Inc., operating W6XYZ—and soon to be KTLA—was commercially licensed Jan. 9, marking the first commercial tele station in the West. Klaus Landsberg, director of Teleprod, was simultaneously handed a new five-year contract, while a request was made for FCC-release of the desired call letters.

The day was a veritable windfall for Par. It included the receipt also of two more Image Orthicon cameras from Radio Corp. of America, giving it a total of four I. O.'s, plus eight others, making for a total of 12, which is believed to be a national high.

Immediately taken preparations was to set up a fitting kickoff program with which to celebrate the event. The giant show, not necessarily a commercial, will undoubtedly include many of Par's top film names. And there are a group of sponsors reportedly waiting now to sign up to establish themselves locally as with National Broadcasting Co.'s and others in New York seeking institutional prestige rather than immediate return.

ABC Tele Off As FCC Fiddles

ABC television, following through on the plans of Adrian Samish, recently-appointed video veepee, to concentrate its budget in 1947 on construction instead of programming, has decided to go off the air in N. Y. until such time as it is able to transmit over its own station. Production last Thursday (9) night of "Melody Bar Ranch" over WABD (DuMont), the web's N. Y. outlet, consequently, represented the last ABC show in Manhattan for at least the next six months.

With the FCC still holding back on announcing station application grants for N. Y., ABC for the last year has been producing shows over WABD, buying time on the DuMont outlet at the rate of $625 per half-hour. DuMont execs last week announced a month's shutdown of WABD operations, beginning Jan. 27, to permit the installation of a new and more powerful transmitter. That gave ABC an opportunity to close its contract. Possibility exists that ABC may still produce one or two public relations films over the station, but there will be no more live programming, according to Paul B. Mowrey, the web's national tele director.

Mowrey expressed confidence that the FCC would come through with the N. Y. grants in the near future, and that ABC would be among the sanctioned applicants, adding he hoped to have ABC's own N. Y. station in operation by June 1. Web, meanwhile, will conduct closed circuit experiments with its two new Image Orthicon cameras, which were delivered last week by RCA. I.O.'s will be used for a variety of remote pickups so that ABC directors, so far unaccustomed to doing remotes, will know how to handle the cameras when they get on the air again.

Until it has its own stations in operation, ABC will also continue live programming over its other outlets on which it currently buys time, including WPTZ (Philco, Philadelphia), WRGB (General Electric, Schenectady) and WBKB (Balaban & Katz, Chicago). FCC last week awarded ABC its station grant in San Francisco, meaning the web is now set to build there—Los Angeles, Chi and Detroit—with N. Y., which will undoubtedly become the flagship in the five-station network, the only one still in doubt.

12 Calif. Permits Now, 49 Authorized in U.S.

Washington, Jan. 14.

California won its 12th television station last week when FCC awarded building permits to ABC in San Francisco, and E. F. Peffer, licensee of KGDM for Stockton.

The grant in Frisco gave ABC its fourth television permit, since the net was recently licensed in L. A. and has franchises for Detroit and Chicago. ABC was given the No. 7 channel in Frisco, and Peffer will use the No. 8 position in Stockton.

The grants brought to 49 the number of video stations authorized for commercial operation throughout the U. S.

SPOSA, EMORY UPPED IN WABD RESHUFFLE

Louis A. Sposa, former program operations manager of WABD (DuMont, N. Y.), has been named director of the station's commercial operations. Sposa, in his new post, will consult with ad agency representatives on all phases of tele programming.

Bob Emery succeeds Sposa as program department chief, with a new department established over which he will rule.

Non-B'casters. Into TBA As 'Advisors'

Special exec committee of Television Broadcasters Assn. affiliate members, designed to act as an advisory body to the TBA board on problems of the affiliates, was established at the annual TBA membership meet last week. Affiliates comprise those TBA members who are in any business allied with television but are not actual broadcasters. New committee is headed by Ernest Marx, DuMont teleset sales chief.

First problem to be taken into consideration by the committee is that of apartment house installation. Committee members plan to study methods of acquainting realty men with installation problems in light of new apartment house building, as well as to devise means of overcoming the antagonism of many apartment house landlords against installation of tele sets. Committee will also study the talent situation, ad agencies and television, and all manufacturing problems.

J. R. Poppele was reelected TBA prexy at the meeting, with G. Emerson Markham, station manager of WRGB (General Electric, Schenectady), as veepee, suceeding F. J. Bingley of Philco. Will Baltin was re-elected secretary-treasurer, and Paul Raibourn assistant secretary-treasurer. New directors elected at the meet for a three-year term include Raibourn, John F. Royal, NBC exec veepee over television, and Frank P. Schreiber, general manager of WGN (Mutual, Chicago).

TBA membership approved the suggestion of Poppele to set up a special committee to devise a code of standards for video programming. Poppele is expected to announce the names of members of the policy-forming committee within the next week.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

The newly formed Academy of Television Arts and Sciences held its first formal meeting here Jan. 7, kicking off with a highly representative group which installed Edgar Bergen as first president for a term of six months. The conclave was highlighted by the serio-comic address-performances of prexy Bergen, the paper read by Gayle Gitterman, "Talent Looks at Television," and the summation talk of Patrick M. Cunning, Bergen's indie studio associate, which followed a night's discussion and pitch for greater cooperation for the mutual benefit of the medium and all in the industry here.

Gist of the talks was that the existing spirit of non-cooperation, jealousies and outright enmities be dropped and replaced by a greater general will for mutual aid and discussion, with each operator learning from the other and thus helping develop the baby industry into a healthily competitive, instead of poisonously conflicting and contradictory, field. Remainder was a question and answer session in which film industry reps, cartoonists, radioites and prospective televisors, educators, technicians, ad agency and folk from virtually every branch of show biz—to the tune of approximately 90 attendees—participated.

Bergen was elected by virtue of unanimous and unopposed nomination. Others nominated, and who will be voted upon at the next meeting, Feb. 4, were: First v.-p., Ronald Oxford, NBC; Patrick Cunning, Charles Brown, KFI; and Earl Ebi, NBC; second v.-p., Mark Finley, Don Lee; R. A. Monfort, Times-Mirror Co.; Syd Cassyd, Film World; Arthur Babbitt, Screen Cartoonists Guild; Gayle Gitterman, Metro, and S. R. Rabinoff, American Television Laboratories; secretary, Marcia Drake, Bergen-Cunning; recording secretary, James Vandeveer, KFI, and O. A. Ingstrom, Glendale Schools; treasurer, J. Clinton Stanley, Teleways, Inc.; Joseph Burke, Film Research; Harmon Stevens, Modern Arts Theatres, and R. A. Monfort, T-M; corresponding secretary, Don McNamara, Telefilms, Inc.

ARA Threat of Suit Induces RCA To Withdraw Phil Harris Diskings

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

RCA-Victor has been warned by the receivers for the bankrupt ARA record company that if it continues to market recordings by Phil Harris of the tunes, "Darktown Poker Club" "That's What I Like About the South" that legal action will result. ARA bases its threat on the theory that it has prior right to the recording of these two tunes, both of which were made by Harris for ARA some time ago, and apparently feels that Victor's sale of them will in some way interfere with whatever recordings of them the receivers have on hand for sale as part of ARA's assets.

Terms of Harris' invalid contract with ARA stipulated that he could not make the same tunes for another company within a certain period of time, as some companies, including Victor, insert in their contracts. This is what caused Victor to immediately stem production on the disks on receipt of ARA's advice of action. Attorneys for ARA do not know, they say, what direction this will take, whether it will sue for profits Victor earned on the disks or a injunction against further production.

Meanwhile, the American Federation of Musicians may be dragged into the case and if it is things may pop. Harris worked for ARA under a clause that everything between them is subject to union regulations. Before signing Harris, Victor queried Petrillo and assertedly was told that he could do anything for that label. Which Victor assumed to mean also items he previously made for ARA. Whether the union's interest in the case through that clause will stand up in a court fight is problematical.

Both Victor and Harris, incidentally, feel that ARA's move is nothing more than an attempt to harass (a) Harris into making a deal on the $35,000 or so he's owed in royalties by ARA, or (b) his purchase of 15 unreleased masters by him listed among the company's assets, or (c) Victor's purchase of these masters. Harris had offered the receivers $1,000 for them. Victor was also offered them, but turned down a deal.

Meanwhile, disposal of ARA assets and settling up with creditors continues. Trustee has paid off the Union Bank and Trust Co., which held a lien of some $60,000 against shellac supplies on hand. Some $50,000 has been paid off on tax liabilities.

Ted Garden has resigned as theatre booker for the Lawrence Golden office to join in the production of legit shows with Jerry Cargill.

Memphis Maestro Barely Misses Death in Accident

Memphis, Jan. 14.

Johnny Long, a local danceband leader, not the name maestro, had a narrow escape from death by freezing last week in a boating accident that killed a companion, W. C. Criswell, of Yazoo City, Miss.

Long, Criswell and Colin Anderson, also of Mississippi, were duck-hunting in Mississippi when their boat struck a snag, overturned and sank. They swam to "shore" in the chilly waters, but "shore" turned out to be covered with sub-zero backwater waistdeep in the thick underbrush.

For 30 hours, Long clung to a log, while Anderson tried to make his way out of the swampland in search of help. Sometime during the night Criswell slipped off the log and drowned while Long, too stiff to move, was helpless to save him. Fay Anderson, brother of Colin and a former Memphis band musician, flew over the scene in search of the missing party early next morning, spotted his brother exhausted and nearly frozen some distance from Long. Rescue parties finally got the two out and into the Yazoo City hospital. Doctors first thought Long's feet would have to be amputated, but he began to recover quickly and is back in front of his band here this week.

Long was formerly leader of the WMC staff orchestra and his band has been featured at Club Clearpool, Rainbow Lake and other suburban spots here.

CAMARATA'S UNIQUE FREELANCE SETUP

Tuttie Camarata, who before going to England last year to score J. Arthur Rank's "London Town" film, was a recording director for Decca, is now a freelance director, working under terms that make him perhaps unique in the field. He'll hook up for individual disk dates with any company meeting his demands, from $1,000 a session up, with the disker paying musician's salaries and guaranteeing his name on each finished disk.

Camarata has handled dates for various indie manufacturers in recent weeks under similar terms. His ability as an arranger, conductor, etc., is invaluable to these indies since too often there is no one connected with them who has the required experience.

Nyaa, Nyaa You Can't Catch Me

John LaTouche is still playing here and hounds with Ted Fetter's lawyers, as the latter obtained another court extension to serve notice of legal action on LaTouche on a suit filed by them in 1943.

Legal tiff arose over tune, "Taking a Chance on Love," composed by Fetter and LaTouche for the Metro film, "Cabin in the Sky." Song was originally published by Miller Music, then assigned to Leo Feist. Fetter is charging Loew's, Feist, Miller and LaTouche with a conspiracy to defraud him and destroy his quarter interest in the song. Included in the charges against Loew's is failure to give Fetter screen credit for use of "Taking a Chance" in another production, "I Dood It." He's asking $87,500 damages.

Chase to serve LaTouche began in July, 1944, and was then suspended by court consent while LaTouche was in the service. Following his discharge, lawyers started after the composer and playwright again, and as of last week had yet to catch him with a summons. Friday (10) Federal Judge Simon Rifkin granted a further extension for service.

$6,000,000 SUIT VS. SOUTHERN DISMISSED

Perry Bradford $6,000,000 suit against Southern Music was tossed out yesterday (Tuesday) by Supreme Court Judge Kenneth O'Brien, after four days' trial. ASCAP, originally included in the action, was cleared Friday (10).

Bradford claimed that 39 songs he wrote and gave to Southern as collateral for a $100 loan were converted and that he was squeezed out of the profits by both ASCAP and Southern. When ASCAP showed that none of the tunes was ever given public performance, suit against it was dismissed.

Yesterday Southern's attorneys stated that the songs were worthless, and that Southern had never received any income or enhancement of prestige from owning rights to them for five years. They showed evidence that the pub had offered to return the tunes for repayment of the $100 plus interest.

Suit had already been dismissed once for failure to prosecute, but was reinstated at the behest of Bradford's attorneys.

Gaillard Trio Canned By Florentine Gardens

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Slim Gaillard Trio summarily was fired off the show at Florentine Gardens last week after Gaillard repeatedly had shown up late for performances. William Morris agency, which spotted turn into nitery at $1,500 per week, did not challenge dismissal. Act had two weeks to go on a month's booking.

Almost immediately after being cancelled out, act broke up and Gaillard will try doing a single, under Morris' aegis. Tiny Brown, who played bass in threesome, has formed own trio, and was booked by General Artists Corp. into Bonanza Club, Reno.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By George Frazier

If Frank Sinatra has made the top, he's made it the hard way. His magnificent rendition of "Soliloquy" from "Carousel" (two 12 in. Columbia faces) represents, above all else, a notable triumph over adverse criticism. No performer (and we are not unmindful of Rudy Vallee) has ever had a press as vituperative as Sinatra's. Practically from the start it has been fashionable to ridicule him. On occasion the ridicule turned to sheer viciousness.

Everything considered, it is almost miraculous that Sinatra has prospered in the face of such snideness. There were some favorable opinions, of course, but they were conspicuously in the minority. The general feeling was that Sinatra was a passing fancy. We know now how much in error it was.

Obviously, Sinatra is a fine singer—certainly one of the best male vocalists around at the moment when you view him from all angles—showmanship, selection of material, etc. That, though, seems relatively unimportant to us. What is is that he had the ability and the guts to mature when the press was sniping at him from all sides.

One magazine in particular took vast delight in viewing Sinatra with alarm. There was, for example, a story written by a staffer who likes to think of himself as a member of the eye-witness school of reporting. It was a seathing account of a Sinatra performance at Lewisohn Stadium—which the staffer did not attend. One day, at one of this same magazine's editorial luncheons the big boss frowned when one of his little men mentioned Sinatra's name. Within a few moments he had conceived a brilliant idea. The mag would assign John Dewey or some other prominent philosopher to write an article about Sinatra's degenerate influence on the youth of America. (The piece, as far as we know, never came off.) Not so very long ago, Sinatra delivered a speech on equality to the pupils at a mid-Western high school where there had been racial tension. This same sheet covered the story from an angle designed to make Sinatra look like a fool. It was a disgraceful example of journalism, but it served only to make Sinatra a bigger man.

Sinatra's recording of "Soliloquy" is the performance of a great guy rather than a great singer. It is one of the most exciting disks ever released. "Soliloquy," in case you may not have seen "Carousel," is the speculation of a man who is about to become a father. He wonders what his child will be like. As a piece of writing, there is little in the repertoire of the musical stage to compare with Oscar Hammerstein II's lyric. It is magnificent, but in the mouth of an inept singer it might sound maudlin. Anyone who would sing the words convincingly must have a special talent. Sinatra has that talent. There are unquestionably faults to be found with his performance, but they are technical matters. Important is his interpretation. He is young, tough, indignant, and proud. If he lacks power in certain spots, he more than makes up for it with sincerity. Sinatra is, in a word, terrific. This is a Columbia Masterworks recording—which is part of what we meant when we said that Sinatra made it the hard way. This year may produce a better disk than this one, but we would not count on it. It's obviously a must for jocks and home-spinners. (Its format precludes its use on jukes, of course.)

Of the slight number of disks released this week there are at least a few that shape up as money-makers. Xavier Cugat's vast audience, for example, will like two one-steps—"Tourades En Madrid" and "Morena"—which make up his latest Columbia. They are both played with Cugat's customary swirl. La Valiente does a pleasant vocal on "Morena," which sounds like the hit side. As is always the case with Latin-American stuff, these faces will have limited Wurlitzer appeal. They are fine bets, however, for the pancake turners as well as anyone who fancies the paso doble.

Two sentimental ballads—"My Number One Dream Came True" and "You Should Have Told Me"—are provided with appropriately languorous interpretations by Les Brown and his band on Columbia. Doris Day, who, incidentally, improves with every new release (she's no longer with Brown), sings on both faces. The coin machines will go for this disk, especially "You Should Have Told Me."

You will be hearing a lot of Dinah Shore's "Sooner Or Later" (Columbia) on the nickelodeons. The tune is a hit and Miss Shore does it with all her commercial flair. Morris Stoloff's orchestra backs her up nicely. Coupling, which will do all right too, is "And So to Bed" (which Miss Shore is using as a sign-off theme for her radio show.) It should hardly be necessary to add that the jockeys will give a big play to both sides.

Benny Goodman's "Man Here Plays Fine Piano" and "Hora Staccato" (Columbia) are two of the most effective things he's done in a long time, but their appeal is probably limited. "Man," a tune by Joe Bushkin and Johnny DeVries, is largely a showcase for Bushkin's keyboard work. It comes under the hot classification and, as such, will not be heard too much on the jukes. "Hora Staccato" is a virtuosic performance by Goodman. His fans will love it, but here again, it is probably too specialized to become a prodigious seller. Both sides, by the way, provide jocks with what should be a welcome change of pace.

Cactus combos are still waxing "Divorce Me C.O.D.," which promises to be one of the big hillbilly wows. The newest version is on Columbia by Johnny Bond and His Red River Valley Boys. It's a cinch for the bucolic boxes. Coupling, "Rainbow at Midnight," is pretty conventional. Jocks, by the way, are inclined to overlook hillbilly items. We think this is often a mistake. "Divorce Me C.O.D.," for example, should have a wide appeal. We recommend it.

Louis Armstrong's "Do You Know What It Means to Miss New Orleans?" and "Eddie" (Victor) are simply not in a class with the memorable Armstrong faces. Both tunes are from "New Orleans," Louis' forthcoming movie and neither is very distinguished. The chief interest lies in Armstrong's singing, which remains almost as marvelous as it was in the old days. If this disk sells, it will undoubtedly be in race locations.

Suggested Program

"Little Brown Jug"—Glen Miller (Bluebird).
"Stardust"—Edgar Hayes (Decca).
"Cocktails for Two"—Spike Jones (Victor).
"Sweethearts On Parade" — Louis Armstrong (Okeh).
"If I Didn't Care"—The Ink Spots (Decca).
"Soliloquy — Frank Sinatra (Columbia).

Best Bets

Hot—"Man Here Plays Fine Piano" (Benny Goodman).
Hillbilly—"Divorce Me C.O.D." (Johnny Bond).
Ballad — "Sooner Or Later" (Dinah Shore) and "You Should Have Told Me" (Les Brown).
Latin - American — "Morena" (Xavier Cugat).
Dance — "My Number One Dream Came True" (Les Brown).
Special — "Soliloquy" (Frank Sinatra).

SCALE JUMP ACTION SLAPPED ON FOSTER

Effects of the scale jump musicians who are members of New York local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians got in Sept., 1945, retroactive to Feb., '44, are still being felt by maestros as well as 802, which still hasn't caught up with tooters who have coin coming. There have been innumerable actions against name leaders for extra coin on the basis of the delayed boost, the latest being against Chuck Foster for a run at the New Yorker hotel during the summer of 1944.

However, his man, confused a bit by the quick changes in scale rates, applied for extra coin on the basis of the current scale, raised again last summer, instead of the previous rate. This took a bit of straightening out before his claim became valid. Jerry Wald and Leo Reisman are also the object of similar suits.

BAND BIZ RECONSTRUCTION ERA

Delayed Royalty Payments From Indie Diskers Irk Major Music Pubs

Many major music publishers in New York, who have been rolling with the failure of some indie disk manufacturers to pay mechanical royalties on time, appear to be getting a bit impatient with the delayed payments. Last week, Leeds Music, for one, went after some 23 independents with registered letters concerning monies due and others have been developing ideas of examining indie books via commissioned accountants. It seems some of the pubs feel that their leniency on royalties due has been taken advantage of by some diskers and they don't intend to allow it to go too far.

Since last fall, most of the latter-looking indies such as Majestic, Mercury, Cosmo, et al., have been discharging publisher royalty indebtedness piece-meal, fighting to clean up one quarter in this way before another quarter payment came due. And, according to Harry Fox, agent and trustee for virtually all publishers in such matters, they have been doing a good job. Apparently, some publishers do not agree.

Reason the majority of pubs originally agreed to accept delayed royalty statements from various indies was based on thoughts that their action might result in some of the beleaguered companies fighting their way through to solid ground, which in the end could only benefit the music business as a whole. They did the same thing with Decca in the latter's early days and have never regretted their action.

Nick Wells Vamps As Cosmo Prexy; Firm Reorganizes

Cosmo Records underwent another executive personnel shakeup last week, which pushed Nick Wells out of the presidency only a few weeks after he assumed the position. As of the moment the spot is vacant, pending open until a reorganization of the firm is completed. At the same time there have been rumors of another coin transfusion into the label, which has had more rough going the past few months than a derailed locomotive, involving some $800,000. It's neither confirmed nor denied by Cosmo, but it's well known that it would require a sum similar to that to put the company into anything resembling a sound financial condition.

Wells' exit from Cosmo is more surprising in view of the fact that he's a brother-in-law of Rubin Uslander, currently in control of the firm by reason of the amount of coin he poured into it during the reign of Harry Banks, founder and prez of the firm until last month, when he left to set up his own Cardinal Records in N. Y. Wells' heave-ho was accomplished while he himself was away in Florida on vacation.

Meanwhile, it seems Cosmo has been stripped of two of its band properties. Tony Pastor's contract was up last week and he's negotiating with Mercury Records; Hal McIntyre is dickering with the new M-G-M Records.

LUCILLE BALL DROPS SUIT AGAINST VICTOR

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Following conferences with Eli Oberstein, when the RCA-Victor veepee was on Coast recently, Lucille Ball has agreed quietly to drop the $100,000 suit she last month filed in Superior Court here in favor of plattery to cease circulating a recording of "Carnival in Rio," on which she vocalized afront band of her husband, Desi Arnaz. Victor will continue to produce the disk.

In her original complaint, Lucille Ball stated that she had made the waxing as a gag and with clear understanding that it would not be released for public consumption.

Dick Gabbe to Romm Agcy.

Dick Gabbe, former manager of Jimmy Dorsey and currently handler of Jerry Wald's orchestra, joins Harry Romm's agency in New York, Monday (20). Gabbe is currently on his way in from the Coast, where he has been for the past year or more. After leaving Dorsey, he took over management of the Dorsey's Casino Gardens, Ocean Park, subsequently leaving that spot to handle Wald.

Whether in joining Romm as the latter's assistant Gabbe will give up all other connections, isn't known.

M-G Disk Plant Begins Rolling

Pressing plant which will turn out disks for the new M-G label, Metro subsid, went into action at Bloomfield, N. J., during the past week, with 12 girls operating pressing machines. However, though the factory has already begun turning out platters none of its output will see the light of circulation until at least March 1. Purpose is to create a backlog large enough by that date to make a national impression on dealers' counters.

Meanwhile, the new company's recording plans are going into full swing. Jimmy Dorsey makes his first disks this Friday (17) in New York and will be followed immediately by Blue Barron, who's also doing his initial session. Raymond Scott is due soon, too, along with vocalist Helen Forrest. Other bands signed to Metro, those of Ziggy Elman, Sy Oliver and Buddy Weed, have already turned in their initial sessions.

While it seems to have a considerable amount of talent already on hand, between the bands and singers not connected to Metro film contracts, and those that are, the company is going ahead after talent. Negotiations have been going on during the past week for Hal McIntyre's orchestra.

Kate Smith cuts her first sides for M-G-M records next month backed by Jack Miller's Orch.

Vox Label Gets Detroit Symph as Reichhold Moves In as Bd. Chm.

Henry Reichhold, Detroit moneyman, who has been planning an entry into the recording field, last week took a position as chairman of the board of Vox Records, a New York outfit connected with Polydor, a French label. Reichhold's connection with Vox, which has concerned itself with the marketing of only classical and moppet disks, brings to that company the Detroit Symphony, which Reichhold is spiritually and financially backing.

Vox will cut the Detroit Symph and via the connection with Polydor, the company's disks will go into various European countries and, in exchange, works by the Viennese Philharmonic will be marketed here by Vox. Whether the company will eventually go into the pop field in the U. S. is undisclosed. George Mendelssohn is prez of Vox.

Neal Hefti Forming Own Band, Backed by Hub Coin

Boston, Jan. 14.

Neal Hefti, former Woody Herman arranger, is shedded to start his own band in matter of weeks. He figures to begin rehearsing when his wife, Frances Wayne, former Herman vocalist, finishes current engagement at the Satire Room of the Fensgate.

Hefti is recruiting his band from former members of Herman's and Les Brown's bands, and is going in for sweet and swing. Hub angel is bankrolling the deal.

HEADS TOWARD PRE-WAR BASIS

By BERNIE WOODS

With the fold last week of the 400 Club, New York, and the intended withdrawal two weeks hence of the Aquarium Restaurant, N.Y., from the list of wartime users of name bands, plus other events, it seems that the band business is headed back to the pre-war basis on which it was built. And a good many bandsmen feel that it's all for the better.

Such spots as the 400 and the Aquarium, and their temporary counterparts in other cities, paid abnormally high prices for top names but served a purpose during the war when because of conditions it was impossible to build new bands. Now they have no place in the normal picture. Not when they go so far as to leave the so-called "name locations" completely devoid of the best band talent because of those high prices.

The Gamble

Like the one-night booker who is able to afford a gamble with two or three upcoming name-bands on the strength of whatever profits might be made from top names, the location spots that have been for years playing the Dorseys, James, et al., with lighter names in between, need the prestige and financial returns of those No. 1 names to continue to do their job for the overall good of the business. During the war, they were unable to do so. And they do occupy a most important place in the scheme of things.

Money, while it's of obvious importance to the bands that have and will play such spots, is not everything, it's stressed. There's prestige attached to working Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook, the Pennsylvania hotel, N.Y., Palladium Ballroom, Hollywood, and a dozen other spots in New York and various other cities. These are the locations that help to build the bands, plus hand with recordings, which have been for years now the most important medium, and without them the band business would be in a fine fix.

That business conditions and other reasons are pushing the top names back to such locations has been evident in some measure for some time and it increases day by day. Before the band business can reach back for its pre-war importance such a trend must become national, most important bandsmen feel.

New Copa, Chi, Eyes Band Policy

Copacobana, Chicago, which opened its doors two weeks ago, is aiming at a name band policy. Operators of the spot are currently dickering for Elliott Lawrence's orchestra, or at least have made an offer for him to General Artists Corp. They want the band for eight weeks with options.

At the moment the spot, which seats around 600 people, is using an all-act show headed by singer Frankie Parker. How this policy would be affected by the use of name bands isn't known. And if Lawrence is signed the spot would at least partially make up for the loss of the Panther Room of the Sherman hotel as a band spot. It drops name orchestras Feb. 27.

GARFIELD EASTS

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Harry Garfield, vet Coast contact for Harms, Inc., left over weekend for New York to become professional manager of Witmark. Both pubs are Warner Bros. subsids.

No. one yet tabbed to replace Garfield, moving into spot vacated when Norman Foley joined Robbins-Feist-Miller combine.

Whittemore Again Scrams MCA Band Dept., This Time Makes It Stick

Jack Whittemore resigned from Music Corp. of America's band department again last week, the fourth key member of that branch of the agency to depart within the past year. His resignation will be effective by the end of this week, possibly sooner if he gets his affairs in order before then. It has nothing to do with MCA's bonus allotments, which, at least as far as Whittemore is concerned, was equal to the previous year's payoff.

What Whittemore intends to do is so far unknown, even to himself. He has several things in mind, any one of which he may decide to go into between now and the end of this week, or later. One is an idea of joining forces with several other men in the personal management field. However, nothing is definite.

With MCA approximately 10 years, first as head of its Atlanta office and for the past eight at its New York headquarters, Whittemore was one of the mainstays of the band division, first under Sonny Werblin and for the past six months or so under Charley Barnet. His exit follows by weeks the resignation of Lyle Thayer from the agency's Coast branch. Last summer, Russ Peechine quit the band department on the Coast. About this time last year, Russ Lyon walked out of MCA to set up his own agency.

Whittemore quit MCA once before, late last summer. He was talked out of his move, however, by Werblin, head of the agency's N.Y. office and appeared to have settled back into his spot.

Armstrong's Concert Date

Louis Armstrong and his orchestra will do a concert at Carnegie Hall, New York, again Feb. 8. Affair is not connected with any magazine; it is being promoted by Greer Johnson and Bob Snyder, who stage jazz concerts at Town Hall, and Leonard Feather.

Armstrong will be accompanied by Ed Hall's small combo, with which he'll work in the first part of the performance. Later his full band will take the stage. Earl Hines will also be on the bill.

Sonora's Low-Cost Disk Stirs Trade

Recording and music people are eyeing with some disbelief the move by Sonora Records in marketing a new Black label series at 39c retail (85c, plus tax). With counter prices of disks produced by major companies being forced upward by increased production costs and the margin of profit on even a 50c disk being figured in fractions, Sonora's move created quite a bit of comment in the trade last week and there has been some conversation concerning the remote possibility that the company's disks may have some effect on the market just as Decca's shift into the 35c field years ago influenced downward price trends by Victor and Columbia.

At the moment, Sonora is one of a dozen indies fighting to keep alive and it's move into the lower-priced field is an endeavor to strengthen sales. Whether or not it could ever have any effect on the retail market with a 39c disk is looked upon as remote, but, it's felt, anything can happen. On the 39c label will be George Towne's orchestra, Snub Moseley orchestra, Roberta Lee, Roy Smeck, Jerry & Sky, hillbilly team.

Sonora, incidentally, claims it will be making a push on the lower-price platters. Experienced recording men say they cannot see how it's possible unless the compound is of exceedingly cheap materials.

Herb Hendler Forms Own Rainbow Disk Business, With Fromkes Backing

Herb Hendler, who left as head of Cosmo Records' artist and repertoire division last month and is now suing that company for more than $20,000 due him on an unexpired contract, has gone into the disk business on his own. He's in association with Harry Fromkes, former owner of the Playhouse and Apollo theatre in N. Y. and for years a devotee of jazz.

They have formed a company called Rainbow Records, with Fromkes backing, and with the latter as president, Hendler as v.p. in charge of recording and Eddie Heller, who also left Cosmo last week, as v.p. in charge of sales. They will make no pop disks for some time, launching the venture on certain album ideas, etc., developed by Hendler. Disks will be pressed by indie plants with whom arrangements have already been completed.

Clothing Scramble Mars Sammy Kaye One-Nighter

Lynchburg, Jan. 14.

Forty hats and coats, worth hundreds of dollars, vanished from City Armory during the Sammy Kaye dance here Jan. 6. Promoter Darrin O'Brien spent next day assuring angry patrons he was not responsible since concession had been leased. Police said in the mad scramble to leave after the hop, the crowd apparently exchanged hats and coats—and some took a few too many.

Over 5,000 packed the dance floor with Kaye inaugurating his Monday night series of "lead-a-band" performances.

Music Pubs Stock Up As Lithograph Strike Threatens

Music publishers in New York during the past week have been deeply concerned about the possibility of a strike by the Amalgamated Lithographers of America, Local No. 1, halting the printing of music and some have gone to great lengths to protect themselves against such a possibility. They have placed orders in vast lots with printers, a dangerous procedure with some publishers since the songs involved are not yet definite hits and others, which are riding high, can come down suddenly enough to catch pubs with overloaded inventories.

Lithographers have named Jan. 23 as the date on which they will walk out if increased salary demands, etc., are not met. During the latter part of last week, negotiations between the union and the Music Printers' Assn. reached the point wherein the possibility of a strike hitting printing plants was deemed "unlikely," but the threat, nevertheless, is still there.

'HIT PARADE' TARGET ON 'LAMPLIGHTER' SONG

Most music publishers thought last fall, when Warner Bros.' suit against the Lucky Strike Hit Parade show was decided a just one, action by the N. Y. State Court of Appeals, that the program would be more careful in its rating of tunes. Apparently that's not so, according to action taken by Sigmund Spaeth-Bernstein.

S-B forewarded to Foote, Cone & Belding, agency on the Luckies account, a rather sharply worded letter re the program's handling of the "Old Lamplighter" song. For the past 10 weeks or so, the publisher pointed out, "Lamplighter" has been No. 1 in sheet sales and record sales and has yet to get any closer to the top slot on the program than No. 2. Last week (11), the tune was dropped one slot to third, following which S-B got off its blast.

Jubileers cut 12 sides of Negro spirituals for Feb. 7 release on Bibletone label.

Aquarium, N. Y., Joins With 400 Club In Exiting From Name Band Field

Aquarium Restaurant, New York, which with the nearby 400 Club has created quite a stir for almost two years among N. Y. hotels and cafes using name bands, due to high price quotations, is following the 400 out of the field. Due to a tremendous drop in business, the Aquarium attempted to cancel entirely the scheduled opening Friday (10) of Gene Krupa's orchestra, but finally settled for slicing his four-week run to two weeks. Louis Prima, set to follow, has been cancelled out. Spot's future isn't definite, but its use as a cafeteria is likely.

Attempt to drop Krupa on such short notice provided quite a to-do. Krupa went to the musician's union to determine his position and was told not to worry, that Music Corp. of America, by AFM rules, would be responsible. This probably resulted in the two-week run.

Nat Moss' 400 Club gave up top names, perhaps temporarily, last week when it replaced Tex Beneke-Glenn Miller combo with Billy Maxted and installed a two-night a week policy. Maxted will work dinner only Sunday to Thursday and a supper session on Friday and Saturday. He will have no broadcast wires. His band is limited to 10 men, including himself.

Aquarium and 400, by their high coin bids for names, threw the placid hotel booking situation into an uproar when they first went into the use of top name bands. They offered such prices that the major hotels, the mainstays of the band biz in N. Y. for years, flatly refused to try to compete. This brought on a situation wherein most of the N. Y. hostelries for almost two years have not been getting, except in certain isolated cases, the better names.

Nick Brewster orch, after 18 months at the St. Anthony hotel, San Antonio, moved into Hotel Cleveland's Bronze Room Wednesday (15) for three-month run with options. Replaces Art Jarrett band.

Iturbi's Chili Swing

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Concert tour of Mexico and South America is being mapped by Jose Iturbi following current stint in "The Birds and the Bees" at Metro.

Pianist's projected itinerary would include Mexico City, Havana, Caracas, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

Petrillo Sez Yes, But Cap Nixes Tex Beneke Air Show From Stage

Except for the last minute objections by the Capitol theatre, Tex Beneke's orchestra might have done a regular weekly radio broadcast from the stage of a Broadway theatre during his run at that house next month. Beneke had permission from James C. Petrillo, head of the American Federation of Musicians, and okays from New York Local 802 of the AFM to do a "Treasury Bandstand" show for the Government from the Cap each Saturday afternoon (3:30-4 p.m., CBS). Cap officials, however, nixed the idea on the premise that it might interfere too much with business, even though they would have liked to do the show for the publicity value to the theatre. Instead, it will be done from a CBS studio.

Beneke, incidentally, is negotiating for a radio commercial to emanate from the Coast during the summer. If it goes through, it's probable that while doing the commercial he works the Palladium Ballroom then instead of next Xmas, the period he originally wanted. For weeks, Beneke's manager, Don Haynes, has been dickering with Palladium's operators on price, in the face of the spot's recent guarantee and split deals. Haynes has rejected the Palladium's bid of $4,500 guarantee plus 50% over $13,500. His payroll is so high that a higher guarantee is required.

802, MPPA Pact Set for Signature

New scale pay contract between New York Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians and Music Publishers Protective Assn., which has been in preparation since last September, may be signatured by the end of this week. Covering arrangers, proofreaders, copyists and pianists working for music publishers, the new agreement calls for boosts as high as 45% in some categories and as low as reduced scales in others. There are over 100 divisions for which rates had to be developed covering various combinations of overlapping chores in the four fields.

Final form of the pact was agreed upon during the past fortnight and ratified by 802 and MPPA boards. It is now being submitted to publishers for okay after which it will be signed by both parties.

FIRST 'OUTSIDE' BALLAD ON BERLIN AGENDA

Irving Berlin's music company doesn't often publish ballads not written by Berlin himself, but it has taken a tune titled, "Why Did It Have to End So Soon," by Marty Symes, Dick Robertson and Frank Weldon on which it will begin work later this month. Song is the first non-Berlin ballad the current Berlin firm has bought, although the old company in which Berlin was partnered with Saul Bornstein did insert non-Berlin tunes of that calibre between the latter's own works.

Reason for the publication of the Symes - Robertson - Weldon piece is that Berlin himself does not intend in the future to devote himself to writing "pop" ballads. All his efforts in this direction will in the future be devoted to material for picture or show scores.

Slaps Infringement Suit On Pub. Over P.D. Melody Written in 1867

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Don A. Mario, bandleader and songwriter, hung a $250,000 tune infringement suit last week on Capitol Songs and some of the most important record companies and artists. His action has flabbergasted the publisher, to say the least. Mario's suit alleges that Capitol's tune, "Pretending," was swiped by its writers from a tune, presumably by the same title, which he wrote in 1930.

Capitol admits to plagiarism, but not of Mario's song. From the day it took "Pretending" from writers Marty Symes and Al Sherman it has pointed out that the melody was taken from a waltz by Delieb's called "Coppela," written in 1867 and which is used constantly as background music in the ballet field. Sherman simply adapted it for popular consumption and Symes fitted it with lyrics. Pub intends fighting the action and is endeavoring to see to it that Mario gets stuck with costs if and when he loses the action.

In addition to Capitol, Decca, Columbia, Bing Crosby and Kate Smith, along with the writers, have been named as co-defendants. Action was instituted in Superior Court, Los Angeles.

Bratton's 80th Anni

John W. Bratton, the oldest active living songwriter, is celebrating his 80th birthday Jan. 21. For over half a century he has been in the songsmith business, having been successively, choir singer, amateur actor, singer in a Broadway show and theatrical producer (Leffler & Bratton).

He has written over a thousand songs, music and lyrics.

Dick Rodgers Eliminates Self From ASCAP Board, Pick Successor Jan. 30

Next monthly meeting of the board of directors of the American Society of Composers, Authors and publishers in New York, Jan. 30, will have the task of electing and seating a new member to replace Richard Rodgers, who went off in December. Rodgers' exit from the body occurred in a manner that was tantamount to a resignation, though it followed the Society's by-laws.

ASCAP's rules state that when a member of the board is absent four consecutive meetings he is automatically expelled from the body. But, the usual procedure is to immediately renominate him and he is reinstated on his promise to attend. Rodgers missed four, along with Oscar Hammerstein II, and both were dropped. Hammerstein was reseated immediately, but Rodgers let it be known that he hadn't the time and would prefer that he be eliminated. Max Dreyfus, who was ill last year, missed four meetings and was dropped from the board for the first time since the Society's inception, only to be immediately proposed and reelected by fellow board members.

Who will be nominated in Rodgers' place is not known, although it's probable that the writer faction of the board has made its choice. In such cases it's traditional that the replacement be the same sort of workman as his predecessor, i.e., a composer, author or publisher. Rodgers is a composer. Edgar Leslie has been proposed for the spot, but he's an author.

St. L. Diskbox Op Shot; See Gang War Over Biz

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

Attempted assassination of John R. Westbrook, owner of a diskbox company here while he and a woman companion were riding in an automobile near Waterloo, Ill., Friday (10) leads cops on both sides of the Mississippi in this area to believe that a gang war over the business is cooking. Westbrook was hit in the back of the neck by one of the bullets that was fired through the rear window of the car. Woman was cut by flying glass.

Cops said a group that controls the diskbox business in East St. Louis and other sections of Southern Illinois recently demanded that St. L. operators pay $5 per month on each of the 7,000 coin operated music boxes in the city as a "protection" fee.

Buddy Moreno Preems As Bandleader in Chi April 6

Singer Buddy Moreno has been booked on his first date as a bandleader. He goes into the Aragon Ballroom, Chicago, April 6, for an indefinite run. Current plans call for a combo of 12 men plus Moreno and a girl singer.

Moreno, former vocalist with Dick Jurgens, Tommy Dorsey, and several other bands, has been working in radio in New York and occasional club jobs since his discharge from the Army last year. He's being managed by Arthur Michaud and booked by Music Corp. of America.

Omaha Ups Diskbox Tap

Omaha, Jan. 14.

Juke boxes are in process of swinging from jitney to a dime all over town. So far, there are but a few squawks and these do not come from the taverns and clubs, but from the eateries. Seems that people who come in to eat, would rather pay a nickel than a dime, but owners say no serious opposition has been met and that receipts are so far satisfactory. In the taverns, they are throwing in as many dimes as they did nickels.

Reason given by the jukebox boys here is that cost of records has gone up so sharply that music in the old price range is now impossible.

Inside Stuff—Orchestras-Music

There is no life at the moment in the situation involving the writing of a new contract between the Songwriters Protective Assn. and the Music Publishers Protective Assn. Meetings between the two factions over the terms of a new deal ended for the holiday period around the middle of last month and no date has yet been set to resume talks, mainly because many of the principals on the publishers' side choose this time of year for Florida vacations. Meanwhile, the old pact between the writers and publishers, which expired Jan. 31, had been extended another 30 days, or until Jan. 31, and if the new deal isn't cleaned up by then, which doesn't seem likely, another extension will probably be agreed upon.

Although Los Angeles Musicians Local 47 boasts of more than 13,000 members the union seems unable to whistle up a quorum at any of its monthly general membership meetings. Sometime ago the local shifted site of get-togethers from downtown L. A. headquarters to Hollywood Masonic Temple in effort to induce greater attendance, but interest perked only fractionally and in the main the card-carriers who do show at the meetings are officeholders and a hatful of political axe-grinders. At least 150 must be on hand to constitute a quorum to handle routine business, and 300 for legislative. As result of two few always turning up, local has had matters on agenda since 1943, which have yet to be acted upon.

Resumption of ice shows at the Terrace Room of the New Yorker hotel, New York, seems to have proven once and for all that the room is definitely not a "band" spot. During the period that the hotel dropped ice shows, while a new tank and new dance floor was being installed, business fell far off normal and could not be brought back even by Sammy Kaye's orchestra, judged to be one of the few guaranteed b.o. draws in biz. Kaye couldn't do better than 1,400 covers any week during his run, although it must be said that his stay, during pre-Xmas weeks wasn't at a good time. Now, with ice shows back and Chuck Foster's orchestra, the room isn't too far off normal.

Another 20,000 shares of common stock put up for sale by Capitol Records in New York two weeks ago at $15.50 per, was not a new issue, but part of the original bundle set up by the company when it floated the original issue last year. The 20,000 had simply been kept in reserve and released, it's said, to partially, at least, repay a loan from the Bank of America in California. This loan, may or may not have gone to finance the company's entry into the field of record reproducing machines now being marketed under Capitol's name.

In an ad run in last week's VARIETY issue by Benny Fields, veteran singer, the copy inadvertently referred to the William Morris Agency as his agent. Charles Yates, with the Associated Booking Corp., 745 5th avenue, N. Y., has Fields under exclusive contract. The Morris office has previously booked Fields.

Vic Lombardo, who had completed an arrangement with Apollo Records, in which the Garwood Industries are now interested, for a term contract, did not sign and isn't likely to. Garwood dropped negotiations with the band after a deal involving a $5,000 bonus and exceptionally good terms had been agreed upon and not immediately accepted by the leader.

Dailey Sets Brooks, Long

Randy Brooks' and Johnny Long's orchestras have been set for Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook. Brooks goes in for nine days, Jan. 29 to Feb. 9, following the current Blue Barron, and Long follows Feb. 11 to the 24th.

When the dance band b.o. began sliding last November, Dailey had a long string of bands set up to come into his spot. He subsequently cancelled all and took Les Elgart in for an indefinite period. With the current Barron and the above bookings he resumes buying.

Musical Upturn

extent than usual. Both are mixed cast shows, there being colored actors in "Holiday" also.

While "Rainbow" was expected to score on the strength of its out-of-town showing, the hailing of "Scene" was a complete Broadway surprise. In fact, another show was reported to have been earmarked to follow it in at the Adelphi. In Philadelphia, where it tried out, "Scene" the authors and actors to a greater couldn't top $5,000 gross on the week, an incredibly low mark. In response to the enthusiastic press, show's management evinced little surprise, the response being that it felt "Scene" to be a New York show. At least one showman interested in "Scene" maintained that attitude throughout the tryout, when ticket sellers were biding their time.

"Big Two" Form Reversal

Another form reversal was instanced by the negative first-night reception of "The Big Two," a straight play that also entered the list last week. Reports were that it was a sure thing, evidently on the strength of the show's business in Philly, but insiders were aware that attendance was aided by subscribers, same not applying to "Scene" or "Rainbow," which also tried out in the home stand. There was a difference of opinion in Boston for "Two" but the business was fairly promising.

How word-of-mouth can benefit a show in advance was shown by patronage at the boxoffice for "Rainbow." Prior to its debut the sale amounted to approximately $125,000. That was exclusive of theatre parties, such package deals amounting to as much, if not more. Following the notices, long lines appeared for both that show and "Scene." The new musicals are likely to slow the pace of longrun tuners, most of which stood up because there was no new opposition. If attendance is affected it may be reflected principally in the agencies.

There has been a drop in agency business which was apparently wrongly attributed to a supposed decline in visitor volume. Reliable reports, however, are that hotel occupancy is high, with most of the major midtown hostelries jammed. There are a fairly large number of conventionites registered but they are not patronizing the ticket booths in the lobbies.

BUDDY RICH BREAKS UP BAND; SEZ UNTIL MAY

Buddy Rich broke up his orchestra last week, a move claimed to be temporary while the leader himself occupies the spotlight as a featured artist with Norman Granz' "Jazz at the Philharmonic" unit, which launches a long string of jazz concert dates at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 6. Rich figures to reorganize sometime in May and resume regular band work.

However, the spot with Granz is not Rich's main reason for breaking up. Bookings for his band in the next couple of months, which still isn't good, were nothing to cheer about and he figured that the hiatus, at least until May, would be wise.

Jimmy Campbell Jailed On Bum Check Charges

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Jimmy Campbell, erstwhile British songwriter and a onetime partner of Reg Connelly in the London firm of Campbell, Connelly & Co., Ltd., last week was arrested in Redwood City, Calif., on several bum check raps. Pleading guilty to last summer bouncing two checks totaling $80 at a San Mateo hotel, Campbell, who is 43, is currently being held in Redwood City jail, unable to raise $5,000 bail. Further, according to the sheriff's office in Redwood, the ex-publisher is wanted on other worthless check charges in Sacramento and Oakland. His total indebtedness is about $800.

For last several years Campbell has been living along the Coast. Six months ago, at request of Rudy Vallee who put up the $100 initiation fee, Campbell was admitted as member of songpluggers' union, but did not actively go to work. At one time Campbell was one of the biggest figures in the British music publishing business, and at about the same time he wrote a number of international hit tunes, such as "If I Had You," "Show Me the Way to Go Home," "Goodnight, Sweetheart" and "When the Organ Plays at Twilight."

New Mills Personnel

Mills Music and the American Academy of Music are increasing contact staffs, taking on two new men and upping another from its sales force in New York. Paul Mills, currently on the Coast, continues as American Academy's p.m.

...ew personnel includes Irving Deutsch, with Leeds Music in prewar days and more recently a member of the Blue Flames quartet; Jack Hooke, formerly with Barton Music, and Buddy Friedlander, from the Mills sales force.

Another Diskbox Tax

Oakland, Jan. 14.

Concerted action on the part of the California Music Operators' Assn. brought a momentary halt to the City Council's plan to impose a tax of $5 annually per juke box. Ordinance was halted before final passage on plea of George A. Miller, president of the Assn., that the tax would be unfair. He proposed instead a business tax based on gross receipts.

City had hoped to realize $375,000 annually from the new tax.

Peter Lorre has been added to the Feb. 5 or 12 show at the Roxy theatre, N. Y. Others on bill include Gil Lamb and Evelyn Knight.

Butterfield Set For Donohue's Jersey Spot

Billy Butterfield's comparatively new orchestra is set for its first location stay in the New York area. It opens Jan. 30 at Donohue's, Mountain View, N. J., a spot not far from Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook.

Butterfield will replace Glenn Garr at Donohue's and the booking marks the first time the roadside cafe has used a semi-swing band since before the war. It has used sweet combos most of the time.

Avodon Snafus Kenton Orch On Booking Deal

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Fireworks flared late last week, and sparks still are snapping, after the Avodon ballroom decided that it did not want to cancel out month's stand of Stan Kenton starting Feb. 5. To all intents and purposes the band booking had been called off last midmonth, when terpalace notified orch manager Carlos Gastel and GAC agency that although Kenton had been contracted for at $6,500 flat per week, hoofing-hall felt it couldn't meet the nut and hence requested an out.

Two weeks of maneuvering followed, during which Palladium made room on its lineup, arranging to bring in Kenton for a stand at reported $5,000 plus percentage, starting March 18. Palladium arranged to get Music Corp. of America to shift its bands which already had been booked, Although this was accomodating a rival agency, MCA did so and GAC went to trouble and cost to re-route Kenton all over country so combo would lose no playing time. All matters had been smoothed out, save that Avodon still had the original four-week contract in its safe and last week, on heels of making some coin on recent month's stand of Count Basie and noting the biz Kenton has been inducing in east, decided to hold crew to letter of pact.

Gastel hit the ceiling, as did GAC. MCA grimly took matters in hand and has compromised all over again shifting the dates at Palladium. Maury Cohen, operator of the Pal, apparently coolest in the imbroglio, as he merely says he will still take on Kenton, if he can, late next autumn. Gastel further flared when, pointing out that with recent addition of the Pastels, vocal quintet, Kenton payroll now is $7,100 and aggregation would lose coin at straight $6,500 for Avodon date, got only one offer from terpalace—that it adjust matter by giving Kenton a guarantee of $4,500 against 60% of gate per stanza. Gastel and GAC trimmed down such a deal with vehemence. Kenton now probably will have to cut crew when he comes here to make the date.

AFM HITS N. Y. SPOT ON UNDER SCALE RAP

Log Cabin, Armonk, N. Y., which at one time played name bands, has been placed on the "restricted territory" list by the White Plains local of the American Federation of Musicians, after being snagged paying under scale to Chris Cross' band. Restricted ruling means that the spot can play nothing but local bands until the penalty is lifted.

Cross himself, for becoming a party to the under scale arrangement, was fined $1,000 by the local and given a certain time in which to pay the levy.

Band Reviews

PAUL WHITEMAN, JR. (6)
Iceland, N. Y.

With the help of the Roxy's perennial maestro Paul Ash and his own famous dad, young Paul Whiteman, Jr., has thrown together a nice little combo for his first date as a front man. The wisdom of coming into a show spot for a preem booking might be questioned, since the intricacies of backing a show could easily pose too difficult problems for a first-time maestro, but the outfit comes through nicely.

Small group, with Hammond organ, drums (Whiteman Jr.) bass trumpet and two reed, cuts the show okay and then switches to easy society rhythms for terpsters. Whiteman still seems a little abashed by the whole thing, but experience should iron that out.

Emphasis on the Whiteman name is a bit too strong for good taste, especially the usiness of using the "Rhapsody" theme. Perhaps it was just for "Pops," who dropped in with his ABC band and Paul Ash to see the offspring operate. In any case, it should be toned down a bit. Group's danceable styling should bring a booking in a classier spot without much trouble. Tomm.

NICK BREWSTER ORCH. (9)
With Art Tate
St. Anthony Hotel, San Antonio

Currently at the Anacacho room is Nick Brewster and his "Million Airs," pleasing local dance gocrs with pleasing danspation. Band is well balanced and easy on the ears for those who dine. It plays current numbers and light classics with equal ease with some swell arrangements for those who dance.

Band is composed of three violins, three saxophones, bass, drum and trumpet, with Brewster at the piano.

There is an over-abundance of rhumba music, but patrons don't seem to mind it. Now and then, for extra measure there is a "Put Your Little Foot" or another old-fashioned dance which keeps the floor crowded. On vocals there is Brewster, who has a nice personality and voice, and Art Tate, who doubles from sax. There is also a trio of others from the band, which give out with a few vocals now and then.

Band could use a female vocalist to add a bit of pep and vitality to the bandstand. Andy.

PHIL LEVANT ORCH (13)
With Shirley White, Lee Sharin
Muehlebach Hotel, Kansas City

Phil Levant orchestra is perennial in the Terrace Grill of the Muehlebach. This year it was brought in to carry over the holiday trade. Music put out by this crew is emphatically on the smooth side and held down in volume to the requirements of such an intimate room. This sort of understanding performance is what makes Levant popular here.

Instrumentation of three trumpets, trombone, three tenors, three rhythm and Levant's fiddle directs all its effort toward danspation. Keeping tunes fullbodied and sweet sets the crew in solidly with customers, and biz as a result is holding up okay. Luncheon sessions, without dancing, are turned into semi-concert programs.

Levant himself works hard on the bandstand and it's reflected in the output. He also stresses vocals with Shirley White, contralto, and Lee Sharin, youthful ballad singer, who joined the crew about six months ago. Both singers register capably solo and work with Tony Moreno (trumpeter) in special trio arrangements. Quim.

Glen Gray Signs With Mercury, Chi Indie Outfit

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Mercury Records, Chi indie disk outfit headed by Berle Adams, snagged Glen Gray's Casa Loma orchestra last week and is dickering to further enlarge its band list with Tony Pastor, currently at the Paramount theatre, N. Y. Gray signed a one-year deal with options last week, after severing with Decca Records.

Mercury had previously dropped two bands—Buddy Rich, who is now temporarily out of biz as a maestro, and Vincent Lopez.

Eva Tanguay—'I Don't Care' Girl—Slips Away, Taking An Era With Her

By ED BARRY

Eva Tanguay, personality songstress of yesteryear, succumbed to a stroke after being bedridden for years with various illnesses, in her obscure but comfortable cottage in Hollywood, Jan. 11, aged 68. Death came as a climax to one of the most fabulous, colorful careers in vaudeville. Until illness forced her into retirement in the '20's and she dropped over $2,000,000 in the stock-market crash of 1929, she had remained the ebullient lass who had catapulted herself from obscurity to fame with the song, "I Don't Care." And she didn't. She had made and lost fortunes before—not forgetting the coin stakes she had given many a contemporary on the way up and additional lifts after they went down the chute again.

Though lacking in outstanding talent, usually the requisite for molding a headliner in any branch of the theatre, Miss Tanguay capitalized on her personality, shapely figure and a determination to get to the top in her profession—vaudeville—which she did. Despite it all she never took herself seriously, preferring to attribute her meteoric rise to nerve and salesmanship rather than any especially endowed talent. Even at her peak she often chided fellow performers who would attempt to flatter her on her artistry. She'd laugh it off with "I've just been lucky."

And there was more truth than poetry in that remark. Vaude historians still around have a faint recollection of seeing her in her youth at Tony Pastor's or Keith's Union Square with a male partner in a double act that rated about $125 weekly for the pair. On this engagement she was grabbed up by an agent and sent on tour with a poppriced circuit musical, "The Sambo Girl," which never got nearer to Broadway than Blaney's, Newark.

Music Halls

She later tried her mettle in music halls in New York and Chicago but didn't hit her stride until years later when she decided Barnum was right, both ways, and came into Hammerstein's Music Hall with one of the most terrific advertising and publicity buildups of that era, which is reputed to have cost her nearly twice as much as her salary. This was okay with her. She set out to make 'em Tanguay-conscious and it later paid off in handsome dividends and kept her a high-salaried drawing card for better than a decade and a half.

During the interim she catapulted her earning power from $250, which she had gotten with the musical, to $2,500 and $3,500 weekly, an unheard of salary for a vaude headliner of that era. She still continued heavy ad campaigns, lavish outlays for costumes and material and these too paid off. She was also smart enough to build her songs into a production, don the most daring of costumes and give them that personality and dynamic salesmanship which made her unique, albeit a freak, through the years.

Her first big-salary break came from the late Perey G. Williams, who, stymied by control of most headliners and standard acts by the then powerful United Booking Offices (Keith, Albee, Proctor et al.), decided to build and import his own talent to channel into his N. Y. circuit of five theatres. After bringing over a flock of acts from England, such as Vesta Victoria, Albert Chevalier and Marie and Alice Lloyd, he took cognizance of Miss Tanguay's b.o. potentialities, upping her salary to $2,500 and giving her $3,500 on repeat dates. Her drawing power was later recognized by other standard circuits throughout the country which played her season after season at top coin. On percentage dates where house were leary of her draw ability she had often taken down greater sums as her share of the take.

Daring Songs

Her daring songs, such as "I Want Someone To Go Wild With Me" and "It's All Been Done Before But Not the Way I Do It," were trademarks of a sort but it was "I Don't Care"

MILLION DOLLAR WINDS UP VAUDEVILLE IN L.A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

For the first time in more than 50 years, Los Angeles will be without a regular vaude fare when the Million Dollar theatre here drops policy on Feb. 6. House will revert to duals.

Operator Sherrill Corwin says theatre may occasionally ring up attractions acts in future if any strong boxoffice potentialities become available.

The prime prompting which caused erasure of live talent from Million Dollar, according to Corwin, was growing dearth hereabouts of attractions with marquee value. Due to most big-name bands reorganizing, none presently are available, and film stars just won't play L. A. because of proximity to Hollywood. And, adds Corwin, "Any nameless layout of acts today isn't worth a quarter."

Hattie Althoff Ankling CRA to Open Own Agency

Hattie Althoff is set to leave the talent department of Consolidated Radio Artists to open her own agency. Miss Althoff, whose contract with CRA expires in May, will leave around the end of February. Resignation climaxes a stormy association between Miss Althoff and Charlie Greene, CRA president.

A little more than a year ago Miss Althoff threatened to walk out in a quarrel over commission splits. Greene subsequently threatened to sue Miss Althoff for contract breach and exit never materialized.

There's the possibility that Charlie Busch and Bill Peterson, of the CRA cocktail sector, may join Miss Althoff once she sets up her office.

If these plans materialize, CRA's revenue will be hard hit inasmuch as a good deal of its coin is now derived from the act and cocktail departments.

Miss Davis' Paris Dates

Virginia Davis, chantcuse daughter of maestro Meyer Davis, has signed for several nitery appearances in Paris in the spring, at the Constellation, Scheherazade Club and Cinq a Neuf.

Singer, who appeared in the Broadway legiter "Call Me Mister" last year, just returned from Paris, where she sang at Le Corsaire. She also did a series of broadcasts of French folksongs for Radiodiffusion Francaise.

AGVA Pays Cast Off In L. A. Show Foldo

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Local office of American Guild of Variety Artists has paid off salary claims, totaling $902, against L. A. Thorns by members of cast of "Varieties of 1947" which lasted two performances at Beaux Arts theatre.

AGVA took funds out of cash bond exacted of producer Thorns before first curtain rose. Cast of 11 in the revue was headed by Max Terhune and Billy Mack.

HUB CAFE, BALLROOM, HOTEL BIZ LAGS 25%

Boston, Jan. 14.

In contrast to film and legit business, which boomed during 1946, night clubs, taverns, ballrooms, hotels and cafes have been way off in Boston area, with fall and winter biz running 25% behind same period last year and indications of further drops.

The Mayfair closed for change of policy, while the Latin Quarter was almost 30% off. Only nitery doing real biz is Gay Nineties. But even here it's no bargain. Ballrooms, barring the Totem Pole, are also way off. The vaude just not forking up prices for name bands with sideman's salaries blamed for high prices.

Eateries are off, too. Customers figure they are taking a rooking and stay away. Little by little a buyer's strike is bringing down prices but joints that have made it a habit of clipping by cutting portions are taking it in the neck. It seems customers don't forget.

Connee Boswell Switches To Harry Romm Agency

Harry Romm's new booking agency, which he set up last year, grabbed off Connee Boswell for its growing list last week. Singer had been with Music Corp. of America, but just before Xmas asked for and received a release in order to swing over to Romm.

Miss Boswell currently at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, goes to the Palace theatres Akron-Youngstown next week, and on Jan. 23 opens a week at the Adams, Newark.

Scarcity of Sepia Acts Sets Back Zanzibar Preem

Difficulties in getting suitable Negro headliners is causing Joe Howard and Carl Erbe to postpone opening of the new Zanzibar, N. Y., located on the former site of the Ole South, to sometime in February. There's the possibility that the Mills Bros., may be appearing at the Paramount theatre, N. Y., in February, will double into the eafe.

Maurice Rocco is also being considered to top the preem bill.

Drops Rhumba Films

Bill Miller has been forced to suspend film showings of the Monday night rhumba contests at his Embassy, N. Y. nitery, because of demands from the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees to put up two projectionists. Union demanded that Miller hire two operators to show the 16m shots of the contest, which were run off at the club one hour after shooting.

Rhumba contest, however, will be continued without the film showings afterward.

Sherman Staying on Coast

Eddie Sherman, head of the Sherman vaude booking agency, who was slated to return to New York this month to personally operate the booking office, has delayed his N. Y. trip indefinitely.

Pressure of his personal management business is preventing his N. Y. trip at this time. Sherman is manager of Abbott and Costello among others.

A.C. GRAND JURY HITS JUKEBOX RACKETEERS

Atlantic City, Jan. 14.

After hearing cafe owners and managers, jukebox operators, members of the electrical union and others, the retiring Atlantic County grand jury handed down a presentment in which it declared that it had found "indications of conspiracy on the part of certain jukebox operators to control these machines in and about Atlantic City (10).

The grand jury conducted its investigation at the request of the Atlantic City Licensed Beverage Men's Association. It said that possible conspiracy by the jukebox operators to control the machines was "in disregard to free enterprise and the rights and privileges of other citizens."

The investigation was launched after cafe and saloon operators had protested the way jukebox distributors operated here. They pointed out that if they failed to pay a $5 service fee weekly and used other than the "right" distributors' machines their places were picketed, with union drivers refusing to cross the lines to deliver food and liquor.

The panel said the succeeding grand jury should be informed of these findings "so that they may be alert to a development of these dangers to the public and be prepared to take preventive measures since a so-called jukebox war in at least one other New Jersey community has resulted in property damage and even bloodshed."

Danny Kaye Contracted for $20,000 Per Week at Miami Copacabana

Miami, Jan. 14.

Danny Kaye has been signed for the Copacabana, Miami Beach nitery, at $20,000 weekly, highest straight guarantee ever given a single nitery entertainer. Kaye, who starts Jan. 19 for two weeks, will make the trip from California for the occasion and will return to the coast immediately afterwards to keep a date at the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, where he's in for a 50% of the gate. Kaye pays for the outside talent there.

The Kaye deal for the Copa was completed last week by the William Morris agency, which felt itself obligated to Murray Weinger, Copa's operator, who was sans a headliner since Milton Berle, a Morris client, cancelled out of the Copa because of a radio commitment. The agency lined up the Ritz Bros. to follow Kaye, though the agency will draw no commissions for the Ritz deal. Berle's run was to have spanned the dates of both Kaye and the Ritzers.

Weinger, who last week filed a $250,000 breach of contract suit against Berle, has thus dropped the claim. Berle's contract, incidentally, stipulated a four-week cancellation clause in the event he lined up a radio, film or legit show, and this was complied with. Berle had been set at $12,500 per.

Phil Baker, MCA Part

Phil Baker has asked for his release from Music Corp. of America because of MCA's failure to obtain work for him in fields other than radio. Baker late last year left the William Morris agency for that reason and signed with MCA in order to be serviced by Marty Goodman, who subsequently left that office to go in business for himself.

Release was handed the comic last week. He has not yet affiliated with another agency.

Lucille & Eddie Roberts, magical mentalists currently at the Terrace Room, Hotel Statler, Cleveland, open a four-weeker in the Blue Room, Hotel Roosevelt, New Orleans, Jan. 21.

Myron Cohen Heads N.Y. Latin Quarter Show

Myron Cohen comedy dialectician, has been booked for his first N. Y. cafe date, starting Sunday (19) at the Latin Quarter, N. Y. Comic has been seen at various times on cafe celebrity nights, but hasn't played a regular engagement in N. Y. niteries.

LQ gets an entire change of headliners, with Moro and Yaconelli, Frances and Gray, Chandra-Kaly dancers, Three Craddocks and Anthony Varone moving in.

TELESHOWS POSING PROBLEM FOR CAFE OPS

New York bars and eateries, which installed large-screen television sets atop their bars as added inducements to their liquor trade, are facing unforeseen difficulties. Seems that everytime there's a top sports event televised, the customers all crowd around the single tele screen to such an extent that the rest of the bar remains dry, with liquor sales falling off.

Some owners have sought to get around this by replacing the single large-screen sets, as produced by DuMont and U. S. Television, with seven or eight table models. Latter are scattered around the room, giving the barkeeps and waiters a chance to serve drinks in comparative peace.

Another solution has been found by boniface Nicky Quattriocicci of the swank El Borraccho. Finding that people had come to eat at his place only as a sideline during a television show, Quattriocicci instituted the system of reserving a certain number of bar stools in front of his single large-screen set. Customers without reservations, consequently, are expected to circulate and the boniface expects the usual amount of food and liquor to be consumed.

'Tain't Fair

Miami, Jan. 14.

While majority of the cafes are fighting it out for names with performer salaries up to $20,000 weekly, the Melody club here gets the advertising values of headliners from a little more than scale musical trio.

The bistro in heavy ads is billing in big type such names as Guy Lombardo, Tommy Dorsey, Cab Calloway, Ink Spots and Ted Lewis. In small type it sez impersonations.

Panther Room, Chi, In Switch to Ice Shows; Dot Lewis Unit Preems

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Panther Room, Sherman hotel, Chicago, which drops its years-old band policy Feb. 27, is going in for ice shows along with Ted Weems' orchestra. Spot is installing an ice tank and will pick up its new entertainment phase Feb. 28. Its initial bill will be a unit headed by Dorothy Lewis.

Sherman's dropping of name bands occurred following weeks of poor biz with the names it could buy. Ernie Byfield, buyer of talent for the hotel, decided on the switch away from name music about a month ago, but decided only a week or so ago to substitute an ice show idea.

Joan Edwards' Vauders

Joan Edwards, who leaves the Lucky Strike "Hit Parade" airshow, Jan. 18, will do a series of personals starting at the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, Feb. 22. Other dates are being lined up for the singer by Jack Bertell, with whom she signed a personal management contract early this week. She's getting $3,500 on these stands.

Miss Edwards' booking contract with Music Corp. of America expires Feb. 7. It's doubtful that she'll resign with that office.

Martha Raye is pacted for the Latin Quarter, Boston, starting Feb. 9 following her stand at the Beachcomber, Miami Beach.

Trenet, Stranded in Paris, Tagged In Contract Breach Suit by Embassy, N.Y.

Kaskel Reported Taking Over Bradford, Boston

Bradford hotel, Boston, containing the Bradford roof, one of the top niteries in the Hub, is slated to be sold during the week to Alfred Kaskel, chain hotel operator who now owns the Belmont Plaza hotel, N. Y. Deal has been in the works for some time and is likely to be consummated during the week. Ralph Snyder currently heads the corporation owning the inn.

Effect of sale upon talent booking policy of the hostel isn't known as yet. Spot is now booked by Arthur Fisher out of New York, who has shows set until Feb. 1. Any change won't be effective until after that date.

STRIPPER STRIPPED OF 'INGRID VERGMAN' TAG

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

The Follies, burlesque barn, over weekend ceased advertising and billing a peeler as "Ingrid Vergman," after Ingrid Bergman's legal reps, firm of Mitchell, Silberberg & Knupp, requested it.

Stating that use of such a label "obviously is to deceive and confuse the public," Miss Bergman's lawyers pleaded that continuance of such billing would "bring injury upon Miss Bergman by this use of a name of such similarity to hers in a connection such as this."

Anna Biggs, operator of the Follies, said no studio which released past pictures of the star squawked over the stunt.

Femme Exits Wm. Morris

The split is entirely amicable. Miss Dispeker will maintain business relations with the Morris Agency.

Charles Trenet, who was slated to open at the Embassy, N. Y., Jan. 9 but couldn't get passage into this country in time for the preem, is being sued by Bill Miller, Embassy's operator, for $5,000, claiming breach of contract. Miller claims that Trenet was cognizant of the difficulties in obtaining passage from France and consequently should not have gone to Paris.

Trenet after winding up film and nitery work on the Coast during the summer, made a trip to Brazil and then to France.

The suit climaxes a turbulent association between Trenet and Miller. During Trenet's incumbency at the Embassy last year, the singer several times walked off the floor and threatened to walk out of his contract, but was restrained by the American Guild of Variety Artists. Despite the difficulties, Miller resigned Trenet at $2,500 weekly before the chanteuse left the country.

Other performers are also finding it difficult to make their way back to this country. The Salici puppet group who were slated to open at the Carnival, N. Y., last night (Tuesday) had not yet obtained passage from Eire. Group was bumped for priority passengers during their trip from Italy and have now been in that country for several weeks. They were able to get a low priority by intercession of N. Y. License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding.

Some apprehension is also felt for Lucienne Boyer, who is slated to open at Cafe Society Uptown, N. Y., next month. She's still in France and has been urged to apply for immediate plane reservations.

Difficulty in getting out of France has increased since the French line took the Ile de France off the regular U. S. run.

DITSON WITH ROSEN

Lenny Ditson has joined the Jerry Rosen office as an agent. Ditson was formerly part of the vaude act Starr, Rollo and Ditson, other two members of which have also become agents.

Night Club Reviews

Le Ruban Bleu, N. Y.

Wally Blacker, Gloria King, Josef Marais & Miranda, Muriel Gaines, Leonard Elliott (Irma Jurist at piano), Cedric Wallace 3; $3 and $3.75 minimum.

On a dead Monday—don't forget, this is 1947, and all the oldie alibis, about slow Mondays, rainy Tuesdays and cheap college-night (Friday) patronage, are coming back—this joint was jumpin'. True, it was an opening but biz was in its the-week-after-New Year's doldrums.

Perhaps what the bullishness of Tony Mele's bistro (atop his Theodore's restaurant) best proves is that good value always pays off, regardless of seasons, moods, modes and trends. And a good value it is, too, and somewhat to the credit of the maitre d' Carlo who, like many headwaiters these days, often knows better than the boss what the customers like. In this instance he had a lot to do with booking this lineup.

It opens with Gloria King, who gets a rousing Campfire Girl build-up as "the typical American girl," who made impact in "The Best Years Of Our Lives," and out comes a somewhat sultry soubret who is a cross between Helen Morgan and Ethel Waters. Miss King may have been in a nitery sequence for a quick flash in the Sam Goldwyn picture, and if so it certainly was a quickie. However, as disclosed here, she sings in the 52d St. idiom of Mildred Bailey, utilizing the mike which, sometimes, gives her too much volume, especially in an intime room of this type. Her repertoire includes "Lover," "Happiness Is a Thing Named Joe," "I Remember April," "These Foolish Things" (medleyed with "They Can't Take That Away From Me"). She should edit her routine down.

No. 2 are Josef Marais and Miranda with their Appalachian, Afrikaans and kindred folksongs. They got their rep on the African veldt stuff but did only one such number at the show caught. They're a nice turn for class spots of this calibre. Muriel Gaines, next, is socko with "I'm Evil," "Give Me New York" (a more than a slight poke at Hollywood), a neat calypso turn with saucy lyrics, and "15 Years Serving Time."

Headliner is Leonard Elliott, aided by Irma Jurist at the piano. He does hoke French and German stuff, muggs all over the place, has a fine sense of audience values and is better than his material. He has musicomedy potentials but has been seen to better ad antage with better songalog. Wally Blacker emcees in fairish manner and the Cedric Wallace Trio is tiptop during the entr'actes. Abel.

Latin Quarter, Miami

(FOLLOWUP)

Miami Beach, Jan. 10.

Addition of Lou Holtz and Mons. Choppy and his "Marriage In Brittany" routine to the lavish production in this big room by Lou Walters has added a needed comedy and novelty, to make the affair one of the best staged in town.

Holtz, as always, uses his dialec-turns and cane to good advantage. Wisely eschews the stories which might bring criticism as regards racial lampooning and instead mixes his stuff with Hebrew, Spanish and British limnings to add the laugh touch this show needed. Opens with a bit in which he hands out cigars, emcees, interweaves his raconteuring throughout the show and tops with a bit with Daisy Daix, the French importation, that makes her songs look better than they did the first week.

Mons. Choppy (New Acts) is probably one of the most novel acts to hit this country in a long time. Though not for theatres, or family auds, it's a topper in its class. Rest of the Walters production looks as good as ever. Costuming is nifty and the specialties, which include Chandra Kaly and his dancers, Gloria LeRoy, the Craddocks, Georges Alban, Vivien Fay and Mazzone-Abbott troupe work with a zest that adds plenty to the show. Lary.

Chez Paree, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 10.

Tony Martin, Pearl Bailey, June Edwards, Jack Cole Dancers (11), Line (10), Gay Claridge Orch (14), Lucio Garcia Orch (5); $3.50 min.

New show at the Chez Paree is heavy on song and dance. Also unusual is the fact that this is the first show that doesn't have a comedian as one of the acts; spot has always gone heavy for comedy with this being the first revue that has element missing. However, several acts have comedy angles and show moves at fast pace.

Line number, created by Olive Bernard, opens the show with cute twist of shifting backdrops while girls do bits from picture "Three Little Girls In Blue" bringing on contortionist dancer, June Edwards, who has slick muscular control. Gets hefty sendoff.

Jack Cole Dancers follow with one of the finest hoke jobs of the interpretive school, ala Martha Graham, with much of it way over the average cafe aud head. However, table sitters appreciated it even as a straight job. Cole is supported by Florence Lessing and seven dancers, and in his West Indian numbers, a duo of calypso singers and drummers. Opener is Raymond Scott version of "Persian Market" which is niftily costumed. Miss Lessing and Cole scurry through an imaginary market place with dead pan actions, leaving the emphasis on fast foot and arm biz. Company comes back for "Wooden Indian" which is neatly done and registers for solid applause.

Pearl Bailey, late of "St. Louis Woman" is a natural for cafe circuit. Gal, smartly dressed in white gown with sequined bodice has a group of naughty lyrics which she tosses away with careful admonition as to what happens to those that play with sex. Her drawly interjections in her songs, somewhat reminiscent of Bert Williams, are fine underplaying comedy and relieve sultriness of her material. Works effortlessly and holds audience in her palm all the way.

Tony Martin, star of the show, clicks as heavy as usual with the distaffers in his song stanza. Martin's slick warbling of "Old Black Magic," "September Song," "Begin the Beguine," "Rumors Are Flying," "To Each His Own," and "Show Business" slays 'em as usual and plants him as outstanding hit of the show. Last number is a production song.

Gay Claridge has augmented his orch and it's now really a solid musical aggregation. With the addition of three fiddles, Claridge does an excellent job of backing Martin; then he does an extremely hard bit, with his rhythm section, in providing a poly beat for the Cole Dancers, and holds a fine sustained muted trumpet background for Pearl Bailey. Phyllis Gale turns in a top job on line numbers and as vocalist with the orch. Lucio Garcia and his five piece combo beats out the Latin tunes for nice response for the rhumba addicts. Loop.

Beachcomber, Miami

Miami, Jan. 11.

Martha Raye, Willie Howard with Al Kelly, Ben Yost Quintet, Jack Stanton, Betty Luster, Line (6), Geo. Paxton Orch, Rumbaddicts (6).

Definite front runner among the glitter spots hereabouts this season has been the Beachcomber. Opening with Jackie Miles and Gypsy Rose Lee, the bir room has grossed more than any other spot without casinos in the area. Followup show looks to do as good, if not better, with the crowds filling the room early and late to see the Martha Raye-Willie Howard combo.

Zesty, uninhibited, earthy, Martha Raye earned herself a palm-whacky reception from the mobs filling the room. Though at times she tends to go overboard on the blue stuff in the way of ad libs and bits, her overall effect on the payees is sock. That zingy personality makes itself felt in every corner of the long, cavernous room. From some she earned gasps, but from most, howls and table pounding for more. The pixieish quality which came through in her pix hits is contained in her nitery stint, salvaging any off-reaction from her blueisms, which, at show caught, happened a bit too frequently. Opens with "Sun In The Mornin" with ad lib biz added for the laugh spots. Follows with "Tampico" which includes some lyrics repeated in her encore number "Stone Cold Dead In The Market." It's a tribute to her comedy quality that both songs go so well. Howls are gained via her biz with the band, her accompanist (who does a neat job) and the ringsiders. Comes back for a finale (after beg-off) with the Ben Yost quintet that is a laugh maker all the way. Wears a male costume along with the boys, using the sword for howl-making antics. It makes for a zingy close to a fast paced, smartly balanced show.

Willie Howard, as always builds his comedy to a high. Though familiar to the payees, they scream at his French prof, double talk with the able Al Kelly and his impreshes of contemporaries Jessel, Lauder and Jolson. In the prelim to the Jolson bit he works with Kelly and two stooges for a risibility-rising sesh. And the impresh brings plenty table pounding.

The Yost group sound off the specialty setup with some well blended harmonizing of the operetta tops. Tenor, however, might well take a lower key in essaying those high notes. Come back for the finale bit with Miss Raye to achieve a healthy bowoff.

Rest of show holds over with Jack Stanton and his smartly devised spin-taps, trim looker Betty Luster and her solid toe-terps and a line that is costumed in good taste and has been given two short, imaginative routines. George Paxton rates a bow for the manner in which he and his unit cut the show. Lary.

Kitty Davis', Miami

Miami Beach, Jan. 10.

Billy Vine, Prof. Backwards, Cheena De Simone Dancers (6), Phyllis Arnold, Patricia Adair, Johnny Silvers Orch (6), Luis DeRamon Orch (6); $3-$4 min.

It's rough going for most of the smaller clubs in town, what with the big and able-to-spend spots setting up heavy name layouts which draw what biz is around. In Kitty Davis' case she has gone all out to compete, booking in acts that have proven draws in this town in recent seasons. What militates against the policy, however, is the minimum charge policy. It is as high as the Copacabana, Latin Quarter and Beachcomber, and the production values are not there for the competish. A policy of straight-good acts can't fill a room to capacity here, no matter what the minimum or name.

In Billy Vine, the spot has a comic "known" to Miami who purveys his standard stuff, which includes his "Goodbye Sadie," the Drunk and the "Sadie Thompson" routines always good for plenty laughs. He has added, however, a modern day bit that is sock all the way. Recounting an imaginary meeting between Harry Richmand, Jessel, Cantor, Tucker contrasts with his impreshes of Jackie Miles, Harvey Stone, Frances Faye, Joe E. Lewis, Milton Berle and Jan Murray. It makes for a show-stopping sequence. He had to beg off.

Emceeing in smooth and amiable fashion, Professor Backwards builds to his own odd stint via the blackboard and his spelling and writing of words in reverse via a series of topical gags which many a comic has probably lifted by now. The barbs are thrown at Washington, Lewis, Bilbo and present day problems in general, for a good measure of laugh response.

Rest of the show builds neatly. Patricia Adair ballet toe-spins to heavy palm whacking. She's a trim little looker who paces the proceedings in nifty manner. Cheena De-Simone dancers are a sextet of guys and gals who triple up the standard waltz, fox-trot and latin terps for good returns. Could use more attractive costûmes for the femmes, though. Sultry looking Phyllis Arnold does okay in singing pops.

Johnny Silvers and his unit cut the show in top style, while Luis DeRamos handles the Latin addicts in competent fashion for the dancing Lary.

Surrey Room, Boston

(HOTEL TOURAINE)

Boston, Jan. 10.

Lucille Manners, Carl Sands Orch (8); $2.50-$3.50 minimum.

Since its opening in September, the Touraine's Surrey Room, best looking spot in town, hasn't clicked too well, having been hampered by extensive renovations in adjacent lobby and having come in just as nitery biz fell off.

It's had a steadily increasing—and a steady—biz, however, and seems set as a solid spot once the workmen clear out. In view of this, the boite changes policy on the conclusion of Lucille Manners' stay here, reverting to a straight band policy with a trio to relieve, thus offering continuous music rather than the former name. This policy will remain in effect until work is done.

Miss Manners, as final name for time being, clicks nicely, using her big, well-trained voice to plenty advantage in such faves as "Siboney," "They Say It's Wonderful," a "Show Boat" medley, "Oh What a Beautiful Morning" and "Lero, Lero," a South American tune. She hardly uses the mike, circling the floor and singing to the customers. Looks very attractive and obviously appeals.

Dinner crowds not bad, maybe 50% capacity, mostly well-heeled business people, as place goes in for cuisine. Carl Sands music quiet, unobtrusive and suitable, with graceful piano supplied by Sands. Elie.

Eva Tanguay

which remained synonymous with her through the years.

One of her most profitable production acts was "Salome," produced in 1908. Despite squawks of scantiness of costume it broke boxoffice records sans official interference until she decided to take it off—the production, not the costume. Once she fashioned a costume of dollar bills and when Lincoln pennies appeared she used them for spangles.

In 1910, at the height of her career, Miss Tanguay said that the secret lay entirely in her personality, and she always exploited that personality to the utmost.

After losing her last fortune and being practically penniless in 1933, she was stricken blind. A friend of palmier days, Sophie Tucker, paid for the operations which restored her sight. She later made plans for a comeback to raise funds for a children's hospital for the blind but an attack of arthritis crippled her. At time of death she had been working on her memoirs to be captioned "Up and Down the Ladder." She had recently sold part of her manuscript to the American Magazine section of the Hearst newspapers, which had run three stanzas prior to her death. Money derived from that sale was to be divided among stage charities, according to Miss Tanguay.

She had been on the stage since childhood, having essayed title role in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" when eight. Upon death of her father some years later she turned to vaudeville.

She had been married three times. Her first husband was John W. Ford, dancer, from whom she was divorced in 1917. Later she was married to Roscoe Ails, vaude actor, this marriage also ending in divorce. In 1927 she obtained an annulment of her marriage to Alexander Booke, her pianist, on grounds of fraud.

To the end she had a fetish for secluding herself from friends, preferring that they remember her as the devil-may-care hoyden of the "I Don't Care" era rather than the fading, invalided woman that she was. When friends would visit her and knock on her cottage door, she'd admonish them, "Don't come in. Eva Tanguay is not here."

Surviving are a sister and two nieces.

OBITUARIES

EVA TANGUAY

Eva Tanguay, 68, personality songstress and vaudeville headliner of yesteryear, died as result of a stroke in Hollywood, Jan. 11.

Further details in vaudeville section.

MAX MOSCOWITZ

Max Moscowitz, 88, who for more than half a century had been a prominent operator of Yiddish theatres and companies, died in New York Jan. 11. He was the husband of Jennie Moscowitz, who had starred in the Yiddish theatre for many years under her husband's management.

A native of Romania, he came to the U. S. in 1886 and soon obtained employment as bookkeeper in a lower east side, N. Y., theatre. There he met his wife, and together they began careers that were to establish her as an actress of repute and him as a manager-producer and theatre operator.

Moscowitz is reputed to have established the first Jewish vaudeville theatre, when that WPA project occupied Keith's.

At the time of his death, Burton was writing a book on "My 40 Years in Show Business." He had contributed many feature articles on show business to the Sunday magazine of the Indianapolis Star.

WILLARD J. BAYLEY

Willard J. Bayley, vet legit actor and stage director, died in New York Jan. 6.

During his long career in the theatre, which started around the turn of the century, he had toured the country in pop-priced legits. He managed, directed and acted in stock companies in St. Louis, Chicago, Boston, and many other cities. He also played in many of the Gilbert & Sullivan operettas.

Perhaps one of the most notable factors in his career was the fact that in the early 1900's he was known throughout the country through which he trouped as the Actor-Preacher. He had studied for the ministry, but yielded to the call of the theatre before he was ordained. This became known, and many folks still living in towns in the west and south remember the dashing young actor who, after entertaining them all week in the theatre, would preach a sermon to them on Sunday.

Survived by widow.

CHARLES D. HAZELRIGG

Charles D. Hazelrigg, 75, retired opera conductor, died Dec. 30 at Redondo Beach, Cal., following a stroke. He had been living in retirement since 1939 after 50 years in the biz.

During his career he conducted 106 operas and musical comedies and was the first American to direct "Cavalleria Rusticana," at various times he was associated with the American Light Opera Company, the Andrews Opera Company, the Boston Ideals, the Robin Hood Opera Company and others. For two seasons he functioned as musical director for D. W. Griffith and Metro pictures. His last active work was with the Federal Music Project in Los Angeles.

Surviving are his widow, Nellie Andrews Hazelrigg, former prima donna and a son, Alan C. Hazelrigg of Pasadena.

RENEE FALCONETTI

Renee Falconetti, French actress, former wife of the comedian Max Falcaise, and of her own theatre, The Avenue, Paris, died in Buenos Aires Dec. 12, after a brief illness. When France was invaded by Nazis she escaped to Switzerland, from there to Brazil and then finally to Argentina, where she had lived since 1942.

She began as a music hall actress at Le Boeuf Sur le Toit in 1914. Her first legit appearance at the Avenue was in Racine's "Phedre," and it rocketed her to fame as a dramatic actress. She created the principal role in de Bouhelier's "La Vie d'Une Feeme," and in "Le Carnaval des Dreams." In her appearances in Buenos Aires she carried her audiences, but it was impossible to organize regular seasons due to difficulties in rounding up supporting casts.

PHILIP H. BARTHOLOMAE

Philip H. Bartholomae, 67, retired playwright and one-time producer, died in Winnetka, Ill., Jan. 5.

Playwright got his Broadway start in 1911 when his first play, "Over Night," was produced by William A. Brady. He subsequently formed his own producing company to stage another of his plays, "Little Miss Brown," and the musical, "When Dreams Come True," which starred Joseph Santley. He also authored the libretto for the musical, "Very Good Eddie," and initial edition of "Ziegfeld Follies." He later went to Hollywood to engage in screen writing but retired six years ago.

OSVALDO URRUTIA

Osvaldo Urrutia, Panamanian international's branch manager for Peru, died Jan. 8 in Lima.

Urrutia, a prominent figure in the motion picture industry in Chile and Peru for the past 24 years, had been a Paramount manager there for the last 15 years. In 1923 he had joined the firm of Mario Grene and Co., film distributors in Chile, which also handled a Paramount account. Later, in 1927, he had become associated with a theatre chain operating in Concepcion and Tomuco, in Chile, which post he held until he joined Paramount in 1931.

He is survived by his widow and four children.

LEONARD ROBERTSON

Leonard (Robbie) Robertson, 55, press agent, died at his home in Cleveland, Dec. 31, from a heart attack.

Robertson, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, had charge of publicity for Al Sutphin's Cleveland Arena and its theatrical attractions for past eight years. Previously he was district representative for Ford Motors in same area.

Survived by widow, Mrs. Ellen Kingston Robertson, who will carry on his ad agency and work for Arena.

WALTER GILBERT

Walter Gilbert, 60, legit actor, died after a heart attack in Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 12.

He had appeared on Broadway with George M. Cohan in "Pigeons and People," "Scarlet Sister Mary," "Lost Horizon," "Skylark" and with Tallulah Bankhead in her revival of "Rain" a few years ago. More recently he played under the management of George Abbott for two seasons in "Kiss and Tell" and appeared in the same play in USO tours.

Survived by a sister and brother.

W. ELMER KEETON

W. Elmer Keeton, 61, Negro musician and composer, who wrote the scores of "Swing Mikado" and "The Little Chillun," died at his home in Oakland, Calif., Jan. 1.

A native of Rolla, Mo., and a graduate of Northwestern University, Keeton directed the Northern California Negro Chorus from 1932 until 1940. From July, 1944, until his death he served as music director for the Richmond Recreation Department.

CONNIE SHELDON

Connie Sheldon, 26, singer who last appeared in the Olson & Johnson show at the Town Casino, Buffalo, died of leukemia in New York, Jan. 10.

Miss Sheldon was at one time under contract to Warner Bros. and had appeared in legit shows including Gilbert Miller's "Jacobowsky" and "Time, Place and Girl." During the war, she toured with the USO-Camp Shows.

Remains were sent to Hollywood for burial.

WALLACE EAMES

Wallace Eames, vaude and nitery comedian, died in Jersey City Jan. 7.

Earlier in his career he had been a singer, succeeding Jack Coleman as tenor with the Avon Comedy Four and later had appeared in duets with Smith & Dale, who had also been members of that comedy quartet.

He retired from show business four years ago.

ARTHUR WRIGHT

Arthur Wright, 32, former singer with Ozzie Nelson's orchestra, died in New York Jan. 7. Death followed

MARRIAGES

Ballet Future Dark, Unless Talent Is Merged, Warns Impresario Hurok

By S. HUROK

The public for ballet is limited. So are the talent, repertoire and profits. Although I have been promoting ballet in this country for more than 20 years, and more people are attending performances today than ever before, the future of ballet is doomed unless there is an amalgamation of all available talent into one—or possibly two—companies.

If this sounds paradoxical or pessimistic, it is the only logical conclusion which the facts support. Ballet, we must admit, is not an essential commodity. The public can live without it. If there is a recession, it will probably be the first form of entertainment which will be hit strong body blows at the boxoffice.

Unless ballet is properly presented with a large repertoire of spectacular productions, strong corps de ballet, and big name stars in theatres where it is possible to gain the illusion and perspective necessary for its enjoyment, the public will start staying away in droves. Let's face it. Ballet, to succeed, must be glamorized. There are too many smaller companies which cannot present ballet in its proper focus. They are draining the limited pool of first-rate talent.

The profit margin for ballet, like the public and talent, is small. In fact, it is practically non-existent. It is no secret that in the first season of the current ballet renaissance which started when I presented the Original Ballet Russe at the St. James Theatre in 1933, I lost $85,000. Since the ballet has been nursed until a year ago, it was possible to make money in New York. Tours are still not a paying proposition, even if there are solid capacity houses from one end of the country to another.

Fed Less—and Better

To retain today's healthy ballet appetite, the public must be fed less—and better. Too many companies are trying new formulas, which have never succeeded. Some are basing their appeal on ensemble work with no star names. While a strong corps de ballet is the foundation of any first-rate company a dance unit cannot succeed without stars. This has been proven even in Russia, which for the last 75 years has been considered the mother of the ballet. Whether it is Leningrad or Moscow, Paris or London, stars pack the houses; not ensemble work.

The Sadler Wells Company in London tried to build their appeal on a strong corps de ballet. They had to revert to names.

In the United States, the star system is even more important. Audiences are nurtured on big names in every entertainment field. Whether it is the opera, concerts, films, the theatre or radio, people go for names and glamor. The movies especially have brought audiences up to demand stars. There is no indication that ballet audiences are any different.

A major company must also have a great repertoire. With production rights generally in a confusing pattern of lawsuits, it is almost impossible for all the companies appearing today to have a representative repertoire. And experience has shown that the catalog must be heavily built on the classics. While new works must not be neglected, unless they receive spectacular performances, the majority do not remain on the active list for long.

The inevitable conclusion is that a merger is imperative. All elements with a sincere interest in ballet today, whether it be artistic or financial, must work toward such a goal. I feel confident that the majority of people interested in ballet see the need for such a company, which, bolstered by additional imported talent, will provide the public with the finest ballet performances available. Unless such steps are taken in the very near future ballet will enter the same period of darkness which followed the era of Pavlova, Diaghilev, Duncan and Novikoff. It took more than two decades to get the house lights burning again and rebuild audience interest. The lights can burn brighter than ever for an indefinite time, however, if we mould the current potpourri into an integrated dancing unit.

4-A One Big Union Plan No Nearer to Fruition Despite Equity Interest

At the recent Equity membership meeting the council was asked about the status of the long-talked of plan for one big union, the planned centralization of the various talent unions. A fuller report on the subject was promised for the next quarterly meeting but there are no indications that the idea is any closer to consummation than when first proposed and so long as each group insists upon retaining its identities, no combination is believed possible.

Committees of Equity, Screen Actors Guild, American Federation of Radio Artists and other unions, have labored over the plan for more than six years. A survey of the earnings, dues and other financial angles of all the Assn. of Actors and Artistes of America (Four A's) affiliates was made by experts but the right or acceptable answer was not forthcoming. The financial phase of the problem may be worked out but the real hurdles are the difference in working conditions that exist on the stage and those which apply to radio, films and night clubs.

The only uniformity among the talent groups appears to be that of initiation fees, each of the unions having set the sum of $100 for applicants. That fee has been in effect in legit for some years, most of the others having had a fee of $50 but Equity's $18 annual dues are the lowest of all. Most other talent unions have dues of $30 but members of the screen and radio affiliates may pay as much as $100, according to their earnings, dues being on a percentage basis plus the minimum.

Doubtful whether Equityites would agree to tilting their dues and under a one-card setup uniform dues would apparently be mandatory. Not a few legit actors are not active in the other fields and would object to increasing the dues, although a contemplated boost of minimum salaries might cause them to revise their views. Interchangeability between the talent unions appears to be satisfactory to most actors but a percentage of Equity members seem to want one card permitting them to appear in all entertainment fields, without being required to apply to each other union if and when necessary.

O'DANIEL TO MANAGE DETROIT CIVIC OPERA

Barry O'Daniel has been appointed managing director of the Detroit Civic Light Opera Co., succeeding Max Koenigsberg, formerly of St. Louis, who is ill. Season will open in February as heretofore, at the Masonic Temple, it being the fourth year for the outfit. O'Daniel was formerly connected with the Shuberts on the directional end of operetta revivals and last summer he was active with similar activities at the Greek theatre, Griffith Park, Los Angeles.

Joe Flynn is the press agent, a post held for several seasons by Freddie Schader.

Operetta in Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Continuation of Civic Light Opera Co. here was assured last week when Kaufmann's Department Stores announced a second straight outright gift of $50,000 for the 1947 outdoor season. Similar donation a year ago permitted the beginning of the enterprise, which showed a loss of $44,000 although flock of fixed items, such as the big stage, lights and sound equipment, were written off immediately and will not recur. These are valued at more than $31,000.

At same time, Edgar J. Kaufmann, head of Kaufmann's, was elected president of opera company, replacing H. Edgar Lewis, who served during the opening season.

Skulnik's Second

Menasha Skulnik preems his second production this year on Friday (17) at the Second Avenue theatre, N. Y. Musical, "Leave It to Me," will have in supporting roles Leon Liebgold, Lily Lilliana, Yetta Zwerling, Max Rosenblatt, Jacob Susanoff and Anna Teitelbaum.

Chorus is under direction of Lillian Shapero.

Boston Critic, Getting Citation, Sees Sanity Increasing in Theatre

Boston, Jan. 14.

Elliott Norton, drama ed and critic of the Boston Post, was awarded a Citation of Merit by the Boston College Institute of Adult Education last week on basis of "high ideals of Christian humanism" in his aisle job.

Norton, Harvard '26, has been first-nighting for the Post since 1934, and is currently doing a daily series of interviews and biogs of legit stars in addition to his reviews. Accepting the citation, Norton said there are good signs of increased sanity in the theatre. "Of the 20 successful plays on Broadway currently there are only two that seem to me immoral." In the '20's the proportion was much higher, he said.

Wolfit Troupe May Play Bard Works on B'way

Montreal, Jan. 14.

Donald Wolfit, British thesp here for a 10-day run with his Shakespearean repertory group, told VARIETY Friday (10) that negotiations are now going on with "three parties" in New York and there's a fairly good chance that Broadwayites will see the company. He wouldn't say who the "three parties" were.

Before he accepts any N. Y. offers, Wolfit said, a number of things will have to be cleared up, among the chief things being the pushing back of his March opening of the London season. Thesp said the only way he'll play in N. Y. is on a flat guarantee basis. Percentage deals are out of the question, he said, and he's just waiting for the New Yorkers who've made offers to come around to his figure.

Another point made clear by Wolfit is that he'll only come down if he's allowed to do the complete repertory seen here, which includes "Merchant of Venice," "Hamlet," "As You Like It," "King Lear," and Ben Jonson's "Volpone." He'll refuse to do a straight run of any one play, claiming that "Lear," for example, would be too hard on him.

Meanwhile, the company has been playing to SRO houses in Montreal, but the take will not be as big as it could be since many of the matinee payees are made up of school children, who come in for lower prices. Moppet sales have been so big that Wolfit cancelled tomorrow's (Wednesday's) showing of "Volpone" and has replaced it with a repeat showing of "Merchant."

'DREAM GIRL' FOLDS ON ROAD AFTER 4 WEEKS

Recently re-formed road show of "Dream Girl" will close in Baltimore Saturday (18) after being out four weeks. Cast is a combination of players who were in the Broadway and Chicago units, with June Havoc in the leading part. Combined company is in its fourth week, three weeks having been played in Phila. where business was rather disappointing except for New Year's week when takings approximated $16,000. Show being expensive to operate, it about broke even at that level.

"Girl" was a hit on Broadway last season until illness forced Betty Field out of the show. Haila Stoddard subbed for a time and Miss Havoc replaced. Elmer Rice comedy drama was profitable in New York while the Chicago engagement was an even break.

Including the picture rights "Girl" was a big winner for the Playwrights' Co. which produced it and Paramount which had an interest. Par made a pre-production deal for the rights which called for a down-payment of $100,000 plus 15% of the gross during the Broadway run and 10% on the road, total from the film end being estimated at more than $240,000.

'Stairs' to Preem in Pasa

Pasadena, Jan. 14.

World premiere of Tennessee Williams' new legit play, "Stairs to the Roof," will be staged at the Pasadena Community Playhouse, Feb. 19-March 2.

Gilmor Brown and Rita Glover are co-directors.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Not that show needed it, being a complete sellout at Nixon anyway, but "Oklahoma!" got a lot of extra space here in the newspapers last week when news came out that marriage last summer of Mary Hatcher and James Alexander, who were then playing opposite each other in the national touring company, had been annuled. Father of Miss Hatcher, who left show to do femme lead in Par's "Variety Girl" and is now Laurey of parent company in New York, pressed the action and then wrote Alexander a letter asking him to defray $500 expenses of the action.

Interviewed by local reporters, Alexander said he and Miss Hatcher planned to be remarried in June, when she reaches age of 18. Annulment was granted on grounds that she was under age, only 17, and didn't have consent of parents when marriage took place in Seattle several months ago while "Oklahoma!" was there for an engagement.

In the program of the City Center, where "Bloomer Girl" is the current attraction, Bernard Sobel contributes an article glorifying theatrical press-agents who have "helped keep the theatre alive . . . also amused and instructed the public with fact, fancy and imagination." Sobel claims the publicity boys were dependent upon the "temperament of editors and the vagaries of managers," until the Assn. of Theatrical Agents and Managers (union) "saw to it that they got a living wage and due respect." He admitted that the craft boosts many a bad play but "heartbreak and ridicule never stop a p.a. His eccentricities in manner, dress and escapade are essential to his task." This season the minimum pay for p.a.'s started at $165 weekly, which was tilted by one-third, but top men earn that much and more ordinarily.

Now that Oscar Homolka, who was supposed to have been originally set for the lead, has bowed out, efforts are being made to secure Paul Lukas for "The Whole World Over," the Russian play by Konstantin Simonov, adapted by actress Thelma Schnee. Paul F. Moss, former screen writer and one-time manager of middleweight champ Billy Soose, and Miss Schnee's husband, who will co-produce "World" with Walter Fried, flew to Palm Springs over weekend to talk to Lukas. Play, incidentally, will be Moss' debut as a Broadway producer.

Others standing by waiting for a lead to be signed so rehearsals can begin are Uta Hagen and Joseph Buloff.

Home at Port Jervis, N. Y., owned by Lino Manzoni, an Italian actor who played opposite Margaret Perry in "Strictly Dishonorable" on the road, burned to the ground on New Year's eve while he was visiting in the neighborhood. Manzoni bought the property about four years ago, it being an old house which he was modernizing ever since taking title. Ironic angle is that he intended taking out fire insurance the day after the holiday so that the blaze was a complete loss.

Tullio Carminati, who played the male lead in the N. Y. company of "Dishonorable," was reported appearing on the stage in Rome recently. Early in the war he was deported to Italy after declaring allegiance to Mussolini.

Although "The Big Two" opened doubtfully on Broadway last week, Robert Montgomery and Elliott Nugent, who produced it, are virtually assured of making money with the play in light of a pre-production deal for the picture rights with Columbia. Understood the deal calls for a down payment of $100,000, plus a weekly sum, dependent upon the length of time "Two" plays, the maximum amount for the rights being $250,000. Stipulated that Montgomery will enact the male lead in the picture version for Col. Reported that the show came in with the production earned back through operating profits out of town. It's the second managerial venture of Montgomery and Nugent. They were associated with John Golden in producing "A Place of Our Own," a short stayer, in 1945.

Story in a N. Y. tabloid last week about Jimmy Stroock, of Brooks Costume Co., his wife Bianca and their daughters, Gloria and Geraldine, who are under contract in Hollywood, was intended as laudatory, as all four are doing well in their respective vocations. Reaction among the Stroocks was rather mixed because the yarn indicated the family is well up in the chips.

Jimmy said that as a result four guys tried to make a touch and nine play scripts were submitted to him, as the story mentioned that he occasionally took pieces of Broadway productions.

Jean Meegan has been appointed to a drama beat at Associated Press in N. Y. to service out-of-town newspapers with a weekly Saturday p.m. column. She succeeds Willa Martin, who left to freelance. Miss Meegan will continue her radio features for AP. Jack O'Brian continues to cover first nights for AP's service to morning and afternoon papers. O'Brian also has a six-a-week general Broadway column which goes to p.m.'s, a Sunday Broadway strip for morning papers and a Sunday drama roundup.

When Eugene O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh" opened with a 5:30 afternoon curtain and a dinner intermission, later discarded and a starting time established at 7:30, the matter of other early curtains was recalled. The late afternoon and dinner interlude applied to "Mourning Becomes Electra" and "Strange Interlude," both also written by O'Neill. A similar performance schedule applied when Maurice Evans appeared in the full length "Hamlet," a performance that required four-and-a-half hours.

Owen Davis, Sr., veteran playwright, recently went to an eye specialist because his vision had become somewhat blurred. Doctor asked the dramatist how much he had written, Davis approximating that his several hundred plays represented 14,000,000 words. When the specialist remarked it wasn't strange that his eyesight became defective, the writer replied he didn't expect to write anywhere near that number of words from now on.

Bobby Howes' Illness To Close London 'Boys'

London, Jan. 7.

"Here Come the Boys," the Lee Ephraim-Bernard Delfont musical, at the Saville, closes in two weeks. Closure is due primarily to Bobby Howes, who is co-starring with Jack Hulbert, being in hospital with pneumonia.

Show replacing it is stage version of "Wizard of Oz," which opened as Christmas attraction, playing matinees at Winter Garden, and has proved real money draw.

Shore Gets Legit

Atlantic City, Jan. 14.

Legit comes back to the shore Thursday (16) as Haddon Hall management offers the George Spelvin Players in John Van Druten's "Old Acquaintance" for three nights as its first of a series of eight plays.

Hotel business hasn't been so good the past few weeks, and localites are complaining.

1946 LEGIT BIZ IN HUB 15% BETTER THAN '45

Boston, Jan. 14.

It has been a boff year in the Hub with legit grosses running a distinct 15% above 1945 due to strong attractions and solid bookings. The town's six legit houses, five of them Shubert-owned, have had few dark weeks, all of them but the Copley being in constant use.

Opera House has had an especially big season with mammoth takes on "Song of Norway," Ballet Russe, "Student Prince" and "Blossom Time." Shubert theatre has had "Call Me Mister" six weeks, never going below $34,000 and hitting above $38,000 New Year's week. "Born Yesterday" had 15 weeks at the Wilbur averaging $15,000 a week. The Colonial, likewise, was well above last year's average. Except for Christmas week slump, legit houses have been cleaning up.

Morehouse, Kronenberger, Coleman 1-2-3 at Halfway Turn in Critics Derby

Ward Morehouse, reviewer for the Sun, is distinctly out in front of the New York critics for the first half of the 1946-47 season, according to VARIETY's scoring of the indicated boxoffice success or failure of shows presented from June 1, '46, until Jan. 1, '47. Revivals are included in the score for the first time because those attractions have become an integral factor in theatre activity rather than being just shows presented for limited periods.

There have been more first nights this season than during the similar period for 1945-46, and curiously, the N. Y. critics have made more wrong predictions than heretofore, despite the fact that two first-stringers—Brooks Atkinson, of the Times, and Richard Watts, Jr., of the Post —have rejoined the aisle-sitters. Their duties overseas relevant to the war don't appear to have sharpened their perceptiveness but most of the others were fooled approximately twice as often by the season's product as heretofore. That takes In VARIETY's reviewers, too.

Scoring was very close for the runner-up post, Louis Kronenberger of PM nosing out Robert Coleman of the Mirror, with Atkinson, who previously was a top man, secure in fourth place, which standing he will probably improve on before the end of the season. Percentages of the next two reviewers are very close but thereafter the figures decline markedly.

At the bottom is William Hawkins, new critic for the World-Telegram, mostly because he couldn't make up his mind about five shows and was marked down as giving three many "no opinions." Only two other reviewers appeared to have declined the issue, but only in one instance each.

A Poser

The American Repertory Theatre, which produced four revivals so far, presented a poser for the scorekeeper, who decided that ART's attractions could be counted as one unit and a reviewer's judgment be lumped as one. To date the rep outfit is in the red. Only one of its shows appears to have boxoffice strength, that being "Androcles and the Lion," recently added to the bills. That ART concedes this to be correct was indicated by its presenting Bernard Shaw's comedy four times last week, the other four performances being spread among the three other shows.

Only the critics on the Manhattan dailies are listed in the boxoffice score. There have been three changes in the personnel of reviewers, Atkinson having displaced Lewis Nichols, who in the midseason of '45-'46 was the leader, while Watts replaced Vernon Rice (who took over the late Wilella Waldorf) on the Post and Hawkins stepped in for the Telly when Burton Rascoe bowed out. At the halfway mark last season Morehouse was running fifth so his current leadership is rather a pole-vault in comparison.

Philly Goes After Pelts Of Its Ticket Scalpers

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Ticket scalpers are going to find their lot not so happy in the future following action by Philadelphia city council, when an ordinance was presented which requires registration of all ticket agents. Failure to register will bring fines and imprisonment.

Council action was result of vigorous campaign against scalpers by the Philadelphia Inquirer. Philadelphia Record also took up crusade.

The ordinance applies to scalpers selling tickets for sports events as well as theatres.

'Annie,' 'Born' To Get Down Under Production; Aussies Shop Materials

Australian rights to "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Born Yesterday" have been purchased by J. C. Williamson Theatres, with E. J. Tait, one of firm's directors now in N.Y., signing final papers this weekend. Both shows will be staged in Melbourne in May, with mixed Aussie-U.S. leads. Casts have already been chosen.

Aussie chain has also bought the entire production—gowns, sets, flats, etc.—of the recently-closed Broadway musical, "Park Avenue," for $10,000. Production only was bought, as play could not be done in Australia because of its basic divorce theme, latter being unacceptable to Aussie audiences.

Because of the terrific shortage of materials in Australia, Williamson has been buying gowns and drapes of various shows during the war years, such as "Firebrand of Florence," "Duchess of Malfi," "Roberta" (Coast production).

Tait and Miss Dorothy Stewart, Williamson's N.Y. rep, will sail for London Feb. 5 on the Queen Elizabeth for a five-week business trip connected with shows for Down Under.

'Mistress' Lays Off For Lunt Surgery

Alfred Lunt was operated on for the removal of a kidney stone at St. Luke's hospital, N. Y., Saturday (11), on which date "O Mistress Mine," in which he has been costarring with Lynn Fontanne, suspended at the Empire. It had been announced that the show would suspend and Lunt intended to rest for a month but a specialist advised immediate surgery to alleviate a painful but not serious condition.

"Mistress," one of last season's standouts, was aimed for a capacity gross before the Saturday performance was cancelled. The advance sale bettered $57,000 and the boxoffice is remaining open for refunds and exchanges, show being dated to relight Feb. 10.

Ruth Draper started solo appearances at the Empire Sunday (12) and will continue appearances on the Sabbath, plus three matinees—Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

British Actors in 'Press' (50G Flot) Going Home

Most of the English players imported to appear in "Love Goes to Press," which was yanked from the Biltmore after five performances during the holidays, are returning home this week. Two may remain over here but under Equity's alien regulation cannot appear in legit for six months. The director and six actors were brought from London, where they appeared in the Martha Gellhorn - Virginia Cowles comedy last summer.

Britishers were guaranteed three weeks plus transportation by Warren P. Munsell and Herman Bernstein, who presented the play, which was on the boards for a month including out-of-town dates. The red approximated $50,000.

Gripes at the B.O.

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

Maybe somebody ought to tell the boys at the boxoffice that the honeymoon is over, and that the quick closings prove that no longer a seller's market, even if they're lucky enough to get good notices.

Specifically, I'm referring to the guy behind the wicket at the Adelphi, where "Street Scene" is playing. In view of the turkeys which have opened there in the past, and the solitary time he's had to think it over, he ought to have learned that customers are still the people who keep a show going. Or do you think he prefers to talk to himself?

I, like a lot of other lovers of the theatre, went to the boxoffice with a simple request: "Two tickets for any night, as good as possible," and figured I could trust him to do well without arguments. The character in charge, gave me one of his elegant stares and snooted me with, "Choose your night, there's a calendar there, I don't decide when you want to go to the theatre." He proceeded to tell me the boxoffice had been open for three weeks and some people had got their tickets early. (I've helped pad the runs of some of those turkeys from one week to three that way myself, but I've gotten wiser since.)

This same guy pulled the same act when "On the Town" was running. Maybe he's got ulcers?

I've been going to the theatre since I was a kid, even buying tickets at boxoffice price when Gray's was peddling them at cutrates. How short can these boys' memories be?

Bob Granitz.

'Pygmalion' To Set Precedent In Mex Showing

What is hoped will result in establishing English-language shows in Mexico City will be the appearance there of "Pygmalion" the week of Feb. 3. Guarantees have been posted with Theatre Del Iris which produced the revival on Broadway last season. The show has been guaranteed against loss by Melvin Park, lessee of the Iris theatre in the Mexican capital, which has 50,000 English-speaking residents. It's possible to gross $30,000 on the week with "Pygmalion" at the Iris, house being built as a legiter but used for pictures. If the experiment works out, it's planned to establish stock in the theatre.

Actors are protected against possible tax deductions from their salaries below the border, show management to assume such costs, same applying in the event the cast is required to join a professional union, but the usual American withholding levy applies. "Pygmalion" closes in Chicago Jan. 25, traveling by train to Cincinnati, going from there by plane to Mexico City. There will be 25 people in the party headed by Gertrude Lawrence and Dennis King.

Following the Mexican date the "Pygmalion" company will fly to San Francisco, being due to open there at the Curran, Feb. 11. Show will travel 8,000 miles in all, cost of transportation possibly exceeding $5,000. Park was formerly business manager for Maurice Evans.

PEMBERTON EASES OFF ON DOCTOR'S ORDERS

Brock Pemberton has been ordered to slow up by his physician because of a high blood-pressure condition and is due to leave on a motor trip to the south late this week. Showman will be accompanied by his wife Margaret. Pemberton recently had a gall-bladder attack and has been under medical observation, although not hospitalized.

No definite date has been set for the Pemberton showing of "Harvey" which he produced and it may not reach the boards over there until late spring or summer. Comedy's author Mary Chase Coyle is still abroad, in anticipation of "Harvey" going on in London this winter. She is currently in Paris but may return to New York until a definite date for the English showing is established. "Harvey," now in its third year on Broadway, is expected to play into next season.

Equity Okays Dropping Negro Bar In D.C. National Though Risking Suit

This Way Out

When "No Exit" opened at the Biltmore, N. Y., Nov. 26, Robert Garland panned it following day in the N. Y. Journal-American as an "utterly high-toned intellectual hoity-toity," breaking into verse about "The French, they are a funny race, Whose plays seem queer and out of place."

But in listing his 10 Best Plays of 1946 in the J-A last week, Garland had "No Exit" included, as number eight.

R.R. Trouping May Tilt 25%

Cost of transportation for road shows may be increased 25% beginning Feb. 1, new tariffs for "free" baggage cars and special trains having been drawn up by the railroads and submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission. While the rate per mile would not be tilted, it would apply to baggage cars used to transport settings, props and trunks, also special trains. Managers through the League of New York Theatres vigorously protested the proposed tilts to ICC.

Baggage cars would be furnished for 25 or more fares, instead of the present minimum of 20 tickets. If an additional car is required the manager must purchase 10 additional tickets at a cost of 12½ fares, same applying when baggage cars are not accompanied by passengers (actors and staff). If special trains are required the manager must purchase 125 tickets instead of the present 100. Minimum charge for special trains would be increased from $132 one way to $165 and the cost for round trips on specials goes from $264 to $330. Latter part of the schedule pertains to large musicals, including the Met Opera.

Recently the Southern Pacific proposed to require 150 fares for special trains but ICC denied the application which will be argued by the rail line with the commission next Aug. 1.

Showbiz Reps Discuss Anti-Censorship Bill; Commissioner Ignored

Representatives of various theatre groups including managers, unions and even the critics, conferred last week for the purpose of supporting a measure intended to limit the censorship powers of New York's license commissioner. Bill was drawn up by Councilman Eugene P. Connolly to be introduced into the city council.

It stipulates that the license bureau may not deny the issuance nor cancel a theatre's license, unless a show alleged to be indecent is convicted by a jury. There is a similar bill which was introduced in Albany last year. It is known to be opposed by a religious pressure group but may be acted upon during the current session of the state legislature.

New license head Ben Fielding was not present at the session and expressed surprise that he was not invited, especially since he is concededly friendly to show business. Those present agreed that the failure to ask Fielding to attend was an error of omission. Commissioner said that he had refrained from acting on several complaints this season and in each instance the shows mentioned closed swiftly on their own. Indicated that the squawks came from crackpots.

The overall theatrical move to curtail censorship stemmed from the action of former license commissioner Paul Moss, who forced "Trio" off the boards about two years ago.

Morill To Revive Bill

Albany, Jan. 14.

Senator Fred Morill, Brooklyn, told VARIETY he would reintroduce a bill granting the owner of a stage show ordered closed by the New York License Commissioner for alleged indecency the right to apply for injunction in a jury trial in state supreme court, within 10 days of the comish's order. Meanwhile, the show would go on.

A lengthy report on Negro segregation in Washington theatres written by Alfred Harding of Equity's staff was read to legit managers last Friday (10), with no conclusive reaction on the part of the showmen. Survey of opinion expressed by officials, editors and others residing in the capital was a pro and con compilation as to whether colored patronage should or so not be discriminated against. Impression was that there were more opinions opposed to changing the custom, but Harding recommended that Equity campaign to terminate discrimination.

The agitation is principally aimed against the National, only theatre that regularly plays legit in Washington. (Lisner Auditorium, Washington Univ. occasionally books legit.) Report points out that there are sharp segregation lines in the Capital in schools, picture houses, cafes and hotels.

Also that in Constitution Hall, where Negroes are admitted but not allowed on the stage, there is only limited colored patronage and the class of audiences are about the same as those at the National. Latter house is under lease to Marcus Heiman, who has gone on record as not being opposed to Negroes if the theatre's patrons are acquiescent and if assured that a change in policy would not result in injury through audience distaste.

Theatre is owned by the Munsey estate, officers of which feel that the National's profits would materially decline if Negroes were admitted. They would see to it that if they suffered damages through a change of policy, Equity could be legally held financially responsible for that loss.

Heiman said he could present films at the National and as most film houses in the city do not admit Negroes that would not change the situation. Showmen generally do not favor a change in audience setup because it would alienate all border cities and might eliminate playing time from Baltimore south.

Harding recommended to Equity that it "resolve to move to end racial segregation in the theatre of Washington" and send a representative there to launch a campaign to persuade the citizens of Washington that "this change in policy is a matter they should accept not only because it is right but because they want to." He urged however that Equity take no action by itself but to act in concert with other theatre groups.

Other Groups Join OK

The report was read also to the Assn. of Theatrical Agents and Managers board, which decided to participate in the proposed campaign up to the membership. Opinion among that group's individuals appears to be that legit is being used as a guinea pig in an issue that extends far away from the theatre.

Theatre chapter of the American Veterans Committee scheduled a rally at the Alvin next Monday (20) to hear the cast of "Lean of Lorraine." When that show tried out at the Lisner Auditorium, Negroes were excluded and there were protests from the Playwrights' Co. that produced the show and from Ingrid Bergman its star. Vets rally has been called 'Onstage Democracy." They also aim to have theatrical unions and guilds take action against discrimination in all theatres.

Roman Choir Inked By Gallo for U. S. Tour

Impresario Fortune Gallo, who recently arrived in New York by plane from Rome, revealed that he had inked the Roman Choir of 60 voices for a tour of the U. S., Canada and Mexico. Leading soloists comprise cantors from noted Vatican churches.

Slated to tee off in New York, Sept. 1, choir will be directed by Msgr. Lavinio Virgili, Pontifical Director of the Choir of the Papal Archbasilica, St. John Lateran, parish church of Pope Pius XII. Singers for the most part, come from the Sistine Chapel, "the Pope's own choir" and others. Recalled that the Vatican choir from the Sistine Chapel made appearances in the U. S. in 1926.

Producers new to the field of musical comedy have turned out an unusual diversion which is really a play with songs and dances. As a novelty, it should ring the bell.

Being fantasy, "Finian's Rainbow" was conceived with a strong vein of Celtic humor, the authors transplanting an old Irishman and his niece to a southern tobacco growing community in mythical Missitucky. Basically it's a one-set show though there are several smaller scenes screened from the Rainbow Valley's gnarled tree and rocks from where the action flows.

"Rainbow" has a fast, lively first act, mostly because of an animated ensemble in ballet-like numbers. Second act tapers off somewhat because the story is strung out, yet the performance is generally interesting and quite different from any show presented in some time. There are white and black actors, mostly in the ensemble, and the performance is probably more mixed in that respect than ever before.

Finian McLonergan, who has filched a pot of gold at home, comes to the valley with the colleen Sharon and hides the "borrowed" loot in the ground. It had been in the keeping of Og, a leprechaun who appears in search of the gold. He says that the gold has magic powers, which cues in a bit of "social significance." Senator Rawkins thinly disguised as Bilbo being turned into a Negro.

When that worthy tries to steal the land of the sharecroppers upon hearing there's gold around, it leads to the show's best production number, "When the Idle Poor Become the Idle Rich," with all hands dolled up in cherished duds procured directly from Sears Roebuck. Power of the gold makes a dumb girl talk and eventually the senator becomes white again, although now a tolerant official. In the end the gold turns to dross, just as Og said it would.

Albert Sharpe was brought from Ireland to play the roguish Finian but it's Ella Logan's show, and she is excellent all the way. She sings no less than eight numbers, one of the best being "How Are Things in Glocca Morra." With Ronald Richards, who is her heart interest, she sings "Old Devil Moon," also "If This Isn't Love" and "Come-and-Get-It-Day." Then with David Wayne there is a novelty lyric, "Something Sort of Grandish." Wayne, who plays the leprechaun, has the best stage job after years of waiting. He quit "Park Avenue" to join "Rainbow."

He scores, too, with "When I'm Not Near the Girl I Love," with Anita Alvarez. Miss Alvarez, who plays the dumb girl, is a dancer, enlivening the ensemble numbers. An amusing ditty is "The Begat," sung by the colored trio, Jerry Laws, Lorenzo Fuller and Louis Sharp. Robert Pitkin makes it a quartet in a fashion, he at the time being supposed to be black. Dolores Martin of the colored contingent warbles "Necessity." When Miss Alvarez solos with a "dance of the golden crock," she's accompanied by Sonny Terry on the harmonica, his playing from the wings being eerie.

Lee Sabinson and William K. Katzell, who teamed last season with the presentation of the provocative drama, "Home of the Brave," are the presenters of "Rainbow," which attracted attention in Philadelphia during the tryout. Yip Harburg and Fred Saidy wrote the book, which could have been cut here and there, Burton Lane composing the score to Harburg's amusing lyrics. It's the first dance directional job by Michael Kidd, formerly in ballet, and he scores. General staging is by Bretaigne Windust; vocal arrangements by Lyn Murray, Russell Bennett and Don Walker orchestrations are played by a full orchestra led by Milton Rosenstock, string instruments being featured. Jo Mielziner's principal setting is highly effective, changes being made behind a revolving curtain. "Rainbow" is a colorful job, skillfully done. Ibee.

The Playwrights' Co. and Dwight Deere Wiman (the latter back to the producing wars after three years abroad for the Red Cross) took a long chance in doing a musical version of Elmer Rice's 1929 Pulitzer prizewinning drama. But they've succeeded. Billed as a "dramatic musical," their show is actually an opera, American style, taut, tuneful and moving. Artistically, their contribution is a noteworthy addition to the Broadway scene and commercially a click.

Anyone who, for the sake of one or two arias, has sat through three boring hours of guff about dragons, sorcerers, sea-hidden baubles and the like at the Metropolitan Opera emporium will be grateful for a modern production on an intelligent, timeless theme that has continuous drama, flow of good music and excitement.

The story is the same Elmer Rice canvas of life in a shabby New York tenement, centered around a love-starved housewife and her errant lover, and the unhappy husband who kills them both. Rice contributed the book, based on his play; Kurt Weill supplied the music, and Langston Hughes the lyrics. The three-point blend has proved felicitous, one contribution dovetailing with another for a solid match.

There are no hit tunes as such, in the juke box sense, but there are notable solos, as well as some fine duets, quartets and groups, and ensemble numbers. But each song is an integral part of the production and advances it accordingly. The play's form is spoken dialog, breaking into recitative as emotional tension mounts, and into song constantly for full effect. The balance is very good. What distinguish the production further are some fine acting and singing, every performer having a voice of superior quality. Result is a work that rarely falters, to sing itself smoothly to its close.

Notable bits are strewn throughout, in such matters as the choral grouping and singing at the second-act murder curtain, the three harpies singing "Get a Load of That," the panegyric to ice-cream, the mock lullaby of the nursemaids, and above all the frenzied sex-dance of the two jitterbugs. Last bit, a virtuoso peak of the show, magnificently danced by Sheila Bond and Danny Daniels, is done to "Moon-Faced, Starry-Eyed," which is nearest to hit-tune type in calibre. The catchy high-school kids number, "Wrapped In A Ribbon And Tied In A Bow," is also in that category.

Norman Cordon, basso borrowed from the Met, does an excellent acting and singing job as the brooding husband. Polyna Stoska, soprano who has sung with the N. Y. City Center Opera Co., makes a distinguished figure dramatically and vocally as the unhappy wife, while contributing one of the show's finest songs in "Somehow I Never Could Believe." Anne Jeffreys, film starlet, is no less lovely and poignant a figure as the daughter, and with Brian Sullivan as the student in love with her, presents two fine duets as well as the tender "What Good Would The Moon Be?" song. Sullivan's "Lonely House" is an appealing number.

Creighton Thompson, as a janitor, has a fine song in "I Got a Marble and a Star." Don Saxon, as a seducer, has another in "Wouldn't You Like To Be On Broadway?" Another notable solo is Miss Stoska's "A Boy Like You." In addition to the "Ice Cream" song, other outstanding ensemble numbers are the opening and closing "Ain't It Awful, the Heat?" song of the neighbors, and the "Catch Me If You Can" number of the kids.

The play has all sorts of noteworthy types, in the socialist zealot of Irving Kaufman; the hearty music teacher of Sydney Rayner, onetime Met tenor more recently with San Carlo Opera Co.; the brilliant beldame of Hope Emerson; the expectant father of Remo Lota, and the two nursemaids of Peggy Turnley and Ellen Carleen.

Charles Friedman has directed this motley assemblage with sure authority, while Maurice Abravanel, conducting in the pit, welded them vocally. Jo Mielziner's tenement-front set is raptly ugly and affecting. Anna Sokolow's two ensemble dance numbers are good and the aforementioned "Moon-Faced" dance terrific. "Street Scene" should be on the Broadway scene for quite a stretch. Bron.

The Big Two

Elliott Nugent and Robert Montgomery production (by arrangement with David Bramson) of comedy by L. Bush-Feketo and Mary Helen Fay. Stars Claire Trevor and Philip Dorn; features Felix Bressart and Eduard Franz. Staged by Montgomery; scenery and lighting, Jo Mielziner. Opened at Booth, N. Y., Jan. 8, '47; $4.80 top.

The out-of-town critics have been kidding us again. From the byways that lead to Broadway have come reports in recent weeks that Elliott Nugent and Robert Montgomery had come up with a play destined to settle problems of atomic energy, proletarianism versus western democracy, Gromyko and his walking shoes. Well, maybe this is exaggerating.

At the very least, though, "The Big Two" was expected to be a reasonably exciting treatment on postwar international politics, namely those of the White House and the Kremlin. The auspices, cast, authorship and practically everything else smacked of capitalistic boxoffice. But now—well, just change that figure mentioned in the title. Just make it an O. The Big O.

Playwrights L. Bush-Fekete and Mary Helen Fay have combined their touch of international politics with gobs of romance plus too-obvious characters and dialog. The result is a disunity equal to the flotsam of the real-life prototypes about whom they've written.

The basic yarn is of an American woman correspondent who seeks to smoke out an unknown American traitor in hiding after having broadcast for the Nazis. The setting is a small inn in a Russian occupied zone near Vienna. Into the picture, too, comes a Russian Army captain, apparently with the same idea. The play evolves into a duel of words re their respective ideologies. Plus the romance. The play, as in so many "message" plays, falters notably because the amour toujours seemingly becomes more objective than the original premise upon which the play was based. Must the he-she tangle always be so inevitable in plays that would determine the fate of the world?

At any rate, the playwrights believe there is a democrat's chance for their Captain Mosgovoy—and, inferentially, Joe Stalin. At the play's close there is an obvious note of optimism in his conduct towards the attractive American, but the authors haven't made too clear what specifically was the dominating influence in his change of heart and mind. One could possibly determine from this that a leggy lassie with a classy chassis in the White House might be just the thing in these troubled United Nations times.

"Two" has some neat touches in the lesser characters, though some of their dialog strains for special effect. Claire Trevor is the American correspondent, and she gives a consistently creditable performance. The same is not to be said of Philip Dorn, who plays the Russian captain. Dorn often overacts and is frequently inaudible, stiff and stagey.

Felix Bressart has also been imported from Hollywood for one of the lead supporting parts, that of a black marketeer; he supplies the play's major comedy. Bressart is an artful performer who employs much of the mugging technique that he's used in pictures, but there are times when he suffers from obvious word-contrivances. Eduard Franz is the traitor, a part acted with quiet restraint. E. A. Krumschmidt and John Banner have lesser roles that they handle adequately, while a bit character part, that of a forlorn refugee, played by Olga Fabian, is one of the play's best performances.

Montgomery staged, and he has frequently managed to suggest movement where little actually existed. Jo Mielziner's single set, the lobby of the hotel, is a typically workmanlike Mielziner job.

Columbia has already secured the film rights, in a pre-production deal that is said to call for Nugent and Montgomery to direct and star, respectively, in the pic. As a film "Two" has a better chance. Kahn

Play Out of Town

All My Sons

New Haven, Jan. 9.

Harold Clurman, Elia Kazan, Walter Fried (in assn. with Herbert H. Harris) production of drama in three acts by Arthur Miller. Staged by Kazan; settings, Mordecai Gorelik; costumes, Paul Morrison. Opened at Shubert; New Haven, Jan. 9, '47; $3.60 top.

Joe Keller	Ed Begley
Dr. Jim Bayliss	John McGovern
Frank Lubey	Dudley Sadler
Sue Bayliss	Peggy Meredith
Lydia Lubey	Hope Cameron
Chris Keller	Arthur Kennedy
Bert	Eugene Steiner
Kate Keller	Beth Merrill
Ann Deever	Lois Wheeler
George Deever	Karl Malden

Sponsors of "All My Sons" have presented a dramatic production that opens with the leisurely pace of the Toonerville Trolley, then builds to all the crescendo of the Cannonball Express. Way-stations along the route are contacted interestingly, and the overall journey sums up as an absorbing session in the theatre. With no cast names, and with little material for advance ballyhoo, this vehicle shapes up as a sleeper that can well develop into a gravy train on both stage and screen.

Timely as tomorrow's headlines, script has a compelling authenticity that drives home a postwar story with triphammer effect. Starting with a theme that has all the earmarks of a mother's maudlin vigil for the return of a son reported missing in action, play abruptly shifts to throw the spotlight on other characters whose importance magnifies as the story progresses. Counterplots are tossed into the arena copiously, making for considerable audience wonder as to what is coming next. Ace writing and staging draw in the threads at the proper moment and the final stanza mounts one punch on another for a sock climax.

"Sons" should bring red faces to those who have clipped corners here and there to fatten bank accounts on war profits. It should draw a healthy response from returned GIs now trying to adjust ideals garnered during war service with practicality of present-day world operation. It's a stagecraft campaign for the restoration of principles that were shunted aside in the years of the great conflict. Play has something worthwhile to say, and it does so entertainingly.

Joe Keller is a manufacturer in a typical American town. He has a prosperous appliance business as a changeover from making airplane engine parts during the war. His two sons, Larry and Chris, had served as air pilots and Larry had never returned from a mission. Chris, always an idealist, has scruples about living off the fat of his father's business because of a suspicion that his father was guilty of an offcolor deal, involving defective cylinder heads, which had sent 21 pilots to their death. The case had been tried in court but Joe had shifted the blame to an assistant, now serving a term in prison.

Chris is in love with Ann, daughter of the convicted man, but he hesitates to declare this love because Ann had been engaged to the missing Larry. Kate Keller, Joe's wife, refuses to believe Larry is dead and she attempts to break things up between Chris and Ann. Subsequent developments point up Joe's guilt and Chris is set free to live his life no longer under a shadow of doubt.

Thesp honors are well distributed in a fine cast. Beth Merrill's version of the distraught wife and mother is a study in underplaying a high-strung role. She comes through expertly. Ed Begley makes Joe Keller everything that the part calls for. It's arduous acting, at which he scores a bullseye. Arthur Kennedy's moulding of the Chris characterization is expert, rating the hand it gets. Lois Wheeler is attractive and turns in a capable performance as Ann. Karl Malden adds a telling sequence as Ann's brother, and John McGovern's picture of a medical practitioner who would rather do research is good. Other competent support lists Peggy Meredith as the doctor's wife; Dudley Sadler and Hope Cameron as a nextdoor couple, and Eugene Steiner as a neighborhood kid.

Kazan's development of this opus is outstanding. Abrupt changes in story trends maintain constant interest; gradual increase in pace builds effective suspense; individual characterizations are given minute treatment; and overall blending has gratifying results. Author has provided some fine material for stager to work with. There's plenty of meat in dialog. A standout backyard setting completes technical attributes in ace fashion. Bone.

Set Condon Comedy

Dick Condon, former film publicity exec, has completed a play which goes into rehearsal in March for a Broadway opening this Spring. Producer will be a New York film publicity topper, who'd rather not make his auspices public as yet. Director will be Fred Uttal, radio producer and director. Titled "Follow the Leader," it's a political comedy laid in 1954.

Condon has also sold four sketches to Dwight Deere Wiman for the "Fourth Little Show," which goes into rehearsal March 6. Likewise he has written yarns for a children's disk series in which several record companies are showing interest.

Chicago Biz Just Rollin' Along; 'Norway' 37G, 'Apple' 19G, 'Union' 18G

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Fact that Chicago is loaded with about 40,000 delegates to furniture show has meant practically nothing to the legit b.o. for some reason. In fact, out-of-towners haven't even been noticed in legit houses.

Localites' undue fear of theatres being jammed by conventioneers may in some sense be reason for things being pretty quiet, although no one is crying about current biz.

Last Chicago curtain came to "State of the Union" last Saturday (10) after successful 38-week run. Due soon are "Magnificent Yankee" and "Born Yesterday."

Estimates for Last Week

"A Flag Is Born," Studebaker (3d week) (1,246; $4.20). Approximately $14,000.

"Apple of His Eye," Erlanger (3d week) (1,334; $3.60). Plenty of seats available; $19,000.

"Harvey," Harris (23d week) (1,000; $4.20). Still going pretty strong with $20,000.

"Pygmalion," Selwyn (6th week) ($1,000; $4.20). Okay with $17,000.

"Song of Norway," Shubert (6th week) (2,100; $4.80). Biggest in town $37,000.

"State of the Union," Blackstone (38th week) (1,358; $4.20). Says goodbye with $18,000.

L.A. BIZ IS HOLDING UP, WITH 'LUTE' OK 18G

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Legit business held up nicely here during period of slump that usually follows holidays. "Lute Song" took in fair $18,000 for first frame at the Biltmore but lusher coin is seen for present stanza. Ken Murray's "Blackouts of 1947" did itself proud with $17,000 on 238th stretch at El Capitan.

Surprise coin hike was Belasco's "She Dood It in Dixie," which garnered $10,275 on second frame. Musart picked up so-so $2,500 on first frame of "Shared Wife." Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire bowed into El Patio over weekend with mixed notices. Actors Lab opening series of one-acters tonight (14) for second time in history of organization, having had successful run over two years ago with similar program at professional take-off.

'Henry' Grabs Good 14G In One Week St. L. Stand

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

The presence of "Springtime for Henry," with Edward Everett Horton in the top role tied in with a break in the frigid weather but did not soften up the b.o. The piece, scaled to $3.05, wound up its one-week stand at the American theatre Saturday (11) with only a fair b.o. record. Eight performances grossed an approximate $14,000 despite raves from the crix who went overboard for the piece and cast.

House is dark currently for the first time this season due to the inability to book any shows. The house will be relighted Monday (20) when Walter Huston heads the "Apple of His Eye" company into town for a one-week engagement.

Shows in Rehearsal

"Carrot and Club" — William Herz, Jr.

"Countess Julie" and "A Marriage Proposal"—Paul Czinner.

"Darling, Darling, Darling" ("First Hundred Years") — William Cahn.

"A Dangerous Woman" ("Cordelia")—David Lowe and John Huntington.

"The Chocolate Soldier" (revival) —J. H. Del Bondio and Hans Bartch.

"Craig's Wife" (revival) — Gan Gaither.

"Brigadoon" — Cheryl Crawford.

"Washington Square" — Oscar Serlin.

"Apartment 17-B" — Richard Aldrich and George Abbott.

LEGIT PRODS. OPEN ON COAST

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

New production outfit for the presentation of new legit plays on the Coast was organized here by Harry Carr, Leon Dinkin and James Scott.

Firm will maintain headquarters in Los Angeles but its first stage venture is slated for San Francisco in March.

'Voice' 15½G, Toronto

Toronto, Jan. 14.

Here for a fortnight's engagement, "Voice of the Turtle" did an excellent $15,500 at the Royal Alexandra, with 1,525-seater scaled at $3 top.

'Central Park' Draws 28G To D.C. Till in 3d Stanza

Washington, Jan. 14.

"Up in Central Park," in its third stanza here, held up fairly big with $28,000 in the till. Upper tiers of National continued to do capacity, but biz fell off in high-tariff seats, with $4.80 too stiff for post-holiday purses.

"Blossom Time" returns for the umpteenth time Jan. 20, replacing Elisabeth Bergner, who cancelled out. "Glass Menagerie" bows in for a fortnight Feb. 3, under aegis of ATS.

'Rope' Pulls 11G, Detroit; 'Yankee' Boasts $21,000

Detroit, Jan. 14.

"The Rope," a humorous thriller starring John Carradine, ended its two-week run at the Shubert-Lafayette with an estimated business of $11,000 for nine performances at a $3 top.

At the Cass, "The Magnificent Yankee" concluded its two-week stay with fine $21,000 on the second.

'Spirits' Poor 5G, 'Fancy' $3,000, 'Mister' 31G, Hub

Boston, Jan. 14.

Three openers on one night last Monday (6), with "Best of Spirits" replacing "Big Two" at the Plymouth, "Blossom Time" replacing "Sweethearts" at the Opera House, and "Young Man's Fancy" opening the Copley. None of the shows got raves, but all were well received. All three are currently in final week.

"Call Me Mister" remained the sock draw in the town, catching big biz throughout the lean holiday weeks and continuing to sell out most performances. Should remain here the winter. One opening this week; "All My Sons" currently on view at the Colonial. In the immediate future are "John Loves Mary," at the Plymouth, Jan. 20; "Apartment 17-B," at the Wilbur Jan. 21, and "Washington Square" at the Colonial Jan. 27. San Carlo Opera returns for nine performances Jan. 19. Meantime, "Icecapades," near-capacity biz for fortnight, moves out of the Garden.

Estimates for Last Week

"Born Yesterday," Wilbur (1,200; $3.60). Finished huge 18-week run at estimated $12,000 and moved out. Had been hitting $17,000 and better up until Christmas, near top at scale. House will be dark one week.

"Best of Spirits," Plymouth (1,200; $3.60)—Show got mixed notices, sufficiently good to draw biz on opener Monday (6), but first week's take, estimated around very weak $5,000.

"Blossom Time," Opera House (2,900; $3.60) — Old fave back again without letup in biz, the estimate touching $19,000, which is excellent. Final week current, with San Carlo Opera Co. coming in 19th.

"Call Me Mister," Shubert (1,590; $4.85)—Continues phenomenal draw, remaining right up to near-capacity, estimated $31,000 on fourth week with no signs of letup. May well stay the winter.

"Young Man's Fancy," Copley (1,100; $3.60)—Opened Monday (6) to catch encouraging notices but drew very poor $3,000. Will remain extra week through Jan. 25.

'OKLA!' 39½G IN PITT FINALE; 113G FOR 3 WKS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

"Oklahoma!" ran up a record-breaking $39,500 on its third and final week at Nixon, approximating what show did the previous season. On the three weeks, hit musical rang up almost $113,000 at $3.50 (without tax) top, the government grabbing an extra $22,500 via the amusement levy. Final two weeks were the biggest in Nixon's recent history at the scale, topping season's previous high held by "Bloomer Girl."

House currently has "Born Yesterday" for a fortnight and then gets Bankhead's "Eagle Has Two Heads" if that show doesn't find a Broadway house in the meantime. "Voice of the Turtle" then comes in Feb. 3 for two weeks.

'Sons' 6G in 4, N. H.

New Haven, Jan. 14.

B.o. reception for "All My Sons" preem reflected general dropping off of business last weekend. No-name cast had slim advance in Shubert till, but fine press and word-of-mouth reaction built to an approximate $8,000. At $3.60 top on four shows, this meant fair take.

House has a series of breakins lined up, starting with current "John Loves Mary" (16-18). Next week gets "Washington Square" (23-25); following stanza has "Carrot and Club" (30-1), then "Brigadoon" bows in Feb. 6-8.

'Little A' OK 8G, Balto

Baltimore, Jan. 14.

"Little A," new play by a new writer, Hugh White, presented by Sam Nasser, also a newcomer to showbiz, attracted highly favorable critical response and a mounting b.o. to Ford's last week, building on strong word-of-mouth to an okay $8,000.

In currently is "Dream Girl," with Tallulah Bankhead in "The Eagle Has Two Heads" set to follow. Good advance action indicated for both.

Broadway Grosses Variable; Most Grosses Dipped; New Musicals Okay; 'Scene' 19G in 4; 'Rainbow' 16G in 3

Grosses along Broadway naturally dipped last week because the excess takings on New Year's Eve were out and there was a post-holiday reaction. Some shows however did better than expected, theatre parties being the factor in several instances. Agency business is variable, brokers figuring the cause may be a trend towards recession.

All four new musicals are doing business which is one promising indication. Last week's tuners were especially accepted favorably, "Street Scene" getting over $19,000 in the first four performances, while "Finian's Rainbow" got $16,000 in three times. Attendance for "Bloomer Girl," back for a return date, was under par the first week. "The Big Two," got fair business after a weak press. One new play, "Little A," opens this week.

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), M (Musical), O (Operetta).

"Annie Get Your Gun," Imperial (35th week) (M-1,427; $6.60). New musicals do not figure to affect the business of this front runner which clicked with better than $45,000 again last week.

"Another Part of the Forest," Fulton (8th week) (D-968; $4.80). Eased off a bit but with takings around $20,000, another profitable week was registered.

"Beggars Holiday," Broadway (3d week) (M-1,900; $4.80). Agencies have fairly good call for new tuner with takings rated around $34,000.

"Born Yesterday," Lyceum (50th week) (C-993; $4.80). Close to year's run and expected to run through another summer; close to $21,000, which is capacity.

"Call Me Mister," National (39th week) (R-1,104; $6). Another run musical that is on the collecting end here and on the road; takings better than $32,500.

"Carousel," Majestic (91st week) (M-1,667; $6). Sharp reaction after holiday but with the gross approximating $27,000, run musical quite okay.

"Christopher Blake," Music Box (8th week) (D-979; $4.80). Went up to around $21,500 after easing off; couple of theatre parties the explanation.

"Finian's Rainbow," 46th Street (1st week) (M-1,319; $6). Opened to distinctly favorable press with one or two qualified notices; big advance sale prior to debut; $16,000 in first three times.

"Happy Birthday," Broadhurst (11th week) (CD-1,160; $4.80). Little or no change in great business of this comedy, which was quoted nearly $30,500.

"Harvey," 48th St. (115th week) (C-920; $4.20). Bit off, but longrun comedy always gets support of visitors, and it's already indicated that it will play into next season; $17,000.

"Icetime," Center (30th week) (R-2,994; $2.40). After the rush of business during New Year's week, attendance dropped plenty; gross approximated 529,000.

"Joan of Lorraine," Alvin (8th week) (D-1,331; $4.80). From the way this drama draws it's expected to sell out into May when star's (Ingrid Bergman) contract expires; $32,700 quoted.

"Life With Father," Bijou (371st week) (C-613; $3.60). Run leader eased off as expected but aimed into spring or longer; around $8,000.

"Little A," Miller (D-940; $4.20). Presented by Sam Nasser; written by Hugh White; liked out of town; opens tonight (15).

"Lovely Me," Coronet (3d week) (C-1,095; $4.80). First full week's takings around $6,000 which is not promising; "All My Sons" booked here Jan. 29.

"O Mistress Mine," Empire (42d week) (CD-1,082; $4.80). Engagement suspended as of Friday (10) because Alfred Lunt's illness required hospitalization; in six times under $20,000; had been selling out.

"Oklahoma!", St. James (203d week) (M-1,509; $4.80). Musical run leader doing all right again after tapering, but last week's gross dipped to $23,000.

"Present Laughter," Plymouth (11th week) (C-1,063; $4.80). Has done very well considering doubtful reception, and is still making money; approached $18,000.

"State of the Union," Hudson (61st week) (CD-1,057; $4.80). Not as many standees, but house virtually sells out all time, and gross approximates $24,000.

"Street Scene," Adelphi (1st week) (M-1,434; $6). Drew rave press, and should click despite out-of-town doubt; quoted at $19,000 in first four times.

"Toplitzky of Notre Dame," Century (3d week) (M-1,712; $4.80). Another new musical getting agency support; around $44,000 in first 10 week's gross rated around $21,500.

"The Big Two," Booth (1st week) (C-812; $4.80). Drew disappointing notices after promising out-of-town showing, but okay $11,500 in first five times.

"The Fatal Weakness," Royale (8th week) (CD-1,025; $4.80). Perked up and, with the aid of parties, last week's gross rated around $21,000.

"The Iceman Cometh," Beck (14th week) (D-1,213; $5.40). Dipped further, then improved late last week, with the gross in six times (no matinees) around $18,500.

"The Voice of the Turtle," Morosco (145th week) (C-939; $3.60). Slipped to around $9,000, but three-person play makes some money at that level.

"Temper the Wind," Playhouse (3d week) (D-865; $4.80). Business spasmodic, with pace around $8,000, but weekend encouraging; may improve.

"Years Ago," Mansfield (6th week) (C-1,001; $4.80). Has done exceptionally well to date and went over $25,000 last week; best gross to date.

REVIVALS

"Bloomer Girl," City Center (1st week) (M-2,693; $2.40). Started repeat engagement moderately with $20,000 approximated in first seven times; good advance claimed, and much better indicated this week.

"Burlesque," Belasco (3d week) (C-1,077; $4.80). Drawing excellent business—around $20,000—as good as holiday week, not counting New Year's eve.

"Henry VIII," "What Every Woman Knows," "John Gabriel Borkman" and "Androcles and the Lion," International (10th week) (1,172; $4.20). Around $18,000, which is distinctly disappointing; "Androcles" much the best bill; played four times with other four performances to the other plays.

"Lady Windermere's Fan," Cort (13th week) (C-1,064; $4.20). One of the season's clicks; getting very good business, with last week's takings estimated around $20,000.

"Cyrano de Bergerac," Barrymore (14th week) (CD-1,096; $4.80). Another revival that has been among the good things; eased off last week to bit under $17,000.

"The Red Mill," Shubert (M-1,382; $4.80). Final and 64th week; "Sweethearts," a prior booking, is booked to follow next week.

'Eagle' 16G, Philly, 'Sweethearts' 20G, 'Lucasta' 19G

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Philly's four regular legit houses did good business last week despite pessimistic reports, here and elsewhere, that the edge is off amusement attendance. Unusual feature of the good trade last week was that much of it was window sale; advance biz has been off hereabouts for quite a few weeks.

City's only musical, revival of "Sweethearts" at the Shubert, led the parade with a respectable if not spectacular $20,000. Notices were good along the line and revival is figured to jump several grand in this, its final session. Musical didn't have high scale, contenting self with modest $3.90 top.

Real sensation last week was "Anna Lucasta's" rousing $19,000 in its third week at the Locust. This Negro drama has built steadily from start and is now certain to linger longer than originally scheduled six weeks. "Anna" has four more after this week which makes it sure of eight in all and may get an extra two.

"The Eagle Has Two Heads" was one show that did have a good advance, based on the Tallulah Bankhead name and draw, but notices were by no means helpful, although all crix admired the star. As result, "Eagle" got $16,000 in its first of two stanzas at the Forrest—good but not what might have been expected at the show's $3.90 top.

"Dream Girl" ended its three weeks' tenancy of the Walnut with satisfactory $15,000.

This week's only opener was cancelled last Thursday. It was to have been "Lady Passing Fair" for a single session at the Walnut. House is currently dark.

'Hamlet' $21,000, Frisco; 'Mary Surratt' $12,000

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

"Hamlet," starring Maurice Evans, which opened at the 1,776-seat Curran, Jan. 6, drew rave notices and chalked up an excellent first week's gross of $21,000.

"Story of Mary Surratt," with Dorothy Gish and Kent Smith, drew a second week's gross of $12,000 at the 1,550-seat Geary. Last week it did $14,000.

Liberty's Blast at Time

One of the most forthright attacks of one magazine on another is contained in the current (11) issue of Liberty, with publisher Paul Hunter indicting Time magazine and other Henry R. Luce publications in a lead editorial titled "Time Wisecracks On!" Attack is on the "bright young men" of Luce's "empire" who have brought success to Life, Time, Fortune, etc., who "instill into their pages most of the virtues and faults of youth."

"The Luce publications are alert, breezy, ubiquitous, energetic, precocious and interesting," said Hunter. "They are also presumptuous, cynical, impetuous, intolerant, prejudiced, exhibitionist and inaccurate. Time, which purports to set the standards much that is neither informative, constructive nor factual. In short, much of it isn't news at all, but merely journalistic exhibitionism, or more simply smartalecksness . . ."

Sobol, Wilson's Nobiesse Oblige

New York columnists Louis Sobol and Earl Wilson are doing a unique noblesse oblige on their "Copacabana" (UA) film junket to Hollywood, where, with Abel Green, editor of Variety, they play themselves in the pic. Picket Picked as Prexy

The Pennsylvania Legislative Correspondents Assn., has chosen Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neil, political editor of the Philadelphia Record, as 1947 president. Calls were made to find O'Neil and notify him of the honor. He was found on the picket line in front of the Record building, where the American Newspaper Guild has been on strike since Nov. 7.

The election marked the first time in the history of the association that a member on strike was elected to the highest office. Traditionally, the president-elect sets 'em up for the 35 association members the night he is elected. Since O'Neil was unable to be present, he deputized the news room custodian to do the honors for him.

Luce Explanation

One of the unsuspected reasons for the relaxing of the Luce (Time-Life) feud with the New Yorker is that Luce crowd's acquisition of quite a bit of F-R Corp. stock, latter being publishers of the New Yorker.

This explains Luce writers doing stuff for the New Yorker (John Hersey, et al.), and in reverse some of editor Harold Ross' stable doing stories for Luce.

Laurie Conned Into Reviewing a Whodunit But Sez He's Not Sore

My editor sez to me, "Joe, here's a book you should review because it's about show business." So I sez, "If it's about show business I'll be glad to 'review it, and I'm telling you now, if it's even near-good I'll like it because I like show business." So he gives me the book and I notice on the jacket that it was written by a guy called Milton Michael Raison, who was a publicity man for many Broadway producers and shows, and was co-producer with the late Heywood Broun of "Shoot the Works" and wrote pieces for the World-Telly, book review for the Herald Tribune, Vanity Fair, Century, Scribner's, Harpers, the Saturday Review of Literature and the Dickerman, besides now writing for MGM and radio. So I takes the book home, and when I get ready for bed, I put two pillows behind me, lay out my box of fresh figs and fill up my pipe and start reading. First I look at the title, a book reviewer should do this so I am told, and it sez, "My Friend the Widow" (Murray & Gee; $2). So I figures right away it's a louse title for a show business book.

So I start reading the book. It starts off swell, right off the bat I'm told about a pretend Tony Woolrich who is a dramatic critic for the New York Record about to cover a show which he already hates. Also a figure who can't write Tony Woolrich be? No doubt it's a phony name for some Broadway critic... well, I can't figure it out. So I go further and I'm told that the critic gets a phone call from a pal to help him save a dame who has had a tough break. Then I see the guy is an amateur detective so I immediately eliminate Kelcey Allen as the critic-detective because I know Kelcey can't even find his seat in a lit theatre, let alone find fresh figs and puff on my pipe, and read on. I find the dame has just escaped from a "retreat" or a sanitorium which even I know is a rich man's padded cell. And the dame is beautiful, has well rounded Earlwilsons

So I Figure . . .

So I figure he will finally get her on the stage and she will become a star, bowing that you don't have to be crazy to be a star but it helps, I figure as soon as he starts about show business I will be able to pick out his mistakes when he sez Pantages time and means the Orpheum Circuit and the usual mistakes show-business writers make. Well, sir, I keep munching a my figs and puffing at my pipe and read further. The first thing I know I'm into a murder... still nothing about show business... I'm about to give up, but I say to myself I have some more figs left and plenty tobacco so I'll read on.

Well sir, or madame, as the case may be, I'm into a 241-page story short, before I know it I am into three murders... and I begin to realize that my editor and this guy Raison who writes for Century, Scribner's, Harper's, MGM and radio have trapped me into reading a whodunit. A thing which, I am very proud to say, I have never done before. Unless it was one of them murder stories with show people in it. I just don't get interested in detective stories that run over two pages. I know that many of our presidents and governors, and even Bernard Shaw—or is it Oscar Shaw?—reads them, and I know they sell millions of 'em. But I just happen not to like 'em. I know nothing about detectives except that they have a nuisance on the screen where they make fools out of Irish cops and wisecrack to their girl friends. I would challenge anyone of them to find a good week in vaudeville today. Anyway I find that it is 8 a.m. and I stayed up all night reading the book, and I figured I owed it to the dead guy because in the middle of the book I guessed who did the murders and I was surprised to find out I was right. Then again, I figured I'm not such a smart guy to let an editor trick me into reading a whodunit. Spending a whole night doing it. But a funny thing about the whole thing I wasn't sore at everything. I munched out okay ...the figs, my pipe and the book were alright.

This guy Raison who writes for Vanity Fair, The Bookman, and was the Fort Librarian for the Merchant Marine besides writing for MGM and radio can certainly write... but not about show business. He is a good murder writer... and maybe my editor was right at that... because the week before Christmas is certainly murder in show business. SEZ

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Astor Place, Jan. 11.

Not one to stop a fight if there's a chance of working it up to a double-knockout, I nevertheless long ago voted off-the-set slaps between actors as a non-essential industry, to be tossed into the overset with the latest bore news.

Only the other Sunday night Walter Winchell dropped international relations long enough to tell city editors that one of the most exciting fights in years took place in front of the Stork Club and the editors could get the details from Sherman Billingsley. In Hollywood these brawls, which never seem to make the police blotter but rate 8-column streamers two days after the event, find me yawning without interest. I can remember actor's fights that were really fights. It seems only yesterday that I entertained Joe Laurie, Jr., on my knee and regaled him with the bloodier details of the famous Forrest-Macready fight which took in two continents and before it was settled involved 20,000 followers of Shakespeare, most of New York's cops, several hundred troops and finally dropped 22 combatants off at the morgue.

Fight Extra 1849 A.D.

There are historians who may argue that the Forrest-Macready feud was not so much a personal quarrel between Shakespearean tragedians as the final round of the wars between England and America. I do not share the view.

In those days actors were dignified and had titles. Forrest was billed as Mr. Edwin Forrest and Macready settled for Mr. W. C. Macready. I never did know what the W. C. stood for, with Macready, though I know what it stands for in England and on the Continent. It certainly took a brave man to list himself that way and expect to be taken seriously. The late Bill Fields realized its comic implications and held on to the initials for that reason, but Macready was so high in the royal family of legit that Vanity Fair had been listed among publications in the far-off days, could have caught his act only by hearsay among the underground.

The fight started when Forrest invaded England and expected the cooperation he and his friends had given to Macready when Mac came to America in 1840. What Forrest got was the brush wherever he turned. The critics who seemed to listen to the mob instead of the actor, gave Forrest more of the same. Nevertheless, the American was a hit and should have been willing to settle for that. But both hams were really behind the hate-ball by now and began egging their mobs to dire acts.

Forrest made another tour of England and scheduled his farewell engagement in New York in the Spring of 1849. He was to play "Macbeth," after an old sports-writer of the same name. Messrs. Niblo and Hackett were handling the show. Macready was to open on May 7 at the Astor Place Opera House, with Forrest on the same boards at the Broadway, sprinkled over the house. Cops were all over the place. There was so much cheering, jeering and whistling that the first two scenes passed as a dumb show. Then when Macready came on as Macbeth he was met with a Niagara of noises, topped with a bouquet of asafoetida thrown from the gallery. This was an earlier version of the stink bomb.

Macready tried to ignore the rotten eggs, boos, and charming banners which told him it was too late to apologize and he was a liar anyway. But when an old shoe and a penny were hurled at him he leaned over, picked up the penny as a coin and placed it in his broom with the aristocratic air of a Macbeth who never had a thought of murder on his mind.

His lady Macbeth, a beautiful number named Mrs. Coleman-Pope, never was able to have her foul plot heard either. She and Macready had to plug through two acts in pantomime. Not a chair was hurled on the stage. It crashed to pieces at Macready's feet. He bowed and went on with his dumb act. Another chair came sailing through the smell-bound house. When they began coming over in sets, the curtain was lowered to note a lapse of time.

The cheese of police, Mr. Matsell to you, and a squad of cops got Macready into a closed carriage. C. W. Clarke, an actor, as distinguished from W. C. Macready, a star, went out front and pleaded with the peasants to put the finger-on him. "I'm an American," he said, "and my family is dependent on my earnings for its maintenance. That is my only justification for having consented to play with Mr. Macready." The mob understood that "exertions" meant acting and desisted with Clarke.

Even the Upper 10 didn't get the distinction. Headed by Washington Irving, they addressed a diplomatic note to W. C., urging him to continue his engagement come hell or asafoetida. Macready took this as if it were a command performance from his King and returned May 10.

Placards were dropped around town to the effect that the crew a British warship were docked in New York and going to the stand to sustain Macready's performance by force of arms. That did it. It was the Battle of Murray Hill all over again. By 7 o'clock Astor Place was packed so tight even an Astor couldn't get in on a pass. Half of the seats were occupied by cops and the rest by missile-makers.

The curtain's rise brought groans, hisses, jeers, cheers and cries of "Throw him out!" Macready begged Hackett to be allowed to call it quits, but Hackett belonged to the Horatio Algerian school and believed the show must go on. Four rioters were arrested and clinked in a temporary jail under the boxes. The clink had been built by a gaslight and thus proceeded to add shavings to the light. The cops pulled them out before they and the house went up in flames.

While putting out the fire, the coppers heard rocks sailing through the windows of the opera house. Paving stones began coming over in bundles. Soon there was nothing but broken glass windows between Macready and his loyal public—or Tory-adores—as they were called.

Horses Trampled Upon!

The barrage having been laid down, the mob began assaulting the opera house from all sides. Here the militia got in the chase. On the mayor's orders cavalry moved up at 9 o'clock from the City Hall. First came the first division of the state militia, then came the national guard. The cavalry tried to cut through from Broadway to the Bowery and found that people are sometimes tougher than horses. The horses were thrown and trampled on, and the troopers were lucky enough to escape underfoot.

The national guard next tried to drive their way to the besieged theatre and found themselves knocked all the way from the Bowery to Broadway, both ways, by paving stones. Six, including a captain, were knocked unconscious by the Belgian apples.

Next of course came the order to fire over the heads of the Unfriendly Sons of Mother Macready's Son, W. C. That only brought more paving stones. Detail was digging them out of the street with crowbars.

The next order was to aim to the partisans but to fire high and with asafoetida either. Two Americans went down with the first volley, one shot through the right cheek. He was the first dead duck to give his life to the superiority of American renditions of Shakespeare.

After this volley there was the usual reloading and reforming of lines. In the retreat the cops and the military took advantage of the situation and blocked off both ends of the Astor Place so that the Broadway mob could not contact the Bowery bunch.

Some people seem to be a General Sandford, who had apparently remembered the way Napoleon disbursed the French revolution, then ordered some grapeshot brought into action. The first rounds from the brass cannons peppered buildings over the heads of the mob. In reprisal came the paving stones again. Down went more brass. Whereupon the General Sandford ordered Colonel Duryee to let 'em have it low.

This round really made the legit-lovers give ground. They retreated all the way to Lafayette, and he wasn't there. Here the military split the Forrest partisans into further fragments and picked them off until the dawn's early light revealed 22 New Yorkers had been killed between Lafayette Square and Astor Place, and enough injured to convince even Macready that as a tragedian he sure could slay them.

He never finished out his farewell performance and though I am not one to throw caution to the winds, I doubt now that he ever will.

Hollywood Screen Writers Scared To Gamble on Own Creativeness

By NAT KAHN

Most Hollywood writers are afraid to take a chance on their own creativeness—and that's why the film capital is currently battling one of its toughest problems. Namely, a lack of original story material.

Complacency, lack of initiative or an inferiority complex—and perhaps all three—are behind major reasons why the studios are groping for suitable screen stories, according to growing industry opinion in both Hollywood and New York. Producers, writers, directors and, in some cases, performers have been quick to hop the critical bandwagon lashing at the big void of original scripts deemed good enough for filming.

Most Hollywood writers, according to the criticism, have one thought in mind, i.e., take the original works, on assignment, and adapt them for the screen—at salary—instead of

Strawhats Improve As Tryout Source; 6 on B'way This Year

New shows tried out in summer stock in 1946 nearly doubled the number viewed in the sticks the previous year, but the worth of the product was questionable, which was the general rating of rural tryouts before the war. At the end of last summer there had been 43 tryouts out of which observers and scouts thought that 12 were Broadway possibilities.

As the season approaches midwinter, six shows of summer stock origin have been on and off the Broadway boards, two of which were revivals—"Burlesque," which appears best of the crop, and "The Playboy of the Western World," not a winner, but only expected to play a limited engagement which terminated recently. It was tried out at Dennis, Mass., with Gregory Peck in the lead, and fared well. Burgess Meredith took over for Broadway's showing.

Major disappointment was "Won-

HACKETT EAST TO PACT AIR SHOW FOR JOLSON

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Hal Hackett shoves east to close deal for an Al Jolson show, move being sparked by the quick reaction to his guest shot on the Bing Crosby platter show for Philco last week. All details were ironed out over long-distance and the New York trip is for the purpose of closing and signing.

Although sponsor is not disclosed, it's believed to be the Florida industries outfit that is taking to the air to woo industry into the state.

Meanwhile five more guest shots on the Crosby show are being dickered for Jolson.

PULITZER PRIZE SLATED FOR FILM BIZ

Following repeated suggestions from within and without the motion picture industry, a Pulitzer prize may well be awarded for films in 1948. A special Pulitzer committee which met at Columbia University Monday (20) to discuss changes in the prize classifications is reliably reported to have adopted a recommendation to the advisory board that prizes for films be added.

Dean Carl Ackerman, of the Pulitzer School of Journalism at Columbia, secretary of the advisory board, acknowledged Monday (20) that motion picture prizes have long been discussed and that it was entirely within the power of the board, under the terms of the Joseph Pulitzer will, to add the film classification. If

ROONEY MULLED FOR HEIR TO KATE SMITH

With Kate Smith and General Foods parting company at the end of the season, Foote, Cone & Belding, agency on the account, is eyeing the new Mickey Rooney package as a successor. Show is being assembled by the Wm. Morris agency.

Originally it was the plan of the Morris agency to adapt the "Andy Hardy" series to radio for Rooney, but it hit a snag when it couldn't wrap up the rights. So it's now the "Rooney Family," with a format along similar lines.

So it is now Judge Barry Wood.

15G SHOWS GET THE FISHY EYE

By GEORGE ROSEN

Radio is moving in the direction of low-cost shows. Come next season and, in the opinion of close observers of radio trends, the name shows will be on the run in favor of low-budgeted programs that are paying off, on a per point basis, with far greater audiences than many of the top-coin productions.

Sponsors are casting envious eyes at such shows as "Molle Mystery Theatre," with its weekly $2,500 talent nut and a 13.5 rating, and are decrying the emphasis to land a Top 15 Hooper berth when it involves a weekly talent-production nut in the $15,000-$20,000 bracket. In many instances, reduced to a dollars-and-cents point evaluation, they're still taking it on the chin compared with a 10 rating for a $3,000 package.

This recognition of the need for more realistic radio values is currently reflected in the activity around the ad agencies in New York. Shows proffered to the agencies last season by Music Corp. of America, Wm. Morris, et al., for $7,000, are now being re-submitted for as low Sheet Music Sales Up 20% in N. Y.

Sheet music sales are claimed to have picked up approximately 20% during the past week or 10 days by various jobbers in New York. This increase, it's pointed out, is on the basis of overall sales and does not necessarily mean that the biz done by individual publishers has been boosted that much, if at all.

Increase reported by the jobbers seems to coincide with the general feeling among publishers. During the past week or two the business seems to have gotten out of the "one song" groove it has been in for months. Now there are five or six titles selling at a good pace and the circumstance has led some pubs to believe that the break has come.

STORES WOULD SPONSOR PLATTERED LEGIT HITS

New radio package production outfit, Griffin, Boyle & King, is buying up the rights to more than 60 Broadway musical hits spanning the last 15 years for a transcribed series of air shows to be sold to department stores in key cities throughout the country.

Platter series will include reproduction of such items as "Connecticut Yankee," "Girl Crazy," "Of Thee I Sing," "Good News," etc. Half-hour stanzas will be sold locally at from $300 to $500 each. Arrangers, musicians, copyists, etc., are currently working out the series.

RCA Threatens to Drop All Television If FCC Sanctions Color Now for CBS

Radio Corp. of America is prepared to strike against CBS color television by calling a complete halt to all its television activities, both broadcasting and manufacturing, if the Federal Communications Commission grants CBS' request for the immediate establishment of commercial color video standards.

That was the statement reliably reported to have been made last week by Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, RCA prexy, on the eve of the resumption of FCC hearings on color video, slated for the Federal Courthouse, N. Y., next Monday (27). With Gen. Sarnoff himself out of N. Y. and thus unavailable for corroboration, there was no one at RCA's home office who would comment on it. If the report is true, it's believed commercial video would be set back at least 10 years.

Gen. Sarnoff, it's said, paid little attention at first to the CBS push for commercial standards based on the latter's sequential system of color video, being content to show what RCA had to offer and present his arguments that the more desirable method of all-electronic color is at least five years from perfection. As

TIFF ON CREDITS INTO THE OPEN ON 'YEARS'

Blanket which the Samuel Goldwyn publicity department has been valiantly trying to hold over the smoldering hard feelings among writers, director and producer of "Best Years of Our Lives," concerning credits on the pic, was blown off Friday (17), when Mackinlay Kantor took a hefty swing at Goldwyn over the Mutual network. Kantor, who wrote the book from which "Best Years" was adapted by Robert E. Sherwood, squawked that the producer was grabbing credit "as though he himself had dreamed up the idea."

Preacher's 'Dr. I. Q.' Past, Worth 100G Yearly, May Hamper Pulpit Career

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Rev. James McClain, one time "Dr. I. Q." of radio, is afraid his show reputation may hamper his ministerial career.

McClain, an Episcopal deacon due for ordination as minister next summer, preached at Gethsemane Episcopal church here, and in interviews said his reputation as "IQ" m.c. may be handicap to his preaching career.

He left radio job, reputedly worth $100,000 a year, in 1942 to enter Seabury Western Theological seminary, Evanston. Following studies, he hopes to be assigned as missionary to Kentucky, his home state.

Bill to Extend 20% Admish Taxes Slated as 80th Congress' First Law

Washington, Jan. 21.

The bill to extend the wartime excise rates on admissions, night-club checks, etc., appears virtually certain to become the first law of the 80th Congress.

Just how much squeeze the states will put on is still anybody's guess. However, it is a fact that many states and cities have been counting on termination of the high luxury excise rates effective July 1. These local and state governments have bills of their own which they would like to pass to get some of the money toward running their own government units. However, they feel they cannot tax on top of the Federal 20% rate, in many instances, for fear that their people will balk at the burden of the taxation.

Some members of Congress are already beginning to hear from their Governors that it would be a good idea not to extend the present excise rates indefinitely as is provided in the bill of Rep. Robert A. Grant (R., Ind.).

Actually a reduction of the admissions tax would not help showmen in many state, since the local governments would tax whatever Uncle Sam should relinquish.

The so-called "official" bill to maintain the high rates was introduced in the House last Thursday (16) and considered and approved unanimously the next morning by the Ways and Means Committee.

Bill Up Jan. 29

Washington, Jan. 21.

The bill to continue the present high excises—including the 20% on theatres and nightclubs —will go before the House Jan. 29. It is expected to be approved and sent to the Senate.

Measure was reported out favorably Friday by the House ways and means committee. The Republican leadership decided yesterday (20) to get a rule from the rules committee tomorrow (22) and bring it on the floor next week.

Thus the bill is ready for action by the House as soon as Rep. Harold Knutson (R., Minn.), Ways and Means chairman, can get it up on the floor for consideration.

It appears virtually certain to pass both the House and Senate, unless—and here is the big IF—the State Governments are able to persuade the legislators to balk the bill which has the support of both the Truman administration and the Republican leadership of Congress.

Mull Ohio Tax Changes

Columbus, Jan. 21.

Repeal of two state taxes producing about $14,650,000 a year will be proposed in bills submitted to the Ohio Legislature by Rep. George Marshall, Columbus. They are the 2.35% utility excise bill, which produces $11,750,000 a year, and the 3% admission tax, which yields about $2,900,000 annually.

In their place, Marshall's bill proposes that municipalities be empowered to levy a tax of not more than 3% on the gross receipts of utilities and not more than 3% on the net charges for their services. His bill does not specify a rate for any local admissions levy.

A report on a statewide tax survey by tax commissioner C. Emory Glander is expected to be ready for the Legislature by Feb. 1. Glander has previously expressed himself in favor of the repeal of the state admissions tax so that local subdivisions could enact such a tax for needed local revenues.

Son Raps Her Claim As W. C. Fields Widow

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Son of Mrs. Edith Williams, who claimed to be the widow of W. C. Fields, ripped his mother's claim last week when he stated that she was not the wife of the late comedian and that Fields was not his father.

Chi woman claimed that Fields had deserted her and her seven children in 1910 and that she is entitled to the widow's share of the estate.

He will also spend a short time with his parents in Indiana, Pa.

Metro Acquires Astor Hotel Site

Metro's purchase of the Hotel Astor on Broadway is reported the first step in a giant building project which involves the erection of a super-showcase, rivaling the Radio City Music Hall in size, plus two smaller houses. To further the development, it's understood that Metro heads a syndicate that's optioning adjacent properties to the Astor, including seven legit theatres on 44th and 45th streets, with negotiations extending towards Eighth avenue up to the Lincoln hotel.

Piecing together of the sites is sought, so that Metro will have ample acreage to erect its proposed giant amusement center and towering office building. Cost of the Astor is said to near a $5,700,000 figure while entire cost of reality will be approximately $20,000,000.

Sale of the landmark was negotiated through Vincent Astor repping for the Astor family. Hotel, which was built in 1903, has frontages of 201 feet on Broadway and 289 feet on the sidestreets. Title to the land remains with the Astors with the deal probably calling for a long term lease.

Seven theatres involved in expansion of the original Astor deal would be the Shubert, Broadhurst and Majestic on 44th street and the Booth, Plymouth, Royale and Golden on 45th street which combines into the entire area adjacent to the Lincoln hotel. Theatres are owned or operated by the Shuberts.

Across 45th street, on west side of Broadway between 45th and 46th streets, with seven theatres on the main stem and the east and west thoroughfares, is a combined site owned by the City Investing Co. There are plans for new construction on that ground which call for replacement of the two film houses there. Two legiters will not be replaced. No date for razing the buildings is known to have been set.

SEEK TO PROBE GOVT. PRESS, RADIO, PIX P.A.s

Washington, Jan. 21.

A special nine-man committee to investigate radio, press and motion picture publicity dispensed by the Federal Government was proposed last week in a resolution introduced by Rep. Charles Miller (R., Conn.). Miller claimed that thousands of "high pressure publicity agents" have been hired by the Government to distort news into propaganda and twist thinking of radio and press correspondents. Miller's resolution followed closely the announcement by Republican Congressman John Taber of New York that he would cut appropriations for government publicity activities.

On another front, Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kansas) introduced the latest of a series of bills to outlaw liquor advertising in radio and the press. Capper and Rep. John Rankin (D., Miss.) introduced similar measures in the 79th Congress.

Mgrs. Derailed By R.R. Tariff Snarl

There was confusion early this week in legit theatre circles over whether the scheduled change in railroad tariffs would become effective at the end of the month. Railroad men said they had been directed not to enter into deals for show movements except under the new regulations, which call for a 25% increase for the use of baggage cars and special trains. Immediately the showmen through the League of New York Theatres sought confirmation from Washington.

Managers contend that the new tariffs could not become operative until the Interstate Commerce Commission heard both factions. Deadline for protests fell on Tuesday (21), 10 days prior to Feb. 1, when the revised tariffs are supposed to become effective. Stated that the request for a hearing had been sent more than a week before the deadline and a response that the protest was received is on file. There was a report in rail circles that the date for the hearing had been set but that was news to the managers. Understood the rail lines boost is based on an ICC ruling made last year.

Bogie Starred in WB 'Passage' But Doesn't Show Till Last Reel

Humphrey Bogart, although he stars in Warner Bros.' forthcoming "Dark Passage," won't actually be seen until the last reel. His vis-a-vis, Lauren Becall, will be on the screen from the start, however.

While Bogart won't be visible, his voice will be heard, since "Passage" will employ the technique — currently being seen in Metro's "Lady in the Lake"—of the camera as the eye of one of the principal players. It was sheer coincidence that M-G and WB happened to make the two films with the same unusual technique at the same time, since both were keeping their activities in that regard quiet.

Robert Montgomery, who produced as well as starred in the Metro film, also takes the camera-eye viewpoint. He's seen at the beginning, however, and then during three or four short sequences through the picture. Jerry Wald is producing the WB film with Delmar Daves directing. Technique had previously been used by the French and for parts of U. S. pix, but these two are the first features to employ it.

O'Connor's Return

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Donald O'Connor will make his first film since leaving the Army, co-starring with Deanna Durbin and John Dall in "For the Love of Mary."

Universal-International film will be O'Connor's first straight dramatic role.

Pitching Horseshoes

By Billy Rose

Shake hands with a dope. I turned down the chance to book "Street Scene" into my theatre.

The musical version of Elmer Rice's old Pulitzer Prize play is the town's new hunt-in-the-nose hit. Atkinson of The New York Times called it "an evening of magnificence and glory," and used the word "superb" three times in his review. People are standing in the cold today halfway down the block to buy tickets.

I didn't think it had a chance.

Producer Dwight Wiman sent me the script a few months ago. He wanted to present "Street Scene" at the Ziegfeld. I couldn't get excited about the libretto. Too sordid, I thought. A week later I was invited up to hear Kurt Weill play his score. I only managed to stay awake by counting slowly to 10,000. I told the producer and composer the show wasn't my cup of tea. Out of professional politeness, I refrained from telling them I didn't think there was much entertainment in this opera of the tenements. I walked out of the apartment, smug in my belief that a $6 musical had to be as pretty and gay as a wedding cake.

"Street Scene" booked another theatre and went into rehearsal. Before it left for its out-of-town tryout, it had a run-through. Several wise guys who saw it called me up to tell me it was a dreary hodgepodge.

In Philadelphia, it got mixed notices. During its three-week engagement, theatre-goers acted as if there were Chicken Pox signs on the doors.

The first week it grossed $4,750, when it needed almost $30,000 to break even. The second week it lost $18,000. The big New Year's week, another $16,000 went down the drain. One Wednesday matinee, it took in $217, which means there were 60 or 70 lonesome customers in a 1,600-seat house. I understand the ushers didn't even bother to seat people—every ticket buyer had a row to himself.

Variety, the show-wise trade paper, epitapped it with the following lines (in Philly): "Misses fire. Smacks of tired and discouraged Puccini. Definitely on the tedious side."

Three Smart Cookies

I got the word-of-mouth on it from three of the smartest cookies in the theatre, who caught it in Philly. Each of these sure-footed old-timers is a Pulitzer Prize playwright. I give you their comments:

Pulitzer Prophet No. 1: "Sick-making."
P. P. No. 2: "Don't ask."
P. P. No. 3: "Unfit for human consumption."

Producer Wiman's staff pleaded with him not to bring it to New York, told him that when the critics got through there'd be blood on the pavement in Shubert Alley. Dwight refused to let the wet blankets dampen his enthusiasm for the show.

The day before the Broadway opening, it was rumored around that one of the backers was willing to trade his 10% for a Pullman reservation to Miami.

Eleanor, who loves to glad-rag it for an opening, didn't for this one. We went in our street clothes, and so did most of the audience. Instead of the usual first-night electricity, the evening had the feeling of a duty call at a 32d cousin's funeral.

And then the curtain went up.

Within 10 minutes, the Broadway wolfpack sensed it was in at the birth of something special. They were looking at a world of trapped and hungering people, people who reached out for something pretty and got their fingers stepped on. Kurt Weill's music and Langston Hughes' lyrics told their story with a kind of wistful passion. A stageful of nobody I-ever-heard-of sang better than any cast around here in 20 years. Charlie Friedman's direction, Jo Mielziner's set—only wonderful! It was one of those rare nights when a show catches lightning in a barrel. The applause was like a 21-gun salute going off in a phone booth.

When the final curtain dropped on a scene of murder and despair, I found myself weeping—and I don't weep easy.

Next morning, the critics dusted off the adjectives they keep in the vault, a thousand liars on the Big Midway told each other they knew it was going to be a hit all the time. But in my grief, I can't afford the luxury of lying to myself.

"Street Scene," which played mostly to echoes in Philadelphia, will probably play to better than $40,000 a week at the Adelphi theatre for a long time. If I were half as smart as I think it would be at the Ziegfeld. Next time I get to feeling I wrote the book, I'm going to walk around the corner and look at the mob fighting to get in to see the show I said didn't have a chance.

Shake hands with a dope.

RCA Threat

CBS brought more pressure into its fight via a series of successful television demonstrations to the FCC, the press and the general public, the entire black and white camp in the argument began to grow wary that the FCC might grant CBS' request. CBS, meanwhile, has been highly confident the last few weeks that the FCC would see things its way.

Feeling that the grant to CBS would materially hurt television's future, Gen. Sarnoff reportedly grew angry enough to present his plan to his board of directors, and even went so far last week as to notify FCC chairman Chas. R. Denny, Jr., of his sentiments. RCA chief, it's said, pointed out to Denny he was not trying to browbeat the FCC into turning down the CBS petition, but was merely stating what RCA's position would be if CBS won out in its fight. Television was set back once before, when the line standard was arbitrarily raised during video's early development, and Sarnoff reportedly declared RCA is not ready to watch another setback, which he claims the establishment of sequential standards would represent.

Under the threatened dissolution plan RCA would give up its license to operate WNBT (NBC, N. Y.), one of the nation's pioneer video stations, and NBC would relinquish its other four licenses, where stations are now in the planning stages of construction.

Rank Making Serious Mistake Trying to 'Pressure' U. S. Exhibs Into Playing His Pix, Says Wilby

By HAYDEN TALBOT

Atlanta, Jan. 21.

J. Arthur Rank is making a serious mistake in trying to "pressure" American exhibs into playing his product, according to Robert B. Wilby, chief of the Wilby-Kincy circuit here. Rank apparently believes, according to Wilby, that most American theatres are controlled by the distributors, which, he claims, is a gross error. Any attempts by outside interests either to "pressure" or "shame" exhibs into playing their product "won't go," he declared.

Admitting that the Rank "invasion" of the U. S. is now a fact and rates serious attention, Wilby averred that the only way Rank could hope to get U. S. distribution for his pictures was to make films with international appeal. As for Rank's "threats" to build theatres in the U. S. to showcase his product, they "leave me cold," Wilby declared. "Let him do it," invited the Atlanta circuit chief, "especially if he will play 'Caesar and Cleopatra' and 'Henry V' in them. I couldn't ask for sweeter opposition."

Basing his claims that Rank was trying to "pressure" U. S. exhibs on what he gleaned from a recent trip to London, Wilby said he'd attended a dinner in the British capital thrown by Rank's people for Darryl F. Zanuck and other U. S. in-

Govt. Would Prepare Film Trade Service; Industry Co-op Lags

Washington, Jan. 21.

Census bureau and Office of Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce are preparing a new service for the motion picture industry, whose only present stumbling block is industry support.

The two agencies would furnish a monthly retail and service trade report covering picture theatres in the U. S. Many types of industry have clamored for that kind of service from Uncle Sam without success.

The entire matter has been kept entirely under wraps thus far, but one genuine hitch has developed. The proposition would involve full cooperation from the exhibition and distributors, but both have been reluctant to aid.

Initial conference on the subject was held two months ago, with officials of the Motion Picture Assn. and Commerce Department people discussing the plan. The idea is for a sampling of boxoffice in the various areas to see what was happening to business section by section.

Schenck, Dietz Back To N.Y. on Thurs.

Metro prexy Nicholas M. Schenck and Howard Dietz, M-G veepee in ad-publicity, are scheduled to return to the homeoffice tomorrow (Thursday) from the Coast. Duo have been budding with studio execs for the last week on the company's announced plans to cut production costs, with Dietz doubling on the trip by mapping out the publicity campaign for the forthcoming "Beginning of the End," story of the atom bomb, with studio publicity chief Howard Strickling.

"Beginning" was tradeshown at the Metro exchange in N. Y. for the benefit of exhibs yesterday (Tuesday). Scheduled tradescreening for trade press reviewers, which was set for the same time, was postponed, however, pending several minor revisions in the final print that were recommended by Government officials in Washington. "Beginning" is slated for general release in February and follows "Lady in the Lake" into the Capitol, N. Y., for its preem run in the east. "Lady" opens tomorrow (Thursday).

Columnists Go 'C.O.D.'

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Columbia's film version of Jimmy Starr's novel, "The Corpse Came C.O.D.," will give four Hollywood columnists a chance to shine as thesps.

Four are Louella Parsons, Hedda Hopper, George Fisher and Sidney Skolsky.

Loew's in Deal With Ent. For Foreign Distrib

Enterprise Productions has signed with Loew's International for the latter to handle distribution of Enterprise pix in all countries outside the U. S. and Canada. United Artists is distributing the new company's product domestically.

Deal sets a new pattern for indie producers, marking the first time that top Hollywood product is to be distributed on a two-way basis. It's also the first time that the entire output of a studio other than Metro's will be handled by Loew's through its international organization. Deal was finalized at a confab in New York yesterday (Tuesday) between Loew's International prexy Arthur M. Loew and S. Charles Einfeld, Enterprise prexy. A series of huddles had previously been held on the Coast with David Loew, Enterprise board chairman and brother of Arthur Loew.

Number of years the deal is to

FOREIGN BIZ KEY TO PAR EXEC TALKS

Growing importance of the foreign film market in the postwar era and aims to further boost overseas returns will keynote Paramount's mid-winter studio huddles of all company toppers set for the week of Jan. 27. With Par's take for 1946 outside the U. S. borders climbing more than 10% over the year before, company intends placing even greater stress on product with an international flavor. Consequently, foreign contingent's say at the confabs will get more than cursory attention.

Huddles will be staffed by such domestic topshots as Barney Balaban, Par's prexy; Charles Reagan, sales chief; Russell Holman, eastern production head; Alan Jackson, eastern story head, and Curtis Mitchell, pub-ad director. Important foreign dept. execs, however, going for more than the ride, include George Weltner, prez of Paramount International; J. E. Perkins, just in from his bailiwick, England; and Frank Farley, Par's European production rep. Henry Ginsberg, studio chieftain, will head the studio contingent while Joseph Hazen will speak for the Hal Wallis production unit.

Weltner only recently returned from a tour of the continent and will

Montgomery's 'Stars'

Robert Montgomery left New York yesterday (21) for the Coast to start work in "Upward to the Stars" for Metro. He has commitments to appear in one other picture for Metro before moving over to Columbia to produce and star in the screen version of the Broadway legiter, "The Big Two." Claire Trevor will costar in the latter, as she is now in the play.

Montgomery had been cast for two months working on "Big Two," which he co-produced with Elliott Nugent.

ANGLOS DISTORT FACTS--H'WOOD

By HERB GOLDEN

American film men, after taking conciliatory attitude toward the British industry for months, were ready to blow up this week. Sir Stafford Cripps' threat to invoke further restrictions on American films—"unless they improve in quality and unless English pictures receive more U. S. playing time"—came on the heels of the British Film Producers Assn. recommendations of more stringent quotas. That seemed to American execs just about the final straw.

U. S. film toppers have readily admitted the justifiability of some of the British squawks, and have been taking steps to improve the situation—such as urging exhibs to give a better break to British product—but they resent what they claim are misinterpretations of facts and figures by government leaders in London and a patent lack of understanding—wilful or not—of the competitive situation in the U. S.

With a new British quota law to be worked out during the coming year, American execs were still holding tempers in check this week. But they resented caustic talk from the British industry and governmental leaders is sure to bring demands on Congress for reprisal legislation on one of the reasons this is considered

Tells of 'Bedelia' Need For 2 Endings to Heed Code; Then Original OK'd

New York film critics tomorrow (Thursday) will be shown the British-made "Bedelia" with two different endings—one made for the American market and one for the British. Reason for U. S. release by Eagle-Lion was made originally because of Johnston office disapproval of the British ending, but both were subsequently approved for showing in this country. It has been decided after numerous tests, however, to use the U. S. ending in America.

Before producer I. G. Goldsmith sent the film before the cameras for J. Arthur Rank, he explained in New York Monday (20), he relayed the script to Production Code Administrator Joe Breen for approval. Breen put a nix on the finale, in which writer Vera Caspary's principal character is handed poison by her husband and commits suicide. Breen squawked that a character

Raftery Revealed As Fighting Selznick For Months on Producer's Unlimited Rights to Abandon Stories, Lend Stars

Vidor's Deal With Rank

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Charles Vidor, who failed to break his contract with Columbia during recent court proceedings, may be loaned by the studio to J. Arthur Rank to direct a film in England.

Negotiations are now taking place between Rank's reps and Col prexy Harry Cohn.

Metro Tests Find New Bid System To Be 'Equitable'

With industry sleuths puzzling over who's to be the victim of competitive bidding—and with film rentals offering the best clue—Metro, through its last month of experiments with the system, apparently is the only one that has the answer. Metro has discovered, according to a company spokesman, that bidding is both possible and equitable, and that rentals obtained via the system are just about the same as the prices paid through straight sales.

Chief value of bidding, the Metro exec declared, is the fact that it's opened up the flow of product in strictly competitive situations, which is the reason it was incorporated into the decree. Metro has conducted bidding tests in some 20 ultra-tight situations since the opinion in the anti-trust case was handed down last June. Metro has neither gained nor lost money via the tests, the M-G spokesman said, and the fact that exhibs in those territories are continuing to bid for pix is evidence that they, too, have found the system satisfactory.

Fact that Metro has concentrated its bidding tests in strictly competitive areas is illustrated by one situation—in Ambridge, Pa.—where indie exhib Norman Ball had already filed suit against the majors in an attempt to get product he alleged was being illegally withheld from him. Another test case occurred in Philadelphia, where the Warner chain had previously had its pick of top product. On the first film offered for Edward C. Raftery, United Artists proxy, fought for months against giving David O. Selznick's unlimited rights to abandon stories and stars during the long and occasionally bitter negotiations that preceded Selznick's entry as a partner in UA in October, 1941, it was disclosed this week. While Raftery several times actually broke off negotiations, Sir Alexander Korda, then a UA partner, was battling to smooth out the difficulties with Selznick in his anxiety to obtain for product-starved UA the hoped-for DOS films.

Details of the months of negotiations to bring Selznick in and the anger of the other partners when they learned he had sold to 20th-Fox three packaged deals, on which they had counted for UA, were disclosed in depositions taken from Korda and Raftery several months ago. Testimony, never before made public, was in UA partner Charles Chaplin's suit against Selznick because of latter's action in selling the three film packages to 20th.

Many of the facts disclosed, however, bear on the suit which Chaplin and the third UA partner, Mary Pickford, have resolved to bring in order to eliminate Selznick from the company. The latter action will be based not only on the sales

Skouras Trip West Linked to 20th-Fox Retrenchment Plan

Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy, planed to the Coast last Friday (17) for two weeks of huddles with indie execs. He was accompanied by his assistant, Lem Jones.

Homeoffice execs termed Skouras' trip routine but it's believed the 20th chief will follow the lead of Metro prexy Nicholas M. Schenck in talking over possible methods of paring production costs. Although less publicity has been given to 20th's retrenchment program than to Metro's, it was learned last week that the former would attempt to cut $4,000,000 off its 1947 operating budget.

Grosses Hold Up in Most Cities; 'Madeleine,' 'California,' 'Clouds' Sock

Paced by an almost unprecedented number of holdovers in most key spots throughout the country, film biz this week nonetheless held up fairly well in most situations. Rainy weekend cut into grosses in New York but mild weather on the Coast, plus a couple of newcomers in Los Angeles, helped biz remain constant in that part of the country. Holdovers also dominated Chicago, with biz consequently only fair.

Only a few pix bowed in, with most of these in N. Y., so that it's practically impossible to select any boxoffice champion. Among the newcomers, "13 Rue Madeleine" (20th) looked best, tecing off with a smash $130,000 in its N. Y. preem. "California" (Par) also started strongly in N. Y. with a hefty $60,000, while "Perfect Marriage" (Par) turned in an n.s.g. $70,000 on Broadway but came through with an okay $28,000 in its Boston preem and fast $16,000 in Minneapolis.

"Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G) opened to a great $76,000 in three houses in its L. A. preem, while winding up seven weeks at the Music Hall, N. Y., with a rousing $115,000. Film earned a super $57,000 in Philly and held up strongly in several holdover spots, chalking up neat $15,000 for its third Providence session, fine $8,000 for its third stanza in Buffalo, and top $20,000 for its third St. Louis week. "Blue Skies" (Par), teed off to a sock $28,000 in Washington and also continued strong in holdovers, with virile $7,000 for its third week in Minneapolis, phenomenal $16,000 for its third Pittsburgh week, big $17,000 for its second week in Baltimore and hefty $33,000 for the fifth L. A. week.

Continuing the record-shattering pace set during its early runs, "Razor's Edge" (20th) showed plenty of strength as it moved into the holdover spots. Film grossed hot $25,000 in second D. C. week, swell $24,000 in its fourth Philly session, stout $40,000 in its fourth week in Chi and a good $40,500 for four weeks in L. A. "It's Wonderful Life" (RKO) continued slow in N. Y., but was helped considerably by good showings in other keys, while "Time, Place, and Girl" (WB), while closing a top-grossing round in N. Y., faltered badly throughout the east and midwest.

'Duel' Disfavor With Catholics Brings H'wood Fear of Widening Censorship

Attack by the Catholic Church in Los Angeles last week on David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun" is being viewed gravely by the film industry. Coming on top of a string of 1946 releases which caused great criticism, particularly "The Outlaw," it is feared that any widespread squawks on "Duel" will give further impetus to local censorship movements.

Selznick's conciliatory statement in reply to complaints of the Most Rev. John J. Cantwell, Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles, received general approval in the trade, with the hope that the producer would be able to make his peace with the Church. Selznick pointed out that he had carefully followed all suggestions of the Production Code Administration and said he would be happy to meet with the Archbishop's representatives at any time for a full discussion of the question. His attitude was in sharp contrast to that of "Outlaw" producer Howard Hughes, whose uncompromising stand has kept his film on the Church's condemned list and has done much to bolster local censorship advocates.

With most state legislatures either already meeting or slated to meet within the next few months, pressure of ecclesiastical and reform groups could be quickly translated into law, the industry fears. That's a particularly bad time for Selznick

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

The Permanent Charities Committee of the picture industry has twice been turned down on donations it made to the American Red Cross and the Infantile Paralysis Foundation, both of which have tossed back separate gifts of $30,000.

Turndown is accredited to Basil O'Connor, who was recently here to start the "March of Dimes" campaign and who also functions as chief of the Red Cross. Explanation was that both these organizations have adopted a policy of refusal to take part in joint drives for charity funds.

Edward Arnold, executive veepee and treasurer of the Permanent Charities Committee, established as the one collecting agency in the film business, said:

"This action is unprecedented. We know of no other example in the history of American charities in which a contribution by a reputable

Va. Exhibs' Slate Trust Suit Seminar

Washington, Jan. 21.

Seminar on the big New York anti-trust suit will be one of the features of the annual convention of the Virginia Motion Picture Theatres Assn. to be held here, Feb. 1-3. It will be the first of the sessions to take place in this city since 1939.

Among those who will talk on the New York decree will be Robert Wright, motion picture specialist for the Anti-Trust Division of the Justice Department; Herman Levy, general counsel for Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and a spokesman to be selected for the distributors.

Among the top guests at the big dinner-dance which will top off the convention will be Governor William Tuck, of Virginia; the state's two U. S. Senators, Willis Robertson and Harry F. Byrd, and its congressional delegation.

The Shoreham hotel will be convention headquarters and will also be the scene of two large cocktail party receptions for the delegates and guests. Local tent of Variety Club will also hold open house during the convention.

See 'Outlaw' Censor Loop

Ritched censorship battle, over recommendation by the Board of Regents for legislation to plug the loophole in New York statutes which let out "The Outlaw" from possible license revocation, currently shapes up. Anti-blue law organizations, including the American Civil Liberties Union, have already declared their intention to battle any move to add periodicals, newspaper and radio to billboards and posters as subjects of regulation on film exploitation.

Lineup of forces for showdown fight on the controversial activities of Fielding continues to develop. Morris L. Ernst, attorney prominent in the anti-censorship forces, declared that any attempt by the legislature to grant greater powers to the Regents would be unconstitutional. No official should have the power to ban a work, Ernst asserted, without preliminary jury conviction for violation of obscenity laws. Meanwhile, an ACLU spokesman said his organization was prepared to introduce legislation in Albany which would deprive Fielding of the right to move against theatres before securing preliminary convictions.

Statute sought by ACLU parallels the ordinance introduced recently in the N. Y. City council by councilman Eugene P. Connolly. Action is being taken on the legislative level, ACLU officials said, because there was greater hope of passage. At the same time, ACLU declared its intention of opposing any extension of legislation

Johnston Is Target For CSU Pickets, Protesting Refusal to Meet Sorrell

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Pickets appeared yesterday (Monday) at Assn. of Motion Picture Producers office with banners aimed at Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Assn. prexy. Starting with about eight line grew until 25 were marching by noon in protest over Johnston's alleged refusal to meet with Herb Sorrell and other Conference of Studio Unions chiefs over weekend.

Johnston meanwhile was on a plane headed east, and it was pointed out he is not a member of the studio labor committee, nor in any position to take official action with regard to settling the strike. His hurried return to Washington headquarters was necessitated by pressing business.

Third mass trial of some 124 film studio pickets yesterday was postponed until Feb. 4, pending ruling by Appellate Court on legality of such group trials.

New contract calls for eight oaters per year with Smiley Burnette as co-star and Colbert Clark as producer.

SEE GOOD BIZ BUT BELOW '46

While prognostication by grassrooters on level of film grosses to be expected during 1947 lacks the all-out optimism expressed by New York distrib toppers in VARIETY last week, it indicates the little fellows in Buffalo, Des Moines, Seattle, Cleveland and other towns across the country are more than reasonably certain of another good b.o. year. Expectations in general are that it won't be up to the sensational heights of 1946 but that biz will still be plenty strong.

Unusual stress by virtually all exhibs queried during the past week was placed on the necessity of distribs providing heavy-caliber films during 1947 to hold up receipts. That's an indication, of course, of widespread recognition that the boom is over and audiences are shopping. It's similarly a direct reflection of what showmen have been finding increasingly true in the past few months: A big picture will do

Dishes Instead Of Good Pictures?

Hollywood's current leaning toward fewer films per year will probably be nipped in the bud by industry toppers, according to Warners director Curtis Bernhardt. He points out that these are hard-headed businessmen, inclined to operate commercially rather than artistically, and likely to put out a lot of product, much of it second-rate, and give away dishes instead of making a few good pictures."

Director, currently in New York after finishing Joan Crawford starrer, "Possessed," says that the fact that patrons are already shopping for better films is evidenced by growing discrepancy between highs and lows in national box-

Priority on Pix for Europe Stressed By MPEA's Maas As Means to Build Hollywood Prestige on the Continent

With American prestige at a low point on the Continent, greater selectivity than ever will be exercised in the choice of films to be exported there, according to Irving Maas, veepee of the Motion Picture Export Assn. Maas, who returned Friday (17) from a four-month junket that included Holland, Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland, said that, popular as American films are, "there is a high priority on selectivity" and many are being ruled out by the MPEA which would otherwise go through; i.e., if they were being released independently.

Maas adds that MPEA's task of breaking down distribution barriers in many countries has been made more difficult by the large number of inferior films which have been released independently. He indicates that both independent American producers and the British have attempted to capture the market by releasing in England, Czechoslovakia and elsewhere while the assn. was trying to deal with government people, but the only serious effect was an added obstacle in MPEA's path. Maas stressed that British pictures constitute more competition today than before the war, especially on the Continent, where they have been in full-scale release since the war there ended. While the American picture is wanted everywhere,

Milland to Start 'Clock'

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Next starrer for Ray Milland at Paramount will be "The Big Clock," a suspense film to be directed by John Farrow, starting Feb. 17.

On completion of "Clock," Milland goes to England to star in the Hal Wallis production, "For Her to See."

WB's 40G Deal For 'Valor' Pic

Warner Bros.' deal with Charles Jackson calls for him to get $40,000 for screen rights to his "Fall of Valor" if producer Jerry Wald's treatment gets by the Johnston office, which now is giving it the o.o. In addition, Jackson will work on the screenplay, for which he'll get further coin.

Wald, currently in New York, reveals that the homo-sexuality angle has been completely removed in the treatment of "Valor" and it now has "a clinical study of the decay of a marriage after 10 years." He said Joan Crawford is anxious to appear in the film. She was in "Mildred Pierce" and "Humoresque," both of which Wald produced.

Jackson received a $10,000 bonus from Par for screen rights to his "Lost Weekend" after the picture turned out to be one of the top grossers of 1946. Par originally paid $35,000 for rights. It was so fearful that the film would flop, however, that Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, who turned it out, were forced to promise they'd do a musical—"Emperor's Waltz," now editing—as insurance to Par against loss on "Weekend."

11,669 Ballots For Acad Awards

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Oscar Derby candidates are snorting at the starting gates with the mailing of 11,669 ballots to members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences. The ballot contains 49 entries for nine awards.

Jean Hersholt, Academy prexy, explained the distribution of the ballots as follows: Total of 8,848 went to the Screen Actors Guild, whose members will select 20 candidates for thespin honors; Screen Writers, with 1,005 votes, will pick candidates for three awards; Screen Directors, numbering 283 will select five candidates for awards in the color division and five in black-and-white.

Membership of the Academy itself, clipped this year from 360 to 1,536, has the sole voting power on the main event, the Best Production of the Year.

Office Workers Unions Merge in N. Y. Drive

In preparation for an organizational drive among unorganized white collarites in the N. Y. amusement field by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, two subsidiary units, Front Office Exchange Local, F-51, and Local H-63 have combined into a single organization. Under the merger officers of Local H-63, which currently represents home office employees at Warners and Universal, will handle all business affairs and negotiations. Local F-51's contracts cover front office workers in the N. Y. exchanges of WB, Paramount, RKO, Universal and Republic.

Projected plans by the newly composed unit, an AFL affiliate to limit its organizational campaigns solely among non-unionized sectors in the showbusiness field is expected to avert any outbreak of jurisdictional warfare with the other white collarite union in the field, the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild. Latter union, a CIO affiliate, has at present contracts covering the majority of office employees in the N. Y. film companies.

SOLO SALES NO SONG FOR EXHIB

Decree Jigsaws Up for Clarification At Federal Court Hearing in N. Y.

Puzzling implications of the decree which have had the industry guessing during the past few weeks come up for clarification at a hearing slated before the New York federal three-judge court today (Wed.). Postponement of competitive bidding until the Supreme Court passes an its legality will also be part of the majors' pitch. Exhib organizations, except for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, are expected to play a subordinate part in the verbal give-and-take.

Thurman Arnold, repping for the American Theatres Assn., will be present but will have little to say unless drawn in by the court, ATA officials said. ATA is planning an appeal from denial of its intervention motion and sees no reason to sound off at today's proceedings.

Conference of Independent Exhibitor Assns. via a letter to the court from Abram F. Myers, general counsel for National Allied, urges the court to limit bidding for pix to flat rentals. UNEA also backs Universal's plea for a validation of franchises when the pact is between an indie and any distrib who's not a member of the Big Five. Indies, the letter said, would be in a worse competitive situation than ever before on cancellation of franchises because Big Five rivals have the assurance of a backlog of product from their own companies, while the indies must bargain without similar backing.

The letter also renews argument for complete divorcement, and strongly opposes relaxation of rules to permit judicially approved theatre acquisitions by the Big Five. Support of the majors in their request for a delay in initiation of the competitive bidding is extended in the letter, which agrees with the premise that the highly involved sales method should await sanction by the Supreme Court before being put into effect.

Apparently aiming to head off any possible interpretation of competitive bidding which would convert the sales method into a form of auction selling, MPTOA has filed a request for clarification. Letter of Herman M. Levy, general counsel for MPTOA, submitted this week, asks the court to determine whether a distributor may reject all bids in a competitive area if they meet the minimum set by the distrib. If a major can reject, MPOTA queries whether the distrib could call for further bids subsequently on the same feature.

MPTOA hopes for a negative answer which would effectively prevent distribs from needling exhibs into boosting bids to meet competitors. Theatre organization has also

DECREE STALLS METRO ON SALES MEET PLANS

William F. Rodgers, Metro veepee over sales, returned to the home-office yesterday (Tuesday) a three-week vacation in Florida and refuses to decide within the next several days whether to call a meet of his division sales chiefs in Chicago for February. Possibility exists that the tentatively-scheduled confab may be postponed pending the outcome of appeals on the anti-trust decree.

Rodgers' scheduled departure for the Coast next week to look over new Metro product may also be postponed until the question of a decree appeal is settled.

Settle Chi Clearance

Chicago, Jan. 21.

The Monroe theatre clearance complaint against the McVickers was settled last week by an agreement between James Jovan, operator of the Monroe; Diana Theatre Corp., which operates the McVickers, and Balaban & Katz, which owns a one-half interest in McVickers. Under the terms of the settlement the clearance interval has been reduced to two days.

Clearance had been a minimum of seven days and maximum 14 days.

Ent at Top Speed

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

With 1,100 employes on the payroll and four features in work, production is hitting top speed at Enterprise.

Before the cameras are "Body and Soul," "The Other Love," "Ramrod" and "Arch of Triumph."

Readying at the same studio are "Wild Calendar" and a starrer for Norma Shearer, still untitled.

Roadshows Held Legal on Basis Of 4-Wall Setup

Four-wall technique for future roadshowing is currently being mapped by major company legalites. While roadshows as such are definitely out because of the statutory court's failure to exempt them from price-fixing bans, plan for outright leasing of houses for run of the picture is figured to be within the legal bounds. In this regard, it's been learned that the Government has advised distribs that it will not interfere with their advancing of admissions, providing the company owns or leases the house in question.

Government's lack of fervor on the question was apparent to observers during court hearings, when its reps readily consented to proposals for roadshows providing a ceiling was fixed. Following issuance of a decree, the Department of Justice has again shown same disinterested slant after pointing out to distribs' lawyers during huddles that the decree does not bar leasing of exhib houses.

Distribs therefore envisage method which involves taking over of house and cutting in exhib for share of profits. Once the theatre is temporarily the property of the distrib, no objection can be raised to a hike in prices and a two-a-day or more playing policy.

Goldwyn Stresses No Admish Cut in 1947 To Exhibs for 'Years'

Goldwyn Productions has authorized exhibs playing its "Best Years of Our Lives" to advertise that the pic will not be played in any other theatre in their towns during 1947 at admish less than now being charged. This takes "Years" another step forward general roadshow policy, following announcement last week that all future engagements will be on a new "reserved performance" basis.

"Reserved performance" idea has been designed to meet patrons' criticism of excessive waits in line due to length of the film. Theatres playing the pic will have three or four performances daily at set times, with each performance — but not specific seats — reserved. Number of tickets sold will not exceed seating capacity of the house. Reservations are being made available four weeks in advance.

First date under new policy will be St. John's theatre, Jacksonville, next Monday (27), with three shows, midnight show to be added Saturday. Fulton theatre, Pittsburgh, opens with same policy March 9. It will have four shows daily. Top will be $1.50 in Jacksonville and $1.50 or $1.80 in Pittsburgh.

"Years" is running on regular roadshow basis in Boston and Los Angeles, but that policy will not be extended. However, Goldwyn forces are now dickering for another downtown theatre to run day-and-date with Boston's Back Bay Esquire on a policy similar to the one at that house.

RIGID PROVISOS CRAMP BOOKING

Business of selling pictures individually, initiated by the consent decree's blocks-of-five and currently in full force with seven majors, has pushed the exchange manager and the salesmen into an inferior position and made the lot of the film buyer much tougher. That's the beef of Edward Lachman, New Jersey Allied's prexy, who claims that exhibs are now the victims of inflexible selling rules set by by h.o.

"The salesman and manager at one time, not so long ago, had 90% of the say on what rental terms would be on a season's product," Lachman declares. "The situation now is directly the reverse—the homeoffice decides what bracket a film is in, and that's the law to be followed. No exceptions are made and individual cases aren't considered. Pictures these days are sold on a take-it-or-leave-it basis."

Whereas, heretofore, an exhib could argue his case with the exchange manager who was familiar with his territory and had discretionary powers to revise licensing pacts, Lachman said, now every item is cleared "through channels" at the

SOPEG Certified As Metro Int'l Bargainer

Following a National Labor Relations Board crosscheck of union cards against the company's payroll, Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild has been certified as the collective bargaining agent for white collarites at Metro International in New York. Sidney Young, recently elected SOPEG prez, will head negotiations for the union in contract talks with the company.

Included in the bargaining unit are all office, clerical, accounting and secretarial workers, telephone operators, script clerks, draftsmen, title writers, receptionists and messengers. Secretaries to execs and assistant execs were excluded from the unit.

Pollard Re-Elected N. Y. SDG Prexy

Screen Directors Guild of New York, at its second annual convention held last Saturday (18) at the Lotos Club, N. Y., re-elected Bud Pollard as prexy of the organization. Others elected were Rudolph Carlson, first v.p.; Joseph Henabery, second v.p.; Elmer Pearson, corresponding secretary; Harry Foster, recording secretary, and Gene Martel, treasurer. New board of directors include Al Altman, Metro talent scout; Boris Kaplan, Paramount eastern talent chief; Willard Van Dyke and Leslie Roush, independents.

New slate of officers was installed at a dinner following the one-day convention. George Stevens, Liberty Films exec, addressed the SDG assemblage.

Harry Brandt-ITOA Back Prod. Plan Of Allied States If Indies Form Merger

Plan of Allied States Exhibitors to promote production of independent product has the support of Harry Brandt and his Independent Theatre Owners Assn., providing the ITOA merges with Allied. Both the production scheme and Brandt's proposal for formation of a national exhibition association were before Allied's board meet in Washington Jan. 31.

Special committee named by National Allied to study merger moves will make its report during the D.C. huddles. Also high on Allied's agenda are discussions on the decree and the theatre unit's future stance in the event of appeals. Whether Allied will join in the all-industry committee, headed by Si Fabian, American Theatres Assn. prexy, to deal with Government pix is due for gabbing.

Details of Allied's production proposals continue to seep out despite unit's hush-hush stand. Of the 12 films or more which Allied will foster by guaranteeing playing time, none will be made for less than $250,000, under a producer pact presently contemplated. Films are to be bracketed in the same class as Metro's "Maisie," series and rentals will be scaled similarly.

Allied members committing themselves to the program are agreeing to play the first three films but will have cancellation privileges on the balance. All rentals are flats, with the range starting at $25 or thereabouts and stepping upwards to the 300 figure. Rentals, of course, are scaled according to run, seating facilities and playing time.

Many Things in Decree Require Correction, Levy Warns MPTOA At St. L. Convention, Citing 'Dark' Rd.

St. Louis, Jan. 21.

A dark and hard road lies ahead for the exhibitor and distributor, until many things in the New York equity court decree are corrected, was the message delivered yesterday (Monday) by Herman M. Levy, general counsel for the National Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to several hundred members of the MPTOA of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois at a two-day meeting here. Levy also asserted that it was a road that can be made even darker and harder by distributor-exhibitor conflict.

Levy stated that the matters contained in the decree are not just distributor and exhibitor problems but also for the industry as a whole. "Unless all realize that -fact there can be no hope for more light, less conflict and an easier path," Levy said.

Commenting on his 17 years as an exhibitor, Levy charged that one of the great tragedies of industry history was that in discarding by the court of the proposal to impose a system of arbitration in the final decree. "It means litigation, litigation and more litigation," Levy said. "Every theatre owner who is not successful in bidding for a particular picture," he added, "will have to start a suit for injunctive relief and damages if he feels wronged for one of the following and other reasons: (1) the successful bidder was not the 'highest' one; (2) the successful bidder was not the 'highest responsible' one, and (3) the successful bidder does not operate a theatre 'of a size location and equipment necessary to yield a reasonable return.'" Levy also asserted "no objective tests have been given to the distributors by the court. It is practically impossible for them to make decisions without subjecting themselves to suit. Add to this the fact that the burden of proving that a particular clearance is legal is on the distributor, and you can begin to see the coming era of litigation. Only good, sensible exhibitor-distributor relations will prevent it."

The Proper Time

When the proper time comes, Levy said, he would ask members of the organization to bend all their

Indies Demand Flat Rentals In Auction Bid Deals

With indie theatre chains throughout the country whetting their knives to carve out better runs via the decree's competitive bidding route, case of Century Circuit in metropolitan New York is considered typical. Century, according to topper Fred Schwartz, is going to bid flat rentals for its films and will litigate any attempt by a major distrib to award a picture to a competitor on percentage unless the latter includes a flat minimum equal or exceeds Century's bid.

The decree, for the first time, affords Century an opportunity of "getting" in and pitching for first-run neighborhood play dates against the RKO and Loew's circuits," Schwartz said. Bidding technique provided in the decree, according to Schwartz is ,unworkable on anything but a flat-rental basis. "There's no way for the distributor to deter-

Supreme Court Does Switch, Grants Hearing In Schine Trust Suit

Washington, Jan. 21.

The Supreme Court, which previously had refused to consider an appeal by the Schine theatres circuit from a Government anti-trust suit victory, reversed itself yesterday (20). Court announced it would take jurisdiction in the suit but set no date for hearing. Case cannot be argued before some time in March, since the calendar is filled up to then.

Last Dec. 16, Supreme Court nixed two appeals for an appeal by Schine. Then Schine renewed its petition.

The Schine matter is somewhat similar to the Crescent case, which resulted in a complete victory for the Justice Department. The pending Schine decision involves partial divestiture of the huge independent chain.

ASKS $1,750,000 IN WIS. DAMAGE ACTION

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Claiming triple damages amounting to $1,750,000 under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, Riverside Operating Co., Wisconsin, and Middle States Corp. yesterday (20) filed suit in United States district court here against 27 producers, distributors, and newsreel firms, naming virtually all of the top companies.

Suit charges 20th-Fox and Warners maintained a monopoly in downtown Milwaukee, with the aid of the other defendents, which made it impossible for the downtown Riverside theatre to obtain the type of product it was willing to pay for, thereby forcing Middle States to give up operation of house.

Riverside Corp. operated theatre from 1934 to 1939, at which time it was taken over by Middle States, which carried on until 1941.

Loew's Stockholders Meet in N. Y. Feb. 27

Annual stockholders' meeting of Loew's, Inc., has been scheduled for Feb. 27 at the homeoffice. While the agenda includes only the election of a directorate, to which the incumbents have been renominated, it's believed company officials will take the occasion to outline their plans for cutting production costs, in line with Metro's general retrenchment policy.

Annual financial report will also be distributed at the meeting.

Two Tinters Sparking L. A. Field; 'Clouds' 76G in 3; Time, Place' 68G In 3; H.O.'s OK; 'Razor' 40½G in 4th

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Two color musicals are giving first runs a faster pace this week, with both of the overall gross outlook to a bright $400,000 or better. "The Clouds Roll By" is garnering a great $76,000 or better in three houses. "Time, Place and Girl" is also racking up a stout $68,000 in three situations. "Return of Monte Cristo" on a double bill is pointing for a nice $38,500 in four houses.

Among holdovers, "Razor's Edge" is shooting for $40,500 in four spots, fourth week. "Wonderful Life" is nearing $34,000 in its fourth frame in two houses. "Blue Skies," in fifth frame, is reaching a hefty $33,000 and holds for a sixth. "Wicked Lady" closed a second and final week with a slow $21,000. Also bowing in its fifth stanza is "Strange Woman," which is scooping up an okay $17,030.

With roadshows strong, "Duel in the Sun" is flashing a solid $30,000 in two houses. "Best Years" drew a sturdy $14,500 in one house and opens at a second spot downtown on Friday (24). "Yearling," in its fourth week at the Carthay Circle, is doing a good $14,000 or better.

'Marriage' 16G, 'South' Ditto, Mpls.

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Three major newcomers, "Showoff," "Perfect Marriage" and "Song of South," nearly on par in pulling power, are staging a dogfight for top boxoffice honors. Disney film has aroused greatest critical enthusiasm among the trio, but is running second to the Loretta Young-David Niven vehicle in the race for the best gross. It's the third week for the record-breaking "Blue Skies" and the fourth for another hefty-stepper, "It's a Wonderful Life" and for "Time, Place and Girl," which also has done a great boxoffice job. Victorious Gentleman" is delivering well in its second week.

Estimates for This Week

Aster (Par) (000; 30-44)—"Jungle Princess" (Par) and "Flight to Nowhere" (S-G.). Nice returns and duals. Good $2,200 in five days indicated. Last week, "Falcon in Cinema" (RKO) and "Ghost of Hidden Corn" (Col), split with "Driftin' River" (PRC) and "Lady Chaser" (PRC), dual first-runs, okay $2,400 in eight days.

Century (Par) (1,600; 50-70)—"Blue Skies" (Par). Here after Rio Radio City fortnight during which it smashed all local boxoffice records. Still big with $16,000 last week. "Gallant Bess" (M-G), mild $6,000.

Gopher (Par) (1,000; 44)—"Plainsman and Lady" (Par). Heading for fair $3,500. Last week, "Child of Divorce" (RKO), mild $3,000.

Lyric (Par) (1,600; 50-70)—"Time, Place and Girl" (20th) (2d wk). Fourth week downtown for this boxoffice champion contender. Will bow out after another good $4,500 on top of fine $5,500 last week.

Orpheum (Par) (2,800; 50-70)— "Song of South" (RKO). Fine exploitation campaign and critics' praise bring this one. Climbing to terrific $16,000. Last week, "It's a Wonderful Life" (RKO) (3d wk), boff $11,000.

Radio City (Par) (4,000; 50-70)— "Perfect Marriage" (Par). Divided opinions on this one, but cast names and title help plenty, rolling along at fast $16,000 clip. Last week, "Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk), smash $15,000 after new all-time high of $38,000 on initial stanza.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (1,600; 50-70)— "It's Wonderful Life" (RKO) (m.o.). Here after three great weeks at Orpheum and continues to demonstrate boxoffice pictures for past several years. Related. Last week, "Notorious Gentleman" (U-I), good $8,400.

State (Par) (2,200; 50-70)—"Showoff" (M-G). Well-liked Skelton comedy attracting most attention of any boxoffice picture for past several years. Reaching for big $14,000. Last week, "Secret Heart" (M-G) (2d wk), good $7,000, giving it fine $24,000 for fortnight run.

Uptown (Par) (1,000; 50-55)—"Undercurrent" (M-G) (m.o.). Fairish holdhood showing. Good $4,000 in prospect. Last week, "Two Years Before Mast" (Par), big $5,000.

World (Mann) (350; 50-99)—"Notorious Gentleman" (U-I) (m.o.). Here after good first canoe at RKO-Prn. Built to order for this spot and healthy $3,000 in sight. Last week, "Return Monte Cristo" (Col) (3d wk), mild $1,800, but good $20,000 for loop run.

'Secret Heart' 17G, Balto; Holdovers Carry On Well 'Jolson' 16G, 'Skies' 17G

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

In list of almost total h.o., "The Secret Heart" is drawing fairly good trade to Loew's Century as "Temptation" is inching out a moderate take at Keith's. Of second-run, "Blue Skies" continues big at the Stanley.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew's-WC) (1,800; 20-60) —"Secret Heart" (M-G). Drawing well at $17,000 after second week of "Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G) held nicely at $15,800.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,240; 20-75)—"Jolson Story" (Col) (3d wk) plus new vaude layout. Maintaining steady pace at $16,000 after a fine second round at $20,000.

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,460; 20-60)—"The Perfect Marriage" (Par). Opening today (Tues.) after a week of "Temptation" (U-I) drew a modest $11,300.

Mayfair (Hicks) (980; 25-55)— "That Brennan Girl" (Rep). Average trade at possible $3,500. Last week, second of "Painsman and Lady" was fair in repeat at $3,100.

New (Mechanic) (1,800; 20-60)— "Razor's Edge" (20th) (4th wk). Still faring well at $11,000, after nice third round to $12,200.

Stanley (3,280; 25-75)—"Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk). Holding in big style at $17,000 after a record-breaking week to $29,400.

Valencia (Loew's-UA) (1,860; 20-60)—"Till the Clouds Roll By" (M-G) (m.o.). Topping Keith's here at $9,000 after two previous big rounds at downstairs Century immediately preceding.

'Clouds' Rosy 57G Leading Philly

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

"Till the Clouds Roll By" is playing to near-record grosses at the Mastbaum this week. Most of other deluxers are presenting holdovers. Among the new pix, "Magnificent Doll" is having just fair success.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (WB) (1,303; 50-94)— "Wicked Lady" (U) (2d wk). Fairish $11,000. Opener oke $15,500 plus $6,000 for Sabbath showing at Earle.

Arcadia (Sablosky) (700; 50-94)— "Green Dolphin Heart" (Par) (3d wk). Nice $5,500. Last week, "Gallant Bess" (M-G), yanked after pale $2,-000 for three days of second run.

Boyd (WB) (2,350; 50-94)—"Magnificent Doll" (U). Mild $17,000 with so-so $2,000 for Sabbath showing at Earle. Last week, "Undercurrent" (M-G), oke $16,500 for third week.

Earle (WB) (2,760; 60-99)—"Fabulous Suzanne" (Rep) with "Earl Carroll's Vanities" on stage. Nice $25,-000. Last week, combo of "Falcon's Adventure" (RKO) and King Cole Trio stage show, sensational $47,500.

Fox (20th) (2,250; 50-94)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (4th wk). Still holding big with $24,000. Last week, neat $28,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,000; 50-94) —"Secret Heart" (M-G) (2d wk). Great $25,000. Opener neat $29,500.

Karlton (Goldman) (1,000; 50-94) —"Rage in Heaven" (M-G) (5th wk) (reissue). Plenty of profit at $7,000. Last week, good $8,500.

Keith's (Goldman) (1,500; 50-94)— "Killer" (U) (3d run). Fine $8,000. Last week, "Strange Woman" (UA), fair $7,000 for second week of second run.

Mastbaum (WB) (4,350; 50-94)— "Clouds Roll By" (M-G). Super $57,-000. Last week, "Time, Place, Girl" (WB), so-so $18,000 for third sesh.

Stanley (WB) (2,950; 50-94)—"Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk). Still jumping up with strong $18,000. Last week, fine $19,000.

Stanton (WB) (1,475; 50-94)—"Nocturne" (RKO) (4th wk). Trim $11,-000. Last week, okay $12,500.

Notorious' 35G Pacing Pitt Field; 'Gentleman' OK at 5G; 'McGurk' 8G NG

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

Long-awaited "Notorious," which has already played every other key in the country, is the undisputed leader this week and a smasheroo at Stanley, where it should stick around for at least couple of more stanzas. Senator trust running "Notorious Gentleman" and doing okay for this spot while run holdovers, "Razor's Edge" at Harris, "Blue Skies" at Penn and "Darling Clementine" at Fulton, are all doing well. Not so good, however, for other new entry, "Mighty McGurk," at Warner.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 40-70)—"My Darling Clementine" (20th) (3d wk). Still holding up nicely and will stick for few days into fourth stanza, with "Wake Up and Dream" (20th) opening Saturday (25). "Clementine" heading for $8,000 currently and against better than $11,000 last week.

Harris (Harris) (2,200; 40-70)— "Razor's Edge" (20th) (3d wk). Another that's getting everything there is in sight. It'll wind up Friday (24) after 26-day run. Will do at least $18,000 this week, and that's terrific. "Edge" bettered $22,000 last week.

Penn (Loew's-UA) (3,300; 40-70)— "Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk). Crosby-Astaire starrer was to have come out after fortnight but biz was too hefty to pull it so last-minute decision gave Irving Berlin musical a third week. Should wind up strong close to $16,000. Last week "Skies" did $25,000, phenomenal h.o. biz here in view of smash $40,000 opening session.

Ritz (WB) (600; 40-70)—"Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (m.o.). Anchored here after couple of indifferent weeks at Stanley and it's doing just as indifferently at small-seater. Will be lucky to climb over $2,500. Last

Holdovers Rule Chi Roost; 'Woman,' Herth 50G, Loop Lead; 'Skies,' Ives 45G

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Holdovers dominated Chicago loop this week, only change of scenery being at Rialto with two firstrun reissues. Mildish weather kept grosses at nice level considering number of holdovers.

"Strange Woman" at Oriental, with Milt Herth on stage, stole the spotlight with a nifty $50,000 for second week. "Razor's Edge," in its fourth week at State-Lake, continued to hold up to potent boxoffice with robust $43,000. "Best Years" continued steady gait with socko $45,000 in fifth week at Woods. New entries, "Plainsman" and "Jungle Princess," reissue combo, did staunch $20,000 at Rialto.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (B&K) (1,200; 65-95)—"Jolson Story" (Col) (4th wk). Still going strong with solid $25,000, same as last week.

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 65-95)—"Blue Skies" (Par) plus Burl Ives heading stage show (4th wk). Steady $45,000. Last week, $55,000.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 65-95)—"Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (2d wk). Moderate $20,000. Last week, nice $22,000.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,700; 65-95)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (4th wk). Continues at strong gait to stout $43,000. Last week, thumping $45,000.

United Artists (B&K) (1,700; 85-95)—"Undercurrent" (M-G). Pleasing $21,000. Last week, smart $25,000.

Woods (Essaness) (1,200; 65-95)—"Best Years of Lives" (RKO) (5th wk). Continues to standee biz for socko $45,000 with late shows. Last week, $47,000.

Grosses Are Net

Film gross estimates, as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net, i.e., without the 20% tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U.S. amusement tax.

'Temptation' 17G, 'Bowery' 8G, Prov.

Providence, Jan. 21.

Holdovers are still pacing the town with "Blue Skies" skimming along in a fourth sesh at Strand, and "The Razor's Edge" at Majestic and "Till the Clouds Roll By" at Loew's, both enjoying third weeks. "Temptation" at RKO-Albee catching nice new biz.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (2,200; 44-65) — "Temptation" (IP) and "They Were Sisters" (U). Fairly hefty $17,000. Last week, "Magnificent Doll" (U) and "Dead of Night" (U). Swell $17,000.

Carlton (Fay-Loew) (1,400; 44-65) —"Kings Row" (WB) and "Wild Bill Hickok Rides" (WB) (reissues). Doing nicely for $6,500. Last week, "Margie" (20th) (3d downtown wk), nifty $5,000.

Fay's (Fay) (1,400; 44-85)—"The Bowery" (20th) and vaude on stage. Swell $8,000. Last week, "Two Guys From Milwaukee" (WB) (reissue) and vaude, good $7,000.

Majestic (Fay) (2,200; 44-65) — "Razor's Edge" (20th) (3d wk). Sock $15,000. Second stanza sock $20,000.

Metropolitan (Snider) (3,100; 65-85) — "Invisible Informer" (Rep) and Lionel Hampton and his orchestra on stage for three-day weekend run. Solid $9,000. Last week, "Inner Circle" and eight acts of vaude on stage, poor $3,200 for two-day weekend run.

State (Loew) (3,200; 44-65)—"Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G) (3d wk). Slated to switch but held up so nicely it was given an extra week. Looks neat $15,000. Second sesh was beautiful $20,000.

Strand (Silverman) (2,200; 44-65) —"Blue Skies" (Par) (4th wk). Still soaring for wow $15,000. Third week hit nifty $18,000.

'Bess,' 'Miracle' 20G, K.C.; 'Dark Mirror' Neat 16G

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

Theatre row is beginning to see some new films for the first week since the holidays. "Gallant Bess" is out in front at the Midland b.o., and headed for a giant $20,000. "Dark Mirror" in the Fox Midwest firstrun combo houses looks for nice $16,000, near a holdover figure, but probably won't stay more than one week because of pressure of backed up product. "It's a Wonderful Life" continues to build at the Orpheum, fourth week being as big as second and third weeks. Likewise "Blue Skies" in its fourth week at the Newman is keeping even pace with third week gross.

Estimates for This Week

Esquire - Uptown - Fairway (Fox Midwest) (820, 2,043, 700; 45-65)—"Dark Mirror" (U) solo. Opened Thursday, bringing house to regular schedule. Nice $16,000, on borderline for a holdover. Last week, "Razor's Edge" (20th) (3d wk), played eight days for $15,000.

Midland (Loew's) (3,500; 45-65)—"Gallant Bess" (M-G) and "Cockeyed Miracle" (M-G), running up big purse. May hit $20,000 a holdover figure, but won't stay as "Jolson Story" is set to open Thurs. (23). Last week, "Till the Clouds Roll By" (M-G) (2d wk), played nine days to bring house back to regular Thursday-opening schedule. Fine $20,000.

Newman (Paramount) (1,900; 45-65)—"Blue Skies" (Par) (4th wk), splendid $13,000. Last week film did another neat $13,000 in its third week.

Orpheum (RKO) (1,900; 45-65)—"It's a Wonderful Life" (RKO) (4th wk), showing surprising strength, $11,000, and possibility for a fifth week. Last week film also did $11,000 for okay third week.

Tower (Fox Joffee) (2,100; 45-65) —"Bringing Up Father" (Mono) and "My Dog Shep" (SG) with variety bill on stage. Average $9,000. Last week, "Landrush" (Col) and "Lone Star Moonlight" (Col), with Major Bowes Grads on stage, pleasant $10,500.

Kimo (Dickinson-Theatre Guild) (533; $1.20-$2.40)—"Henry V" (3d wk) (UA). Will fold after Thurs. (23) with $5,500 for current week. Last week hit $6,500, topping first week.

United Artists (Blumenfeld) (1,207; 55-85)—"Strange Woman" (UA) (4th wk). Held all right $10,500. Last week, okay $11,000.

Stagedoor (Ackerman) (350; $1.80-$2.40)—"Henry V" (UA) (17th wk). Fine $8,500. Last week, same.

'Killers' Team on 'Brute'

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Three players who appeared in Mark Hellinger's "The Killers" will be teamed again in the same producer's forthcoming film, "Brute Force."

Thesps are Burt Lancaster, Sam Levine and Jeff Corey.

'Woman' $15,000, Seattle; 'Mirror,' 'Wives' $15,500

Seattle, Jan. 21.

Iciest weather of the year dented biz for a couple days this week. "Razor's Edge" is in fourth week on moveover to B.M., getting nice attention. Liberty is forte with "Jolson" in fourth week currently.

Palomar is hoping to hypo vaude, which has been having uphill battle on comeback trail at this house. Opening next is the Joe Daniels' booked "Chinatown Phantasy," after long runs in leading night spots in S.F., such as Kubla Khan, Forbidden City, Sky Room and Lion's Den.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (H-E) (800; 45-80)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (4th wk). Headed for a good $6,000.

Fifth Avenue (H-E) (2,349; 45-80) —"Strange Woman" (UA). Expected swell $15,000. Last week, third of "Razor's Edge" (20th). Great $11,300.

Music Box (H-E) (850; 45-80)—"Brief Encounter" (Br.) and "Falcon's Adventure" (RKO). Indicated fine $5,000. Last week, "Bedlam" (RKO) and "Wanted for Murder" (20th). Fair $3,300.

Music Hall (H-E) (2,200; 45-80)—"Rage in Heaven" (M-G) and "Blondie Knows Best" (Col) (2nd wk). Anticipated $3,300, fair in three days. Last week, this pair got small $8,500 because of bad weather.

Orpheum (H-E) (2,600; 45-80)—"Dark Mirror" (U) and "Allotment Wives" (Mono). Great $15,500. Last week, "Time, Place, Girl" (WB), in second stanza, eight days, okay $9,700.

Palomar (Sterling) (1,350; 45-80)—"Flight to Nowheres" (FC) and stage. Indicated fair $7,000. Last week, "Accomplice" (PRC) and "Singing on Trail" (Col). Poor $6,700.

Paramount (H-E) (3,039; 45-80)—"Miss Pilgrim" (20th) and "Strange Journey" (20th). Expected big $13,000. Last week, second of "Undercurrent" (M-G), okay $9,500.

Roosevelt (Sterling) (800; 45-80)—"Time, Place and Girl" (WB). Indicated fair $3,500. Last week, five days of "Banjo on Knee" (20th) (return) and "Old California" (Rep), slow $2,000.

Winter Garden (Sterling) (800; 45-80)—"Young Widow" (UA) and "Bowery" (20th) (3rd), split with "Three Little Girls in Blue" (20th) and "Big Sleep" (WB). Anticipated fair $3,000. Last week, five days, "Holiday in Mex." (M-G) and "Step by Step" (RKO), slow $2,500.

'Woman,' 'Susie' 42G Pace Det.

Detroit, Jan. 21.

Biz good. "Strange Woman" and "Susie Steps Out" lead town, at Michigan, with terrific $42,000. "Doll"-"Whistler," at Fox, in runnerup slot, with nice $24,000.

Estimates for This Week

Adams (Balaban) (1,740; 70-95)—"The Jolson Story" (Col) (3d wk). Still a lusty $16,000. Last week, $15,000 at Adams and $13,000 at companion Downtown theatre.

Broadway-Capitol (United Detroit) (3,309; 70-95) — "Notorious" (RKO) and "Vacation in Reno" (RKO) (4th wk). Strong $15,000. Last week, big $16,000.

Downtown (Balaban) (2,683; 70-95) — "That Brennan Girl" (Rep) and "Plainsman and the Lady" (Rep). Tepid $9,000. Last week, "The Jolson Story" (Col) (2d wk), stiff $13,000.

Fox (Fox-Michigan) (5,100; 70-95) —"Magnificent Doll" (U) and "The Secret of the Whistler" (Col). Nice $24,000. Last week, "The Razor's Edge" (20th) (3d wk), good $20,000.

Madison (United Detroit) (1,866; 50-60)—"Night and Day" (WB) and "Traffic With the Devil" (Indie). Okay $2,300 for 3 days. Last week, "Gallant Bess" (M-G) and "Suspense" (Mono), usual $2,300 for 3 days.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,039; 70-95) — "The Strange Woman" (UA) and "Susie Steps Out" (UA). Terrific $42,000. Last week, "The Time, the Place and the Girl" (WB) and "Criminal Court" (RKO) (2d wk), solid $18,000.

Palms-State (United Detroit) (2,976; 70-95)—"It's A Wonderful Life" (RKO) and "The Story of Kenneth Randall, M.D." (Liberty) (3d wk). Increased to a good $18,000. Last week, neat $17,000.

United Artists (United Detroit) (1,941; 70-95) — "Song of the South" (RKO) and "The Falcon's Adventure" (RKO) (2d wk). Attractive $21,000. Last week, solid $23,000.

'Henry' Hefty 15G at $2.40 In St. Loo Suburban House

St. Louis, Jan. 21.

"Henry V," British-made Shakespearean film, grabbed a hefty $15,000 for the first week of an indefinite run at the Shady Oak, Clayton, St. Louis county. The film is being presented twice daily with the house scaled at $2.40.

It is the first time in many years locally that a film has been shown at such an admish scale.

B'way Biz Spotty As Film-Shopping Keen; 'Jolson' Wow 50G, 2d Run; 'Madeleine' Sock 130G, 'Calif.' 60G

Business in Broadway's firstrun film houses took on a spotty aspect during the past week. With several days of wet weather, grosses for most of the hold-over pictures faltered from their constant pace of hefty earnings to only mildish returns, while the majority of newcomers left their starting posts strongly. From all indications, shopping by customers for top product, already noticed in several other key spots, has really hit Broadway.

Surprise of the week was "Jolson Story," which holds a good chance of breaking the house record of $52,000 at the State on its second-run playdate. With no marquee lure in the house's current stage bill, the smashing biz is attributed almost solely to the film, many customers who saw it during its preem run at Radio City Music Hall coming back to see it at the State. Previous mark was set nine years ago by Eddie Cantor in a personal appearance.

"13 Rue Madeleine," following the record-breaking "Razor's Edge" into the Roxy, teed off to a fine first round of $130,000. Figure is considered especially good since the theatre has reverted to its old admission scale of 80c-$1.25—$1.50 after charging $1.50-$1.80 for "Edge." "California" also appeared off to a good start at the Rivoli with a first week take of $60,000, whereas "Perfect Marriage," bowing in at the Paramount along with the Mills Bros. and Elliott Lawrence orch on the stage, chalked up a mild $70,000, considered an n.s.g. opening figure for this house.

"Till the Clouds Roll By" came through with a rousing $115,000 during its seventh and final frame at the Music Hall to earn the distinction of being the highest-grossing Metro film ever to play there. It gives way to "Yearling," another Metro Technicolor opus, tomorrow (Thursday). Among the holdovers, "Best Years of Our Lives" continued near-capacity during its ninth week at the Astor with a hefty $49,800. Film has varied less than $2,000 during its last four weeks, and continues indefinitely.

"It's a Wonderful Life" continued its becalmed pace at the Globe for a fifth week take of $30,000 but holds. "Humoresque," at the Hollywood, pulled an okay $29,500 for its fifth week and also continues. "Time, Place and Girl" drew a strong $48,000 for its fourth frame at the Strand but will be pulled Friday (24) to make way for "Man I Love."

Forthcoming week will see several other newcomers. "Lady in the Lake" replaces "Secret Heart" tomorrow (Thursday) at the Capitol, and "Dead Reckoning" follows "Love Laughs at Andy Hardy" into the Criterion today. "Her Sister's Secret" succeeds "Ladies Man" at the Gotham and "Sinbad the Sailor" tees off in place of "Song of South" today at the Palace. "Wake Up and Dream" follows "Beast With Five Fingers" into the the Victoria tomorrow, and "Swell Guy" enters the Winter Garden Saturday (25), after five weeks of "Wicked Lady."

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; 95-$2.40) —"Best Years of Lives" (RKO) (9th wk). Remains near-capacity with solid $49,800 expected in till for week ending tomorrow (Thursday). Last week was rousing $51,800. Continues indefinitely.

Capitol (Loew's) (4,820; 70-$1.50) —"Secret Heart" (M-G) plus stageshow headed by Tommy Dorsey orch. Fourth and final frame ends today (Wed.) at mildish $53,000, as against previous week's fair $62,700. "Lady in Lake" (M-G), plus Tex Beneke orch, Gene Sheldon on stage, opens tomorrow (Thursday).

Criterion (Loew's) (1,700; 60-$1.25) —"Dead Reckoning" (Col) opens today (Wed.). Last week, second and final stanza of "Love Laughs at Andy Hardy" saw n.s.g. $11,500, with okay $17,000 chalked up preceding week.

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 70-$1.20)—"Wonderful Life" (RKO) (5th wk). Biz on this one continues in doldrums with slow $30,000 estimated for fifth week ending Friday (24); last week, fair $34,700. Holds.

Gotham (Brandt) (900; 70-$1.40)—"Her Sister's Secret" (PRC) opens today (Wed.). Last week, "Ladies Man" (Par) pulled after four days of second frame with weak $5,900 in the till; opening stanza was fairish $9,100.

Golden (767; $1.20-$2.40)—"Henry V" (UA) (21st wk). Continues strong on roadshow policy with okay $8,000 chalked up for 20th week ended last Saturday (18) night; 19th week was strong $10,000.

Hollywood (WB) (1,499; 70-$1.10) —"Humoresque" (WB) (5th wk). Holding up steadily with okay $29,500 for fifth frame ending today (Wed.). Last week, hefty $33,000. Holds.

Palace (RKO) (1,700; 60-$1.20)—"Sinbad the Sailor" (RKO) opens today (Wed.). Last week, seventh and final stanza of "Song of South" (RKO-Disney), light $22,000, with mildish $28,000 previous week.

Paramount (Par) (3,664; 70-$1.50) —"Perfect Marriage" (Par) plus stageshow headlined by Mills Bros., Elliott Lawrence orch (2d wk). Initial session wound up yesterday (Tuesday) with sub-par opening figure of $70,000. Last week, fourth and final frame of "Cross My Heart" (Par), plus Andrews Sisters on stage, mild $60,000.

Park Avenue (U) (583; $1.20-$2.40)—"Stairway to Heaven" (U) (5th wk). Dropping slightly to $17,500 for fourth stanza ending last (Tuesday) night, after okay $18,000 previous week. Continues on modified roadshow policy.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (5,945; 70-$2.40)—"Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G) plus stage show, ends seventh and final frame today (Wed.) with solid $115,000, only $2,000 off the sixth week's high of $117,000. "Yearling" (M-G), plus Patricia Bowman, Charles Laskey topping stage bill, opens tomorrow (Thursday).

Rialto (Mayer) (594; 35-85) — "Murder in Reverse" (Indie) (2d wk). Will probably drop to weak $7,000 for second frame ending tomorrow (Thursday) after strong $10,200 for initial stanza. "Tower of London" (U-reissue) opens Friday (24).

Rivoli (UA-Par) (2,092; 60-$1.25) —"California" (Par) (2d wk). Appears off to a good start with hefty $60,000 through the wickets for opening week ended Monday (20). Previous week, sixth and final frame of "My Darling Clementine" (20th) did weak $15,000.

Roxy (20th) (5,886; 80-$1.50) — "13 Rue Madeleine" (20th) plus stage bill headlined by Gracie Fields (2d wk). Apparently following in the footsteps of "Razor's Edge," its high-grossing predecessor, with smash $130,000 for first week ending yesterday (Tuesday). Last week, eighth and final frame of "Edge," saw solid $86,000 in the till.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 43-$1.10)—"Jolson Story" (Col) with Thelma Carpenter topping stage bill. Surprise of the week, soaring to near-house record of $50,000 for first session ending today (Wednesday). Earnings attributed to picture, with previous high of $52,000 brought in by Eddie Cantor on stage nine years ago. "Jolson" holds another week, with Barry Gray coming in to top new stage bill tomorrow (Thursday).

Strand (WB) (2,756; 75-$1.50) — "Time, Place, Girl" (WB), plus stageshow headlined by Vaughn Monroe orch (4th wk). Holding to hefty $48,000 for fourth and final frame ending tomorrow (Thursday) after okay $53,000 previous stanza. "Man I Love" (WB), plus Charlie Barnet orch topping new stage bill, opens Friday (24).

Victoria (Maurer) (720; 70-$1.20) —"Beast with Five Fingers" (WB). Fourth and last session ends today (Wednesday) with mild $11,500, after fair $14,500 last week. "Wake Up and Dream" (20th) opens tomorrow (Thursday).

Winter Garden (UA) (1,312; 60-$1.20)—"Wicked Lady" (U) (5th wk). Final stanza ending Friday (24) should tumble to weak $17,500, after fair $20,000 for the fourth frame. "Swell Guy" (U) opens Saturday (25), after special Damon Runyon preem Friday (24) night.

'Skies' 14G Leads Mont'l

Montreal, Jan. 21.

Biz solid all along the line, with holdovers for "Cloak & Dagger" (Palace), "Two Years Before Mast" (Capitol), and "Blue Skies" in fourth week at Loew's.

Estimates for This Week

Capitol (CT) (2,700; 35-63)—"Two Years Before Mast" (Par), okay $12,000 for repea session after boff $18,000 in opener.

Imperial (CT) (1,850; 30-50) — "Devil's Mask" (Col) and "Crime Doctor's Man Hunt" (Col). Good $5,000. Last week, "Thrill of Brazil" (Col) and "Boston Blackie and the Law" (Col), nice $4,700.

NEW YORK'S FAMOUS CRITICS DESCRIBE THE WONDERS OF "CALIFORNIA"!

"A REAL WHOOPER-DOOPER. The gold in 'California' glitters with a beguiling gleam! All the elements of rough and tumble drama—and John Farrow has kept these tumbling across the screen at a smooth velocity. Milland plays the hero with magnificence." —Bosley Crowther, N. Y. Times

"BANG-UP ENTERTAINMENT. Vigorous, large-scale drama, made to order for adventure fans. It offers every kind of goings-on from gold-rush excitement to bar-room brawls in the lusty days of 1848." —Rose Pelswick, Journal-American

"LONG LINES AT THE RIVOLI should await this rugged action-filled saga. Lavish production, unstinted in its budget." —Frank Quinn, N. Y. Mirror

"BIG SCALE, LUSTY, EXCITING MELODRAMA—strikingly beautiful and as exciting as the most rabid fan could wish. Barbara Stanwyck is so beautiful in Technicolor she should never again be photographed in black and white. Fast pace keeps the attention of the Rivoli audiences riveted on the screen." —Kate Cameron, Daily News

"MONEY HAS BEEN LAVISHED ALL OVER THE PICTURE. The Technicolor Western movie in its most opulent splendor." —Alton Cook, World-Telegram

"LAVISH PRODUCTION, good cast. Ray Milland plays the caravan's boss with dash and vigor." —Eileen Creelman, N. Y. Sun has another sensational hit... to hit the same sensational figures as "Two Years Before The Mast" and "Blue Skies"!

Filipino Web Forming Nucleus of Far East Net; Pacts CBS, ABC, MBS Shows

A network of stations covering the major cities of the Far East is a-borning and, if present plans hold, will tie the commercial Orient together via radio web. According to Norman Paige, head of the recently formed Philippine Broadcasting Corp., which already has six 1,000-watters operating in the Islands, exchange programs have already been set with Sydney, Australia, Singapore and Shanghai, and others are in the offing with Batavia in Java, Bangkok, capital of Siam, and Saigon, French Indo-China.

Paige has just left New York after signing contracts with CBS, ABC and Mutual for repeat broadcasts of some of the sponsored net programs over his PBC. Shows will be plattered in San Francisco and shipped air express to Manila. CBS, last to be signed, is pacted for two years. Affiliations with U.S. nets will bring some 15 to 20 sponsored American web shows a week to the island chain within the next month.

PBC's six stations, KZZA in Zamboanga, KZDA in Davao, KZTA in Tacloban, KZIA in Iloilo, KZCA in Cebu City and flagship outlet KZFM in Manila, are all going up to 10,000 watts as soon as equipment is made available, Paige said. Web stations operate 18 hours a day, two-thirds of the time sponsored with virtually all shows emanating from Manila and piped to other cities via dual microwave link. Programs are broadcast in simultaneous streams over the two beams, as well as FM in Manila, where there are about 400 of the latter type sets. Only opposition in the area comes from KZRH, Manila station which, operating on old equipment as contrasted to PBC's newly installed Raytheon gear, doesn't boast as clear a signal, according to Paige.

Sydney Exchange Preem Set

The PBC AM broadcasts are already picked up, during the evening hours, in Hongkong, Shanghai and Auckland, New Zealand. Program exchange arrangement with Sydney begins within two weeks with a trade of one news broadcast a day, similar deal holds for Shanghai and will follow in Singapore as soon as contact is made. Paige said that the immediate purpose of his pact-and-linkage is not commercial, but a means of closer relationship between the various elements in that quarter of the globe. Web-style construction in territories not controlled by the United States is not contemplated within the next year or so, according to PBC head, partly because of international unrest in the Far East and as yet unclarified provisions of international law pertaining to broadcasting. If Britain, France and the Netherlands permit, he said, stations will be built in the capital cities of their colonies. Should this occur, it will bring about the unusual situation of commercial American stations operating in competition with non-commercial, government-owned British, Dutch and French outlets.

Program-wise, the Philippine net has a number of locally sponsored shows, backed by U. S. national and local advertisers. Tuesday for the Manila operation. Coca-Cola does a remote from Manila's Club Cairo, while Mennen's, Ford, Pepsi-Cola, Ovaltine and others follow suit. Paige pointed out the possibilities of the Islands as a market, with a population of 18,000,000, 12 million of whom can understand the English broadcasts. He said that in Manila alone there are about 80,000 radios to which are being added another 5,000 a month. He said, that someone could make a fortune with a small five-tube tropical receiver which could operate on 220 volts (standard PI power) and sell for around $30. With all radios imported from the U. S. geared for 110 volts, people have to buy power converters at a cost almost equalling that of the set before they can receive.

Red Elements

Bulk of the local shows come from remotes, Paige said, with the net picking up every important government speech, especially during the past months when there has been much unrest with the Hukbalahops, wartime guerillas whose leadership has since been slowly taken over by Communist elements. Paige himself went into the hills on several occasions with a recording machine and cut speeches of Luis Toruk, Huk leader, for rebroadcast. On two other occasions Paige sneaked Toruk through the lines for live broadcasts and even brought him to the palace of President Manuel Roxas once for peace conference. For all broadcasts of this sort Paige said he tells the other side to listen in and prepare an answer, for which it is given equal time.

Paige stated that the net is prepared for the new Parity Bill which comes before the new Congress in March. Bill provides that all native industries must be owned in part by Philippine citizens. 60% of PBC stock is held by Filipinos, with Paige holding another 25%. Paige was originally ABC correspondent in the Islands during the war, and segued into the local radio picture after interesting Island capitalists in the construction of a radio network. The six stations are represented here by John Blair Co.

French in Hunt For Tint Stock

Paris, Jan. 14.

The French are currently attempting to close a deal with the Russians, bartering some French black and white raw stock needed by the Sovkino against some Agfacolor raw stock required by the French if they are to continue producing in color. So far the only tinted feature produced here is "Marriage of Ramuntcho," currently in the editing stage. Considerable difficulties are encountered by producer Anet Badel (Films de France).

First batch of negative was supplied by the Cinema Branch of the French Occupation Forces in Austria. This was found insufficient and had to be considerably supplemented by stock reportedly obtained from visiting GIs in small pieces and at black market prices up to about 90c a foot. Then some alleged experts claiming to have a vaporized mercury process were given a contract which enabled them to threaten litigation and obtain compensation when they had to be discharged. This was made imperative because Eclair lab would not guarantee work done by them.

There are only three labs in Europe: Berlin, Prague (in the Soviet zone) and Eclair (at Epinay, near Paris) which can process Agfacolor. Eclair has three Agfa technicians, and a very small amount of Agfa equipment, here by the Germans who, under occupation, brought it to do some of their Agfa prints. Work is slow and two pictures would result in a bottleneck.

Latins' Mason Bargain

In the enviable position of having acquired the Latin-American rights to four James Mason pictures before he became a top b. o. draw, Foreign Screen Corp. of New York is now releasing the films in South America where, according to company head H. Alban-Mestanza, the British star is the number one foreign boxoffice star.

Pictures are "This Man Is Dangerous," "The Patient Vanishes," "The Night Has Eyes" and "Terror House." Latin UA also has been inking another Mason film, "Fanny by Gaslight," slated for U. S. release soon.

Gordine Brings 'Idiot'

Bringing a print of his film version of Dostoievsky's "Idiot" with him, Sacha Gordine, French film producer, arrived in New York yesterday (Tuesday) aboard the Italian liner Vulcania. He'll remain in Gotham for a few days and plans to go to the Coast the end of the week.

Producer of "Jericho," picture dealing with the French resistance movement which just closed a six-week run at the 55th St. Playhouse, N. Y., Gordine will confer with Andre Paige, his New York rep and distributor of "Jericho," prior to leaving for Hollywood.

WARNERS INK MONTAND

Yves Montand, French singing star, has been signed to a seven-year contract by Warner Bros. Montand will come to Hollywood the latter part of June.

Case of Morals

Montreal, Jan. 21.

Surburban city of Westmount has amended its bylaws and has authorized construction of a film house, verboten until now. Announcement in local sheets that the staid city of Westmount would "further amend bylaw 196 concerning good morals and decency" caused a few smiles, but explanation was simple.

Bylaw forbidding theatres was passed in 1909 and at that time theatres were placed on the tabu list "in the interests of good morals."

New Firm to Make 16m Pix for China

Pointing up the lack of studio equipment in China, K. C. Tsien, in charge of sales and distribution for the newly formed China Film Enterprises, stated in New York last week that his firm was currently producing a number of 16m shorts in the U. S. and plans to make full-length Chinese features here for distribution in the Far East. Also contemplating invasion of the Chinese exhibition field, company expects to establish a circuit of 50 16m theatres to be erected in the smaller cities on the coast and interior of China.

Stumbling block to China Film's theatre aspirations at present, Tsien said, was inability of the firm to secure sufficient projectors. However, when materials become available, houses are figured to attract a new mass audience which never before has had the opportunity to become film fans. Such 16m circuits, located in regions previously untouched by any exhibitors, are expected to be welcomed by the major distribs who are anxious to secure additional product outlets.

Aside from its entertainment pix, China Film is also handling educational films which it both produces and distributes to Chinese cultural institutions. Organized by Tsien and H. C. Weng, who's in charge of production, company is said to have no connection with the Chinese government.

Japs Making Films About New Government Changes

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Japan's three major film companies—Toho, Shochiku, and Dai-Ei—are shooting pictures on various aspects of the country's new constitution. Release date will be May 3, when the constitution goes into effect six months after it's promulgation, Nov. 3, 1946.

Shochiku, which specializes in comedies, is producing a humorous short on universal suffrage and equality between sexes. Toho is working on a "super-production" on Japan's denunciation of war, while Dai-Ei is filming the biography of Sanehatsu Ishii, who was a pioneer in Jap liberalism.

Slump Talk Disturbs London Legit Despite Boff B.O.s; Production Booming

By HARRY REGENSBERG

London, Jan. 17.

Although showbiz in the West End is generally good, there's a feeling of uncertainty among most of the hardened show folk. There's a whisper around that a slump is on the way and it won't be long.

Slump talk is due to the fact that most people are spent their war gratuities; big war wages no longer exist; industrial unrest is all around, with strikes cropping up every where. People are still queuing for essentials despite the war being over nearly two years. People seem to be shopping for entertainment, instead of just going to the theatre as was customary during the last five years, and passing up many shows that would have been deemed successes in the days gone by.

But with all that, producers are getting busy lining up new attractions, getting ready for the big influx expected here this summer, although accommodation is still the big London problem with purses where the expected 250,000 tourists this year are going to put up when they do arrive.

Emile Littler has a big lineup of American shows, including "Oklahoma," which may go to the Coliseum, sometime in the spring, or wait for the fall, to be staged at Drury Lane. "Oklahoma" which may go to the Casino sometime this summer, and "Annie Get Your Gun," which is being kept a close secret. Insiders claim that Littler has it in conjunction with Bud Flanagan, as well as a straight play, "Call Home the Heart," which, stars Sybil Thorndike. Littler also has "Red Mill" touring the provinces, where it's flopped. It's now being recast, with chief parts to be taken by Jewel and Warriss, local top comics. Show will go to Blackpool for the summer season with London appearance doubtful.

Henry Sherek has at least three plays, "Truant in Park Lane," starring Roland Young and Lilian Braithwaite; "Edward, My Son," by Robert Morley, in which he will be starred, and which Sherek is doing in association with Gilbert Miller, and "Random Harvest," which will star Googie Withers.

Peter Daubeny, comparative newcomer to West End, has quite an exhaustive list of shows this season. Starting in February with Frederick Lonsdale's hit "But For the Grace of God," Daubeny is in the market with a new play by Ivor Novello, titled "We Proudly Present"; a new comedy by Veronica Sylvaine, "The Anonymous Lover," and another new play, as yet untitled, in which he will star Douglas Montgomery. He also new play by youthful authors Kieran Tunney and Simon Wardell, titled "Aurora," with Tunney sailing to America, this week, to see if he can persuade Tallulah Bankhead to return to London to star in it.

Besides S. N. Behrman's adaptation of Somerset Maugham's "Jane," which H. M. Tennent is presenting at the Aldwych, Jan. 29, in association with the Theatre Guild, Tennent is also presenting a revival of "Ladies in the Park" by Dorothy and Gladys Hope-Wallace, "Galway Handicap," tried out at Bournemouth, and a new play, "The Rossiters," starring Diana Wynyard. Tennent is also getting ready with two important American productions, one being Brock Pemberton's "Harvey," which will begin casting as soon as Pemberton arrives in London sometime in April, and "Deep Are the Poots."

Jack Hylton has Victor Herbert's "Gypsy Lady," renamed "Romany Love," due at His Majesty's sometime in February, and the longnegotiated-for "Carmen Jones," which is rumored as a likely candidate for the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden.

Firth Shephard tosses in a couple in "Life With Father," sometime in April, mostly with an American cast, and "Peace Comes to Peckham" by F. P. Delderfield, who wrote the current Whitehall hit, "Worm's Eye View."

Bernard Delfont's most important contribution is a new operetta by Bernauer and Melford, who wrote his former Palace hit "Gay Rosalinda," for which he is bringing Richard Tauber back from America sometime in May, and a new play with music, titled "Caroline," as vehicle for Evelyn Laye and husband Frank Lawton, sometime in July.

Then there's the new Cochran-Herbert revue, "Bless the Bride," for the Adelphi around May, and not least, Val Parnell's new Palladium revue, due sometime in April, which will star Tommy Trinder, with several American and Continental names.

Finally, Jack Waller makes one of his rare incursions into West End with a new musical by Frederick Thompson with the intriguing title of "He Saw Virginia."

"Caviar to the General," produced at the out-of-the way New Lindsey theatre, house with capacity of less than 300, is going to the West End. Eugenie Leontovich came over from America to star in this, with impresario Tom Arnold catching opening Jan. 14, and immediately securing West End rights.

Last American show to be tried out at this theatre was Elsa Shelley's "Pick-Up Girl," which was also acquired by Arnold who cleaned up with it in the West End, and it's still making money in the provinces.

Estimated Grosses (at $4 to the pound)

"And No Birds Sing," Aldwych (10th week). Never really in the money, but barely bettering $6,000. But now nearer $5,600, which is slightly above even break. Skedded to close in May, being replaced by S. N. Behrman's "Jane," touring provinces now prior to London showing.

"Antony and Cleopatra," Piccadilly (5th week). Revival starring Godfrey Tearle and Edith Evans opened as smash, also attracting students at suggestion of educational authorities. Going steady $9,600, which is practically capacity. Staying some time, after which same principals will revive "Othello," which is expected to stay till Michael Redgrave returns from Hollywood to star in "Macbeth."

"Bees on the Boatdeck," Playhouse (5th week). Opened to fair biz and building on word of mouth. Now getting $5,000, which is profitable and looks like staying for quite a while.

"But for the Grace of God," St. James (20th week). Has done extremely well for some months, although high as $7,000 which is plenty profitable. But now nearer $5,600, slightly above even break. Show folds in March.

"Clutterbuck," Wyndhams' (23rd week). Opened as big hit, grossing around $7,000 for some weeks. Has since dropped to nearer $6,400, still okay.

"Dante, Garrick (6th week). American illusionist exceeded all expectations, garnering steady weekly intake of $13,200 for 12 shows. Could easily have stayed many more weeks to hefty profits, but vacating Jan. 18 to make room for Laurence Olivier's Australian hit, "Born Yesterday," which has been touring provinces and is due for London bow in May.

"Fifty-Fifty," Strand (46th week). Has been very profitable venture with Firth Shephard producer Harry Green, having touched $8,000 weekly for many months. Is now nearer $6,000, which is still profitable. Expected to stay well into summer.

"Follow the Girls," His Majesty's (22nd week). Another big hit for West End hits for many, many months, doing as high as $16,000, which has since settled to nearer $11,600, still profitable. Will linger till end of February when replaced by Ivor Novello's "Gypsy Lady," (renamed here "Romany Love") now touring the provinces.

"Fools Rush In," Fortune (20th week). Steady capacity which hasn't diminished despite departure of Jack Hylton, Derek Prye and Glynis Johns. At around $5,600 it's showing plenty of profit at this small capacity house.

"Grand National Night," Apollo (32nd week). Has been fairly profitable for some months, having garnered as high as $7,000 for some weeks of its early run, but is now nearer $5,400, which is about an even break. Vacating Feb. 9 for "She Wanted a Cream Door" replacing Feb. 5.

"Here Come the Boys," Saville (41st week). Has done fairly well for some months, although not exceptionally, but business has exceeded $14,000. Now nearer $8,000, which is in the red with departure of Bebe Howard due to serious illness, not helping any. Due to vacate Jan. 25, with "Wizard of Oz," transferred from Winter Garden, where it has been running for afternoon shows.

"High Time," Palladium (39th week). Has been steady grosser for many months, yielding some weeks as much as $26,000, but now nearer $20,000, which still shows slight profit. Staying till some time in April when replaced by Val Parnell revue, to be produced by Robert Nesbitt, with Tommy Trinder starred, supported by some American importations.

"Ice Revue," Stoll (15th week). This Tom Arnold innovation clicked from the start, doing standee biz since opening, and one of the few shows in the West End unaffected by the pre-Christmas slump. Intake steady at around $24,000 and good for year. Looks like house has entered into new and very profitable policy.

"Lady Frederick," Savoy (9th week). Got away to good start, with opening weeks exceeding $8,000 mark, which is good profit. But now nearer $7,400, still in the money.

"Lady Windermere's Fan," Haymarket (2nd year). This Oscar Wilde classic has been money maker from opening day. Teed off at $8,800, practically capacity for this spot, maintaining same gait practically throughout, suffering very slightly during November-December slump. Now back again to top figure, and should continue so for many more months.

"Message from Margaret," Duchess (21st week). Has not suffered by transfer from Westminster; still doing packed trade at around $6,400, which is as much as this small-capacity house can accommodate. Good for several more months, but will be compelled to vacate first week in March to make room for new play, "White Devil," starring Robert Helpman and Margaret Rawlings, now touring provinces, and being presented by Duchess Productions, Ltd. Will probably transfer, if another house becomes available.

"Mother Goose," Casino (5th week). This seasonal Christmas pantomime is doing cleanup for Emile Littler even beyond his expectations, averaging weekly intake of $32,000 for 12 shows, which tops everything in West End. Staying till Mar. 1 after which it's being replaced by Tom Arnold's revival of Ivor Novello's "Dancing Years," which ran for two and a half years at the Adelphi during the war.

"No Room at the Inn," Winter Garden (38th week). Started slowly, with wiseacres predicting that Jack Hylton had a flop on his hands. But show picked up and proved one of outstanding smashes in West End. Has done as high as $12,000 per week, which is big dough for straight show. But now doing only six shows to give Freda Jackson, star of show, a breather, with afternoon shows taken up by "Wizard of Oz," but even then doing steady $8,000, with "Oz" topping it at around $11,600, warranting its transfer to Saville theatre.

Old Vic Season, New (18th week). Regardless of what show is staged, theatre is always doing capacity, with queues around theatre at every performance. Fact that Laurence Olivier is out of cast has made no vital difference. Intake around $11,200 per week, which is as much as house can hold.

Opera, Cambridge (24th week). Jay Pomeroy has tried hard to establish opera at this house, forming own English opera company and has succeeded in building up an opera-loving following. House is doing steady $12,000 per week, which is showing good profit.

"Pacific 1860," Drury Lane (5th week). Despite adverse criticisms, this latest Noel Coward effort, deemed not up to usual author's standard, is doing good biz, with advance very healthy. At around $20,000 per, it's showing fair profits despite heavy overhead. Is attracting big starched shirt trade, with cheaper seats not so responsive. Expected to run till fall.

"Perchance to Dream," Hippodrome (2nd year). Has not wavered since opening, doing steady capacity trade. Even now that Ivor Novello is out, it's still packing 'em in. At $16,000 weekly, it's about all house can hold. Good for many more months.

"Peter Pan," Scala (5th week). This hardy perennial is holding up better than ever, having created new house record this year. Doing $18,400 per week of 10 shows, which gives plenty profit to Jack Hylton and Daniel Mayer Co.

"Piccadilly Hayride," Prince of Wales (15th week). Has been playing to capacity since opening, rarely varying in its intake of $22,000 per week, and looks like continuing throughout this year, unless Sid Field, star of show, is committed to do another film for Wesley Ruggles this year.

"Red Riding Hood," Adelphi (5th week). Doing near capacity for 12 shows weekly, which is around $25,000. Staying till Mar. 1, after which it's followed by limited season of International Ballet, to mark time for Charles Cochran-A. P. Herbert's new revue, "Bless the Bride."

"Song of Norway," Palace (46th week). One of the outstanding hits of the season. Has been playing to capacity most of the time. Had a few lean weeks, but has now picked up to around $18,000, at which gait it is still good for many more months.

"Sweetheart Mine," Victoria Palace (25th week). Has done well for some time, grossing as high as $12,000, which is very healthy for this off-beaten-track spot. But now nearer $8,000, barely above water.

"Sweetest and Lowest," Ambassadors (37th week). Got off to capacity start and continuing to pack 'em in. Steady $7,200, which is as much as theatre can hold. Good for the entire year.

"The Gleam," Globe (7th week). Didn't get same raves as author's "The Guinea Pig," but still in the money at around $8,000, which far more than pays expenses. Good for lengthy stay, unless it drops much below that figure.

"The Guinea Pig," Criterion (48th week). Got off to hefty start, and has been money maker ever since. Doing around $6,400, which yields plenty profit. Should continue making money for some time.

"The Land of the Christmas Stocking," Duke of York's (5th week). Seasonal show which has been giving good returns, with great kid trade. Has averaged around $8,000 for 12 shows. Vacating Jan. 18, to make room for new Peter Ashmore play, "Craft," starring Diana Churchill and Marie Lohr, which opens Jan. 22.

"The Night and the Laughter," Coliseum (14th week). Biggest and most expensive show theatre has ever staged, reputed to have cost between $200,000 and $280,000 to produce, with response not commensurate with big outlay. Show has been trimmed in its overhead, with intake now around $16,000, which shows slight profit, although difficult to see where management is likely to get big outlay back.

"The Man from the Ministry," Comedy (4th week). Got away to some very good press comments, which proved favorable to intake, now around $4,400, showing fair return.

"The Poltergeist," Vaudeville (26th week). Has done fairly well, but not big money maker. Averaged around $6,400 for some time, but now nearer $5,000. Vacates Feb. 1, to make room for "Ill Met by Moonlight," Irish play with native cast, opening Feb. 5.

"The Shephard Show," Princes (17th week). Despite varied criticism, has done well, with takings around $14,500 for some weeks, but now nearer $13,500, which still shows profit and likely to stay for sometime.

"The Shop at Sly Corner," St. Martin's (2nd year). Has been in the money for many months, grossing as high as $6,400, with sale of filming rights adding to profits. Is now nearer $4,000, but still not on losing side, as overhead is pretty low.

"The Winslow Boy," Lyric (35th week). Real money getter since opening and continuing to draw big coin. Doing around $9,600, which is still very near capacity. Looks good for best part of this year.

"Under the Counter," Phoenix (2nd year). One of the biggest hits this house has staged for many years. Has been consistent money maker since opening, doing steady capacity trade, barely affected by end of last year slump. Average never below $14,000 per week, which is around capacity. Good for many more months.

"Worm's Eye View," Whitehall (2nd year). Always in the money, ever since opening. Has done as high as $8,000, which is big dough for this medium-sized spot. Now nearer $7,000, which is still in the money.

Bertram Mills Circus, Olympia (5th week). Opened to smash biz, playing twice daily to capacity. Doing 12 shows weekly, and turning them away at every performance. Average intake has been $120,000 per week, which is record even for this spot. Folding Feb. 1, as show is on only limited run.

Bldg. Activity Cues More Pix Houses for Dublin

Dublin, Jan. 14.

Dublin, with one theatre seat for every 10 members of the population, is likely to have more film houses within the next couple of years. Big interests are looking for a central city site, but principal activity will be in the suburbs.

Dalkey, eight miles out of town, has one site to offer, and five bidders, only one of whom is said to have experience of the business, are in the market. A new house is going up in Dun Laoghaire, six miles out, and an option is held by Associated Picture Houses on another site in the district.

As soon as building priorities are eased, at least one new house goes up on the north side, with others to follow on the edges of the city limits.

'Mourning' Becomes Paris

Paris, Jan. 21.

French translation of Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" produced by Gaston Baty opened last week at the Montparnasse to a good reception.

Production is fair with acting excellent. Play might have been improved by cutting the third act due to lack of audience interest in the play's classical Greek pattern. Theatregoers considered the wife's suicide the real payoff.

Exhib-Distrib Tiff on Rentals Stirs Canada

Montreal, Jan. 21.

Renewed tiffing between Canadian exhibs and distribs is now seen in the denial last week by distribs of an exhibitors statement that film rentals in the Dominion have increased disproportionately when compared with the rise in boxoffice receipts. Exhib statement was made by B. C. Salamis of Quebec on behalf of the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries.

Figures offered by Salamis are based on two important errors, distribs claim. One is that amount of film rentals in the past three years has increased by 25.6%; other is that boxoffice receipts went up only 19.3%.

Salamis claim that 1945 rentals totaled $17,976,467 was challenged by the distribs who contended that the real figure was $17,490,264, a difference of $486,203. Distribs also claim that figures quoted to show differential between receipts and rentals should not include 16m rental figures, since many 16m accounts are non-theatrical, e.g., homes and institutions. Also contended the figures should not include spots without theatres.

Distribs quote government figures to show percentage of b.o. receipts returned to them for rentals in 1945 as 29.5%. In 1944, figure was 29.2%; in 1943, 28.9%, aend in 1942, 29.8%. Above figures dispute exhib claim that 32.41% of every dollar goes for rentals and that combined total ratio is higher than that of U. S., which Salamis placed as around 30%.

Ninety percent of deals are at basic rate, distribs claim, and any increase comes through circuits playing top attractions on percentage, is distrib contention.

Comedie Francaise Goes Deep in Red; Competition, Firings Add Problems

Paris, Jan. 10.

The quarterly meeting of the government-owned Comedie Francaise disclosed that the organization is deeply in the red. This is partly due to the resignation during the summer of some of the best talent, including Jean Louis Barrault and Madeleine Renaud, whose opposition at the Marigny has created deep inroads in the patronage.

Besides its old stand, the Comedie Francaise annexed the former Odeon, now styled "Luxembourg," as a second stage. Since operations were combined, grosses in both houses dropped an average 50%.

Of the company of 85, manager Andre Obey is letting out 19 players, mostly newcomers. There had been some talk of Obey's resignation but he denies it.

Mireille Perrey and M. Bonifas, currently on the roster, are resigning. Players eased out include Pamela Stirling, Clarisse Dedon, Marie Therese Moissel, Annie Gaillard, Jacqueline Cartier, Antonia Bouvard, Marcell Serviere, Eugel, Roger Clairval, Lee Peltier, Marcel Bourdel, Sellier, Gaston Girard, Georges Cusin and Raoul Henry. Considered that some of the bookings were partly due to political influence.

Strauss Haled to Court

Munich, Jan. 21.

Longhair composer Richard Strauss has been haled before a denazification court to determine whether he profited under the Nazi regime.

Strauss, now 82, has received Austrian citizenship and was exonerated there of any Nazi taint. His German trial, coming up within two weeks, may be held in absentia.

Argentine Films in Bid for U. S. Biz; To Compete With Mex Spanish Talkers

Surveying the potential U. S. market for Argentine-made films for the past two months, Juan Barcia, head of Productores y Artistes de America, Buenos Aires producing firm, revealed in New York last week that several English language pictures would be made by his company out of a program of six high-budgeters marked for production this year. Purpose of his visit to the states, Barcia said, was to make franchise deals throughout the country and to negotiate with major U. S. distribs to handle his product as well.

Proposing to sell Argentine films on a continental basis, Barcia declared some 12,000,000 Spanish-speaking people in the U. S. form a ready-made market for his product. Up to now, he pointed out, Mexico has had the run of the field. With an eye toward bolstering marquee values in this country, he also disclosed that an interchange of talent has been made with Mexican film companies whereby such stars as Dolores del Rio and Jorges Negrete will make pix for his firm in exchange for Argentine thespers.

Barcia, who visited Hollywood while in America, left Monday (20) for Havana. Thereafter he will travel to Venezuela and Brazil before returning to Buenos Aires.

More Can. Exhibs Line Up To Keep Admissions Down

Montreal, Jan. 21.

Looks like there'll be no taking advantage by Montreal flicker exhibs of the price control end on theatre admissions. Consolidated Theatres, Famous Players affiliate which runs the six big mainstemmers, has announced that it's backing up statement by John L. Fitzgibbons, FP prexy, that there's no intention on the part of FP to raise ducat prices.

Policy of nabe flickeries, most of which are run by Confederation Theatres and United Amusements, has not yet been announced, but it's believed that they'll follow policy set by Famous Players.

Metro Reported Buying Sydney Minerva; Plans Nabe Chain Expansion

Sydney, Jan. 12.

Metro is reported to have bought the Minerva, Sydney, from Minerva Centre Co., headed by Dave Martin, current head of the Tivoli vaudevue loop. Figure is given at $350,000. Condition of sale is that purchaser's name shall not be divulged until government treasurer consents to the deal. This may take some weeks.

It's known that Metro, headed here by Bernie Freeman, is on nabe upbeat on own chain operation. Nabe move began last year with takeover of Bondi nabe from Packer and Nacard. Next move will probably be at Crow's Nest. Metro wants at least five nabes in the Sydney zone, and hopes to get them this year. Metro likewise is looking for spots in Melbourne. It's opposition to the Hoyts-National and Greater Union-Rank setups.

Minerva, originated by Dave Martin, has always maintained a legit policy, although it is set for pix. Present lease is to Kathleen Robinson and Robert Walton, operating as Whitehall Productions. Current show is "Life With Father," a major hit and set for long span. It's understood that present duo will continue to operate this house for some time to come.

When Greater Union took over the King's circuit last year, Metro, reported sore because it meant that King's would ultimately give up playing the Metro product for product allied to GUT, Universal and Columbia in the main, plus Rank British-mades. Metro decided to get its own chain, it's said, to offset the GUT-Rank move.

Metro operates a major city loop covering Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide and Perth. Spread now is for the nabes. Idea is to spot pix hot from Metro's own keys for extra dates before selling to general run of exhibs hooked to a Metro contract. Nabes will only be bought in thickly populated areas, such as the Minerva, located at King's Cross, "the little New York" of the Aussie zone.

Austrian Actress Sues For Libel on Spy Charge

Vienna, Jan. 15.

Denying she was a Nazi spy who carried out espionage missions in Spain and Portugal during the war, as charged in an article which appeared in the widely read Wochenausgabe, film actress Marika Roekk has filed a libel suit against the sheet's editor, Franz Schrom. She demands retraction, payment of a fine for charity purposes and punishment of Schrom.

Offending story was a four-column piece captioned "From Mata Hari to Marika Roekk" which described the alleged operations of Miss Roekk and a German singer, Hildegard Frick, both of whom, the article said, worked under Admiral Canaris, chief of the German espionage system. Much of Wochenausgabe's material is not new, inasmuch as a large part of it is contained in a book by Kurt Singer called "Spies and Traitors of the Second World War."

Miss Roekk, Hungarian by descent and top film star in Austria and Germany before the war, has also sued Singer and his Swiss publisher, the Zurich Falken Co.

Paris Producers Try Combines

Paris, Jan. 10.

Though the fear of increased official interference and talk of eventual nationalization compel pix industry toppers to tread slowly, their need of getting out of the red is suggesting remedies of combines and foreign co-production deals.

Pathe and Gaumont, the two local majors, are pooling their studios and labs. Gen. Edouard Corniglion Molinier, Gaumont v.p. in charge of production, is now mustering under the Gaumont production banner several of the French indies headed by Regina and Worfman. The new group is incorporating with a small capital of $240,000, but is ogling British co-production deals involving Alexander Korda and Gabriel Pascal. The Korda-Gaumont production tieup would be of special interest since Gaumont has a local Rank distribution agreement. Pathe has a co-operation deal with RKO, with "Silence Is Gold" currently rolling.

Picture money is becoming increasingly hard to find for indies. Upping costs and poor results have made bankrollers shy. Current economic requirements are restricting the amount of cash the Credit National, the administration's agency for financing business, has available for films, since most of it had to be switched to supporting nationalized industries.

Currently the administration is trying to reorganize the industry through the newly-created Centre National du Cinema, which combines all former government picture agencies, headed by Michel Fourre-Cormerey, and legislates in all phases. There are no big chains of theatres, and production has so far been scattered mostly among indies, with the majors unable to organize them or nominate a local Eric Johnston who could act efficiently as their spokesman rather than a mouthpiece for the administration's directives.

SILVERSTONE OFF TO O.O. 20TH EUROPE ACTIVITY

Murray Silverstone, 20th-Fox International prexy, sailed for Europe aboard the Queen Elizabeth last Saturday (18) for a three-week routine trip. He plans to huddle on 20th plans in Europe during 1947 with both Otto Bolle, company's general manager in England, and Francis L. Harley, 20th director for Europe, North Africa and the Near East.

Silverstone will also o.o. construction work on 20th's new studios, now under construction in London. Studios will not be ready for film production until at least next summer, however.

Stagedoor Johnny..........William Brooks

Ferenc Molnar would probably recognize his former hit play, "The Good Fairy," in its current remake. "I'll Be Yours" more or less hangs on the framework of the Hungarian author's yarn, while Universal-International has added Deanna Durbin and several songs that the star sings engagingly. The result is a mildly pleasant little comedy that should do well enough at the boxoffice.

This version of the original Universal pic (1935), which starred Margaret Sullavan in a more literal Preston Sturges adaptation of the Molnar work, has assumed a modern-day New York aura instead of the original Continental atmosphere. Some of the Sturges satirical bite is still evident, while much of the situation comedy is obvious. With Miss Durbin a factor, though, there isn't much for the exhibitor to concern himself. The star's looks, lilting soprano and a charm she's carried over from her childhood thesp days are always sufficiently in evidence when the pic has a tendency to sag.

Miss Durbin plays a youngster who goes to New York from her small town, becomes an usher at what is supposed to be the Radio City Music Hall (though it's called the Buckingham). Then she becomes involved with an elderly millionaire roue chaser of the chaste. Complicating matters is a young, penniless lawyer, the other link in the romance. Difficulties are for the young lovers because of circumstances that rather innocuously involve the girl and the roue.

Miss Durbin solos three tunes neatly. It's doubtful if she's ever been in better voice. "Granada," the Augustin Lara tune, a standard in the Latin American catalogs, is done especially well, while the likewise standard "Sari Waltz" (C. C. S. Cushing-E. P. Heath-Emmerich Kalman) and "It's Dream Time" (Jack Brooks-Walter Schuman) are the other highly listenable numbers.

Tom Drake unassumingly plays the young lawyer, while William Bendix is the waiter, a part whose Jewish overtones are too obvious in a role where the semitisms as part of the character aren't even remotely necessary. This is strangely inconsistent; the Jewishness is only evident early in the pic—as if the producer had suddenly awakened to the role's tangent and then decided to cut it out without re-shooting the earlier reels. Adolphe Menjou plays the roue, which Frank Morgan played in the former pic. Herbert Marshall had the original part played now by Drake.

The pic has a sharp pace, having been directed by William A. Seiter, and the production is expensive-looking all the way. Miss Durbin is attractively garbed, but one frock, a dark affair with white lace collar, makes her look much too matronly, a factor pointed up because of her tendency to take on weight during the past couple of years. Kahn

The Macomber Affair

Hollywood, Jan. 20.

United Artists release of Benedict Bogeaus production. Stars Gregory Peck, Joan Bennett, Robert Preston; features Reginald Denny, Carl Horbord, Earl Smith. Directed by Zoltan Korda. Screenplay, Casey Robinson and Seymour Bennett, from adaptation of Ernest Hemingway story by Bennett and Frank Arnold; camera, Karl Strauss; editors, George Feld, Jack Wheeler; music, Miklos Roza. Tradeshown in Hollywood. Running time, 89 MINS.

Robert Wilson..........Gregory Peck
Francis Macomber..........Robert Preston
Margaret Macomber..........Joan Bennett
Captain Smollot..........Reginald Denny

Kongoni..........Earl Smith

"The Macomber Affair," with an African hunt background, will get by principally through selling force of its cast toppers, Gregory Peck, Joan Bennett and Robert Preston. Story, while triangular in theme, isn't particularly pleasant in content, even though action often is exciting and elements of suspense frequently hop up the spectator. Certain artificialities of presentation, too, and unreal dialog are further strikes against picture, although portion of footage that filmed in Africa, is as interesting as anything of the season.

Preston enacts role of Francis Macomber, a rich American with an unhappy wife (Miss Bennett), who arrives at Nairobi and hires Peck, a white hunter, to take him lion hunting. On the safari, this time in cars, Macomber can't stand up under a lion charge and his wife sees him turn coward. The white hunter kills the lion. Thereafter, Macomber broods over his shame, his wife falls for the hunter and finally she fires shot which kills her husband, ostensibly, as she levels her sights on a water buffalo charging her husband.

African footage is cut into the story with showmanship effect, and these sequences build up suspense satisfactorily. There are closeups of lions and other denizens of the veldt, and scenes in which lion and water buffalo charge, caught with telescopic lenses by camera crew sent to Africa from England, will stir any audience. These focal points of story out-interest the human drama as developed in scripters' enmeshing trio of stars.

Peck delivers a clear-cut delineation of the white hunter, a role in strange variance to his usual work. Miss Bennett doesn't fare so well with the stilted dialog, but scores as the shrewish wife. Preston, making his comeback after service in the Army, makes a neat impression in a difficult part. In bits, Reginald Denny and Jean Gillie acquit themselves satisfactorily.

"Affair" was co-produced by Benedict Bogeaus and Cascy Robinson, latter also collabing with Seymour Bennett on adaptation of Ernest Hemingway's original story, "The Short and Happy Life of Francis Macomber." Plenty of values were inserted, which Zoltan Korda handled well enough in his direction. Camera work by Karl Strauss is above average, and George Feld and Jack Wheeler did bang-up job with the editing.

It's a Joke, Son!

Eagle-Lion release of Aubrey Schenck (Bryan Foy) production. Stars Kenny Delmar; features Una Merkel, June Lockhart, Kenneth Farrell. Directed by Ben Stoloff. Original screenplay, Robert Kent and Paul Gerard Smith; camera, Clyde de Vinna; editor, Norman Colbert; music, Alvin Levin. Tradeshown in N. Y., Jan. 15, '46. Running time, 63 MINS.

"It's a Joke, Son!" represents Eagle-Lion's first Hollywood-made production—and it's not a very auspicious entry. Film, evidently a modest-budgeter, sags through most of its length under a mess of slapstick that's laid on with a heavy trowel. Pic's only claim to prominence is the presence in the cast of Kenny Delmar, the "Senator Claghorn" of Fred Allen's radio show, which should be a good exploitation gimmick for enterprising exhibs. The picture's hardly strong enough to stand alone in first-run situations which, together with the fact that it runs only 63 minutes, would groove it for the duals.

Delmar tries hard to carry the film and, although he'll undoubtedly draw plenty of yocks in spots, his type of humor isn't strong enough for an entire feature. Story follows the theme of his radio work and, funny though it may be, his constant play on the north vs. south angle seems almost in poor taste, what with the current trouble in the Georgia gubernatorial mansion, the Bilbo purge, etc. Guy's a fairly competent actor, however, and milks his particular type of dialog for all that's in it.

Original screenplay by Robert Kent and Paul Gerard Smith doesn't leave much to the imagination, and most audiences will be able to call the shots on each cliche long before the footage winds up. Delmar's a southern aristocrat, living on the glory of pre-Civil War days and little else, with his only income being from a mint bed. When his bossy wife is nominated for state senator by her Daughters of Dixie, the political bosses who've invaded from the north nominate Delmar to run against her and so split the party vote to leave the way open for their own minion. After much by-play, during which Delmar is kidnapped and arrives back at the courthouse just in time for the election, he wins the vote, takes over the pants-wearing in his family and cements the love affair between his daughter and her boyfriend.

Although they're overshadowed by Delmar, the rest of the cast come through okay under direction of Ben Stoloff. Una Merkel, as the senator's wife, is good, and June Lockhart, though no great shakes as an actress, is photogenic as the daughter. Kenneth Farrell, newcomer to the leading man ranks, is passable, and Douglas Dumbrille is on hand to provide the villainy.

Bedelia

"Bedelia," British entry in the U. S. film market, which is being tradeshown by Eagle-Lion tomorrow (23) in New York, was reviewed in VARIETY, from London, June 5, 1946. Film, produced by John Corfield under the J. Arthur Rank banner, was estimated by the reviewer, Clem, to have strong potentialities in the U. S. Now running 85 minutes, it ran five minutes longer in England.

Margaret Lockwood and Ian Hunter head the cast.

Miniature Reviews

"I'll Be Yours" (Songs) (U). Deanna Durbin starred in "Good Fairy" remake; okay boxoffice.

"The Macomber Affair" (UA). Gregory Peck, Joan Bennett and Robert Preston names needed to draw 'em to this African veldt safari.

"It's a Joke, Son!" (Eagle-Lion). Kenny Delmar as "Senator Claghorn" in Eagle-Lion's teeoff production; okay dualer.

"The Pilgrim Lady" (Rep). Romantic comedy, strictly for the duals.

"Man's Hope" (Lopert) (Spanish-Made). Andre Malraux film of own Spanish Civil war novel. Top arty b.o.

"Born to Speed" (PRC). Fair "B" actioner for the duals.

"Klockorna I Gamla Sta'n" (Swedish Made). First Swedish tinter will gross well in Scandinavia and stands U.S. chance.

Daisy, the pup from the "Blondie" series, is excellent.

Producer Aubrey Schenck has mounted the film on authentic-looking sets but in keeping with the modest budget. Clyde De Vinna's camera work is good. Stal.

A run-of-the-mill programmer. Story line is familiar, and despite adequate performances, it has little else.

Yarn is the oldhat saga of an inhibited femme university teacher, who has authored a daring novel pseudonomously and submitted it to a New York publisher. On latter's rejection it falls into the hands of a couple of embryonic publishers, who decide if the author is as glamorous as her yarn is sexy they might have something via a cheesecake buildup. Of course, auntie palms off her ugly duckling niece, who's not so bad sans glasses. Lads interest an influential radio commentator, who provides sponsorship for publication through having a yen for the gal.

What happens after that is the cliche wherein the pseudo authoress falls into the arms of the young publisher, wounds the vanity of her elder benefactor, while auntie finds romance with a middle-aged lecturer.

Alan Mowbray as the egocentric commentator practically has a field day via a juicy role which supplies most of the comedy. Lynne Roberts contributes a neat interpretation of the unwilling masquerader, while Helen Freeman turns in a nifty performance as the aunt. Warren Douglas does okay by the boyfriend-publisher role. Other good performances are contribbed by Veda Ann Borg, Clarence Kolb, Doris Merrick and Russell Hicks.

Lesley Selander has achieved pace in direction, with Reggie Lanning's cameraing okay. Edba.

Man's Hope

(SPANISH-MADE)

Lopert Films release of Andre Malraux production. Stars Majuto, Nicolas Rodriguez, Jose Lado; features members of International Brigade. Direction and screenplay, Malraux, from his novel, "Man's Hope"; camera, Louis Page; assistant director, Denise Marion; music, Darius Milhaud. Previewed in N. Y. Jan. 17, '47. Running time, 78 MINS.

And members of the International Brigade and Spanish peasants.

(In Spanish; English Titles)

Completely unique in treatment, utterly stirring in impact, "Man's Hope" has, if anything, gained strength from a strange odyssey which brings it to the screen almost eight years after production. In filming two incidents of the Spanish Civil War, both taken from his own novel, Andre Malraux has gained emphasis by deliberate understatement, and has underlined this entire screen work with bone-bare simplicity. Box-office value of "Man's Hope" is virtually assured in the art houses.

After being smuggled into France following the Franco accession and hidden there during the Munich era and German occupation, "Man's Hope" was first screened after the liberation. At that time it received the Louis Delluc award, French equivalent of the Hollywood Oscar.

For an audience accustomed to strict continuity of action and logical story progression, this film will require some digestion. "Man's Hope" tells its story by implication as much as by actual picturization. In the subtitling a lot of the dialog is literally left unsaid. But these are not the norms by which Malraux produced the film. He's obviously steered clear of any romanticizing of the Loyalist cause, although he fought with the International Brigade; instead, he paints a stark picture and leaves it to the audience for consideration.

Film opens on street scenes in Barcelona, with a sound background of monotonous machine-gun jabber and explosive light artillery. Not until a few minutes have passed does one realize that the sound is not dubbed in. It's the mccoy, but with no visual evidence of results. Pictures were made during the 1938 bombardment. Film, in near-essay form, then shows the efforts of the Spanish citizen army and the two-bomber Loyalist squadron to destroy a bridge. The culmination of those efforts comes quickly. A peasant breaks through to the squadron with the location of the new Franco airfield, which must be neutralized before the bridge can be bombed. Unable to read a map, the peasant is taken on the bombing ride, and suspense, while he's trying to spot the Franco airdrome, is excellent. After the bombing, the plane crashes in the mountains. The rescue funeral procession of peasants, with virtually no sound but the Darius Milhaud score, provides one of the most unusual endings ever filmed.

Flying sequences, actually taken in the cockpit of the old Potez which constituted the Red Air Force in that sector, are outstanding in dramatic quality. On only two occasions does Malraux give indication of his comparative inexperience with a camera. Thesping is near-perfect, mainly because it's natural. Tomm.

Born to Speed

PRC release of Marvin D. Stahl production. Features Johnny Sands and Terry Austin. Directed by Edward L. Cahn. Screenplay, Crane Wilbur, Scott Darling and Robert B. Churchill, based on original story by Churchill; editor, W. Donn Hayes; camera, Jackson Rose; music, Albert Levin. Reviewed in N. Y. Jan. 17, '47. Running time, 61 MINS.

Johnny Randall..........Johnny Sands
Toni Bradley..........Terry Austin
Mike Conroy..........Don Castle
Breezy Bradley..........Frank Orth
Mrs. Randall..........Geraldine Wall
Duke Hudkins..........Joe Haworth

Turning to midget autos as story fodder, PRC has turned out a fair action film which should hold its own on double bills. Gripping lensing of racing scenes tends to offset the cliches of a none-too-original story.

Son of an oldtime racing driver killed plying his trade, Johnny Sands plays a chip-off-the-old-block, who teams with his dad's old mechanic (Frank Orth) and pilots a resurrected racing auto driven by his father. Spirited competition develops between him and his arch rival, Don Castle, another driver, both of whom compete for the affections of Terry Austin, who portrays Orth's niece. In a Frank Merriwell finish of the big race, Sands defeats Castle, wins Miss Austin and retires from the track much to the delight of his mother, Geraldine Wall, who feared he would have met an untimely end similar to that of his father.

Vivacious Miss Austin acquits herself nicely and deserves better parts. Sands is miscast. A bit too juvenile, his emotings lack conviction. Castle is adequate as the heavy, while Orth and Miss Wall do well. Handling production reins, Marvin Stahl squeezed as much entertainment as possible from the low budget, while Edward L. Cahn's direction was somewhat uneven. Jackson Rose rates kudos for his camera work.

Klockorna I Gamla Sta'n

Stockholm, Jan. 10.

Europa Film production and release. Stars Edvard Persson, George Fant, Gunnel Broström, Elsie Albiin; features Goesta Cederlund, Maria Albin, Ulla Wikander, Axel Hoegel, Torsten Hillberg, Harry Ahlin, John Norrman. Directed by Ragnar Hylten-Cavallius. Screenplay by Hylten-Cavallius, based on idea by Bertil Malmberg; camera, Birgir Gottlieb; music, Alvar Kraft; color technicians, James B. Schakleford and Olle Nordemar. Made in Cinecolor. At Saga, Stockholm. Running time, 112 MINS.

First Swedish tinter, aided by marquee value of comedian Edvard Persson and excellent lensing of Birgir Gottlieb, should reap hefty grosses in Scandinavia and has b.o. possibilities for many U. S. arty houses. Fine cast contribs okay thesping under Ragnar Hylten-Cavallius' smooth direction.

With the story centered in Stockholm's "Old Town," one of the most picturesque parts of the Swedish capital, locale lends itself to fine celluloid hues which technicians James B. Schakleford, borrowed from Paramount, and Europa's Olle Nordemar bring out to perfection. Idea could be called unoriginal, but smart scripting milks it for full entertainment values. Wing.

Lucrezia Borgia

"Lucrezia Borgia," French-made film being re-released by Noel Meadow and B. L. Garner in a day-and-date opening today (22) at the Apollo, N. Y., and the Playhouse, Brooklyn, was reviewed in VARIETY on Oct. 20, 1937. Critic said the pic "is more likely to be noted for its treatment of a daring subject than for outstanding merit. Picture is historical, with heavier emphasis on the villainies of the ruthless Cesar Borgia than on the life of his sister, for whom the picture is titled."

Running time is 80 minutes.

"Jeg Elsker en Anden" ("I Love Another") (DANISH). Asa Film production and release. Stars Marguerite Viby, Ebbe Rode; features Ib Schoenberg, Ernie Arnesen, Bjorn Watt Boolsen, Betty Helsengreen, Else Colber, Astrid Holm, Henry Nielsen, Ebba Amfeldt, Ingeborg Pehrson. Directed by Lau Lauritzen. Screenplay, Grete Frische; camera, Rudolf Fredericksen; music, Svend Gyldmark. Reviewed in Copenhagen. Running time, 92 MINS.

Sparked by Marguerite Viby's brilliant acting, this comedy is the Danish actress' first film in her homeland after years in Swedish studios. A good songstress, she warbles several numbers to good effect. With okay direction and lensing, pic looms as satisfactory film fare for Scandinavia, but chances in U. S. are dubious.

"Jag Alskar Dig, Argbigga" ("I Love You") (SWEDISH). Svea Film release of Ake Ohberg production. Stars Sonja Wigert, Aka Ohberg; features Margit Manstad, Rune Halvarsson, Naima Wifstrand, Henrik Schildt. Direction and screenplay by Ohberg. Reviewed in Stockholm. Running time, 90 MINS.

Producer-writer-director Ake Ohberg apparently took too many chores on his hands and the result is a bad copy of a Laurel & Hardy comedy. Sonja Wigert, one of Sweden's best film comediennes, is cast as a strong-willed lass. She clashes with Ohberg who eventually tames her temperament. Chances out of Scandinavia are meager.

"To Liv" ("Two Lives") (NORWEGIAN). Kamera Film release of Dovre Film production. Stars Erling Drangsholt, Sigrun Otto; features Wenche Ein Bugge, Jon-Lennart Mjoen, Rolf Christensen, Carl Struve, Frank Robert. Directed by Titus Vibe Mueller and Finn Bo. Screenplay based on play by Finn Bo. Camera, Kaare Bergstroem; music, Christian Hartman. Reviewed in Oslo, Dec. 26, '46. Running time, 112 MINS.

Written when Norway was under German occupation, Finn Bo's drama, produced in November, 1945, is now a striking film about a youthful informer who comes as a "friend" to a family in Oslo. He contrives to send the son to jail and betrays the daughter. Finding her husband's life destroyed, the mother kills the informer. Jon-Lennart Mjoen is a realistic traitor, while other acting is equally good. Pic will do well in Scandinavian countries and may offer some appeal to the U. S. market.

"Le Village de la Colere" ("The Village of Wrath") (FRENCH). Cinema de France release of Participation du Film production. Stars Louise Carletti, Paul Cambo; features Micheline Francey, Marcelle Geniat, Jean Paredes, Raymond Cordy, Schultz. Directed by Raoul Andre. Screenplay, Joan Canolle. Previewed in Paris. Running time, 105 MINS.

Poor direction and technique, as well as inexpert story treatment, bar this film from the bigger French spots and make it hardly a bet for America. Story, set in 1860, shows a young city slicker who moves to the country and falls in love with a gal of gypsy descent. Accusing her of being a witch, villagers want to toss the couple out of town but finally decide they're okay. Theme may be worth a Hollywood remake after suitable treatment.

"Stiliga Augusta" ("The Pleasant August") (SWEDISH). Wive Film release of Centrum-Rex Film production. Stars Ingrid Backlin, Ake Gronberg; features Emy Hagman, Bengt Logardt, Thor Modeen, Julia Caesar, Carl Hagman, Ann-Margret Bergendahl, Folke Hamrn, Naima Wifstrand. Directed by Elof Ahrle; screenplay based on play by Gustaf af Geijerstam. At Strand, Stockholm. Runnng time, 80 MINS.

Film version of the w.k. play fails to improve upon the original despite an excellent cast which includes some of Sweden's best actors. Although stars Ingrid Backlin and Ake Gronberg are an interesting combination it's obvious that they will be seen to better advantage, in a film of more merit than "Stiliga Augusta." With a fair run anticipated at Swedish theatres, comedy is too slowly paced to offer much interest for the U. S.

"Medan Porten var Stangd" ("While the Doors Were Closed") (SWEDISH). Europa Film release of Hasse Ekman production. Stars Ekman, Tollie Zellman, Olof Winnerstrand; features Goesta Cederlund, Douglas Hage, Hjoerdis Petterson, Marianne Loefgren, Gunn Wallgren, Gunnar Bjoernstrand, Inga Landgre. Direction and screenplay by Ekman. Camera, Harald Berglund. At Saga, Stockholm. Running time, 96 MINS.

Reaching into the world-trade class, writer-producer-director-actor Hasse Ekman has turned out a creditable film dealing with varied characters in a house and what happened to them after the doors were closed. He does well as the star and shines in several scenes with young Inga Landgre. Lensing achieves same top-drawer standards as Ekman's direction and cast's thesping. A hit in Scandinavia, pic is a good bet for the U. S. as well.

Auction Bidding Raises Question Among Competitive Smalltown Houses

Inclusion of the optional competitive bidding proviso in the anti-trust decree is expected to weigh on the minds of many smalltown exhibs via a highly argumentative question—whether the guarantee of several days' clearance over a competing house is incentive enough to prompt them to accept competitive bidding.

Exhibitors in question are those who enjoy firstrun situations in their own communities but have been forced heretofore to play films day-and-date with houses in nearby towns. Many of these exhibs, pointing to the fact that their towns were larger than the neighboring communities and consequently drew a part of their audience from these neighbors, have been pressing distribs for clearance ever since the consent decree ruled such protection legal. When the anti-trust decision handed down last June reaffirmed the legality of clearances, exhibs in the "A" towns immediately doubled their efforts, claiming no reason existed now why distribs should not meet their demands.

Distribs, however, came up with a "joker" clause in the decision to make these "A" exhibs think twice. Last of the seven factors laid down by the court to determine clearance—and one which has been carried over into the final decree—states flatly that "there should be no clearance between theatres not in substantial competition." If exhibs in the "A" towns, consequently, demand clearance over "B" towns, they'll virtually be admitting the existence of competition between the two cities. And, under the final decree, the "B" exhibs will now be able to ask that a bidding system be instituted for all product available to both cities.

The Illustration

Illustrative of the problem is an indie exhib in a city of about 22,000 population, who's been an old customer of the majors ever since nickelodeon days. He's always been balked, however, by an exhib in a town eight miles away with 10,000 population. Customers from the smaller locality invariably come to the "A" town for most of their shopping and, naturally, flop into the "A" exhib's house after their chores are finished to cool their heels. "A" exhib, consequently, has always claimed he's entitled to clearance over the smaller town.

Same "A" exhib also has to contend with a house owned and operated by one of the majors in his home town. Indie, as an old customer, has always had the cream first-run product, with the affiliated house getting only firstrun pix of its own company. Now the branch managers with whom this exhib deals have warned him that if he's granted clearance, he'll be forced into auction bidding for all his product. And, most important, the affiliated theatre in his own town, backed by the top money of its owner, will be bidding against him.

Exhib recently succeeded in getting the desired clearance from Metro. Now that the final decree has ruled for auction bidding, he's thinking twice about pressing his demands with the other companies from whom he buys pictures.

Solo Sales

h.o. "An exhibitor rarely has the opportunity of discussing his problem with the man who makes the decision. Instead, he states his gripe to the exchange manager who has to clear everything via the telephone with some fellow behind a desk at division headquarters and higher."

Can't Bargain

Loss of give and take in negotiating for pix is a result of individual picture selling, Lachman added, since you can't bargain one picture's terms against another. Situation has been increasingly aggravated, Allied topper maintained, because the product shortage has deprived the exhib of whatever little bargaining power he had before. Exhibs, these days, he said, were glad to get any product to fill the holes in playing time.

Wandering producers and switching sales biggies have also added to the exhibs' woes, according to Lachman. Outside producers who control the rental terms of their distributing company have been a consistent factor in driving up terms, he asserted. "When a producer changes his distrib, the exhibitor can't win either way. If a producer was getting better terms through his last distributing agency, he insists on the same terms with the new distrib. If his deals in the old were not as good as those generally obtained by the new, then he wants his pictures boosted to the new."

Such sales chieftains as Tom Connors of 20th-Fox and Ted O'Shea of Liberty Films, both of whom switched from Metro, and others who've transferred from one company to another have also helped in the rise of rental levels, Lachman said. "When they come from Metro, which gets top terms, they immediately inaugurate the same system elsewhere regardless of whether the product warrants it. The higher terms are always carried with sales officials from one company to another; the lower are forgotten."

"Things are really tough for the film buyer," Lachman wound up, "but don't get me wrong. I love the film business."

efforts towards the creation of a system of arbitration for this industry, not in order to take away from the Government the power to have the defendants cited for contempt if they violate the decree, not in order to deprive the theatre operator of his right to institute an anti-trust suit, but so that the small theatre operator especially may have a place to go to complain about an alleged wrong or injustice without getting involved in litigation which he has no desire to bring and probably cannot financially afford to commence. Before Levy's address and a question and answer period, which copped approval from the audience, members of the local MPTOA refused to permit Fred H. Wehrenberg, prez of both the national and regional group, to resign. In fact, they elected him for another one-year stint. In order to lighten his duties three executive vicepresidents were chosen to share some of the work, Carson Rodgers, L. A., "Bud" Mercier and Clarence Kaimann. Other officers of the regional body chosen are Joseph Ansell, treasurer; Francis Kaimann, secretary and Walter Thimmig, sergeant-at-arms. All are St. Louis exhibitors.

Lew Lehr, from 20th-Fox, was guest of honor at a dinner last night (Monday). Joseph F. Holland, local banker and humorist, was toastmaster.

A resolution endorsing Wehrenberg's all motion picture industry forum, to discuss the industry's problems and grievances, was adopted late yesterday by members of the convention.

make his recommendations on the production front to Par's studio clan. Perkins will speak for the United Kingdom and Farley on a survey of the production situation in Europe. Understood that all will put in a pitch for slanting films to the burgeoning foreign market.

Foreign field currently shapes up as the best bet for kiting profits to meet soaring production costs, many of Par's execs believe. With GI penetration serving to bring American films to millions who heretofore had little idea about them, number of overseas markets have shown remarkable gains. Philippines, for one, has climbed meteorically in the past year while many other countries have followed a similar pattern.

Johnston's Quota Rap

Hollywood, Jan. 21

Britain's quota restrictions on American pictures is likely to wind up as a boomerang, according to Eric Johnston, chief of Motion Picture Assn., who recently made an overseas tour to gander conditions in England. British quotas, Johnston explained to 50 film execs at a luncheon here, will breed quotas in other countries, and the reaction will harm not only Hollywood but the British picture industry as well. Johnston said in part:

"Every country with a struggling film industry would follow the British example, and instead of Britain finding an expanding trade overseas for her films, she would meet with resistance."

British Quota Boost Needed, Sez Archibald

Proposed boost in the British quota, storm center of the current Anglo-American pitched battle, is essential to maintain a planned hike in British production and, as such, indispensable to the growth of the United Kingdom's film business, George Archibald, managing director of J. Arthur Rank's Independent Producers, Ltd., declared following his arrival in the U. S. last week. Archibald briefed the reasons behind the criticized stance of the British Film Producers Assn. and predicted adoption of the BFPA resolution by the British government.

British producers turned out some 40 films in '46 and are aiming to boost that number to 80 or 90 within the next few years, Archibald said. To encourage that expansion, it is necessary, he added, to assure the film-makers that a home market with lengthening playing time would be available or the added bankrolling would not be forthcoming.

Rank, himself, as head of the BFPA, and most of his producers favored the upped quota, according to Archibald. "British producers are right now enjoying the fruits of the earlier quotas, which made possible native production by assuring local companies that their pictures would be played," he said. "Without the quotas, the British public may never have had a chance to develop a taste for British films. And the current situation, where British films are now outguessing their American counterparts in England, could never have occurred."

"Moreover, for cultural reasons alone, no British government could permit a situation where British pictures could be crowded off our native screens by Hollywood's product or that of any other country," Archibald continued. "The public of any country should have the opportunity of seeing the best of their stories and culture filmed by native talent."

Systematic Deprivation

Claiming that Yank exhibitors were still systematically depriving British product of wide distribution in the U. S., Archibald asserted that he, therefor, saw no reason why Hollywood should beef over threatened increased quotas. "If there's any doubt that British films are being limited in their American playdates, the findings of your own court in the anti-trust suit should dispel that doubt," he said "Paragraph 110 of the court's findings holds the major companies guilty of drafting various contract provisions which, among other things, exclude foreign pictures and those of independent producers."

"It's oversimplifying matters to say that no exhibitor will turn down a picture, foreign or otherwise, which will gross big money," he argued. "Without star buildup and powerful exploitation, films just don't draw heavy patronage in America. And without assurance of wide distribution, there can't be a buildup of personalities—nor can there be expenditure of big sums of money for exploitation by a company if it isn't in a position to take advantage of audience penetration by choice bookings."

EAGLE'S U-I 'DELUSION'

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Universal - International assigned S. P. Eagle to produce "Delusion," based on the Carl Zuckmayer novel, "Master of Life and Death."

Keith Winter is doing the screenplay, to be directed by Compton Bennett.

What British Squawk Is All About

Filmdom's "Battle of Britain," which promises to generate increasing heat in the next year, results essentially from efforts of the English to more nearly equalize the balance of trade in motion pictures. They first moved in that direction in 1928 by passing quota laws, which were renewed in 1938 and expire next year.

There are two different quota acts, one applying to distributors, the other to exhibitors. The first provides that of the film released by any distrib each year, a certain percentage must be British-made. British-made is defined as meaning that at least 50% of the labor cost was paid to British nationals. Current act provides that distribs must have handled 15% in 1938, with 1½% increase each year until 30% was reached. That was reduced because of the war, however, and is currently 22½%, with a rise to 25% slated for March 31. Percentage was originally based on footage but changed to a cost basis during the war, with £72,000 ($288,000, approximately) being set as minimum expenditure for maximum credit. Distrib quota expires March 31, 1948, and undoubtedly will not be renewed, since even the British Film Producers Assn. has recommended its abolition. It's claimed that it causes Americans to make "quickies" in England to meet quota requirements and the British industry itself no longer needs this type protection.

Exhib Quota Act provides each British theatre must play a percentage of British-mades. As renewed for 10 years in 1938, quota started at 12½% and rose each year until it hit 25%. That was of necessity reduced during the war and is now 17½%, with a rise to 20% slated for Sept. 30. Percentages are based on hours of screen time during "normal" theatregoing periods of the day. Act expires Sept. 30, 1948, and British Producers Assn. wants it changed so that, in effect, English houses must play eight British pix each six months (16 if they change bills twice a week) while circuits, in addition, must play six indie British pix each half-year. American execs estimate the result would be a 30% playing time quota for indie houses and 40% for circuits. BFPA also wants government to "de-Americanize" the Associated British Pictures Corp., of which Warner Bros. was permitted to gain a controlling interest in 1945. Circuit, it is claimed, is now "run in the interest of American producers."

Yanks Steam at British Chill

British imports (not necessarily films) and a full-scale trade war.

Threatening British moves recently are generally attributed by U.S. industry leaders to a combination of psychological and economic factors. On the first count, it is said, the British are using big talk to compensate for an inferiority complex as they readjust themselves to the possibility of becoming a "second-ary" nation. On the other hand, they are honestly trying to set up a film industry of their own that can help even the balance of trade.

Goldwyn's Quip

Regarding the latter count, Samuel Goldwyn's quip last week following the statement of Sir Stafford, president of the British Board of Trade, brought general applause from the industry. Remarked Goldwyn: "If British producers would stay away from Parliament and concentrate on making good pictures, they'd be better off."

Unwillingness of the British to understand the operation of free enterprise in the U.S., as it applies to films, especially irks the Americans. No one is more international in outlook, they point out, than an exhibitor—if he can make money at it. But no exhib will—nor should he be expected to—play a picture that won't bring patrons into his house. And 99% of British films, no matter how much U.S. critics praise them, do not appeal to average American audiences. It all goes back to the same old thing—make good pictures and they'll find plenty of playing time, whether they're made in England or Timbuctoo.

Furthermore, the Americans are burned by an idea the British have that what goes into U. S. houses can be controlled from the top, or by any other criterion than boxoffice. As Bob Wilby, Paramount partner, is quoted this week in another story in VARIETY: "Barney Balaban owns 50% of my company, but he can't make me play a Paramount picture if I don't want to. Pressure methods won't go."

On the matter of figures, American industry toppers are incensed at such statements as Cripps' that Hollywood is earning (in Britain), "at least 10 to 20 times the amount earned by British films in America, despite the fact that America must have at least four times as many filmgoers as we have." As a matter of fact, according to best available information, American companies took out of Britain in 1946 about $80,000,000, while the English took from the U. S. about $8,500,000. That's less than 10%, but that's not the point at all, say the Americans. Why shouldn't U.S. companies take 10 times as much from Britain as vice versa, they ask, when the total production expenditure in England in 1946 was from $32,000,000 to $36,000,000, as against $350,000,000 in Hollywood?

Incidentally, it's pointed out, the $8,500,000 that Britain got from the U.S. in 1946 compares with $2,500,000 the 12 months previously, so it can hardly be said that the British competitive situation isn't improving normally as English pictures increase in quantity and quality. It is estimated that the British may take out almost $20,000,000 in 1947.

Forgetful British

In addition to other factors, Americans heatedly point out, the British seem to forget they have a thriving exhibition industry which has been built and exists in great measure only because the continuing availability of American films has enabled them to keep their houses open. Only 17% of the take of British boxoffices is exported to America. The other 83% goes to British labor, British investors, British theatremen and to the British government in the form of taxes. English exhibs pay a tax bill of approximately $120,000,000 a year.

That there is an unfavorable balance of trade in films is no reason for restrictions, according to the Americans, since there always will be an unfavorable balance in any single commodity at any particular time. For instance, one exec pointed out, the U.S. buys $35,000,000 worth of Scotch whiskey from Britain each year, while England buys absolutely none from America. No one, on that account, suggests the U. S. should put a restriction on Scotch.

Cripps' beef about the quality of American films reaching England, and the fact that they were taking up much British playing time that might be enjoyed by home product, brought a quick rejoinder also. "The very fact that the British industry has to go to its government and ask protection for itself via a quota law," it was said, "proves right off that the public is not in agreement with Cripps on quality of American films. If they're poor and the British product is good, there's nothing in the world to keep British audiences from staying away from the Hollywood product and queuing up for English pictures. That the reverse is too often true means Sir Stafford should look elsewhere than Parliament to adjust the situation."

CEA Backs Prods.

London, Jan. 21.

Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn., representing control of practically all British theatres, has expressed itself as in agreement with British Film Producers Assn. that cinemas here must be "de-Americanized." CEA has made counter-proposals, however, to BFPA's recommendations to the Board of Trade on forthcoming revision of the quota laws.

CEA wants exhibitors quota to stay as is, as against BFPA request it be hiked from present 17½% to above 30%. Reason is that last year's quota defaulters exceeded 1,100 and, if quota was raised, defaulters are likely to rise to over 2,000.

CEA also wants distributors quota to be continued, as against BFPA recommendation it be abolished.

B. O. Bullish To Stix Exhibs

as tremendous biz as ever, while the lesser pix are off at the b.o.

In war-inflated towns where there has been a reshuffling of workers, exhibs are naturally more pessimistic than in those spots with more stable populations. Jackson, Miss., for instance, has already felt a 20% decline, while other towns are varying in almost direct proportion of their war plants to permanently-established industries.

Present high admission prices are seen by many exhibs as the key to 1947 grosses. If the high b.o. tap can be sustained, there's no fear, but if patron resistance grows to such heights that reductions become mandatory, theatre income levels can naturally be expected to drop.

Big Pix, High Admish Seen Key in Des Moines

Des Moines, Jan. 21.

Ralph Branton, general manager of Tri-states Theatres Corp. here, states: "The boxoffice depends upon the picture, and if the picture is big enough or important enough business in 1947 will continue at high levels. If there is a general recession in business, it will take effect in lesser pictures first.

"It is most important that the industry handle itself so it does not dissipate the fairly substantial admission prices of today, either by demanding exorbitant prices for the better than average pictures that will be termed 'road shows' or by creating unhealthy and devastating competitive conditions which can only result in lowering of admission prices and would have effect from the largest to the smallest theatre.

"High admission prices were what made 1946 an outstanding year in the business and normal and good admission prices maintained is the answer to business in 1947. If the producer and the distributor do anything to upset the generally good admission prices prevailing today they will be responsible for any recession at the box offices of America.

Blues in Old Mississip

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 21.

Theatre business recession in the Jackson area has already started, reflecting the closing of war plants and unsteadiness of the cotton market. Locally-owned houses, the State and Joy, are holding up better than chain theatres, but all expect further slump.

Mont'l Op 'Deplores' Big B.O. Forcing H.O.s

Montreal, Jan. 21.

Survey of Montreal exhibs reveals divided opinion on b.o. possibilities for 1947. Four top chains were queried — one main-stemmer and three nabe circuits—and the division of views ranged from very optimistic to downright pessimistic. Most spokesmen saw bright possibilities, though they admitted it was still too early in the year to tell. Top optimism came from a Consolidated Theatre biggie. CT runs the five big first-run flickeries downtown. Exec "deplored" the socko b.o. currently being registered at the first-runners, claiming that since biz was so hot, they were by contract forced to hold over the pic for weeks, until grosses dropped below the control figure. This week, for example, out of CT's five houses, three are holding over films and one of the pictures, "Blue Skies," at Loew's, is in its fourth week, with the end not in sight.

Guy admitted that circuit had expected a levelling off, but now he doesn't know what the year will have in store.

One of the reasons for the healthy grosses, that are making January, 1947, top the same month last year, he said, was that people don't spend as much coin now on entertainment, and instead of patronizing the niteries, they now prefer a film or legiter. (Wolfit Company, Shakespeare repertory unit, which just closed, rang up hefty $30,000 for 10-day run.)

George Ganetakos, managing director of United Amusements, biggest nabe chain here, was the pessimist. He said 1947 biz is only going to be "fair" and saw a definite levelling off, if not a recession. He said biz was down even at the end of 1946, and one of the things he blamed was the shortage of films, forcing his houses to play repeats and reissues which dented the b.o. Expansion plans, as far as new houses are concerned, are being delayed, a "wait and see" policy having been adopted.

Most optimistic of the nabe exhibs is Gordon Dann, supervisor for Odeon, a subsequent-run chain. He didn't expect the huge grosses of 1946, but said that 1947 will likely reach a "nice, healthy level." Odeon is planning four new houses this year, the largest being a 2,500-seater first-run flickery, building to start in spring. He didn't agree with the Ganetakos point that reissues and repeats were affecting biz to any great degree and added that though fewer pix are being made, those that are being shown are better than last year.

Cleve. Circuit Heads See Biz Leveling Off

Cleveland, Jan. 21.

Gradual levelling off in box-office receipts is predicted by Leo Greenberger, co-operator of Community Circuit Theatres. Exec based opinion on such factors as 20% drop in chain's biz, due to less take-home pay of factory workers and new cautious attitude of nabe theatregoers.

More optimistic was Charles Raymond, Loew's zone supervisor, who said attendance showed signs of improving as a result of stronger story properties bought by studios, heftier exploitation and better-developed new stars. Record number of holdovers here indicates people still have moola, he said. Cleveland is not hit as hard as other former war centers because it has more diversified industries, he added.

Local grosses won't vary much this year, claimed Nat Wolf, Warner Bros. division manager, since the city hasn't suffered from radical shifts in population. Slight letdown in crowds is compensated for by higher prices and help of top product, he explained.

"If they continue to give us big films and stage shows," declared Harry Schreiber, RKO Theatre district manager, "the outlook is excellent for us. When newspaper ad space opens up, we will be sitting pretty. Amusement-seekers are gravitating to lower-priced entertainment, enabling many of our attractions to draw four and five-week runs in houses formerly one-week stands."

Chi Ops Say Patrons Have Plenty Pix Coin

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Outlook is generally optimistic here. General opinion is that people still have plenty of moola and if product is good, business will be good. Extent of pessimism was that biz will be "off a bit" this year, due partly to a shortage of product and gradual trend of business in general becoming highly competitive.

Looking into the year's future, James Coston, Warner circuit head, said, "I see no reason why business should not be every bit as good if not better than other years."

On the other hand, Emil Stern, Essaness exec, felt that business may be "off a bit" this year. While business so far compares favorably with last year, there may be a let-up in cash customers later on, he said. "Exhibs and retailers are now definitely out trying to sell customers whereas in former years they just sat back and waited. Fewer pictures this year may also account for fewer payees," according to Stern.

"Theatre business in general will hold up," says Bill Hollander, Balaban & Katz ad chief, "but if there is to be any change, it may only be a slight drop. People still have money and are working, and film biz should remain the same."

Forecast from Arthur Schoenstadt, Schoenstadt Circuit top, was that "business will depend on quality of product. People will still have money left to see a good picture."

Distributor outlook was highly optimistic. Allen Usher, Paramount district manager, opined that "even if there is a business recession, film biz will be last to be hit. After last depression, entertainment biz did not drop off until several years after. And this year all companies will distribute highest quality product for any year."

Forecasts 20% Seattle Drop

Seattle, Jan. 21.

Show business will drop 20% this year compared to 1946, in opinion of Herb Sobottka, Seattle district manager of Hamrick-Evergreen. This is indicated by boxoffice of past four months, he said.

John Danz, president of Sterling Theatres, reports Seattle off, but hinterland holding its own with this trend likely to continue throughout 1947.

Leroy Johnson, general manager Jensen & Von Herberg, is optimistic, saying, "With good pictures we'll naturally show some small increase and our plans are so set. Patrons will carefully select entertainment as everything else. Poorer product will sag."

'47 Seen as 'Crucial' By 'Frisco Showmen

San Francisco, Jan. 21.

Richard Spier, divisional manager of Fox-West Coast, said: "There is no reason to fear a recession in our biz. Grosses are continuing highly satisfactory, with outstanding pictures breaking records. However, the coming year will be the crucial one for all exhibitors. Showmanship, ingenuity, sane-thinking are essential. '47 should be year which will prove good showmen have nothing to fear.

Robert Corbin, manager of the Golden Gate, only Coast vaude house, declared: "There was a slight recession before Christmas, but business has picked up since. The theatre with attractions will do biz. The fact that the last two colored attractions did n.g. proves colored people are out of work and the rising-cost-of-living publicity in local papers is causing people to stay home.

Jack Blumenfeld, of Blumenfeld Theatres, stated: "I look forward to a good year, not as big as '46. The gravy train of war, due to the influx of population by the Armed Forces and defense workers, is over. They have filtered back home.

Roy Cooper, assistant to general manager of Golden State Theatres, declared: "I don't agree with New York distribs on big business prospects. It's wishful thinking. I don't expect the bottom to drop out, but I do expect a recession. Until the cost of living goes down, biz will not be big.

Henry Nasser, of Nasser Theatres, asserted: "I hope it's going to be good, but I doubt it. I believe it will not be as good as last year."

Quality Pix '47 B.O. Insurance—Buffalo

Buffalo, Jan. 21.

Buffalo managers agree that quality productions are the best b.o. insurance for the coming year. None believes any severe recession in prospect. Shopping tendencies by public are becoming somewhat apparent, but not serious.

Vincent R. McFaul, manager of the Shea Circuit, says 1947 so far is bigger than January last year. Neighborhoods are currently showing improvement over recent months, he states, and he believes announced outstanding production schedules of major producers give full assurance of continued public patronage.

Robert Murphy, manager of the Twentieth Century, sees no danger to first-runs from high admission price reactions by public. He thinks good pictures are the answer to any adverse economic conditions. He sees no change in this from the pattern of recent years.

George H. MacKenna, manager of Bail's Lafayette, feels abandonment of the proposed tax cut a present disappointment to first-runs.

St. Loo Exhibs Present Petition to Nix DST

St. Louis, Jan. 21.

A delegation of members of the St. Louis Motion Picture Theatre Owners Assn., headed by Fred Wehrenberg, last week presented a petition bearing 24,310 names to the Board of Election Commissioners urging the repeal of the daylight saving time ordinance. About 19,400 names of registered voters, 5% of St. Louis' registered voters, are required by initiative procedure to place the question on the April 1 ballot. A simple majority is required for the continuance or repeal of the city law.

The signatures were obtained in 100 theatres in the city in a drive that started last Dec. 26. Asserting that daylight saving time, effective between the last Sunday in April and the last Sunday in September each year, is against "the best interests" of their business, the exhibitors said they were anxious for the citizens to decide the question.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Following through on its "Year of 'The Yearling'" slogan, Metro plans to give "Yearling" the most intensive ad-publicity campaign in the company's history. Opening gun in the picture's ballyhoo layout was fired via full-page ads in national mags prior to the preem run of "Yearling" at the Carthay Circle, Los Angeles, and teaser ads have been run in New York daily newspapers for the last two weeks in preparation for the film's second booking—at Radio City Music Hall, N. Y., where it opens tomorrow (Thursday).

Film will be given special treatment and, instead of being released generally, will be showcased at first in key spots throughout the country. Each opening will be given a special buildup under the supervision of Howard Dietz, M-G ad-publicity vcepee. "Yearling" opens next in Chicago and Metro exploitation director William R. Ferguson is currently mapping out a campaign in Chi with five field exploiteers, together with William K. Hollander, advertising chief for Chi's Balaban & Katz circuit.

Unique provision in newly-signed pact between legit thesp Donald Buka and Howard Hughes' California Pictures, Inc., give the film company call on Buka's services only in June, July and August during the contract. Pact calls for six months with options for a seven-year period and was effected after Buka answered a hurry-up call to fly to the Coast and test for "Vendetta," now shooting. Buka asked for and requested the unusual clause in order to be able to take legit work in New York during the winter season. His only previous film was as Bette Davis' son in "Watch on the Rhine" (WB).

Rivalry between Samuel Goldwyn's "Best Years of Our Lives" and Metro's "Yearling" for Academy award honors continues down the home-stretch, with "Yearling," which was released after "Best Years," currently picking up whatever citations have not already been acquired by the Goldwyn film. Metro Technicolor opus to date has gained 21 citations in various national mags, newspapers and radio shows.

Compromise Seen

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Compromise agreement is understood to have been reached for re-editing of "Duel In The Sun" with Catholic Archbishop Cantwell reported ready to rescind action banning film to Catholics after elimination of objectionable parts. Although none of the parties involved would make statement, David O. Selznick's office would not deny that new editing would be effected.

Conference on picture was held with Byron Price, Joe Breen, Selznick and representative of the Archbishop with no comments forthcoming from any party concerned. However, Selznick reps stated they would not discuss the matter until "everyone was satisfied." This apparently was pending on the Archbishop's office approving the new version of "Duel."

Decree Jigsaw

queried whether distrib may condition sale of features on shorts, newsreels, trailers or serials. Finally, it seeks ruling on whether defendant must tradeshow a pic before offering it for bids.

Citing the danger of "not only heavy expenses and dislocation to the distributors" but also "great hardships" to exhibs in the event a Supreme Court reversal required a switchback in selling methods, the Big Five in a brief filed yesterday (21) pitched for a stay of competitive sales. Granting of the stay by the statutory court would avoid necessity of applying to the Supreme Court which "is wholly unfamiliar" with the problem and which should not be asked to grapple with the question until it hears the case on the merits, the brief claimed.

Turning to the theatre freeze, Big Five said that drastic restrictions were, in effect, divorcement all over again, and that the court had shown no intention of depriving the majors of the right to pick up houses to either protect their investments or move into a competitive situation. Since none of the Little Three, nor potent indies such as Samuel Goldwyn and David O. Selznick, were similarly limited, an unfair advantage would be obtained by them.

Inability to keep abreast of changing times meant "gradual and drastic deterioration in the value of defendants' present theatre investments," the brief contended. Nor could the Big Five fight the possibilities of boycotts which are "not merely fanciful" in view of the history of the industry, it continued.

Columbia will argue for postponement in application of the block booking nix until the high court has its say. Universal's main pitch will be for validation of franchises as a means of permitting U to acquire showcases.

to get into any large-scale dispute with the Church.

PCA's 'Finicky' Attitude

Lengthy lulls between squawks on pictures lead to constantly widening frontiers in what films may depict, and it is on that basis that the censorship experts of the Motion Picture Assn. always proceed. A number of beefs in quick succession and there's practically nothing they can do to slow the hand of those who would give greater power to state and municipal censoring bodies. That's one of the little-understood reasons behind the PCA's frequently "finicky" attitude, which, actually, usually leads to less censorship rather than more, despite the fact it gets plenty of people annoyed.

As to the effect on business of such action as that of Bishop Cantwell in forbidding church members to patronize "Duel," it's variable. If the opposition can be surmounted, it means plenty of dollars at the b.o., because it's natural publicity that never fails to send flocks of curious to the theatre.

If the fight gets too tough, however, it can hurt plenty in the cashbox, as in the case of "The Outlaw." Hughes' film, of course, never fails to break a b.o. record in any engagement it plays—but it can't get enough engagements. Church and civic pressure is so strong in many areas that theatre operators would rather not book the film than chance continuing disapproval of the community, with resultant headaches later.

"Outlaw," had it not run into the heavy censorship trouble, it is estimated by distribution execs, would have grossed from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 in the 10 months it has been in release. Actually, despite the tremendous grosses per engagement, it now has amassed only about $1,800,000. Should Selznick run into a similar situation on "Duel," the results could be disastrous, since the picture cost $5,500,000 and will have to gross $10,000,000 to get Selznick off the nut.

As the highest Catholic authority in the Los Angeles Diocese, in which the picture was produced, Archbishop Cantwell's directive is likely to be observed in Catholic churches throughout the U. S.

Dictum was published in Tidings, the official weekly newspaper of the Los Angeles Diocese, accompanied by editorial, written by William H. Mooring, who characterized "Duel" as worse in a moral sense than "The Outlaw."

The editor enumerated scenes and situations which, in his opinion, appear to violate the motion picture production code, at least from a Catholic viewpoint. Instances are:

"It tends to throw audience sympathy on the side of sin."

"It includes brutal killings, and rape is more than suggested.

"It ignores good taste and proper regard for audience sensibilities in the treatment of a low subject."

"It shows Jennifer Jones as unduly, if not indecently, exposed, and it shows a character, acting as a minister of religion, who parodies prayer and thus becomes a comical figure."

Longer Runs to Push Film Ballyhoo Back to Stix; More Exhib-Flack Work

Film exploitation plans, tying in with major distribs' campaigns for longer playing times to meet upped production costs, are headed for the grassroots, according to industry ad-publicity spokesmen. Consensus is that exploiteers are going to have to latch on to each film, tracking their promotion right into the sticks. And, say the promotion chiefs, the exhibitor is going to have to work harder than ever with the flacks to put films over.

Most of the majors are working on plans to realign their ad-pub departments in line with more extensive campaigns, especially in the hinterlands. Universal recently announced an expansion of its exploitation staff shortly after New Year's to accommodate the increase in number of J. Arthur Rank productions, as well as the top U pictures. Columbia also has begun a new system of helping the exhib hypo exploitation on its films to coincide with the single-selling practice.

Col.'s Plan

Figuring that more intensive promotion will have to be done, especially in outlying situations, Col's ad-publicity department will send its exploiteers and pressbook men out to personally service its better films in first-run dates instead of first issuing the pressbook. During the first few days the flack boys will work with theatre managers and merchants in the town or neighborhood, making publicity tieups, getting film songs plugged by local radio stations, etc.

U's Ideas

Maurice Bergman, U's ad-pub chief, stressed that the addition of six men to the field staff will represent even more than this boost in manpower because the field workers will be augmented by key men from the home-office exploitation-publicity division under Bergman. This setup will mean that there will be concentration of men in the field for big picture openings wherever spotted at any key in the U. S.

To go along with this field exploitation alignment, Bergman explains that campaigns would be intensified by holding ad-publicity clinics each month in key cities such as Chicago, Atlanta, Cincinnati and Boston.

Universal Unit Urges Cheap 16m Projector For Heavy Private Use

Seeking a widened market for its recently acquired Castle and Filmo-sound libraries, Universal's United World Films is currently urging on manufacturers the production of a cheap, assembly line 16m projector for heavy sales in homes and institutions. Accumulated backlog of orders, piled up during the war, for models ranging from $600 upwards have stymied UWF efforts so far to promote the jitney model, company spokesmen say, but manufacturers are ready to launch into the cheaper type after the orders have been met.

UWF figures that a projector priced at $250 will sell a total of 80,000. Company has assurances from its dealers that solid demand from the public, aided partly by growth of appetite on the part of ex-GIs, would hypo sales of the cheaper model far above current demands. Company has no intention of going into manufacturing end, it was said, but naturally wants to promote the use of 16m machines at homes as a spur to biz of selling pix.

UWF will occupy itself for the next few months with integrating Castle and Bell & Howell exchanges. Once this is accomplished, U's subsid will map a production program which envisages likely expansion to insure a steady supply of new films. Meanwhile, UWF has acquired narrow-gauge rights to 12 features to add to the list of older pix. Before booking non-theatrical situations, 18-month clearance for the films will elapse.

Producer is negotiating with Brian Aherne and Charles Laughton as male toppers in the picture, slated to start March 1.

NYU Studies Scripts

Nine scripts of films released during 1946 have been chosen for study in the script-writing course of New York University's motion picture department by Henry Klinger, 20th-Fox associate story editor, who will teach the course during the spring semester.

Scripts include "Best Years of Our Lives," "Henry V," "Brief Encounter," "Lost Weekend," "Green Years," "Anna and the King of Siam," "Leave Her to Heaven," "Saratoga Trunk," and "Walk in the Sun." Four-year course, only one of its kind among American universities, is under the supervision of Prof. Robert E. Gessner, head of the department.

Philly Critics Peeved At Warners Nix Of Private Screenings

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Philadelphia film critics are peeved—but plenty—over a ukase issued by G. H. Q. of Warners that hereafter there'll be no private screenings of new pictures. Warner bigwigs issued the order on the grounds that the crix could "not fairly judge a picture in the cold surroundings of a private screening room."

"Pictures were made to play amid the proper surroundings of a theatre and with an audience," said a Warner spokesman. "No critic can get a fair appraisal watching picture without these factors. Their readers are entitled to a fair review—just as reviewers of legitimate productions who view live productions as the audience see them — in a theatre with people in the seats."

The pic reviewers, however feel that they are as competent to judge the calibre of a film as the film execs' themselves.

"The Warners people have previews in private," was the remark of one of the critics," and besides, we review the picture, not the audience."

Main beef of the crix is the fact that being forced to review pictures at the actual openings, makes it sometimes impossible to make their deadlines, especially when there are two or more openings on the same day.

Another beef—and no minor one—is that some of the Warner houses have Saturday openings. Virtually all of the film critics work five-day, 40-hour weeks, which means that they'll have to work on Saturdays, their regular day off.

Thus far the crix haven't made any official protest to the Warner chain's brasshats. The industry is watching the reviews with avid interest. Thus far there isn't any sign of "reprisal" by the aggrieved critics.

PRC TO DISTRIBUTE 9 SMALL REISSUES

PRC has closed with Edward Small Productions for national distribution of nine of Small's pix as reissues. Films to be piped through PRC exchanges during the year are "Last of the Mohicans," "South of Pago Pago," "Kit Carson," "My Son, My Son," "The Corsican Brothers," "The Man in the Iron Mask," "The Count of Monte Cristo," "International Lady" and "The Son of Monte Cristo."

Deal was wrapped up by Harry Kosiner, Small's sales chief, while on the Coast last week. Distribution is to be completed within two years on a percentage divvy without minimum guarantee. Pact also calls for the pix to be coupled and sold at dual fare.

Cavalier Slates Quintet

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Cavalier Productions, currently filming "Three Were Thoroughbreds," has lined up five more stories for future shooting. The next, "Caboose," will be released through Columbia, but no distribution outlets have been arranged thus far for the next four.

Cavalier is an indie combo consisting of Robert Young and Donald Barry, film thesps, and Eugene B. Rodney, former theatre chain exec from New England.

donor has been rejected by a reputable charity organization.

"Our campaign is not a joint fund-raising campaign, but is conducted in the name of, and for, the Permanent Charities Committee, an organization with tax-deductible status, and the proceeds are distributed by the directors to national charitable organizations and local federated appeals.

"The contributions offered will be held in reserve in the hope that those in authority will decide to accept these substantial gifts."

6,000 House Collections

While the major affiliated circuits maintain their stand of not backing theatre collections for the MOD campaign as units, more than 6,000 theatres have so far reported they will pass audience plates for the drive, scheduled from Jan. 24-30, according to MOD spokesmen in New York. Number of houses include some 40-45 indie circuits and there's not a single chain outfit in the country in which at least one theatre has not agreed to collect funds from its customers.

Although most Broadway first-run houses will show the special Greer Garson trailer, only the Astor and Victoria have decided to take audience collections. Plates will also be passed in several of the 42d street grind theatres in N. Y., as well as most of the indie nabes. All theatres in Washington, Omaha and several other cities will back the drive with theatre collections and, while the motion picture division doesn't hope to equal the $6,000,000 taken in last year, it's confident it will collect somewhere near that figure.

Theatres averse to audience collections as such may collect money in other ways, it was learned. Several houses have already inaugurated dime-pitching contests among their patrons in theatre lobbies, with all dimes tossed in going to the MOD and the winning customers getting passes. Other theatres have placed a large, simulated dime in the middle of the lobby and asked their customers to try to cover the replica with actual money. In addition, many exhibs have stationed femme collectors in their lobbies to hit the customers for contributions.

MINN. AREA EXHIBS NIX DIMES COLLECTIONS

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

For first time no theatre collections are being taken in this territory for "March of Dimes," they having been vetoed both by the Minnesota Amus. Co. (Paramount circuit) and North Central Allied, independent exhibitors' organization.

Spokesmen for North Central pointed out that theatres had just taken theatre collections for the Northwest Variety club's heart hospital project, and other collections so soon afterwards would likely antagonize patrons. Theatres, however, are running the trailer urging contributions to the drive.

Prez Launches Drive

Washington, Jan. 21.

The 1947 "March of Dimes" campaign, sans President's Birthday Ball, sans legit command performance, got under way here last week following a meeting at which Mrs. Harry S. Truman and daughter Margaret met with the Washington showmen.

The First Lady thanked the theatrical reps for their work in other years and acquainted them with the plans for this year. Endorsement was given unanimously, with 60 theatres taking part in the drive. Co-chairmen of the theatre group are Carter T. Barron, Loew's division manager; and John J. Payette, Warners general zone manager. Frank La Falce is campaign director.

N. Y. Firm's Switch

Changing its corporate setup, Harold Young Productions, New York picture firm, has acquired stock held by Charles W. Curran, who has resigned as firm's veepee. Continuing as vice-president in charge of production is Aldo Ermini, former color technician with Sir Alexander Korda.

Recently winding up directorial chores on Clyde Elliot's "Citizen Saint," biopic of Mother Cabrini, Young expects to be tied up with the film for another month and has no current production plans of his own.

Gotta Be in Parking Biz Plus Exhib in Chi

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Strange city ordinance, which practically puts the damper on building a new house in the downtown district, comes to light when would-be loop exhib recently discovered that in order to take such action he would also have to go into the auto parking biz.

Law, which came about Dec. 3, 1942, was passed without fanfare and in an apparent hush-hush manner.

Gimmick, found in Section 11 of Chicago zoning ordinance, is that in order to construct theatre building there must also be erected a parking garage or lot within the same block or across the street of the house, but rule is not applicable to theatres with less than 500 seats or to nabe house outside of commercial districts.

This makes it virtually impossible to build new house downtown, with space at a premium. It is understood that execs of one large chain were present when amendment was passed.

War Brought H'wood Closer to Realities, Frank Capra Stresses

War has had a definite salutary effect on Hollywood film subjects, according to Frank Capra, currently in New York o.o.ing business of "It's a Wonderful Life," Liberty Films release. Until the outbreak of the war Hollywood had an ingrowing tendency, and that wartime experience had brought film toppers up against real life and the "outside" world, Capra reveals. "Until then," producer avers, "each producer would go see the other fellows' pictures, adapting techniques, until everyone was copying from everyone else and there was nothing fresh." Service experiences gave pic heads a new angle on life, he stated.

Capra's next film for Liberty will be "State of the Union," Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse current Broadway hit. Producer is currently huddling with the two playwrights on film adaptation. Under pact with Lindsay and Crouse, Capra must put screen rights to use before the year is up or lose them. Pic will be his 1947 effort for Liberty on his one-a-year release schedule with company. Filming is scheduled to begin in May or June for fall release, with no casting as yet. Also under consideration for future production are Alfred Noyes' "No Other Man," for London, Paris and Rome locations, and "Friendly Persuasion" by Jessamyn West.

Capra remains in New York for 10 days before heading to Baltimore Tuesday (21) for "Wonderful Life" preem there with a Jimmy Stewart p.a. Both of them will guest on "Information, Please" tonight (Wednesday.)

Belgians Honor Capra

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Frank Capra was awarded the Challenge International du Cinema trophy by the Belgian film industry for his work as director of "Arsenic and Old Lace."

Ingrid Bergman was the only other Hollywood figure to receive a Belgian award, for her acting in "Gaslight" and "Casablanca."

150 NW THEATRES IN PAR BUYERS STRIKE

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Alleged unusually stiff demands by Paramount for its product has resulted in at least 150 of the territory's accounts, including one of the biggest buying and booking pools, staging a buyers' strike against the company's product, it's claimed by Bennie Berger, president of North Central Allied.

Acting for North Central Allied, Berger says he has protested to the Paramount home-office against what he declared to be "probibitive" terms for its pictures. The "inability" of the independents to buy the product at the "excessive price" is causing a hardship for them, he alleges, necessitating an undue amount of dependence on reissues.

As far as Paramount itself is concerned, company has pointed out that during the past year four of its pictures, "Going My Way," "Road to Utopia," "Two Years Before the Mast" and "Blue Skies," have successively broken the house record at the 4,000-seat Radio City here. "Blue Skies" chalked up an all-time high for any straight film in Minneapolis its first week there.

Reagan Gives Boosts To Several Sales Aides In Decentralizing Plan

Carrying through on its previously announced plan to decentralize part of its sales system, Charles M. Reagan, Paramount's veepee in charge of distribution, has boosted a number of company sales staffers. Topping the promotion list is Harold Wirthwein, formerly Milwaukee exchange manager, named to the newly created post of assistant district manager under Hugh Braly, Coast district chief. Braly, recently taking over from Del Goodman, resigned, has set up h.q. in Los Angeles.

Creation of Wirthwein's post became necessary, Reagan said, because of expansion of Braly's territory to include six exchanges. Jesse T. McBride, Omaha branch manager, succeeds Wirthwein in Milwaukee while Don Hicks has been moved up from Kansas City salesman to top the Omaha exchange. Reagan also appointed Walter Wiens as Cincinnati branch manager, advancing him from salesman in the Dallas territory.

Skouras, Kirsch Lead Brotherhood Group

Film industry's organization for National Brotherhood Week Feb. 16-23, wound up yesterday (Tuesday) with Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy, sharing the chairmanship with Jack Kirsch, president of National Allied; Fred Wehrenberg, president of Motion Picture Theatre Owners Assn., and Ted Gamble, chairman of the board of American Theatres Assn.

Pegged for national vice-chairmanships in the 12th annual campaign sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews are Barney Balaban, J. Robert Rubin, Herman Robbins, Max A. Cohen, Si Fabian, Jack Cohn, Harry Brandt, Louis Nizer, Ned E. Depinet and Herbert Yates, Sr.

While no audience collections will be made, every newsreel will carry a short feature produced by David O. Selznick featuring Coast stars in a tolerance talk.

Flat Rentals

mine who is the highest bidder except on a standard of flat rentals," theatre exec declared. "Any attempt to hand out pictures on another basis must lead to the courts."

(Threat of a cloud of suits because of claimed impracticability of fixing high bids on percentage was also stressed this week by Herman M. Levy, general counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who said competitive bidding section "is practically impossible of performance." Without litigation or judicial clarification such factors as highest bidder, most responsible one, etc., could not be determined, Levy added).

Foreshadowing possibly similar developments elsewhere, Schwartz said he would boost his admission scales in houses in which the run had been bettered. Hike in the b.o. tap would permit Century to bid higher flat rentals for the films than otherwise and give the chain an opportunity of meeting terms offered by Loew's and RKO, which currently operate on higher scales. Parallel action is probable by other indies who hope to vie with affiliates since without upped admissions indies would have little chance of offering successful bids.

System of splitting product between RKO and Loew's with other nabes out in the cold is heading for the boneyard in a number of situations, Schwartz insisted. Century, he said, had first-run in many New York situations until Loew's and RKO built their houses and, "by being able to swap their product with other majors, took over the first-runs." Individual selling under the decree plus competitive bidding made swapping unfeasible, he added.

"Patio theatre in Brooklyn is an example of what Century lost by being pushed into subsequent runs," Schwartz said. "We put up the house at a cost of $1,250,000 in 1928 and, on a first-run with stage show policy, the house grossed $13,000—$14,000 weekly. When it lost first-run to Loew's Kings and RKO's Kenmore, the take dwindled to $2,500 weekly. And all our expenses except

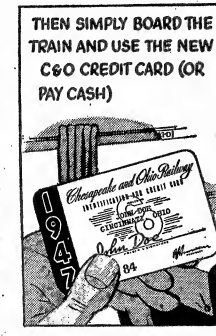
It's here! Starting January 27th on the Chesapeake & Ohio

"CHARGE-IT-AS-YOU-GO" TRAVEL

You can reserve space by phone, then after you board the train, charge it on a Credit Card. Apply for your C & O Credit Card now!



SOME six weeks ago the Chesapeake and Ohio announced its intention of installing, for its passengers, a simple Credit Card plan and space reservation by phone. Now that plan is here. It goes into effect the 27th of this month.

No longer do you have to spend your valuable time waiting in ticket lines. No longer do you have to dash down to the station to pick up your reservations. The C & O does all your scurrying and worrying for you.

All you do is reach for a phone. For now—and this is new—you can reserve space in reserved-seat coaches as well as Pullman* space.

For Pullman Space, phone in your name and Credit Card number. Go to your reserved space aboard the train, and charge it on your C & O Credit Card or pay cash if you prefer.

For Space in Reserved-Seat Coaches, simply telephone in advance, giving your name. Go to your reserved seat on the train, and pay for your ticket there, or charge it on your Credit Card if you prefer.

And there's another important feature to the new Credit Card. You can use it to charge any C & O service on the train or in the station. This includes meals in dining cars and baggage service.

Apply For Your Credit Card Now!

You're invited to apply for a C & O Credit Card, right away. Just call any Chesapeake & Ohio Ticket Office for an application . . . or write Chesapeake & Ohio, Terminal Tower, Cleveland 1, Ohio. Do it today and take immediate advantage of this new traveling convenience.

The "Charge-It-As-You-Go" Plan is the latest—but not the last—of many far-reaching improvements pioneered by the Chesapeake & Ohio to make rail travel more comfortable, more sensible.

To hold Pullman space by phone, it will be necessary to have a Credit Card. Pullman space, if not used, must be properly cancelled, or it will be charged to your account.*

week, "Man I Love" (WB), also a m.o., was pretty brutal at just $1,000.

Senator (Harris) (1,756; 40-70)—"Notorious Gentleman" (Rank), Picture doing nicely on its own and may possibly be getting something extra, too, on confusion with "Notorious" playing town at same time. Rex Harrison starrer grabbed good notices, however, and getting good $5,000. Last week, reissue of "Suspicion" (RKO) paired with "Genius at Work" (RKO), just fair at $3,000.

Stanley (WB) (3,800; 40-70)—"Notorious" (RKO). This one's been a long time getting here and naturally has piled up a big backlog of excellent publicity. It's all adding up, too, and shooting for $35,000, house's biggest gross in a long, long time. Last week, second of "Time, Place, Girl" (WB), about $14,000.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 40-70)—"Mighty McGurk" (M-G). Wallace Beery starrer didn't get much advance notice, being shoved in at last minute when Penn decided to hang onto "Blue Skies." Whether that's responsible for just fair $8,000, however, isn't determinable. Last week, "Her Sister's Secret" (PRC) hit for surprisingly good $8,500 for nameless cast and a minor tear-jerker.

D.C. Biz Offish; 'Skies' 28G, 'McGurk,' Vaudeville 24G

Washington, Jan. 21.

Business here is a little off from last week because of holdovers in some key situations, but nevertheless continues good. "Blue Skies" and "Razor's Edge" top the town, and "Song of the South" does very nicely for its forth midcity week.

Estimates for This Week

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 44-80)—"Mighty McGurk" (M-G), with vaude, a mild $24,000, the modest stage show doing nothing to bolster the grosses. Last week, "Black Beauty" (20th) was a husky $30,000 because of Stan Kenton's orch's draw.

Columbia (Loew's) (1,263; 44-70)—"Clouds Roll By" (M-G) (2d run), good $9,000. Last week's "My Darling Clementine" (20th), $9,500.

Earle (WB) (2,154; 44-85)—"Blue Skies" (Par). Sock $28,000. Last week, "Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (2d wk), fair $18,000.

Keith's (RKO) (1,838; 44-80) — "Song of South" (RKO) (4th week), fine $18,000 for this end of a long run. Last week, terrific $20,000.

Little (Miller) (285; $1.20-$2.40)—"Henry V" (UA) (11th week); $6,000 and beginning to show a little fall-off in the matineet after several capacity semesters. Last week, good $6,300.

Metropolitan (WB) (1,513; 44-70) —"Thief of Bagdad" (reissue), good $10,000. Last week, "Mr. District Attorney" (Col), $9,500.

Palace (Loew's) (2,370; 44-70) — "Razor's Edge" (20th). Hot $25,000 for second stanza after a terrific $33,000 opening week.

'WhiteTie' $14,800, Omaha; 'U'current' 12G, 'Jolson' 8G

Omaha, Jan. 21.

Business chilled off at the Orpheum upon re-entry of stage shows. It might be that the Major Bowes "Graduates" needed more schooling. At any rate, coupled with "White Tie and Tails," the show got no more than $14,800, which is small at this spot. "Undercurrent" and second week of "Jolson Story" okay.

Estimates for This Week

Brandeis (RKO) (1,500; 16-65)—"The Jolson Story" (Col) (2nd wk), fine $8,000. First week, $9,300, smash business. Could run 3rd wk.

Omaha (Tristates) (2,000; 16-65)—"Jungle Princess" (Par) (reissue) and "Adv. Tom Sawyer" (Indie) (reissue), a healthy $10,500. Last week, "Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (m.o.) and "Mysterious Mr. Valentine" (Rep) (1st run), okay $10,600.

Orpheum (Tristates) (3,000; 20-85) — "White Tie and Tails" (20th) and Maj. Bowes "Graduates" on stage won't pull more than a light $14,800. Last week, "Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk), a great $16,000.

Paramount (Tristates) (3,000; 16-65) — "Undercurrent" (M-G), nice $12,000. Last week, "Secret Heart" (M-G), $11,000, not bad.

State (Goldberg) (865; 15-50) — "Deception" (WB) and "Home, Sweet Homicide" (20th), expect a big $4,500. Last week, "Killers" (U) and "If I'm Lucky" (20th), good $4,000.

Pine, Thomas Out in Front

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Bill Pine and Bill Thomas, contracted for six features a year for Paramount release, are one picture ahead on their contract.

With seven films completed, the two Bills are stepping out on a tour of exhibs for the next three months.

P.S.—The two Bills were flacks before they became producers.

Dear Jack:
It was my privilege, during the holidays, to have an early premiere of your picture, ABIE'S IRISH ROSE, and, as you know, it was a XMAS DAY opening.
When we discussed the picture, after I had screened it, we both agreed that it was an All-American message. I believe, too, that we both felt that it should be offered in full fashion and with no hesitation. That we were right has been proven by the box office results!
As you know, Jack, I never write letters about pictures and, certainly, I never arouse to much enthusiasm about any of them....but, sincerely, ABIE'S IRISH ROSE proved itself and gave me one of those rare satisfactions that come in this business....that of delivering pleasing entertainment when you have sold it strong.
You really have a great piece of film in "ABIE"....a kindly, but jolly, story that gently treats all faiths and results in one of the best treatments of tolerance I have ever seen on the screen.
I can truthfully tell you, too, that my memory would have to be rather sharp to go back to any picture that received more favorable comments in my theatre.
I was proud of ABIE'S IRISH ROSE!
Kindest regards und Best Wishes,
Sincerely,
Dick Martin

St. Louis Synagog Turned Back To Films; Other Exchange Briefs

St. Louis.

The Plaza theatre in the west end, for many years used as a synagog, has been reopened as a film house by Clarence and Francis Kaimann as another unit of the Wehrenberg-Kaimann Circuit in St. Louis and St. Louis County which now has reached a total of 23. The house, a 500-seater, now completely modernized, was erected in 1910 by the Plaza Realty & Construction Co. and was operated as a combo picture and vaude house by several persons, including Hector M. Pazemoglu, then Greek Consul in St. Louis and operator of several theatres including the one at the old Delmar Garden.

Mrs. Mathilda Ketchum, a former school teacher, also operated the house for several years, although an invalid. Another operator was Louis Stahl, father of Maury Stahl, prominent in the Skouras Bros. organization. With the advent of more modern houses the Plaza shuttered for several years until it was purchased by a Jewish group and converted into a house of worship.

Commonwealth Amus. Co. has purchased the 1946-47 Monogram product for its houses in Columbia and Washington, Mo. Narney Rosenthal, manager of the local Monogram branch, also closed a deal with the Ballard, Horn and Metcalf Circuit for its houses in Edwardsville and Jerseyville, Ill.

The Plymouth, a west end nabe, has been sold by Tommy Tobin to Helen McMillan and William Hayes, newcomers in the local exhibition field. W. L. Kreh, special reps for Republic in the Prairie Division, has been shifted to the Los Angeles area. Charles Borg has sold his Lowry, Lowry City, Mo., to Everett Hinkle and will continue to operate his Civic at Osceola, Mo.

Ray Leanothow, Huntsville, Mo., who recently sold his Roxy, a 300-seater in Huntsville, will continue to operate the Palace at Cambridge, Ill., while he seeks another house in Central Iowa.

Kans.-Mo. March Meets

Kansas City.

Kansas-Missouri Theatres Assn. directors in a recent meeting held here set dates for a series of meetings to be held with exhibs of the two-state area during March. Purpose of the schedule is to get together with both members and nonmembers of organization to thrash out common problems, principally the consent decree.

Meetings in Kansas will be held at Abilene, March 10; Wakeeney (11); Dodge City (12); Wichita (13), and Independence (14). Missouri meetings have been set for Hamilton, March 25, and Neosho, 27; a March 26 meeting will be held either at Appleton City or Osceola, the exact site to be announced later.

The list of KMTA officers and directors who will make the two-state trek include Strowig; Elmer Bills, Salsbury, Mo., vice-president; Doc Cook, Maryville, Mo., secretary; Tom Edwards, Sheldon, Mo.; Dale Danielson, Russell, Kans. George Baker and R. R. Biechele, both of Kansas City.

Shea Circuit Meet

Cleveland, Jan. 21.

Twenty-four managers on Shea Theatre circuit held annual dinner meeting in Cleveland yesterday (20) and today, with Edmund E. C. Grainger, prez, officiating at forum discussion of trade problems. Main topic was Government consent decree and how company plans to handle problem.

Circuit's general business in 50 theatres is surprisingly good this year, Grainger said, in introducing its execs to 70 Cleveland guests. Shea's New York office also represented at banquet by Gerald and John Shea, Carroll Lawler, George Goett, Frank King and Ray Smith.

Wisconsin U.'s Three Theatres

Madison, Wis.

With the student enrollment at an alltime record of 18,000, Univ. of Wisconsin is operating three film houses, the first time it has gone into the film business in a major scale. There are Friday night showings at Badger Village, a married couples' residential unit 30 miles from here, and at Truax Field, the latter a housing project for students, made from barracks formerly used by the U. S. Army Air Forces.

In addition, second runs and foreign films are shown Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the small, 250-seat Wisconsin Union Play Circle, in the Memorial Union, on the campus. All students are charged admissions. Because of the crowded conditions, admissions are limited largely to students and members of the faculty.

Loew's N. Y. Shifts

Following recent resignation of Ed Douglas as manager of Loew's State, N. Y., a series of managerial shifts has taken place in the circuit. Sam Pearlman, former manager of Loew's Triboro, Astoria, has taken over managership of the State.

In addition, the chain has upped seven assistant managers to post of acting managers. These include Robert Gibbons, William Klenert, Joseph Stica, Harold Privalle, Howard Levy, Nathan Bernstock and William Carroll.

Richie Grabs Elton

Richie Amus. Corp., headed by Robert Kropp, has closed a 15-year lease for the Elton theatre, Brooklyn, from the Pinsan Realty Co.

Richie plans general renovation of the 2,000-seat house and addition of air conditioning equipment. Berk & Krumgold represented the lessor.

Rappaport Adds Balto. House

Baltimore.

Following extended period of building, Izzy Rappaport has opened his new Town theatre. Latest addition to the downtown firstrun list, Town will seat 1,500 and divide with Rappaport's combo Hippodrome on RKO and Columbia product. Jim Gladfelter will manage, assisted by Cliff Jarrett.

House is complete rebuild of the former Palace, which had been turned into a garage following a prolonged period of darkness after a long-time career as a burlesque landmark. Rappaport also operates sureseater Little, featuring foreign and art films.

Jackson Park Rejoins Allied

Chicago.

Jackson Park theatre, recent victor in an anti-trust suit against nine big companies, rejoined Allied Theatres of Illinois, recently after several months absence from the organization. This was brought about when the theatre pulled out because it felt Allied's position in the N. Y. court hearing of the auction bidding controversey was inconsistent with the Jackson Park's own litigation here.

Allied has since withdrawn its representations to the court, and the Jackson Park feels the present policy of the organization is as it should be with respect to the independent exhib, hence they are rejoining.

Siritsky Takes Malin

Siritsky International Films has taken over the Malin Studios in the American Newspaper Guild's newly acquired building on 44th st., N. Y., with intent to remodel the studios into a foreign language theatre. To be called the Guild Cinema, the house will open at the end of March with a seating capacity of 300. Deal between Siritsky and the ANG calls for a 20-year lease on flat rental terms.

Guild Cinema's policy will be limited to exclusive firstrun foreign films with the initial pic being Marcel Pagnol's latest production, "Nals," starring Fernandel.

Florida Theatres Setup

Miami.

Florida State Theatres, Inc., 125-house chain which includes Paramount Enterprises, Miami theatres, announced consolidation of all offices, with centralized setup to be run from Jacksonville.

Plan calls for FST to absorb operation of Paramount group in the state, heretofore run as an independent unit, though both groups had the same officers. Atlanta offices, through which the buying and booking was done, will also move to Jacksonville.

Jesse L. Clark, former district manager for Tampa area, will manage the operations department, with Frank Kent, Tampa, and Fred H. Kent, Jacksonville, continuing as president and veepee of the chain.

Jersey to Get Foreign House

Longterm lease for the Station theatre, Newark, N. J., has been closed by Harry Harris, New York circuit operator. Theatre will be converted into a foreign language house, the first to be opened in Jersey. Station will be renovated and re-equipped, with opening set for Feb. 15.

Lease was closed with Fleissner Realty Co. as landlord of the 15-acted as brokers on the transaction.

Minn. Amus. Promotions

Minneapolis.

With the elevation of Harry B. French to the post of president and general manager of the Minnesota Amus. Co. to succeed John J. Friedl, who resigned to retire from the film industry, the Paramount theatre circuit is also making other promotions within its ranks.

Charles W. Winchell, advertising director, moves up to assistant to president and general manager, succeeding French, while E. E. Seibel, assistant advertising manager, replaces Winchell, and Don Alexander, member of the advertising staff, moves to the post vacated by Seibel. At the same time, Ray Niles, Rochester, Minn., city staff, has been named district manager for southern Minnesota, a post that French also occupied.

All four execs are vets of 20 or more years with the company. Winchell joined the advertising staff of the old Finkelstein & Ruben circuit, predecessor of the Minnesota Amus. Co., in 1920 and when the theatres became part of the nationwide Publix organization in 1929 he moved to Paramount's New York office as divisional advertising director, returning here in 1932 to assume a similar post with the Minnesota Amus. Co.

Faris New PRC Okla. City Head

Dallas.

Francis W. Faris named branch manager of PRC exchange, Oklahoma City. Faris had been on RKO sales staff for several years.

Mike Cisneros named manager of Interstate's Grande theatre at Harlingen. Replaces Tony Cantu, projectionist at the house.

Jones Leaves Griffiths

Dallas.

Ted Jones, veteran Griffith executive, has resigned as division manager of the Griffith Theatres, according to an announcement made by R. I. Paynes, veepee of Theatre Enterprises, Inc.

Jones was associated with the late R. E. Griffith for approximately 25 years and has managed and operated theatres throughout the Southwest, including Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

Goldman Upped in Cleve.

Cleveland.

Mark Goldman has been upped to post of branch manager of Producers Releasing Corp. in Cleveland, where he will have charge of sales and distribution in Toledo, Akron, Youngstown, Canton as well as Northern Ohio.

Feldman Back for Eagle Lion

Pittsburgh.

Mannie Feldman, former WB manager, has been named city salesman for Eagle Lion-PRC Pictures here, moving into spot of John Zomnir, recently upped to exchange manager with transfer of Mark Goldman to Cleveland. Feldman has been out of show business for last year.

James Young has quit his post in Par booking department to become an accountant in another line of business.

Bill Kloos, ex-Army major who has succeeded Bill Brooks (transferred to Washington as a salesman) as head of Par booking department, will join the ranks of the benedicts in February. He's going to marry Sue Donnelly, of Cleveland.

Ruth Tracht Curzer has resigned her post at the WB exchange to assist her husband in his grocery business.

F. D. Moore, manager of the Warner exchange, and his wife announced the engagement of daughter, Sarah Jane, to Robert Kindle, former Army captain. They'll tie the knot Feb. 22.

Joseph A. Feeney, formerly manager of the Orpheum in Clarksburg, W. Va., and a onetime exhibitor before going into the Navy, is new field manager for the veterans employment service in West Virginia territory comprising towns of Clarksburg, Weston, Grafton, Fairmont, Morgantown, Kingwood, Keyser, Martinsburg and Elkins.

John N. Carroll is the new apprentice in the Eagle-Lion-PRC booking dept. An ex-GI, he used to be with Statler Hotels.

Dezel Changes Name

Detroit.

Albert Dezel, prez of Albert Dezel Roadshows, Inc., has changed the name of his enterprise to Albert Dezel Productions, Inc. The change will affect branches in Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

Dezel is now engaged in distribution of independent releases and has dumped the idea of specialized exploitation units. He holds rights to distribution of the films of Screen Guild Productions, Film Classics and Favorite Films.

New Milwaukee House

Milwaukee.

The Towne theatre has opened here, first new firstrun downtown house to open here in 15 years. The Towne is an independent, seating 1,650, and will release UA pictures. Operators are Andrew Spheeris, member of a Milwaukee family of tobacco wholesalers, and his brother-in-law, Connie Papas, Chicago restaurateur and owner of several picture houses in Illinois and Wisconsin.

New Louisville Drive-In Louisville.

Louisville Drive-in, Inc., will erect an 800-car outdoor theatre on a 22-acre tract lease on the Dixie Highway south of Shively, a suburb. Estimated cost of construction is $85,000. Floyd D. Morrow, general manager of the Shelbyvilie Road Drive-In, will also manage the Dixie Highway drive-in. The new outdoor film spot will be constructed within the next few months, and completion of the building will depend on Government regulations.

Will make the second drive-in for the local outdoor exhibitors, one located in the eastern part of the area, and the newest in the extreme southern section.

Writers Cite Newsboy Decision Vs. Hearst in Seeking Union Status

Basing itself on a U. S. Supreme Court decision in which newsboys and newsstand operators won a hard-fought case against the Hearst newspapers, the Radio Writers Guild has begun a campaign to have itself recognized as a freelancers' labor union by the four major networks.

The move involves a major shift in RWG strategy which, until six months ago, conceded to the American Assn. of Advertising Agencies that its freelance members were "independent contractors" who were handed into a professional organization, rather than a trade union.

Six months ago, after trying for 14 months to get an agreement for

Shoe on Other Foot

Opening of negotiations between the Radio Writers Guild and the networks last Thursday (16) found Roy Langham doing a quick change act.

Until two weeks ago Langham, as a CBS exec (he was asst. to programming veepee Dave Taylor) was sitting on the network side of the table. Langham is now national executive secretary of the Radio Writers Guild. At the opening of negotiations he was facing his ex-confreres.

its "independent contractors" from the Four-A's, the RWG gave up and stopped the marathon chatter. Since then, a strategy committee has been at work.

Now the strategy committee has come up with a new plan, transforming the Guild into an out-and-out trade union on the basis of the court decision against Hearst.

In the Hearst case, the newspaper publishers refused to bargain collectively with newsboys and newsstand operators, claiming they were "independent contractors," or businessmen. The highest court ruled, finally, that they were entitled to get together into a genuine trade union and that, when they did so, they deserved recognition under the Wagner Act.

Ready to Negotiate

Last week, the RWG notified the four major networks that it is ready to start negotiating a contract on behalf of freelance radio writers. The network legalities and labor relations guys were at first flabbergasted and wanted to know "how come?" since each freelance writer, whether or not he was a member of the Guild, was an "independent contractor." That was exactly what the Guild battled this fight for, and the RWG came forth with its citation of the Hearst case.

There is a second part of the RWG strategy, involving a precedent set by American Federation of Radio Artists in St. Louis, where AFRA forced recognition of freelance radio actors and announcers as eligible for bargaining as a union unit. But the Hearst case, drawing upon an entirely different field, drew most attention when its use became known among scripters last week.

So far, none of the networks has conceded that the Hearst case operates as far as freelance radio scripters are concerned. But the Guild is understood to be ready to push the case, and will cite networks before the National Labor Relations Board unless the webs enter contract talks for freelancers.

Meanwhile, the Guild last week started local negotiations for New York, covering staff writers at three of the four nets—NBC, CBS and ABC (Mutual doesn't employ staff writers). In demanding the New York members, the Guild asked for a 20% pay increase and for a split of royalties between the net and the writer when a show is rebroadcast or when subsequent earnings come to a show after it had been aired once.

These talks, however, being purely local, were definitely taking second place, major interest falling to the Guild's switch on the national freelance issue. Roy Langham, former asst. program director of CBS, as new national executive secretary, took over the work of trying to get the new policy into effect. He and Sam Moore, national prexy who was in New York two weeks ago when Langham was appointed, discussed the new policy with the eastern regional council. The demand on the networks was the result.

Sinatra's Successor Stirs Many an Ulcer As Voice Claim Nears

Despite the imminence of Frank Sinatra's bowout on the Old Gold Wednesday night CBS show, Lennen & Mitchell agency apparently is still up a tree trying to pact a successor show. L&M would like to let the "Mr. and Mrs." North" whodunit (recently relinquished by Woodbury) ride the OG circuit, but the giggle outfit has nixed the show.

Meanwhile Mann Holiner, L&M's Coast radio head and producer of the OG show, is shopping frantically for a replacement property.

Terms of the Sinatra dissolution have finally been resolved, with the chief bone of contention that held up the divorce proceedings being the number of guests shots to be allowed the Voice, particularly in the opposition 9 o'clock spot. Also assurance that he won't team up with a rival giggle sponsor for at least a year.

With Bing Crosby scheduled to move from 10 o'clock Wednesday into the 9 p.m. segment on ABC in competition to the upcoming OG stanza, the agency from all accounts wanted some assurance that Sinatra wouldn't guest with Crosby. Apparently it's all been straightened out.

Sinatra's Last Show?

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Latest word on the Frank Sinatra front:

George Evans, Sinatra's manager-publicist, quoted as saying of this week's (tomorrow's) show: "This will be Sinatra's last show."

Lennen & Mitchell agency execs, handling the Old Gold account, said they'd heard nothing of Sinatra's plans to quit this week.

WHOM Brokerage Biz Fling; Forced To Find New Hdqs.

WHOM, which was acquired recently by Generoso Pope, the Italian newspaper publisher, has been ordered to scram its west 67th street quarters in New York, the building having been sold. That's why Fortune Pope, son of the owner and manager of the station, has been visiting the rival Italian indie WOV, and WNEW, etc., in order to gander facilities and equipment of other stations, as regards data before acquiring a new home.

Since the Cowles Bros. unloaded the station to Pope, there's been little change apparent in the WHOM operation. Station has acquired some of the spot biz previously held by WBNX in the Bronx, N. Y. But perhaps the most significant aspect of the new operation has been its reported excursion into brokerage business, whereby the station makes a block time sale of an hour or so an individual who puts on his own program and in turn sells the time to advertisers.

Practice in the past has been frowned upon by the FCC.

Biz Not As Usual Seen on WMCA, But Ideals Stay

Since the entrance of Herman Bess into the WMCA, N. Y., sales operation (as WNEW's star salesman over the past decade he was one of the top coin-comers in the national radio sales picture), a transition in thinking and operation at the Nathan Straus-owned station has been evident to many in New York radio circles.

It's always been the boast of Straus (and in the past he's won nationwide citation and commendation for it) that because of the station's public service-mindedness, the billings were of secondary importance in the scheme of things. But with the advent of Bess, many see a switch in technique patterned pretty much along the lines that prevailed at WNEW during Bess' regime there.

From all indications, the WMCA business accentuation is more positive, as evidenced by the package deals being wrapped up by Bess in which, in many instances, it's claimed, the station's rate card is being tossed out the window. On the Bea Wain-Andre Baruch daily marathon show, for example, all kinds of package deals are reported being dangled before prospective clients who would get commercial identification on various segments throughout the day.

As yet, however, there's been no sacrifice of the public service shows for which the station has been kudosed.

Tony Martin, Dave Rose Summer Replacement For Cantor-Pabst Show

Summer replacement for the Pabst-Eddie Cantor show is the Tony Martin-Dave Rose show for 13 weeks. Singer, who was in the lead for the Old Gold takeover from Frank Sinatra, nixed the deal when OG wouldn't guarantee 39 weeks, but wanted Martin to take over and then talk about new deal in the fall. Show for Pabst allows Martin to leave most any time for longer term set up.

'Composite Week' Fixed for 1946, NAB Fights Vs. Blue Book Request

Washington, Jan. 21.

FCC; following through on a threat made in its Blue Book in March, 1946, last week set forth the specific days of a composite week in 1946 for which broadcasters must file complete program logs. The program info, FCC said, will be used in considering bids for new AM or FM stations, bids to buy other properties or increase coverage, and in license renewal applications.

The days for which logs must be filed are: Feb. 4, March 12, April 17, June 20, Aug. 22, Sept. 28 and Nov. 3—all in 1946. The commission suggested that licensees whose AM or FM licenses expire in May, Aug. or Nov., 1947, prepare this program info now so they can file their renewal applications 60 days in advance of their expiration dates, as required by commission rules.

Meanwhile, NAB officials retained their opposition to the FCC's statement that the program data is "required" by the Blue Book. Assn. indicated it will advise broadcasters who file this information to do so with the written reservation that FCC has no authority to ask for it.

Prexy Justin Miller and A. D. "Jess" Willard, NAB executive vice-president, are already on record on this point. They argue the Blue Book dicta have no force of law since they are not included in FCC's rules and regulations, and broadcasters have had no opportunity to test their merits in public hearing. Therefore, FCC may only request not "require" such program data, declare the NAB'ers.

One NAB official pointed satirically to a recent statement of FCC Commissioner Clifford J. Durr to the effect that Blue Book provisions do not have the force of rules and regulations.

Pix-Radio-Tele Center On Goldman Agenda In FCC Bid for WDAS Buy

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

William Goldman, head of one of the biggest indie film chains in Philly, last week applied to the FCC for approval of his purchase of WDAS from the Dannenbaum-Steppacher interests.

Although the purchase price wasn't made public, it was reported that the film man had paid upwards of $600,000 for the indie station, a 250-watter.

In announcing officially that he has purchased the station, Goldman revealed that he planned to tear down the present site of his Keith's, a subsequent runner, and build in its place a new deluxer to feature first run product—a setup he hopes will be sustained by the recent Court decree in his anti-trust suit against the majors and Warners.

The new house, Goldman said, would be a 2,500-seater. The new building would house the new radio studios and a television department. Keith's, an old Philly landmark, was once the top vaude house in the city.

Long Rehearsals Cue Priority For Lux Pix Pickings

Agencies and package boys whose programming ideas built around pix personalties have frequently been thwarted by refusal of Coast studios to permit their properties to do a regular air series (particularly in the case of Metro) are asking "how come?" when they witness the nod that is given "Lux Radio Theatre" in its bid for film talent.

It was the Lux show, for example, that first spotted on the air, among others, Van Johnson, Lauren Bacall, Margaret O'Brien, Joan Caulfield, Lizbeth Scott, Ida Lupino, Don Defore, Lynn Bari, etc. Previously the studios had nixed bids for air stints, invariably on the contention that they are too valuable as pix properties to risk a possible floperoo on the air. Some have since been put back into pix campaign, on others the studios have relaxed their ban.

In explanation of the Lux nod, film chieftains admit that the three-four-day rigid rehearsal before each week's performance is the clincher; that their upcoming stars can't miss in showing up to best advantage under such circumstances. But they're equally scared of the idea that, with the usual one-two- hour rehearsal routine of most Coast shows, they're jeopardizing careers of valuable properties.

Wine Biz Sours, Cresta in Fold

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

"Hollywood Players" will be closed out by Schenley (Cresta Blanca), Feb. 26, after 26 weeks if several stars waive commitments which would carry show through 39 weeks. Collapse of the wine market is said to be the reason, and the client is also giving up its CBS time.

Notification date on the option is due Monday (26), at which time final decision will be reached.

It's understood that French wine is far underselling Cresta and other domestics, causing a mild panic in the industry.

Schenley, through BBD&O, is committed to eight stars for one or more shots and, if waivers are secured by Wick Crider, here for BBD&O, and by MCA, the series would wash up Feb. 26.

Tex and Jinx Grab 3-a-Week Sponsor

After nearly a year of waltz-me-around-again-Willie, with potential sponsors that never materialized, the "Hi, Jinx!" WNBC (N. Y.) show was picked last Friday (17) by Bond Clothing Stores on a three-a-week basis. Deal was set between Tex McCrary, WNBC's Jim Gaines and William Rogow, head of the Rogow Agency, representing Bond's. Clothiers bought the Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday stanzas.

Clothing chain owner broached the idea of sponsorship himself after listening to the show while driving to work every morning. Sponsorship began yesterday (21).

Show had been entirely on a sustaining basis until now. It wasn't for lack of a paucity of offers. The McCrarys' contract with the station, set through Ted Ashley of the William Morris agency, gave them the right of first refusal on rejection if dissatisfied with product they were to plug. On the Tex and Jinx "verboten" list were the usual deodorants, depilatories, etc. On one previous occasion they also had Pan American Airways pacted but the deal chilled at the last minute.

If results from the three-a-week arrangement warrant, clothing chain will likely buy the rest of the time and, according to reports, is mulling request to have the show expand to network level, to cover cities where the 58 Bond stores are located.

GIBSON PARKER LINED FOR BBC-U.S.A. SPOT

BBC's appointment of a new program director in New York to succeed Stephen Fry, who resigned some weeks ago, is said to be fairly imminent. From London come reports that the man being considered most favorably for the job is Gibson Parker, a Britisher who formerly served in the European Theatre for the BBC, but in recent months, has been on loan to the United Nations in New York to lend an assist in its radio dept.

The BBC Committee on Appointments in London, is still weighing the Parker nomination, although there are said to be other factors holding up the appointment, including UN's desire to retain his services.

NEWS STILL SOCK WEB STAPLE

Where's Petrillo?

Little more than a week remains before the American Federation of Musicians' contract with the four major networks expires. After that the webs will be operating without a contract.

But as of yesterday (Tuesday) not a single network executive had heard from AFM boss James C. Petrillo, or had the slightest inkling as to what demands would be made. The Petrillo strategy on binding the webs to new contracts has already been mapped, with terms laid down at a Chicago meeting a couple of weeks ago. But whatever they are Petrillo is keeping mum about them.

The webs would do business with local 802, New York, but Petrillo has notified the local not to negotiate any contract until it hears from him. In some quarters it's been stated that Petrillo doesn't contemplate doing anything until the Lea Act, on which he won a Chicago court victory pending appeal, is finally ironed out.

The webs know Petrillo's stand on FM and television; that the double crew basis must apply to FM and that no live musicians at all can be used on television. But they're more concerned with how the standard broadcast picture shapes up.

Right now the nets are asking in unison: "Where's Petrillo"?

Top Radio, Pic Talent Recruited For Crosby-Inspired 'Family' Show on MBS

Themed to family unity with a surging undercurrent of the spiritual values of life, "Family Theatre," a combined 'product of the radio and picture industries, becomes a dramatic feature of the Don Lee-Mutual network beginning Feb. 13. Half hour show, to be broadcast Thursday nights, 7 to 7:30 p.m., will be studded with star names, top directors and foremost radio writers. Guestars, directors and writers will be paid a token fee while AFRA actors and musicians under the baton of Meredith Willson draw their established pay. Mutual donates the time.

Program was inspired by Bing Crosby more than a year ago when, in a five-minute spot on Mutual, he stressed the need of a better family life which would spread its beneficence to the community and the country at large. Rev. Patrick Peyton of Albany, N. Y., enlisted the aid of radio and picture executives in carrying out the idea of a show that had a wide appeal for families. The reaction of stars, producers and writers was both favorable and immediate. Initial program will have as its stars Loretta Young and James Stewart or Joseph Cotten, with Dee Engelbach, producing and True Boardman scripting. Bob Longenecker will be in charge of production for the entire series.

Each of the directors is expected to do three shows and the star roster comprises top names in both radio and pictures. George Wells, writer, and Bill Bacher, director, will take time off from their film duties to return to radio for the series. List of credits in all phases of the two industries, together with the sponsoring committees, is most imposing.

Advertising agencies are cooperating through the use of their facilities and personnel.

F-C-B Coast Crown To R & R's Ballin?

Hubbell Robinson, Jr., radio head of Foote, Cone & Belding, trained ut to the Coast over the weekend to set the new "Hit Parade" guest star format in motion and for a o.o. of the other Coast-originating Y & R properties.

But seen as one of Robinson's principal motives in his N. Y.-to-L. A. was to negotiate a deal for a Coast radio head for F-C-B. Agency has been on the lookout for the right guy for some time and it's reported that Bob Ballin, radio veepee of Ruthrauff & Ryan and producer of the Jack Benny show (now an F-C-B account) is being wooed for the job.

Despite his R & R association, Ballin was given an okay by the agency, at Benny's behest, to continue with the show on a freelance production assignment, following the switchover of the Lucky Strike account from R & R to F-C-B.

Sinatra Nixes Y&R Cross-the-Board Bid

With Frank Sinatra bowing off the Old Gold show, Young & Rubicam initiated some exploratory talks with an eye toward spotting the Voice in a 15-minute five-times-a week show.

Sinatra said he wasn't interested; didn't want to work that much.

Air Exits Hit MCA 10% Plexus

Overhauling of commercial radio schedules and some anticipated shakeups have been rather rough on the Music Corp. of America's radio dept., with resultant jitters because of the increased number of percentage "takes" that are in jeopardy.

Frank Sinatra's imminent Old Gold show bowoff doesn't rest too well with MCA. And Joan Edwards' bounce from the "Hit Parade" show, in the wake of the drastic format revision, is also a 10% blow in MCA's direction. And with Hildegarde scheduled for a radio bowout this season, the MCA boys are again affected.

All told the revamped air schedules are said to have affected the agency in six or seven directions.

Mooney, Miffed Over Producer, Scripter Loss, Scrams His ABC Show

American Broadcasting's economy wave, cutting loose a number of executives, producers, announcers and script writers the past week or so caused Joe Mooney's quartet to refuse its weekly sustaining shot Monday (20), 10:15-10:30 p.m. Since he's occupied the slot, which is a sustainer, no a remote even though it's done from Club Dixon, N. Y., where his group is working, Mooney has had Don Marsden producing the show, a regular announcer and script.

This week Marden was removed from the show and no substitution made, a slapped together script was worked out and the show otherwise fluffed off. As a result, Mooney refused to do the stint. Whether he will resume next week is still in doubt.

LSMFT to Y&R to LSMFT

George McGarrett, former radio supervisor at Young & Rubicam, and more recently a contact man on the agency's Celanese account, has resigned to join Foote, Cone & Belding as an account exec on the Lucky Strike (American Tobacco) account.

Oddly enough, that's the same job McGarrett held down some years ago when the ex-Lord and Thomas agency was handling American Tobacco's affairs. It was after the L&T-McGarrett split that the latter went to Y&R, in the Interim L&T dissolving and seguing into the F-C-B agency.

4-NET RATIO HOLDS UP WELL

Despite the widespread impression that the four major networks have been sloughing off news shows since the guns stopped firing a year-and-a-half ago, analysis of program schedules reveals that news programs are still holding up, more or less, at the same ratio to total airtime as they had during the war. In contrast to 10 years ago, when the nets were only devoting about 3% of total airtime to news, the current ratio is fluctuating around the 17% mark, a drop of only two or three percent from the peak news year of 1945.

Except for the Mutual net, which dropped back to a normal quota of news shows after heavy overloading during the war years, the other nets have maintained an even keel on reportage in response to general dialer demand. According to several authoritative listener surveys, the appetite for news is as high as it ever was, notwithstanding the absence of the war's highly dramatic impact. It took the war, apparently, to underline the public's value of broadcast news which, in some surveys, is given listener preference over the daily newspapers.

Although the number of news shows has remained constant, a radical shift has taken place in the center of their interest. Domestic news, local and national, has practically knocked the international scene out of the air news picture. According to network news execs, listeners have come home, and between worrying about the housing shortage and rising prices, aren't inclined any longer to worry about foreign affairs.

Squawks are being heard from some sources that radio is failing to fulfill its obligations in catering to this "isolationist" reaction on the part of the American people. Network news chiefs deny this charge, claiming that it's an impossible job to ram international news into the unwilling ears of listeners. They won't listen and advertisers won't buy such programs, they say. Effort is being made, however, to present as much foreign news as possible in terms of its domestic significance.

"Stringers", Abroad

Trend to domestic news is being reflected in the foreign staff setups of the various nets. Greater use is being made abroad of "stringers," part-time correspondents for the nets who are usually working for some other newspaper or press agency. Although CBS and NBC still have fully-manned overseas staffs, ABC has practically dissolved its overseas setup, utilizing stringers exclusively for foreign pickups. But it's still a far cry from the prewar days when CBS, for example, had only two men, Bill Shirer and Ed Murrow, comprising its full staff of European correspondents.

Putting a news show together these days is tougher than it was during the war, news chiefs contend. Lack of the wartime drama,

Boxscore on News: Then and Now

For purposes of comparison between news coverage on the nets during wartime and peacetime, program logs of ABC, CBS, MBS and NBC on two typical weekdays in 1944 and 1947 have been selected for breakdown. News programs have been differentiated into the two categories of straight reporting and commentary, with the news is subject to opinionated analysis. Total time in minutes allotted to both categories of news are listed in the columns under the heading of sponsored and sustaining programs. Only regularly scheduled news programs are included in these figures which omit time given to any special bulletins that may have been aired during the two days under study. Jan. 13, 1944, was a relatively quiet day on the war front.

Weiss Seen Calling 'Dance, Kobak' For Mutual Gang of Harsh Gabbers

Dollar Dividends

Household Finance Corp.'s sponsorship of "The Whistler" on a CBS hookup adds up to one of the most unique deals in radio.

Finance outfit, for $2,250 a week (making it one of the cheapest commercial shows on the nighttime schedule), grabbed itself a whodunit package that's been paying off with some sock Hoopers on the Columbia Pacific Network the past couple of years.

But the most enviable aspect is that the Coast airing, 48 hours prior to Household's CBS takeover, adds up to a weekly pretesting of the program, since it's the same cast, same script, same director, etc. the finance company as such getting a dress-rehearsal for free.

Washington, Jan. 21.

Although president Ed Kobak has been publicly taking the rap for it, Lewis Allen Weiss, general manager for MBS-Don Lee, is the one who forced Mutual to put Upton Close back on the Mutual ether, according to reports here. Observers point to the Weiss-Close coup as another instance of one of the "big four" shareholders (Don Lee; WGN, Chicago; Yankee Network; and WOR, New York), deciding policy for the network as a whole. And in the case of Don Lee, it's a pretty big tail that is wagging the dog.

Grip of Don Lee over its affiliates under the chain broadcasting regulations is now being probed by FCC, but some observers here say the Pacific Coast web can exercise almost as much influence in Mutual councils themselves. For example, Mutual cannot promise delivery of shows on a majority of its 386 affiliates, but Don Lee is much more successful in signing up its 40-odd affiliates on the Coast. And without Don Lee's say-so, Mutual knows it has no chance of reaching Coast listeners from California to the State of Washington and back.

Though Weiss' role in support of high-Hooper Fulton Lewis, Jr., is less known, he and the right-of-center commentator on record as warm personal friends. The conservative trio of Close, Lewis and Henry Taylor, former Ford mouthpiece, are heard regularly on Don Lee, but straighten-out orates like WOL-Mutual's Albert Warner, new MBS commentator Arthur Gaeth, or Jim Crowley are not heard. Mutual's self-confessed "liberal commentator"—Cecil Brown—was not carried on Don. Lee.

Cold Flower

An equally cold reception is apparently being given to ex-Mayor Fiorello La Guardia's new co-op show on the West Coast. Dwindling appeal of the "little flower" west of the Rockies is probably biggest reason for Don Lee's indifference to carrying the show—coupled with fact that a likely sponsor has not offered to underwrite it.

However, observers here point out that Don Lee has affirmative obligation under FCC policy to counterbalance the admittedly topheavy showing of conservative newscasters on its ether.

La Guardia has been signed up by over 100 MBS affiliates, majority of them on a sustaining basis. How-

Flock of Crosley Resignations

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.

Resignations disclosed Monday (20) by four Crosley Broadcasting Corp. department heads with indefinite effective dates were construed in local trade circles as forerunner of reorganization program by Aviation Corp., parent company, in absence of comment by executives.

Aviation Corp. purchased controlling interest 16 months ago in clear channel WLW, several shortwave stations and FM WLWA here, and later acquired WINS, New York.

Resignees are Wilfred Guenther, 10-year staffer and manager of WLWA since October; Dick Hubbell, television consultant who joined organization in October, 1944, after affiliation with CBS; William Barlow, who started in publicity department eight years ago and became publicity director of WINS in September, and A. E. Scheffer, who started as WLW director of public relations two years ago and later served as consultant on public relations and food merchandising.

CROSBY TO CUT SOME PHILCO DISKS ABROAD

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Bing Crosby is laying out an itinerary for a two-month junket through Europe during July and August when his Philco series is off the air for the summer. While abroad he plans to cut several disks for his sponsor, utilizing the talents of English stage, screen and music hall favorites. At least one platter will be made with Bob Hope, who plans to be in England about the same time. Bill Morrow, writer-producer of the Philco spinners, will accompany Crosby.

MCA Waits Coyly As Collins Burns

Ted Collins and Bill Murray, radio head of the Wm. Morris agency, are reported tiffing over the threat of Collins to divorce himself from the agency unless it finds a new sponsor for Kate Smith within the next 10 days. Miss Smith goes off for General Foods at the end of the season after a 10-year association.

It's the contention of the Morris agency that Collins can't walk out even if he wants to, that there's a contract to be respected. But Collins, from all indications, feels that the Morris boys are being remiss in their contractual obligations.

Meanwhile the rival Music Corp. of America is said to be eyeing the Collins-Smith package, and wouldn't mind grabbing it off.

ABC Web Has Another Transcribed Show on Tap

ABC network may have another transcribed high-budget musical show for possible slotting on Wednesday night, 8:30-9, an hour ahead of the Bing Crosby stanza.

Item is titled "Music In The Air" and would feature Metropolitan Opera singer Nadine Connor, George Griffin, and Victor King's orchestra, with Milton Cross as announcer.

Package is being considered for sponsorship by National Brewers Assn.

Kaycee Radio Shows Unusual Stuff As Star Strike Ties Up Only Paper

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

Radio phobias were shattered, precedents were established, and listeners got a new meaning of broadcasting public service after contract carriers placed a picket line around the Kansas City Star Friday (17) and stopped publication of the city's only daily newspaper. Paced by WDAF, NBC outlet, which is owned by the Star, the town's radios here are going all out in news coverage. Newscasts have been stepped up to many times their regular schedules in attempts to keep the citizenry informed. The Star and WDAF are furnishing other stations with many features, and two stations have even gone so far as to call attention to the programs of their competitors.

Such prosaic news as the death columns, local markets, lodge and meeting notices, golden wedding announcements, local chatter columns, and the like are getting full coverage on the air by WDAF. Even the comic sections are given vivid interpretations twice daily.

As word of the newspaper stoppage spread, the Star received many telephone calls concerning the radio program listings. The calls also poured in to WDAF. H. Bean Fitzer, manager of WDAF, then took a step that literally knocked Kansas City radio on its ear. He ordered that every three hours the station would air a complete listing of the program logs usually carried in the Star.

Surprise, Surprise!

When WDAF newscaster Frank Feeley went to the microphone with the first three-hour list of programs, the engineers, control room men and other announcers did not know what was coming. As he began reading what would be heard on KNBC, KCMO, WHB, WREN and KCKN, the staff was stunned. The boys at the control board jumped up and looked through at Feeley in amazement. The engineer at the transmitter called in and wanted to know "what the hell is going on." A hurried call to the front office brought the word that it was just another "WDAF public service" for the emergency only.

KCMO followed suit Sunday and aired the listings of all the stations for that day. KCMO is owned by the Crowley, Drug Co. family.

WDAF has cancelled many commercial programs during the morning and afternoon hours, and after night before 9 o'clock to make the news to the radio listeners. The sustaining programs of other stations have been converted to special news broadcasts. The Sunday funny paper (printed in advance) was distributed to the other stations, and KMBC, KCMO and WHB put them on the air. WDAF had them read in the morning, and again in the afternoon for the kids who were in Sunday school at the first reading.

The pickets still are marching, and chances of an early settlement appear remote.

'Mouse' Comedy Quietus Traps Fresh Scripters

Disappointed with the results of "McGarry and His Mouse," Mutual network show which it's producing for General Foods, Young & Rubicam has decided on a comedy hypo for the program by pacing Jack Byrne and Carroll Moore for the scripting job. Byrne was the original scripter on the show when it first made its network bow last summer under Bristol-Myers auspices as the summer replacement for Eddie Cantor. Moore is scripter on the Henry Morgan program.

During the initial weeks of its GF run on Mutual, "McGarry" has staggered writers. Byrne and Carroll take over next Monday (27).

Gripe Vs. Court Taken to Vinson

Washington, Jan. 21.

Supreme Court Chief Justice Fred Vinson will meet with a committee of the Radio Correspondents Assn. in Washington tomorrow (Wednesday) to discuss ways and means to win more favorable treatment of radio newsmen in covering court proceedings.

The association's president, Rex Goad, protested to Justice Vinson after Justice T. Alan Goldsborough barred mikes from the District Court Building here this fall during the trial of miners' chief John L. Lewis. The Supreme Court itself has press desks only for newspaper reporters. Radio men got burned anew last week when they were forced to stand in the High Court throughout the entire time Attorney General Tom Clark argued the Government's case against Lewis.

The correspondents propose some sort of program to educate judges on radio practice in an effort to win consent at least for a pooling arrangement on the use of mikes and wireline facilities outside important court trials.

Their suggestions will not receive consideration until Oct., 1947, however, when the Assn. of Federal District and Circuit Judges from all over the country meets in Washington. Justice Vinson is head of the association.

NATE GROSS IN CHI BOWOUT

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Nate Gross, Chicago columnist, vacates his Sunday night WBBM show after four years on the air on Feb. 9. Writer, who pens daily column in Chicago Herald-American, plans a Cuban vacation after show bows off.

Action comes about upon doctor's advice.

Huckstering Pays

Washington, Jan. 21.

Radio ranks among the top three industries in earning power, the Dept. of Commerce announced last week. Average annual take for fulltime radio employees was $3,560 and was exceeded only by earnings in the water transportation and the securities and exchange industries.

Radio ranked third in both 1945 and 1944, the dept. said. In 1943, the industry was sixth among the top earners, and fifth in 1942.

French-Yank Program Swap Due for Talks

Paris, Jan .14.

To implement the current efforts of French government radio to get regular airings in America, Robert Lange, head of the North American dept., will fly to the U. S. Jan. 22 to be present when the American advisory committee meets at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., Jan. 29. He will be accompanied by Jacques Manachem, head of radio foreign public relations, Bertha Sternberg, general secretary of the North American dept. and Marjorie Denton, program director, are already in N. Y.

Main object of the conference is to arrange for retransmission of French programs so as to give them extensive coverage. It is hoped to make a reciprocal agreement permitting French audiences to get American programs. Lange, who has already got many sample programs in N. Y., is also taking with him more recordings and attempting as much as possible to replace disk by film recording as more easily processed. Current technical work on French disks waxed here is done in N. Y. by WOR. Lange expects to line up about 145 American stations through which to get airings. His American staff in Paris includes Charles Gerwin, formerly with Norman Corwin, as production head, and Wilma Dobie as editor-in-chief. Corwin serves on the advisory committee.

Two points not on the agenda will loom large in the background. One is the attitude of the musicians unions on both sides of the water.

Second is commercial advertising. So far French radio is government run and strictly non-commercial. But there is considerable pressure here to turn it under its present head, Wladimir Porche, who has done much to rehabilitate it, into a self-managed agency under government supervision. This would mean more financial independence and the possibility of injecting some unobjectionable advertising to make it self supporting.

Dallas—Wayne R. Griffin, former m.c. of the American Broadcasting Co. "Wake Up and Smile" and "American Farmer" has been named director of special events and assistant production manager of WFAA.

NAB and FCC See Eye-to-Eye, But It's Pace That Differs

By JUSTIN MILLER
President, Assn. of Broadcasters

Washington, Jan. 21.

Much has been written about the opposition of the National Assn. of Broadcasters to the programming policies outlined by implication in the FCC report commonly known as the Blue Book. That we have and do oppose the philosophy of Government control of radio broadcasting implied in this now historic document is well known. That we recognize deficiences in radio programming and are striving to speed up the steady swing upward in standards of practice has more often than not been overlooked in the headlines and news stories proclaiming our "bitter opposition" to the Blue Book.

The fact that American radio already has the best programs in the world is no reason why we should rest on our laurels. Our programming is not perfect—not by any means. We don't expect it to be, ever. Pleasing all the people all the time is an acknowledged impossibility. But pleasing most of the people most of the time, minorities as well as "average listeners," provides a challenge to the broadcasting industry which is not being evaded.

This is not something new for the industry, of course. A number of years ago the NAB promulgated its Code of program practices (now known as Standards of Practice) which was widely applauded throughout the nation. The membership of this association took action at its annual meeting last October which will strengthen this Code. Hereafter the NAB Board of Directors, which meets four times annually, will have the power to promulgate standards of practice and, significantly, "to establish such methods to secure observation thereof as it may deem advisable." With this mandate from the radio industry, the NAB is seriously engaged in determining appropriate procedures.

I hope that I have not made the creation of such standards seem a simple thing. It is more important to move wisely and with the surefootedness which insures success, even though we move slowly, than to move hurriedly a revised set of standards which would crumble because of a poorly constructed legal or practical base.

The Legal View

As a first step, I have consulted with Asst. Attorney General Wendell Berge on this subject. In our discussions we have turned up some curious facts which might well sur-

Dave Adams Advanced To 'Red' James FCC Spot

Washington, Jan. 21.

FCC has announced the promotion of David C. Adams to succeed W. Irvin "Red" James, as assistant to the General Counsel in charge of both broadcast and common carrier matters. Adams, former Senior attorney with FCC since 1941, will take over Feb. 1, when James leaves to open a private law office in Montgomery, Ala.

Meanwhile, Sam Miller, head of FCC's hearing section and former chief of the FM division, has resigned to become associated with the radio law firm of Cohn & Marks in Washington. Miller worked on the chain network, newspaper - radio cases and presided over 800 FM bids as chief of FCC's high-frequency department.

WCBS' Strong Pull On Audience Share

WCBS (CBS) leads the New York field in share-of-audience snagged most of the time, when compared with the other major network flagships. Only NBC's Sunday evening comedy parlay saves that web's key outlet, WNBC, from being swamped altogether when it comes to share-of-audience in its home battleback, although WNBC does have a slight edge on nighttime pull.

Those are the figures shown by the Hooper reports for the New York area for the period Nov.-Dec., 1946. Another surprising disclosure seen in the figures is that one of the town's indies, WNEW, comes close to some of the net flagships and, in some instances, goes ahead of at least one web key outlet.

A breakdown of the city figures shows that, in general, sets in use during Nov.-Dec. increased by comparison with the same months a year ago, the 1945 Nov.-Dec. sets-in-use being 13.8 and the 1946 figure adding up to 14.4.

For the morning hours, Monday-Friday, WCBS led with a sets in use, 23.9, WOR (Mutual) was second with 18, WJZ (ABC) third with 15.0, then came WNBC with 12.9, and WNEW, with 11.8.

WCBS led again in the afternoon, Mon.-Fri. parade, chalking up a sets-in-use rating of 24.0, with WNBC next with 19.3, then WOR-12.6, WNEW-10.5, and WJZ last with 9.5.

WNBC's slight nighttime lead over WCBS was evidently due to the NBC outlet's early Sunday night schedule, giving this station first place in the evening-Sun.-Sat. sets-in-use ratings with 26.3. Next came WCBS-26.1, then WOR-14.8, and WNEW-6.2. WCBS' highest Sunday night Hooperating—as distinct from share-of-audience—was 16.9, while WNBC's Hooperatings listed seven shows with each of them going above 20.0 and some as high as 28.0.

WFIL Set Up Find For Community Center In Unique Goodwill Gesture

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

In an unique gesture of public goodwill, WFIL dedicated a large portion of ground for community purposes at ground-breaking ceremonies (17) for construction of the station's new 5,000-watt transmitter in suburban Whitemarsh Township, Montgomery county.

In turning back first spadeful of earth, Walter H. Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, owner of WFIL, pledged the station to continued broadcasting in the public interest, and said, "we shall accept gravely our responsibility to our listeners."

A community recreation center will be built on the site donated to Whitemarsh Township, and WFIL has set up a $5,000 fund for maintenance and improvement of the recreation facilities.

Besides Annenberg, participating in the ground-breaking ceremonies were Roger W. Clipp, WFIL general manager; Louis E. Littlejohn, WFIL chief engineer; O. C. MacFarland, Whitemarsh township supervisor.

Steel-Guild Airer In Pitt. AFRA Snag

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

U. S. Steel's "Theatre Guild on Air," doing broadcast of Dorothy Maguire-Basil Rathbone "A Doll's House" from here Sunday night, ran into a temporary snag with AFRA last week when sponsor announced several days before the program that one of the features of the airing locally would be an appearance by the male chorus of the Homestead plant of the Carnegie-Illinois steel company, a subsidiary of Big Steel.

At that announcement, Don Hirsch, local exec. secretary of AFRA, notified sponsors that 30 members of the group would have to join radio union and be paid regular artists' fees for a commercial show. Appearance of the local choral group, of course, was to have been gratis.

However, after a meeting between Steel's programmers and AFRA's Pittsburgh head, agreement was reached whereby plant singers wouldn't have to join the union but regular standby fee for each man would be paid to AFRA, which in turn would turn the money over to charity.

THE MODERNAIRES
with PAULA KELLY

Program Managers and Record Jockeys of over 400 Lang-Worth affiliate stations are anxiously awaiting the first release of a 60-tune pact just signed with The Modernaires and Paula Kelly. With Bill Stegmeyer pilotting the accompanying group, it's bound to be Radio Box office with a capital "B".

Chi Radio Hits Its Lowest Ebb

The Chicago radio exodus continues and the latest to officially pull up stakes is Les Weinrott, who announced in New York last week with plans to permanently headquarter there.

Weinrott, prominently identified with Chi radio production for years, plans to open his own package production outfit in N. Y. in the near future, but may first take a fling at producing a legit show, with Chi backing.

Meanwhile, with only one network origination (NBC's "Grand Marquee") and AFRA rolls fast dwindling, Chi radio is probably at its lowest ebb in history.

In sharp contrast, however, are the agency business operations with billings in many instances as healthy as ever.

Junior Chamber Picks Wismer for Honor List

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Harry Wismer, director of sports of the American Broadcasting Co., was among the "10 Outstanding Men Under 35 in America" scheduled to be honored here tomorrow night (Wed.) by the Junior Chamber of Commerce in its annual awards. Wismer, 34, is also assistant to the president of WJR, Detroit; WGAR, Cleveland, and KMPC, Los Angeles, all owned by E. R. Richards.

Heavyweight champion Joe Louis is also on this year's list, along with cartoonist, Bill Mauldin.

TIGHT PURSE STRINGS CHOKE TELE

WABD for Sale? Over DuM's Body! But Rumors Persist As FCC Frowns

Rumor that WABD, DuMont's flagship television station in N. Y., has been offered for sale at $7,000,000 erupted this week in the wake of an FCC ruling that DuMont and Paramount—with a total of five tele stations between them—have been given their last video permit until Par withdraws its holdings from DuMont. But the rumor was promptly discounted by Dr. Allen B. DuMont, company chief, with the exclamation the station would be sold only "over my dead body."

Amid verified reports that DuMont has fired some 200 employees from its plant at Passaic, N. J., (most of whom, according to Dr. DuMont, are excess experimental engineers carried over from the company's war work), came reports that the company had also fired a raft of technicians from WABD. Latter, however, according to the DuMont prexy, will only be laid off during the three-to-four week period the station shutters to permit installation of its new antenna, on which work begins Jan. 24. Antenna will boost WABD's power to 22.5-kilowatts, making it the most powerful television in dote.

FCC handed down its ruling last Thursday (16) after awarding DuMont its third video franchise in Pittsburgh. Company already operates a station in Washington, in addition to WABD, while Par subsidiaries hold permits for Los Angeles and Chicago. FCC meanwhile placed in a pending file other DuMont bids for Cincinnati and Cleveland, Par requests for Boston and Detroit, and an application from Interstate Circuit in Dallas, in which Par is a 50% partner and presumably exercises working control.

Par Willing

Par had been rumored ready to buy the N. Y. station until the FCC ruling came through. Despite the FCC allegation, Dr. DuMont reiterated that Par has no control over DuMont, owning only enough stock to elect three of the company's seven directors. It was conceded, however, that DuMont has no control over what Par does with its stock, and that it might be possible for the picture firm to buy up enough voting stock to gain a majority interest in the company. DuMont, meanwhile, won't appeal the FCC ruling, apparently in an attempt to force it make the first move either to relinquish its permits or submit an appeal to the commission.

DuMont production veepee Leonard F. Cramer and commander Mortimer W. Loewi, assistant to Dr. DuMont, both echoed their chief's words in denying any intention of selling WABD, but revealed the company had operated at a considerable loss during 1946 and would attempt to cut cost corners wherever possible during the coming year. As soon as the new transmitter is erected, however, WABD plans to expand its N. Y. broadcasting activities. First move, Cramer said, will be to open the two subsidiary studios in the Wanamaker building, in which WABD is located, using both for additional evening programming.

In addition, Cramer plans to reopen the old studio at 515 Madison avenue for use during afternoon hours. John Wildberg, who recently announced an affiliation with DuMont as production adviser, is currently preparing a variety show which DuMont hopes to air as an across-the-board show, with local advertisers coming in on a participation basis. Wildberg office has been auditioning talent for the new show for the last several weeks, and hopes to have it ready for the air as soon as WABD resumes broadcasting.

San Antonio—Full radio coverage will be given to the inauguration of Beauford Jester as governor of Texas. Besides broadcasts through KVET, KNOW and KTBC, Austin, coverage of the event will be given the state through stations of the Texas Quality Network, broadcast originating through WOAI.

Television Reviews

THINKING ALOUD
With Bramwell Fletcher, Carol Goodner, Vaughn Taylor, Michael Blair, Charles Deane, Don Ballantine, John Graham, others
Writer: Emlyn Williams
Producer: Fred Coe
Setz: Bob Wade
30 Mins.; Sun. (19), 8:40 p.m.
Sustaining
WNBT-NBC, N. Y.

Initial presentation to the public by WNBT of Emlyn Williams' latest play was probably the most intricate and ambitious television show yet staged. Excellent way the program came off, with its involved cuts from live action to film and from dramatic recordings to straight speech, was due almost entirely to the fine work of producer Fred Coe, who certainly rates a video "Oscar" for this one.

Fact remains, however, that the play hardly offered good tele fare, with the action confined to glances between two people facing each other across the narrow confines of an English railroad coach. Williams, who scripted "Night Must Fall" and several other major plays, reportedly wrote "Thinking Aloud" for radio, which would explain its unsuitability for television. Story was good and, with proper expansion, might make for an interesting motion picture. Tele, however, requires more visual action than was included in "Aloud."

Theme concerned a British film actress who'd just killed her husband and a war vet who'd long been secretly in love with her. Couple take the same coach to London by coincidence and the suspense builds gradually as the actress believes the vet is a detective and he attempts to shake off a war neurosis by telling her how he feels. Dialog, for the most part, consisted of what went on in the minds of the duo, somewhat as in Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude." Voices were pre-recorded for the purpose.

With live action thus relegated to introspective speaking, stars Bramwell Fletcher, as the vet, and Carol Goodner, as the actress, carried off the difficult thespic assignment flawlessly, mirroring only via facial expressions their different thoughts. Credit, for their work and the split-drawer acting of the rest of the cast rates accolades for both Coe's direction and the casting ability of NBC's Owen Davis, Jr.

Coe made full use of film clips for the show, cutting expertly from shots of a train to the live action inside the coach, with the sound track of train rumblings raised and lowered accordingly. Camera work was fine and; through use of a new lighting technique, Coe at times achieved a three-dimensional effect in close-up shots of the actors. Bob Wade's two sets were equally good. Stal.

DELIVERY GUARANTEED
With Anne Burr, Robert Bolger, Ruth Buzzi, Stewart, Tom McMorrow, John James Writer: Gordon Minter
Producer-Director: Steve Marvin
30 Mins.; Thurs., 9 p.m.
Sustaining
WCBS-TV, N. Y.

In spite of a weakly contrived play that probably didn't get across to half of its viewers, its video adaptation as in its original radio form, "Delivery Guaranteed" provided an adequate showcase for some Broadway talent more, or less new to the medium. Legit actors and radio actors with legit experience are pointing up with increased emphasis their ability to adapt themselves to the mike and camera of a tele studio, to the dismay of radio thesps without similar background, most of whom have flopped gloriously. The improvement will probably be even more marked when motion picture talent can appear before the video cameras without danger of guillotining a juicy contract.

This whodunit mystery dramat came straight out of "The Whistler" radio files, and would have been better left untouched as so much of the loss of poor adaptation as bait choice of vehicle. O. e-acter conceivably could become credible on the air but loses punch in a visual medium. Telling the story of a husband who strangles his wife is a fit of temper when she threatens him with Reno, dramat then has him pack her up in a trunk for shipment to the Poconos. Story ends with an O. Henry-Hellinger twist. No one could believe that a policeman would observe a man's hysterical gyrations

OBSOLETE GEAR IRKS PRODUCERS

A growing tide of resentment on the part of television producers and directors is being directed toward top station and net execs as a result of the latters' refusal to augment present equipment and studio facilities, now deemed insufficient for proper programming. Some of the men who put on the shows have gone so far as to question the motives of brass hats, who they claim want the medium to progress just so far and no further.

Production people in almost all video situations say they have been forced to work with insufficient and obsolete cameras, sets and lights, and that, because of the lack, television programming is stymied at a point which was reached more than two years ago. Nor is it a matter of availability of the gear, they state, but simply the refusal of executives, men who control television purse-strings, to lay out funds to purchase equipment and expand studio space. Excuse of wartime shortages no longer holds.

Biggest offender, according to statements by producers, is CBS, where there are just three cameras available for programs, and majority of the lights are stationary, forcing production personnel to build their shows around the lights instead of being able to move equipment to suit their requirements. The cameras themselves are vintage 1937 and have no immediate prospects of being replaced. Shows stand as a consequence, and critics, say the directors, are inclined to blame the talent on the grounds that they've had enough time to progress from the initial primitive stages of video showmanship.

Producers Saddled

What's actually happening, according to prods, is that the best production talent is saddled with handicaps that can be removed only by expenditures for new equipment. One of the top producing teams in the business, and one of the few that works as a team, is CBS' Paul Belanger. Howard Hayes and Jim McNaughton. Three were recognized, through Belanger, by the Television Broadcasters Assn., as innovationists in programs in the past, but lately have been having obvious trouble with studio limitations. They have worked as a unit, with Belanger directing, McNaughton designing the sets, and Hayes supervising camera work, for about three years and seem to be having trouble overcoming equipment limitations.

ABC showmen had an initial obstacle in the net's complete lack of facilities and the resultant necessity of buying time over DuMont's WABD, studio owners. Because of this, the net has quit New York production until construction is completed on its new studios. Meanwhile, the DuMont people are limited by the very thing that was to put their production far ahead of anyone else's, a huge studio. Equipment has not kept pace with the expansion —partially uncompleted—of the Wanamaker studios, chief shortage being lights. According to ABC's crew directors Harry Marlowe, light shortage became acute at the DuMont studios when two live shows were run in succession and there weren't enough glims to set up for the second show without interrupting the first. Because of its manufacturing tieup, DuMont has been quick about getting new camera gear and, with NBC, has some of the newest in operation.

NBC production people have not suffered from lack of equipment quite as much as they have from lack of space in which to profit from the full potential at hand. With the best of RCA's lab product for telecasting, the NBC production staff have been cordoned into a single small studio from where all their live programming must be done. On three separate occasions, programmers had to move into radio studios 8-G for shows that were too big for the regular video quarters. Each time they had to bring their Image Orthicons in front of cameras designed to compensate for the lack of sufficient lighting in the radio bailiwick. NBC's

Monochrome Men Mangle Claims Of CBS in Pushing Anti-Tint at FCC

McCarthy's Mugs

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Charlie McCarthy received a face lifting last week for the sole purpose of pleasing his television audience. An entirely new McCarthy will greet tele fans as he does away with his perpetual smile. The mighty oak spent most of last week in the Bergen-Cunning studios trying on different expressions, including a scowl, sleepiness, and a quick burn at Bergen for the television audience.

Biz Anticipations Swell Tele Staffs

Despite television's current standstill policy, the top ad agencies are priming their largest-spending accounts for possible entry into the medium within the next few months. Both Young & Rubicam and B.B.D. & O. are presently expanding their video staffs to facilitate making presentations to their clients.

Dave Levey, formerly with Y. & R.'s radio department, has switched over to the agency's video staff to aid tele exec Bill Forbes and producers Wes McKee and Jack Downs. Levey is slated to act as tele supervisor to the Gulf account, which presently bankrolls both the Thursday night news show over WCBS-TV (CBS, N. Y.) and the "You Are an Artist" show Friday nights over WNBT (NBC, N. Y.).

William Morris, formerly with the motion picture and tele department of the J. Walter Thompson agency, has joined B.B.D. & O. as supervisor of the video staff, under the direction of Wick Crider. No B.B.D. & O. account has sponsored a television show since before the war, but several top clients are presently looking over various packages.

FLA. PIC MAN BIDS FOR MIAMI LICENSE

Washington, Jan. 21.

Two new bidders have entered television this week, with the Southern Television & Equipment Co., applying for the first video permit in Miami, and Ft. Industry, newly-licensed in Toledo, bidding for a second station in Detroit.

Interest of pix operators in tele is clearly shown in the southern application in which Edward Claughton, owner-operator of a chain of Florida theatres, is putting up the $165,000 financing. Claughton will be principal stockholder and vice president of the tele operation. President is Robert Venn, onetime manager of the Ft. Industry station WGBS, Miami. Station proposes to use channel No. 4, and program 16 hours a week, leaning heavily on top N. Y.-Hollywood talent to bolster its schedules during the winter months.

In Detroit, Ft. Industry has asked for the No. 2 channel, and has set aside $229.000 for station construction.

plans called for new television studio construction to begin this month, but as yet no permit has been forthcoming from the CPA.

All of the networks and stations have made hefty promises of expenditures to start television on the rocket ride so many have predicted for 1947, but to say production people, there's been no evidence of the oft-spoken willingness to spend, in spite of the fact that the radio end of the operations is about as near complete booking as it has ever been or ever will be. Whether or not this is the result of deliberate policy, some of the producers are quite unwilling to say, but all agree that the situation has become an increasingly sore point of frustration.

An attempt by black and white television proponents to prove that it is presently impractical to transmit ultra-high frequency color images through the air is expected to highlight the resumption of FCC color video hearings in New York Monday (27). At the same time, the opponents to CBS' request for the immediate establishment of color tele standards will try to prove the CBS sequential system economically unfeasible.

CBS last Dec. 16 demonstrated to FCC members it could successfully transmit color images over the air waves by sending pictures from its antenna atop the Chrysler Tower, N. Y., to the Tarrytown Inn, N. Y., a distance of some 24 miles. Demonstration was repeated successfully last Friday (17) for the benefit of several FCC members who missed the original show. Black and white proponents, however, will show that the line-of-sight transmission between the two points is directly along the Hudson River and entirely free of any obstruction. They will attempt to prove that high-band waves could not get through in even the "slightest unsuitable location," such as one in which there is a multiplicity of high buildings.

Ultra-high frequency television, it's pointed out, operates on the same frequency as radar, whose basic principle involves the fact that waves bounce back from any obstruction in their path. Had there been a single tall building between Manhattan and Tarrytown, according to the monochrome backers, the CBS waves would have bounced off it and failed to be received successfully at their destination. Argument will prove, they claim, that considerably more experimentation will have to be conducted in the ultra-high frequencies before line-of-sight transmission is feasible.

How High Is Low?

Black and white proponents are also expected to hop on the fact that CBS has never slated definitely the price of color receivers built to its specifications. Under the CBS mechanical system, they'll point out, almost every receiver turned out will have to be a custom-built job, which might cost considerably more than the CBS estimate of "$50-$100 higher" than a black-and-white set with a screen of comparable size.

CBS, meanwhile, is prepping to demonstrate network color tele by transmitting a show over the Bell System's coaxial cable from N. Y. to Washington and back. FCC said it wants to explore the immediate possibilities of networking CBS color and asked that the pictures as broadcast locally with those carried on the cable. A spokesman for American Telephone & Telegraph—the wire outfit—will testify on the usefulness of the cable to carry the high-band color images.

The action was looked on as further indication that the FCC was favorably impressed with CBS' Manhattan - to - Tarrytown transmission and wants to investigate the possibilities of long distance broadcasting. It was pointed out, however, that development of ultra-high frequency radio relays and other methods of networking video shows may enter the scene by the time color is ready to spread out on an inter-city basis and the two-to-three years which are estimated as necessary to turn out any black and white transmitters and receivers in volume.

Untimately, But—Denny

FCC Chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr., clarifying the color television controversy as much as possible, pointed out in New York last week that the questions involved in the color controversy are technical only, and have nothing to do with whether color or black and white is better for video. It's a known fact, Denny declared, that tele will "ultimately have color, but it's a question of when and what kind of system will be used."

Denny was in N. Y. to witness a demonstration of CBS' ultra-high frequency teletint, accompanied by commissioner Ray C. Wakefield;

ONE WORLD FLIGHT
Writer-Producer: Norman Corwin
Directors: Corwin, Guy Della Chioppa
Music: Alexander Semmler
30 Mins., Tues., 10 p.m.
Sustaining
WCBS-CBS, N. Y.

"One World Flight" introduces a new Norman Corwin to the field of radio. In this series of documentaries stemming from his Willkie Award global trip, Corwin has taken up the cudgels for humanity with a deep sympathy and an earnest desire to bring understanding to as many people as possible. But in this new mode of presentation he has broadened the scope of documentary with actuality sequences, uniting it into a whole with brilliant, pungent commentary.

The new CBS Tuesday night series which preemed week (14) is based on wire recordings made by Corwin and Lee Bland, CBS engineer, during their One World flight. In themselves they represent a brilliant job of editing. And as the various people Corwin met in his travels are permitted to speak for themselves, the listener is impressed by the honesty, sincerity and the simplicity that underlies the thematic One World concept of the program.

However, it was the clear thinking, the simple logic and the overwhelming impact of Corwin's own basic ideals and the eloquent prose of the commentary he delivered that stood out on the first of the series, outweighing the dramatic impact of the voices he recorded.

It was as if the picture of the world that Corwin saw in his fight pushed from his mind everything but a fervent desire to make as many people as possible see this world in all its stark horror and devastation, all its hopelessness and fears. But once having opened the eyes and minds of the people, Corwin sounds forth a note of encouragement as to the possibilities and hopes inherent in the world and its people.

Because the documentary was a perfectly wrought production, it was startling at times to recall that the voices heard were those of real people; that these were not rehearsed words but the honest beliefs and ideals of people big and little around the world.

Corwin did not choose as spokesmen only the pros for the One World theory. There were fellow men in different parts of the world who, either through sincere belief or because of abysmal ignorance, were grossly unaware of the awful powers of the atom bomb or its equally powerful menace—the distrust of other nations and their ways. Corwin let them speak, and their words did much to show how f we were from attaining Willkie's One World ideal. Only once Corwin let speak the voice of anguish—an Italian mother who had lost all in the war and felt the awful emptiness of tragedy, hunger and despair. At other times he appealed to the mind and he spoke both through the people in power and those who comprise the masses. He asked them questions, those that any one of us would ask, and they answered through his recorder. At times it was necessary to use an interpreter, at others to clarify faulty recording, and it was these natural touches that emphasized its inherent honesty.

The opening of the series served merely as an introduction, a once-over of the content yet to be heard. But Corwin gave glimpses of the herculean editing job the series presents, the knowledge and sagacity necessary to drive home the truth and crystallize the findings of his trip.

At no time does Corwin talk down to his audience; he goes on the assumption that the natural dignity within man makes him capable of an understanding of the problems confronting mankind. Rose.

NEW YORK SOAPBOX
With John Wingate
15 Mins.; Sat., 12:15 p.m.
Sustaining
WOR, N. Y.

This idea is so old it's almost new. At least, it's a welcome relief from the stale type of aud participation program clogging the airlanes. Quarter-hour session is merely built around the impromptu comments of passers-by in front of WOR's studios who step up to the mike and give their views on questions of the day. Questions varied from the highly important such as "Do you believe in a guaranteed annual wage?", to the highly unimportant such as "Should we change the name of Avenue of the Americas back to Sixth Avenue?".

For laughs, announcer John Wingate made a special point of egging non-New Yorkers into expressing their beefs about the city's manners. The most vehement critic was given a soapbox from which to harangue the crowd. Austin Hogan, Transport Workers Union exec, also came on for a few minutes to justify the alleged rudeness of bus drivers. Whole program was an interesting slice of comments in the raw. Herm.

SUNDAY EVENING HOUR
With Detroit Symphony Orch, Karl Krueger conductor, William Layton, announcer Writer-Producer-Director: Ian Smith
60 Mins.; Sun., 8 p.m.
MUSICAL DIGEST
WJZ-ABC, N. Y.
(Kenyon, Eckhardt)

Detroit Symphony Orchestra is a welcome addition to radio's longhair ranks. Fine hand of Henry H. Reichhold—Detroit millionaire manufacturer turned patron—is behind it, Reichhold being responsible for the recent rebuilding of the orchestra and for the backing of the new classical music publication, Musical Digest, which is sponsoring the current series. In addition to being wealthy and public-spirited, Reichhold seems to be a go-getter as well. It will be interesting to see how far he throws his weight in symph music on radio. He's not only rebuilt the Detroit symph, but publicized it by sending it on its first nation-wide tour last season, at a terrific expense to himself. His interest in radio can spell much.

His professed attempt to be rid of longhair radio encumbrances, like mid-commercials, science intermission talks, opera quizzes and opera news of the air, wasn't quite borne out, though, at Sunday's (19) preem, there being one commercial between the two numbers played. But it was short and harmless, and quite in order.

Program presented the Detroiters—a major symphonic ensemble now—in choice readings of the Overture to Weber's "Oberon" and Sibelius' Second Symphony. Works were preceded by short, interesting talks. Unusual feature was a short talk by conductor Karl Krueger on a visit to Sibelius, although talk was a little too abstruse and general, instead of gossipy and personal. Interesting, too, is the fact that Krueger is one of only two American-born conductors to head a major American orchestra. Bron.

COMPOSE YOURSELF
With D'Artega, Jack Lawrence, Kip Hale; Kay Reid, organist
Writer: Bob Cone
Director: Bob LaBour
15 Mins.; Thurs., 9:15 p. m.
Sustaining
WNEW, N. Y.

Here's one way for indies to buck the heavily loaded talent lineups on the networks during the evening hours. Instead of knocking its head against a stone wall in a frontal competitive try, this enterprising indie has pulled a flank maneuver by slicing off a specialized audience segment. "Compose Yourself" is aimed at amateur songwriters, and this sizable fraternity of hopefuls should derive profit and instruction from the program. Show's gimmick is to feature compositions by unknown tunesmiths in a professional performance with free advice thrown in by D'Artega, program regular, and a w.k. guest lyricist.

Format as followed on the preem session (9) was simple and neat. D'Artega and guest Jack Lawrence joined in some polite mutual admiration for each other's work, which served as a springboard for a couple of plattered tunes from their backfile of hits. Final portion of the show was devoted to an amateur cleffing team selected from a pre-program mail response. One member of the team rendered their number in its rough, initial version, following which D'Artega and Lawrence made some critical suggestions. As a windup, vocalist Kip Hale delivered the same number, slightly polished up, in excellent style.

Although general interest may be limited, show will garner a following, which, though moderately sized, will be highly attentive. Herm.

55 WITH KEPLINGER
With Dick Keplinger, Loyal Lamont, Len Beardsley
55 Mins.; 12 to 12:55 p.m., Mon. thru Friday
Participating
KXA, Seattle

Dick Keplinger, former head of news and special events at KOMO-KJR, now freelancing after army service, has put together a good show with the materials at hand, fashioning an interesting and smartly routined show which uses records for musical breaks.

The efforts of Keplinger, however, with Loyal Lamont adding the feminine touch, is what makes the show listenable. Long one of Seattle's top radio names, Keplinger has created a format that uses all the old-and-tried routines plus some new ones that will cause many Seattleites to tune to KXA at noon time. Each program has a news section, "Washington Predicts," which is a smartly worded dispatch from the national capital, using showmanly sense to pick out items that will appeal and that won't be overdone on usual newscasts.

There is also a topic of the day, and Dick and Miss Lamont use the phone to get comments from local people. This, together with the daily feature "Cloud 55," in which Keplinger gets up on the cloud and comments on the doings of Seattle people, and the use of a guest on each program are done with a zest and tact that builds goodwill—and listeners.

Len Beardsley handles the announcing chores in his usual first-rate manner. Reed.

Jolson, Crosby Parlay

Crosby and Jolson read like a good combination and sounded as well spinning on Philco's half-hour platter last week (15). No question that it was among the top, and maybe the best, shows Crosby has done for his new sponsor. The program was good principally because the cross-fire between the pair stood up, for it was a cinch that with these two guys there wasn't going to be much wrong with the singing. The comedy premise was a switchback to a dressing room with neophyte Crosby calling on the star, Jolson, to try out. Of course, they had to be a little careful just how early they keyed the sequence in order to skip having to blow out the footlights. But the comedy writing job stood up and had a good tag of Jolson telling Crosby that if Paramount does "The Crosby Story" he'll be glad to do for him what he did for Larry Parks. Previously they had teamed on "April Showers," "Rosie," "The One I Love Belongs to Somebody Else" and Jolson had whipped across "Swanee" alone in Hit Parade tempo, with that dynamic orchestra which guarantees to get him out of any jam—and does. He was in no difficulty here, although the repeat on his very familiar standard tunes was sufficient to hint that Jolson might shuffle the deck and thumb through in search of a couple of not so familiar songs. For instance, what's become of "Rum-Tum-Tiddle," and there are surely others. Perhaps a surprise part of the broadcast was that when Crosby and Jolson were taking turns splitting a chorus it wasn't always easy to distinguish who was singing, especially in the lower register. A singing commercial by both also was evidently funnier in the studio than over the air as it came through not as the pause that refreshes. Yet the combination can obviously stand a repeat anytime. Most everybody thought this would be a good one. T'was.

OFFICIAL DETECTIVE

15 Mins.; Sun., 8:45 p.m.

WOR-MBS, N. Y.

This session of crime-busting meller-drama packs more than a normal quota of bang-bang stuff. Swiftly paced with a fortissimo accent on violence and underworld jargon, this dramat series is due to garner a heavy share of the pulp fiction addicts. Despite its crime-doesn't-pay tag, program is typical of that aspect of radio which invites finger-pointing from social reformers.

Story on the preem session (19) revolved around the tracking down of a couple of trigger-happy hoodlums. Within the first couple of minutes, two killings were reenacted with a wincing realism. Rest of the show was devoted to detective work. Scripting was racy and gripping while the thespers did persuasive jobs. Herm.

Follow-up Comment

"Of Men and Books," CBS' weekly book review program, had William L. Shirer last Saturday (18) taking over the spot left vacant by the departure of John Mason Brown as the show's regular conductor. Other CBS staff members and guest critics will fill in from week to week. Shirer ushered in the new format auspiciously with his discussion of the book, "Austrian Requiem," by Kurt von Schuschnigg. Shirer brought his first-hand knowledge of the Austrian debacle into play as he gave a politically harsh, but personally sympathetic estimate of the book's author, the former Austrian Chancellor. The latter's memoirs were subject to a lucid exposition in Shirer's typical dry, understated style. It was part personal reminiscence, past history, part literary criticism, but all of it was excellent talk on a high intellectual level.

Mutual's handling of the Georgia gubernatorial squabble last Thursday (16) night, when for the first time both of the state's "governors" were on the air together, made for smart actuality broadcasting.

Playing fair to both sides, Herman Talmadge as well as Ellis Arnall were introed on the air, as "Governor." Talmadge spoke from the Executive Mansion, while Arnall had to go to a WATL studio to do his stuff. But heard that way in a debate—in which Arnall called Talmadge a "pretender," "usurper," and "impostor," while Talmadge made an epithet of comparing Arnall to Father Divine—the remote made for exciting radio direct from a scene of history-in-the-making.

CBS' new Saturday ayem show is tied in with the Adventurers Club of Chicago, a real organization with a membership roster including many famous explorers, anthropologists, daredevils of various kind, etc. On its second time out last Saturday (18), the stanza was on the noisy, daredevil side, tailored too snugly to the listener who is (a) male, (b) of no higher than high-school age. Within those limitations, the job done was okay. But the sponsor ought to know what he's doing. Maybe that would sell pen and ink to the kids.

Story on this ride concerned Major Speed Chandler who helped train airmen and parachute jumpers during the war. But except for a mere mention of that fact at the end, the story as it is developed showed Chandler circa 1919-20 developing from a daring young automobile racer to a professional auto-plane stunt man. It was fast, loud, and boyishly suspenseful stuff, with payoff scenes in the tradition of films full of slugfests.

The commercials were well handled, also being tailored to the youth group. Cars.

FILMS UNDER FIRE
With Robert MacDonald, Dorothy Kilgallen, Miriam Howell, Fifi Starr, Troup Mathews, Robert Lubar, Alberta Saletan
Producer-director: Fifi Starr
30 Mins.; Sundays, 5 p.m.
Sustaining
WINS, N. Y.

A picture which has had nothing but easy going from critics and public alike since its first screening, took instead a prize going-over on this premiere of "Films Under Fire." With a couple of veterans leading in the critical marksmanship, Samuel Goldwyn's "Best Years of Our Lives" came under fire and emerged with a decided list. This program promises to be a lively addition to the local indie lineup.

Present on the opener in her capacity as film critic for Modern Screen was Dorothy Kilgallen, together with Goldwyn rep Miriam Howell, Robert MacDonald, war vet and novelist and Troup Mathews, veterans' administrator at Columbia University. Two others, Robert Lubar, Time Mag editor, and housewife Alberta Saletan, were present as people who hadn't seen the film and judge whether it's worth seeing from the discussion.

Entire panel pitched in with a vengeance from the outset, and clearly demonstrated the film's femme appeal when the two gals on the show stoutly came to its defense while the two vets—and these guys were far above the average service dischargees—took it apart at the seams.

Chief fault found by the vets, and one of them was disabled, was the film's dependence upon the sailor with no hands, for natural audience sympathy without tackling the problem in an honest, forthright manner: i.e., showing him trying to take his place in society with a job instead of living on pension. They called it "a glossy, well-done Hollywood package" that paled next to something like "Brief Encounter." Another squawk was Frederic March's emergence from "the never-never land of service experience" as a first sergeant who got soft-hearted. Consensus was that there ain't no such animal.

Program provided an interesting half-hour, disturbed only occasionally as the two gals attempted to talk at once. Two-person jury decided from the discussion that the film had a synthetic quality and was highly contrived, but they'd like to see it out of curiosity. Tomm.

THE ALAN McPAIGE TRIO
With Judith Arlen, Connie Soloynas, announcer, Ken Joseph
Writer: Sol Fleer
Producer-Director: Martin Fleer
25 Mins., Saturdays, 5:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WNYC, N. Y.

This is an unarresting but pleasant half hour of music and occasional comment by guest newspaper people. McPaige trio is a quite normal cocktail unit, transposed from some of the smaller boites around town to the WNYC studio, and while the tune styling is sometimes startlingly unoriginal, it makes for easy listening.

Group opened the show caught with Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite," then introed Connie Soloynas, assistant to Danton Walker, N. Y. Daily News columnist. His appearance was brief, and the program went on about its business, serving up guest singer Judith Arlen who did a workmanlike job on "Where Or When" and "September Song."

McPaige Trio finished up with a medley of "Espana Cana," "Linda Mujer" and "Amor." So-called critic's guest shot here was to little avail, since he said practically nothing. The music was okay. Tomm.

THE WORLD'S A STAGE
Writer-Producer: Dick Redmond
25 Mins.; Sun., 2:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WHP, Harrisburg

Dick Redmond, program director of WHP, who, with an able assist from Mira Yanofsky (now scripting in New York), made a notable wartime homefront programming contribution, is still an enterprising guy, as reflected in this new series of Sunday afternoon shows.

Borrowing from Shakespeare, he titles the new series "The World's a Stage" and he dedicates it to show people throughout the world, with the overall theme reflecting how the entertainment industry can make a vital contribution toward securing the friendship of the peoples of the world. The aims are lofty and, despite the limited facilities of the Harrisburg station which necessitates transcribing the various portions of the show in advance, Redmond achieves an unmistakable flavor and bigtime aura in this ambitious production. It's probably the first show of its type and, transferred to network auspices with a live programming format, could well add up to something of importance.

With a running commentary by Redmond and supplementary announcing by Harry Hinkley, the show is tied together by the thematic "No Business Like Show Business" Berlin tune, with pickups from New York, Hollywood, London, Paris, etc. It's as fresh and alive as tomorrow's drama pages, with a Jolson Cavalcade off the Columbia Pictures sound-track in Hollywood, a capsule review of the 1946 London legit season by WHP's own on-the-spot correspondent (borrowed from the London Sunday Observer); a Redmond interview with Gregory Peck as a curtain-lifter for his "Duel in the Sun" and "Yearlings" dual roles highlighting the initial stanza.

And for the second in the series (12) Redmond built the show around VARIETY's 41st anni edition, with a transcribed flashback to the then-current Broadway shows when VARIETY made its first appearance, with a then-and-now capsule wrap-up of the original "Red Mill" of 41 years ago and the present Broadway version.

It's the type of show that has a universal appeal. On the first two programs Redmond dovetailed the various segments to achieve a smooth, fast-moving pace. And he's given it full production values. Rose.

DESIGN FOR GRAND LIVING
With Emmitte Ward, K. Bert Sloan, Fred Gibbons, Frank Babcock, Virginia King, Steve Wilhelm
15 Mins.; Mon.-Wed.-Fri., 9:15 a.m.
GULF BREWING CO.
KTSA, San Antonio

From the Houston studios of the Lone Star Chain comes this opus which is transcribed for local presentation. It promises to be a delightful quarter-hour interlude of music, with an audience participation angle which may attract the listener mail. It's an informal party aimed at the women and should sell some of that Grand Prize Beer which the sponsor has to offer.

Newcomers to the southwest radio lanes are Frank Babcock, who is m.c. of the airing, and Virginia King, former network dramatic actress, who acts as a perfect foil to Babcock. Miss King is also heard in a bit of inspirational talk at the close of each program which neatly wraps it up. Babcock has a pleasant voice and keeps the program moving along.

Music is furnished by K. Bert Sloan at the piano and Fred Gibbons at the organ. Duo is heard in the theme, which approximately enough is "Oh What a Beautiful Morning," in a solo spot together in "Always," and as background to the songs of Emmitte Ward. Latter has a pleasing voice.

Steve Wilhelm, commentator on another Grand Prize airing, was guest on the opus caught and spoke of his new book which came about from his broadcasts titled "Texas—Today and Yesterday," stories of Texas and its heroes.

Commercials are easy to take. Program shows good production and should appeal to women who do the shopping. Andy.

TOWN CRIER
With Bob Snyder
STANDARD FURNITURE CO.
15 Mins.; Mon. to Fri., 5:45 p.m.
WTRY, Troy
(Goldman & Walter)

Program, shifting from noon to late evening spot in WTRY's transfer of affiliation from ABC to WOKO, has probably picked up new listeners. Whether format—straight news, announcements of events by church groups, civic organizations and fraternal organizations, briefs on births, engagements and marriages—is better designed for a predominantly feminine listening audience, remains a question. The interviews pack more meat for general dialing.

The "personals," long a feature of newspapers, constitute a new phase of area broadcasting. These and the other announcements build goodwill for the sponsor and the station. Interviews also have recently improved. Chief fault here is a lack of sufficient adlib phrases. Bob Snyder sounds much better in adopting a soft, friendly tone than when he "boo ." Advertising tends to persistency. Jaco.

14th ANNUAL

VARIETY

SURVEY OF

SHOWMANAGEMENT

It's SHOWMANAGEMENT Time.

For the 14th year, VARIETY is calling the roll of North American radio to single out for recognition the stations that led the way in Year II of the Atomic Age.

We want to make sure that every station in the U. S. and Canada has ample time to enter its bid. So in addition to this announcement we are also contacting you directly. Closing date for entries is February 22.

Variety wants to know your station's outstanding achievements in 1946.

We want to know how stations met the first full year of peace. Was your station's operation patterned to reflect the economic conflicts of your community, including labor-management relations? Did you brief your audience on the menace of an atom not harnessed for the good of mankind? How effectively did you explore the problems of peace?

But we also want to know of any new ideas in programming, station promotion and commercial management that popped up in '46. We want to know the story of those stations that came up fast, stealing listeners, commercials and publicity from oldtime leaders.

And we want to know how the oldtime leaders retained their leadership.

So tell all. But make it short, sweet and complete.

Because VARIETY keeps track of radio day-to-day, week-to-week, the year 'round, we believe there is evidence to show that 1946 was not the Black Year of the Blue Book, but a year of accomplishment and progress for the industry.

Your entries will prove it. Send us the facts and let the plaques fall where they may.

Unload WDSU For 800G; Weber Stays

New Orleans, Jan. 21.

WDSU, owned by the Stephens Broadcasting Corp. here, has been sold to New York interests at a price said to be around $800,000.

Fred Weber, manager and part owner of WDSU, confirmed the deal Friday (17). He said that E. A. Stephens of New Orleans and H. G. Wall of Scottsdale, Ariz., his partners, had transferred their interests to William Spiegelburg, an investment banker of New York. He added the sale is subject to approval of the FCC.

Weber said he not only retains his interests but will continue to function as manager of the station.

The Stephens outfit acquired WDSU from Joseph Uhalt in 1943 at a price said to be $250,000.

WDSU is located in Monteleone hotel and operates on 5000 watts. It is affiliated with ABC.

Spa Race Assn. Pays For Basketball Show

Troy, Jan. 21.

Sponsorship of basketball game broadcasts by a horse trotting association is a new wrinkle at WTRY. Saratoga Raceway, which conducts a three-month meeting at the Spa during the summer and fall, is now footing the bill for weekly play-by-plays of Troy American professional basketball league club games at the State Armory.

Power Bid Proves WNYC to Stay Put

The status of New York City's municipally-owned indie, WNYC, came to the forefront again last week, when Mayor William O'Dwyer authorized the station's program director, Seymour N. Siegel, to apply to the FCC for a permit to raise the outlet's power from 1,000 watts to 5,000.

The Mayor's step was seen as a move to continue WNYC in business, rather than attempt to sell it down the river, as some N. Y. politicians had insisted. But the new FCC application, which is going to be filed before the Feb. 7 freeze deadline set by the commission, also sparked further speculation on what the Mayor intends to do about filling the station director vacancy.

Since Jan. 1, 1946, when Morris Novik quit the directorship, exiting with his boss, former Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, Siegel has been acting as chief but actually getting the lower salary and civil service status of program director.

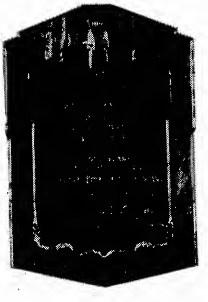
Several months ago O'Dwyer was known to be all set to name a new director. He had picked WLIB's (N.Y.) news chief, Clifford J. Evans, for the job. O'Dwyer's choice of Evans was a purely personal one.

Evans, however, never got the job, and the directorship is still officially vacant. The belief, however, that O'Dwyer is again ready to wash his hands of WNYC was negated by his authorization for the power application. Selling the station now would be out of the question, since there's little doubt that the FCC, when the wattage hearing occurs, would inquire into whether the city wanted the 5,000w for its own use or for the use of a possible purchaser of WNYC.

JAN AUGUST'S MBS SHOW

Jan August, pianist, who has been riding high in jukeboxes as a result of his recording of "Misirlou," has been signed to head a Mutual show, starting Feb. 26, for Revere Cameras. Layout is slotted for 15 minutes, starting 5:45 p.m.

August will be backed by a trio and will have guest femme vocalists.



WWJ, the first radio station in the nation, proudly acknowledges this award from NBC, the nation's first radio network, commemorating an affiliation of twenty years' standing. It marks another milestone in the uninterrupted leadership achieved by these two pioneers, whose "teaming of talents" has proved so enjoyable to WWJ's great listening audience and so productive for both WWJ and NBC advertisers.

Let Listeners Decide What to Hear, When, Sez KMBC's Anti-Horror Church

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

The KMBC policy of transcribing the more blood-laden CBS whodunits and playing them back in late evening hours—when juvenile listeners are tucked away for the night—is in the best interests of radio, says Arthur B. Church, station prexy.

"That goes for the agencies and the sponsors," Church said in rebuttal to agency squawks that KMBC is using the kids as a front for its own programming policies.

The tag of "commercialism" really belongs to the nets, he said, and the American home is being sacrificed for higher Hoopers without regard for public welfare.

The station cites affidavits in defense of its position from Dr. Herold C. Hunt, Kansas City superintendent of schools, the Council of Parents and Teachers, the Insurance Women of Kansas City, and several other women's, civic and fraternal organizations. These groups claim the later hours more suited to the thriller shows, as well as eliminating the "horror" effect on juves.

As one way out for the commitment-laden nets, Church suggested a comprehensive survey to find out what listeners really want aired during the early evening hours. Hooperatings being okay as far as they go, but applying only to what is available and not to what might be desirable.

"Let's get it straight about who's picking on whom," was Church's comeback re the agencies "Who-Ya-Kiddin'" gripe. It's the listeners' pulse that counts, and out here it's been clearly indicated what the dial owners want.

What, No Indians?

The Dancer, Fitzgerald & Sample squawk that the late hour for its "Ellery Queen" show, now cancelled on KMBC, corresponds to a 2 a.m. hour in New York is strictly in line with the easterners conception of Indian country west of the Hudson, Church said.

KMBC has six such shows allotted on late evening hours, and is in no mood to change its policy, Church indicated.

He also denied that local sponsors are being favored with the spots purposely vacated by the rebroadcast policy. On this stand, Church said KMBC is solid across the board for CBS from 7 to 9 nightly, except for 25 minutes on Fridays taken by the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra. The 9:30 and 9:45 spots nightly have been reserved for 10 years for news and public service broadcasts, both on sustaining basis.

The great white fathers of radio long ago decided that broadcasting should be operated in the public interest, convenience and necessity, Church said. They put the finger of responsibility on the individual broadcaster and not on the sponsor or net.

It's overlooked, he pointed out, that the policy is costing the station money by loss of valued biz from DFS, but that the paddling upstream against the established radio current is required operating procedure under the course indicated by expressive local listener groups.

NBC's 'Twenty Club'

NBC prexy Niles Trammell is slated to honor nine more web affiliates with plaques marking their 20th anni with NBC at a dinner in N. Y. tomorrow (Thursday). Stations include WGY, Schenectady; WBZ-WBZA, Boston and Springfield; KDKA, Pittsburgh; WSM, Nashville; WSB, Atlanta; WMC, Memphis; KVOO, Tulsa; WFAA, Dallas, and KYW, Philadelphia.

Program honoring those nine stations, plus six other affiliates who received plaques late last year, will be aired over NBC tomorrow from 6:15-6:45 p.m. Titled "Twentieth Anniversary Salute," the show will be directed by Jack Hill and will include solos by Elaine Malbin, Margery Mayer, Thomas Hayward and Jack Kilty.

Code-Wary NAB Watches Hughes Fight Vs. MPA

Washington, Jan. 21.

Howard Hughes' court challenge of the code of the Motion Picture Assn. on anti-trust grounds is being closely watched by the National Assn. of Broadcasters which, backed by a majority of its board of directors, is still hot after a new Standards of Practice for radio—which like the film code may prescribe standards of ethics and good taste for broadcasters and invoke sanctions against offenders.

NAB's prexy Justin Miller, to avert any court challenge of a radio code with teeth in it, has insisted that it be cleared step by step with the Justice Dept. and FCC in advance of its acceptance by the NAB membership. This cautious policy is understood to be behind the official silence of NAB's board on the subject at its San Francisco meeting—despite the fact that in Chi the board members won the right to promulgate new standards for later acceptance by the NAB membership.

NAB lawyers meanwhile are combing the codes of the film, ice, coal and other industries, it was understood. The MPA code is of particular interest to radio at this time in view of the Justice Dept.'s alleged interest in Hughes' charges that MPA violated the anti-trust law in lifting the code seal of approval from his "The Outlaw."

A tentative code recommendation is expected from Miller when the standards of practice committee meets next month either in Washington or New York. No code will be given final clearance by that committee, however, until Asst. Attorney General Wendell Berge and FCC Chairman Charles R. Denny give it their unofficial stamp of approval. Then NAB's board will be circulated for approval of any set of rules that may come out of the code sessions.

Hartford Group Also Horrified by Horror

Hartford, Jan. 21.

The Hartford Juvenile Commission has been shopping around to find a leader in a campaign to eliminate murder and crime radio stories that have a "demoralizing effect on the immature mind." In its annual report to the Common Council, the civic body deplores the "ever increasing number of radio programs featuring stories of crime and murder."

The report of the commission states that it is "deeply concerned over the effect on juveniles," of such radio shows, especially those broadcast during the early evening hours. Continues the report: "This is a problem which must necessarily be met an a nationwide basis to accomplish any positive results, for where it is possible to tune in a wide range of stations, local censorship would scarcely be sufficient."

PEARSON-ALLEN TEAM ASKS HEARST SUBPEONA

Washington, Jan. 21.

Counsel for newsmen Drew Pearson and Bob Allen have requested FCC to subpoena 83-year-old William Randolph Hearst to testify why he should be permitted to retain radio station WBAL, Baltimore, it was learned this week.

Hearing on renewal license of WBAL and the competing bid of Pearson and Allen for WBAL facilities is slated to open Feb. 24 in Washington.

Cohn & Marks, lawyers for Pearson and Allen, earlier asked FCC if it intended to call Hearst to the stand. Lawyers were told that, if they felt his presence was necessary, to request a subpoena.

Wile to Celanese Acct.

Celanese Corp. which bowed out of bigtime radio last summer when it cancelled its $8,000-a-week "Great Moments in Music" package, is coming back to the air with a show which may not be high-budget talentwise but will cost heavily in time.

New show is expected to be a five-day-a-week daytimer, probably along the lines of the outfit's "Fashions of Fabric" transcribed show which it still airs on some southern stations.

Move was seen as clinched last week when Young & Rubicam agency gave an extra job to Fred Wile, Jr. Latter's additional title is program manager of Celanese account.

'Spring Again' Legiter Gets Radio Packaging

A new radio series based on the Broadway legit comedy success, "Spring Again," is now making agency rounds. Show, packaged by Daniel S. Tuthill, is a half-hour family comedy titled "Home, Sweet, Home," with each weekly episode complete. Interesting angle is the fact that the play's co-author, Isabel Leighton, is listed as a co-producer and co-director on the radio series, and will play a prominent role in the show as well.

"Spring Again," authored by Bertram Block and Miss Leighton, starred C. Aubrey Smith and Grace George, and played a full season on Broadway in 1941 before going on tour. It also won a couple of dramatic prizes. Radio series will use name players, if budget permits. Earl Kennedy is listed as co-producer-director on the series.

Harold Azine to WTOP

Washington, Jan. 21.

Harold Azine, former Marine combat correspondent, has joined the staff of CBS-WTOP as producer-director with his first assignment producing WTOP's local daytime serial "Janice Grey."

Before the war Azine was continuity-production manager at WBAL, Baltimore, and earlier handled publicity and production at WLS, Chicago.

FCC Slaps Quality Network Wrist But Goes Easy on Politico Stints

Washington, Jan. 21.

The FCC yesterday (20) stopped short of yanking the licenses of four Texas Quality Network stations charged with conspiring to limit use of their facilities for political broadcasts, but issued a sermon on future handling of political stints by all broadcasters. Stations on the mat were WOAI, San Antonio; WFAA, Dallas; WBAP, Ft. Worth, and KPRC, Houston.

At issue was a protest filed last July by Homer P. Rainey, unsuccessful candidate for governor of Texas, who claimed the stations of the regional net had "deliberately conspired" to limit political broadcasts with an eye to placing him at a disadvantage in reaching the public. Three of the four stations own newspapers in Texas and had, Rainey charged, opposed his candidacy in their editorial columns while denying him use of more than 30 minutes of radio time between his certification and the primary elections.

FCC ruled that stations had not violated the Communications Act which requires a station to give equal time to all candidates. However, they had not served public interest, as FCC sees it, by agreeing well in advance of the Texas primary campaign how much time would be allotted gubernatorial candidates and by jointly deciding on the 30-minute limit.

FCC said it was letting the stations off easy because they had agreed in the future to gear the radio time given in accordance with public interest in the particular campaign. They also agreed to make such decisions independently of other stations in the net.

MBS' 'Dr. Graham'

A new show to be put on in co-operation between the Mutual network and the American Medical Assn. will bow Feb. 3 when MBS puts on "Dr. Graham, M.D."

Show, being slotted in the Monday 10:30 p.m. time, will be scripted by Raphael Hayes and directed by Cyril Armbrister. Cast will include Bob Griffin, Bryna Raeburn, Peggy Stanley, Mack Twamley and Mike Fitzmorris, with music handled by Eugene Perazza.

Gunzendorfer Gets Top Berth in KROW Overhaul; Bell as Asst.

San Francisco, Jan. 21.

Appointment of Wilton Gunzendorfer as gen. mgr. of KROW, Oakland-San Francisco, has been announced by Sheldon F. Sackett, president of station. Sackett concurrently announced the designation of Richard C. D. Bell as assistant to Gunzendorfer, and Russ Coughlan as program director for KROW.

Complete operation authority and sales management have been placed in the hands of Gunzendorfer. Prior to coming to KROW, Gunzendorfer was commercial and station manager at KSFO, in Frisco, and before that was for six years general manager of KSRO at Santa Rosa, Cal. He has handled numerous consultant tasks in radio and presently is a member of the radio faculty of the extension service of the Univ. of California.

UNITED JEWISH APPEAL IN BIG RADIO SPLURGE

For the first time in its history, the United Jewish Appeal, one of the largest fund raising outfits in the country—with a 1947 quota calling for $170,000,000—has entered radio in a serious way.

Scripter-director Milton Robertson, author of "Ballad for FDR," has been named national radio director for the UJA. The organization, which raises funds for the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, United Jewish Appeal, and National Refugee Service, has dozens of w.k. showbiz people among its officers and executive committee members. Eddie Cantor is chairman of the national campaign council which is going out after the $170,000,000.

Robertson continues as consulting director for the Peoples Radio Foundation and the National Maritime Union, both of which are among the applicants for FM licenses in New York. However, he will devote his time principally, at least during the drive, to the UJA.

Special live shows on nets as well as on local stations around the country, platters that will make the circuit through various regions where the campaign gets into high gear, spots, and scripted packages are among the radio plans in the making for the UJA drive.

At the same time, the New York city division of the campaign—which is out for a $65,000,000 quota as part of the national setup — has named Riki Englander as radio director.

St. Louis—Walter K. Rott has been named publicity director of KMOX, CBS outlet. A vet of World War II and a former newspaperman, Rott was last attached to the Midwestern Area office of the American Red Cross' publicity staff.

Let's stop short-changing radio!

Case #53

—one of a series to show the men who build programs, and who buy and sell time, how sound radio research is revealing new values of the medium—and new opportunities in its use.

—here's one for your book! Let's call it—

"The Baffling Case of the Unclaimed Listeners"

Let's go fishing for facts.

Here's the first—and it's a sad, strange fact indeed—radio, every day, is throwing away millions of listeners.

Don't throw 'em away. They cost a lot of money. And these listeners you throw away are like listeners you count. They can, and do, buy your products. Who are they?

Well, let's find 'em and count 'em. Many of the—men who build programs, buy programs, sell programs

continue by force of habit to measure the audience of programs only by the one yardstick of Average (or "Coincidental") Audience. Well, let's take this measurement apart. If we do, we'll see it's like a fishing net that's got lots of holes in it through which your listeners are continually escaping.

The radio audience is not fixed for the entire duration of a program. Some people tune in early; others tune in late; and still others tune out before the end of the program. But these part-time listeners hear commercials, gain impressions, and buy the products. Figure 1, which uses 10 homes to illustrate this principle, shows what happens to these part-time listeners when measured in terms of Average ("Coincidental") Audience rating.

The Average Audience during each minute of the program is 8—

you can't help yourself, that is the way Average (or "Coincidental") Audience works.

We now reach the solution of this baffling case. A total of 10 different families actually tuned to the program. We've found 'em; now let's count 'em.

Figure 2 shows the Average (or "Coincidental") Audience and the Total Audience for programs of varying duration. While the number of unclaimed listeners varies widely from program to program the average 15-minute program has a Total Audience 30% higher than its Average (or "Coincidental") Audience. And for the typical 30-minute program, we have been even more wasteful, since the Total Audience is 41% higher than the Average (or "Coincidental") Audience.

Thus the seller of radio handicaps his own sales efforts; the work of the radio producer stands in an unfavorable light; and the buyer of radio underestimates the true value of his purchase—in addition to misleading himself as to the relative value of various programs.

The baffling case of the unclaimed listeners proves not so baffling after all. We found 'em, and now we've counted 'em. And we can keep them in our net if we use the yardstick of Total Audience instead of this short-changing measurement of Average (or "Coincidental") Audience.

Only NRI service can give you this and many other accurate measurements of the true value of radio. Our experienced service executives are ready to help you find and use the true force of radio.

AFRA's National Board Emphasizes Faith in Heller's Duties as Union Exec

The national board of the American Federation of Radio Artists at a meeting in New York last Friday (17) night, unanimously adopted a resolution expressing complete affirmation of faith and trust in the leadership of George Heller as national executive and New York exec secretary.

The board issued the following statement:

"In the Jan. 15 issue of VARIETY, certain statements were made concerning George Heller and the administration of his duties, particularly during the recent contract negotiations with the industry. This article contained gross errors of fact and baseless personal conclusions. We feel a disservice has been done to understanding between management and labor in the industry.

"The article stated that George Heller has not kept his 'promise to divorce himself from his doubling in brass as executive chief of both the national and New York chapter offices.' This statement is completely false, and since it is the only one of the several allegations concerning Mr. Heller which can be related to fact instead of your reporter's opinion, it can be unequivocally refuted. In May, 1946, Mr. Heller indicated his wish due to the pressure of business to be relieved of one of the two jobs. But AFRA, both nationally and locally, needed him. By resolution of the national board, on Aug. 24, 1946, he was requested, because of his loyal service and unique skills, to continue in both positions for at least six months. Mr. Heller agreed to this request. Under this agreement, he continued to serve, and is still serving as both national and local officer. At no time has he broken any promise.

"In AFRA, the executive secretary serves as the exponent of policies democratically evolved by the membership. In this capacity, George Heller's services have been invaluable. The national negotiators — George Heller, Raymond Jones, Claude McCue—entered the negotiations with mandates which were the product of membership meetings in the key cities, worked through local caucus, and finally resolved at the national convention in Los Angeles in late August, 1946. They consulted constantly with AFRA members in all these key cities who sat in on negotiations. When the deadlock occurred over the 'unfair stations clause,' the negotiators came back to the membership to report. In a series of meetings across the country, Mr. Heller was instructed, by overwhelming vote, to maintain AFRA's position. The membership then voted strike power to the national board.

"Far from 'bluffing,' as your article alleges, AFRA was ready, able and determined to strike if necessary. The intricate picket assignment boards worked out by volunteer AFRA members and now gathering dust in the AFRA offices—together with a forest of unused picket signs—are one tangible proof that 'that kind of policy threatening strike' was not 'merely a tactic' but was a firm resolve of the membership dictated by them to Mr. Heller.

"This board, speaking for the AFRA membership, vigorously denies your allegations of uncertainty or division concerning Mr. Heller's 'type of leadership.' We warmly hope that he will find the resources to continue serving the membership as splendidly as he has in the past."

AFRA Pact

Barring any last-minute snafus, final contracts between the American Federation of Radio Artists and the four networks were scheduled for signaturing yesterday (Tuesday) at a joint confab at CBS headquarters in New York. However, at the last minute the signaturing was put off for a day or two to permit for simultaneous actions in N. Y., Chi. and L. A.

The KFI situation on the Coast has been one of the barriers holding up final pacting, but since it involves only a matter of a couple of thousand dollars, it was not expected to be a serious stumbling block on reaching a final okay.

Seattle AFRA Strike Postponed as Central Council Enters Talks

Seattle, Jan. 21.

Threatened strike of American Federation of Radio Artists at three network stations here has been postponed until Jan. 23, after the union's request for strike sanction from the Seattle Central Labor Council was acted upon. The Council called in station representatives, and, after hearing a report, appointed a three-man committee to resume negotiations with the stations.

The committee is made up of Carbon Weber, Musicians' Union; James McNabb, Motion Picture Operators' Union; and Charles W. Doyle, secretary of the Labor Council.

AFRA members here, 200 strong, and now including writers, have been negotiating with the three stations, KIRO (CBS), KJR (ABC), and KOMO (NBC), since Nov. 14. Contract, which expired Dec. 31, still governs pay and working conditions on a temporary basis. Workers are asking for a raise to $85 weekly base pay, increase n commercial fees and improvement of working conditions. So far, stations have offered no "substantial" settlement, according to Cliff Hansen, local president, although it is indicated that only one station is holding out.

CBS—Tele

Harry M. Plotkin, FCC's asst. general counsel, and Curtis B. Plummer, the commission's chief tele engineer. Demonstration constituted a fill-in for the quartet on the CBS show, which they missed when the web aired it for other FCC members, Dec. 16.

Commission requested CBS to demonstrate its color tele when hearings on the CBS request resume at the federal courthouse, N. Y., next Monday (27) in order to have the web's show inserted in the official record. Since the question involves comparing one system with others, the FCC also invited any others interested to demonstrate for the record. RCA has accepted and will demonstrate its all-electronic method at Princeton, N. J., Wednesday (29). Hearings will then resume in Washington Feb. 10, and Denny hopes to conclude all testimony then. He declined to predict how soon after that a decision could be expected on whether CBS is to be granted its request to set commercial standards now, based on its sequential method.

Denny declared announcement of the remaining four N. Y. tele grants would be made before the end of February, and possibly within the next two weeks. Color question, he said, doesn't enter into the FCC's delay in making tele station grants; time lag between applications and grants has arisen because the FCC, with 1,000 applications currently on its hands, is overworked. There's a current backlog of about 20 applications yet to be acted on, Denny said, adding he hoped to keep the number down that low in 1947.

COMMUNITY FM SLOTS FENCED IN BIG TOWNS

Washington, Jan. 21.

A "lay away" plan for Class A (community-sized) FM channels in the areas adjacent to New York City, Chicago, Boston and Los Angeles, was announced by FCC yesterday (20).

Commission said heavy demand for the pint-sized FM slots around these big cities made it desirable to save some of the channels for later bidders. Since demand is concentrated around the desirable markets, the commission explained that the reservation plan would probably hit only future bids for "community" operation around the four cities. The policy, FCC said, should not affect any application already on file.

Commission will assign Class A stations in any community under the 297-FM channel position, but defer action on others. This reservation plan is similar to one put in effect on the more desirable metropolitan-type FM channels last summer.

Rookie Solon, Hep In Radio, Scans Law Mill

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Carl M. D'Aquila, Hibbing, Minn., rookie state representative, has yet to make his first speech in the state capitol but is airing his views via radio.

D'Aquila was former sportscaster for WMFG, Hibbing, and operator of a weekly newspaper before entering the Army. On election to state legislature, however, he quickly got back into radio.

He is doing a 15-minute broadcast Tuesdays and Thursdays over WDGY. Minneapolis, from the capitol rotunda. Show is called "Inside the Legislature," purports to be non-partisan, and uses fellow-legislators in discussion of controversial issues.

Breakfast in Cincy

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.

Tom Breneman's "Breakfast in Hollywood" is originating here three days this week, tomorrow (Wednesday), Thursday and Friday. On Saturday, Breneman will take his gang to a Procter & Gamble profit-sharing party for employees.

"Breakfast" is being aired from the 2,500-seat Taft Auditorium here for benefit of March of Dimes, with all seats, at $1.25, sold out. Gov. Thomas Herbert coming in Thursday to salute Breneman as part of the March of Dimes bally.

without suspecting that something was amiss.

Easily the top performer during her brief tenure before the cameras was Anne Burr, ex of "Hasty Heart," "Native Son" and others. Her facial expressions and bits of business were effective and smooth. Robert Bolger was more mercurial, good at times and only fair at others, but holding to a good level. Bad lines hampered. Others i: the cast, especially Maxin Stewart as the telephone operator, were good.

Steve Marvin's production of the show had pace enough, but once again bad vehicle was in evidence. Dramatic touches and close-ups in the camera work, with Bolger staring straight at the gud, were striking. Set, smacking of Jim McNughton's hand, was best bit of production mounting seen in recent weeks.

VARIETY GIRL
With Vincent Gottschalk, m.c.; Larry Storch, Buddy Hughes & Pal, ABC Honeydreamers, Lowe, Hite and Stanley, 20 "Variety Girl" Candidates
Producer: A. Warren Jones
Director: Kit Carson
30 Mins.; Tues. (14) 9:18 p.m. (CST)
Sustaining
WBKB, Chicago

Thrown together hastily because of a lack of time, this beauty contest and variety acts show is another example which proves the importance of careful planning and rehearsal necessary for top video production.

Focal point of interest centered around picking six gals among 20 femme candidates vying for title of "Miss Variety Girl," winning sextet to appear in finals of Variety Club Annual Ball. Direction was given amateurish treatment, looking every bit like vaudeville of 20 years ago.

Format for this one-set show, consisting of a backdrop and two pillars, emerged as an almost straight vaude bill comprised of four variety acts, contestants coming on stage in bathing suits in groups of six, though singly, between each stint. Camera manipulation was inconsistent, in many instances not concentrating on best points of femmes.

Show teed off with Vincent Gottschalk, former radio announcer, as m.c., appearing nervous at first and not helping matters any by overworking his hands. Brought on first Larry Storch, who gave swell impressions of Cary Grant, Bogart and Frank Morgan. Camera caught his facial maneuverisms well; but here, again, fact is that his hands were often out of camera eye. Following first procession of girls, the ABC Honeydreamers, two gals and three men, sang "Gal in Calico" and "Buttermilk Sky." Camera deviated slightly, using mostly straight-on shots of group. Stage presence appeared stiff, while arrangements were good.

Buddy Hughes & Pal (Pal is a dog) started with routine magic trickery which was difficult to detect visibly. More close-ups would have helped. Second half of act with Hughes doing acrobatic tricks with dog fared better with excellent audience response. Last act was Lowe, Hite & Stanley, who did their familiar pantomime of Andrews Sisters. Probably due to their unusual height ranges, camera was not always able to catch trio together, Hite's head disappearing now and then.

Finale had audience selecting with aid of an applause meter Miss WBKB, she being chosen among group of six contestants picked by judges.

Tele Followup

Fred Astaire "Swing Trot," a slow jive step originated by the dancing star, was unveiled to the public for the first time on the "Saturday Night Revue" show over WCBS-TV (CBS, N.Y.) last Saturday (18). Demonstration was conducted by dancing instructors from the new Astaire dance school, headed up by Ed and Isabel Sims. Astaire himself did not appear on the show.

Following the pattern set by director Paul Belanger in the "Revue" series, last Saturday's show was highly entertaining. Parading across a ski lodge set, excellently designed by Jim McNaughton, a group of professional models showed off the latest winter resort fashions and then joined the Astaire dancers for the terping presentation. About the only thing missing was some kind of descriptive commentary on the dance. Narrator Mary Alan Hokanson described the clothes in okay fashion but came the dance, and there was only the music to be heard, with no outline to tell viewers what was going on.

WNEW's Full Hour of Swing

WNEW, N. Y., is launching a full hour program of swing music in the Saturday 8:35 p.m. slot. Art Ford, conductor of the station's "Milkman's Matinee" show will emcee and initial jam session starting this Saturday (25) is slated to have Billie Holiday, current at the Downbeat; Charlie Shavers, trumpeter with the Tommy Dorsey band; Pete Johnson, boogie pianist at Cafe Society Uptown, and Red Norvo, one of the leading vibe players.

The WNEW house orch under direction of Roy Ross will do the musical background for the swing soloists.

Transcription 'Carpetbaggers' Hurt Wax Biz for Old Established Firms

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Electrical transcription companies are expected to run up the highest mortality ratio ever chalked up by any single segment of the radio industry, during the first six months of 1947. Inspired solely by a get rich quick motive, financed poorly, and handicapped by an utter lack of the know how for selling and distributing their product, the companies have countless advertisers and spot market operators up in arms after defaulting on their commitments.

Primary reason for the precarious condition in the industry is that the e.t. business has been deluged by a host of opportunists. Present companies are in many cases headed by ex producers, press agents and even actors who, though they have been connected with radio for many years, still have practically no knowledge of the selling end of the business. Their original investments come to anywhere from a couple of hundred dollars to several grand depending upon the type of show they intend to foster and then, being limited by this small sum, they must default before enough markets are sold to set up a black ink operation.

Result is that many markets which subscribed for a whole series of disks were stung by the poor quality of later records. Worse still was the predicament in which many found themselves after contracting for a 13, 26 or 39 series—only to be unable to get delivery after the first few records, for the simple reason that the company was out of business or money. For those advertisers who signed up after hearing only an audition record, then went into a big publicity or promotion campaign and never received even a single platter, there is no compensation.

A few stations which did receive platters were still unable to use them because the cuttings were not according to NAB standards and could not be cleared by the station engineers. The dough situation is so close that some transcription peddlers actually have asked for payment in advance for a complete series just to be able to stay in business.

Dismal Reception

All of which is causing a detrimental effect upon the sales of even the old line outfits in the business. Recent treks by some of these into the hinterland of spot markets brought an unexpected reception when just about every station approached, especially along the southern route from California eastward towards Florida, turned stone deaf or else highly belligerent at the audacity of another big time operator coming in to take the home boys. Results were dismal.

To successfully operate, the companies must sell a large number of markets. Inefficient efforts of many new companies, however, can guarantee only a few. Having no money to hire an adequate staff, they can cover only so many towns in person. But even for one man the traveling costs are too high for a long journey of good selling. Consequently, many resort to a sales campaign of circulars and form letters which they mail out while still holding down their regular jobs. The results are very poor, and the stations which do get signed up are too few to support the venture.

No one gainsays the fact that there is a strong potential market with the local advertiser and station showing a real and healthy interest for a good transcription series. Most local stations find it much easier to sell time with a ready made platter show available to find the slot. The advertiser, on the other hand, is always more interested in a show which cannot be duplicated by local talent. He can even get big names and the prestige that goes with them. However, now, there is consternation against the carpet baggers now making the circuit.

Hartford—New Britain Broadcasting Co. has named Bob Martineau to post of manager of WKNB in neighboring New Britain. He succeeds Walter Windsor who has been station manager since station got underway last August.

CREWS TO HEAD JAP CREWS ON TWO NETS

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Albert Crews, Chi NBC production director, has been chosen by the War Dept. to head all U. S. Army and civilian radio in Japan, and will assume duties under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command next month, when he will fly to Tokyo from Chicago.

Crews, whose appointment as a civilian employee is for two years, said his job would be in a supervisory capacity over the equivalent of two networks, one Japanese and one American.

In September, 1945, Crews was granted eight months leave from NBC to establish a radio department at the U. S. Armed Forces Institute at Biarritz, France. He was also one of the founders of the NBC-Northwestern Univ. Summer Radio Institute.

Crews joined the NBC Central Division as a producer-director in 1943, and has authored two books, "Radio Production Directing" and "Professional Radio Writing."

Joe McCarthy Skeds 'Inside Baseball' Disks

Buffalo, Jan. 21.

Joe McCarthy, former baseball manager of the New York Yankees, has signed a contract in Buffalo with the Robert T. Mendelson Productions to do a syndicated transcribed radio sports series dealing with the inside of baseball.

McCarthy, who retired as manager of the Yankees this past year, is presently living on his farm just outside Buffalo.

CHI PINS DOWN BRASS TACK COLLEGE COURSE

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Belief that most college radio courses could be of greater value to all concerned if they would take in more practical aspects instead of relying strictly on the cultural and technique angles has prompted the Chicago Radio Management Club to take a hand in planning a new radio course for Roosevelt College.

Holman Faust, club prexy, feels that schools should teach radio aspirants more about the commercial aspects, taking in agencies, sponsors, and time selling. If this can be accomplished it is felt that future job seekers in radio will meet with more success and will be able to go into more branches of the radio field.

WOKO Purges Hidden Stockholder, Takes Offensive by Power Request

Washington, Jan. 21.

In what may prove to be a successful putsch to remain on the air, radio station WOKO, Albany, N. Y., last week requested the FCC to okay its continued operation "under new management."

In an amended application for license renewal, WOKO principals declared they had bought out a 24% stock interest held by former CBS Vice-President Samuel Pickard for a total of $108,000. The Supreme Court recently upheld an FCC decision to yank WOKO's license for failure to disclose the Pickard ownership over a 12-year period.

At the same time, the petition said the corporation had converted the shares held by manager Harold Smith — who perpetuated the concealment of Pickard's stock before FCC—from voting to "non-voting" status. Smith, though holding only a beneficiary interest in the station, would continue as manager in recognition of his "valuable services" in public service programming of WOKO. Raymond Curtis, a third stockholder, would acquire control of WOKO, pending FCC approval.

Apparently going on the theory that the best defense is offense, WOKO went on to include a demand for a hike in power to 5,000 watts in its bid for license renewal. This was sought to enable it to enlarge its present public service in the Albany area.

In the same petition, the WOKO owners set forth a solution to their joint ownership of WOKO and WABY, Albany, forbidden under the FCC rule against dual holdings in any one town.

The Gannett Newspapers' Press Co. which held stock in WOKO has agreed to swap these for additional stock in WABY, and also to buy shares now held by Raymond Curtis in the latter company. This move would give the Press Co. control of WABY —a step which would also require FCC approval. Harold Smith would retain minority holdings in WABY, but only on a non-voting basis.

Rochester, N. Y.—WHAM adds two new announcers, Ed Little by way of Buffalo, the Army and Erie, and Ross Weller, who was with WSAY before winning a captaincy in Signal Corps. Little has introduced a weekly bowling program, the Bowling Billboard, Saturdays at 6:30 p.m. for quarter-hour including league standings, records, items, personalities and interviews.

U. S. Unwraps DX Punch for Moscow, Russian Lingo Sked Opens Feb. 17

The United States Dept. of State will have an opportunity to use radio as a direct arm of diplomatic discussion when the four-power conference of Foreign Secretaries opens in Moscow in March.

That was apparent this week when it became known that the Dept. of State's long-scheduled shortwave broadcasts in the Russian language have been definitely scheduled to start beaming from New York on Feb. 17.

Thirteen full-time people, and a number on part-time—not one of them from the ranks of radio, but all of them carefully screened for their knowledge of Russian and their acceptability for American loyalty—have been hired for the broadcasts. Only one radioite will be connected with the broadcasts. He is Edward Raquello, former shortwave foreign-language producer for OWI, who will produce the Russian-language shows.

One hour of broadcasting is on the schedule, originating from N.Y. in time to reach Moscow about 9 p.m. Moscow time.

Plan is to use on the shows news from this country, editorials from newspapers, mags and domestic radio commentators, and examples of American culture. However, it was no secret that, should it be deemed necessary, the broadcasts—by their very selectivity—could be used to answer charges that may emanate from Radio Moscow or the Russian government press.

While the plan for the Russian broadcasts was drawn up some months ago, under then Secretary of State James F. Byrnes as chief over William Benton, it's developed that the plans have been okayed by the White House and, it's believed, have been cleared with the new Secretary of State, Gen. George C. Marshall.

ever, Mutual publicized his show heavily on the West Coast, with the result that correspondence has reached Washington seeking to know why Don Lee has stiff-armed the show.

Weiss' role in forcing Ed Kobak's decision to return Close to the air, despite wide scale opposition from liberal groups, and the heavily conservative complexion of most Mutual jobbers, was uncovered in FCC's investigation of the Don Lee net's alleged violation of chain broadcasting regulations, it was understood.

Absentee Owner Absent

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

The FCC this week sought to fathom the problem of Tommy Lee, sole owner of Don Lee Broadcasting System, and the problems he has with his affiliates, and vice versa—some of which the commission thinks are in violation of regulations.

After four days of direct testimony from the Lee side, the presentation of complaining witnesses and cross examination, over which Commissioner Rosel Hyde presided, it was all still pretty much unsolved, if partially explained. The mystery of the recluse Don Lee was clarified without producing him in person, but the FCC failed to lodge specific or direct charges against the net. Instead, the commission presented cumulative evidence in the way of 350 exhibits, composed of letters and documents taken from Don Lee files, purporting to show the frowned-upon Lee business methods of pressuring affiliates. The commission's ace was revealed in the last few minutes of the hearing via an exchange of letters between Lewis Allen Weiss, Lee veepee and g.m., and Carl Haymon, of KMO, Seattle, regarding recalcitrant affiliates.

FCC sought to take excerpts of the following statements: "You may be sure that they (northwest stations) will either carry all of our network commercials this fall or find themselves looking for other network affiliations or buying a new supply of phonograph records," and: "If those bandits of the northwest want rough treatment, they can certainly get it at these headquarters." However, on Lee insistence, the two letters containing the damaging statements were admitted into evidence in their entirety, impression being that other portions would modify or qualify these statements.

Much of the FCC's case is based on KFRE, Fresno. Its owner and manager, respectively J. E. Rodman and P. R. Bartlett, testified to oral pressure wherein Lee sought to monopolize their local time, in and out of option time. FCC's other witness, Melvin Marshall, formerly manager of KYOS, Merced, testified similarly.

Lee attorney, former FCC chief counsel, William Dempsey, and Weiss, frequently turned tables on the opposition, eliciting testimony such as the admission that "we get a lot of good out of our network affiliations" and the statements that such connections are very often the difference between life and death; they not only fill schedules but keep tills tinkling, it was conceded.

St. Louis—J. Soulard Johnson, sales manager for KMOX, local CBS outlet, has been upped to exec. asst. to Wendell Campbell, station manager. He will continue as director of public relations.

Kansas City—Mrs. R. J. Maher has been added to staff of KCMO, ABC outlet, as assistant music librarian. She comes from Chicago, where she was with Reid Murdock.

NAB-FCC

prise our critics. Mr. Berge raises this question, for example: What right have broadcasters to exclude from the air advertising of products which are—in the eyes of the law—perfectly lawful products?

To illustrate, one of our broadcasters recently made the following statement: "The industry should take steps to keep off the air patent medicines advertising which is objectionable, either because of the nature of the commercial copy, or what is more important, the nature of the product. The discriminate advertising of cathartics, pain killers, kidney cures, headache powders, worthless vitamin products, ad nauseaum, on the air is a condition which is a menace to the entire broadcasting industry." But as Mr. Berge's question points out, if these products violate the food and drug act, they should be controlled by it. If they are lawful, then by what right can broadcasters combine to discriminate' against them?

Note: The accent is on the word combine. There appears to be no question but that individual broadcasters can choose among advertisers, but it could conceivably become a combination in restraint of trade if a large part of the radio industry reaches an agreement to exclude certain products from the air.

This point is not made as an excuse for inaction. The problems will be overcome, but we must proceed with care if our objectives are to be attained and, more importantly, maintained.

For just a year now the NAB has been working toward the establishment of a program department, which will administer our Standards of Practice and cooperate with stations in their efforts to improve programming. This department was well along in the planning stage prior to issuance of the Blue Book.

New Clinics

Another project in the same general field has been conducted by the NAB for more than a year. Arthur Stringer, director of special services, has been conducting radio news clinics throughout the United States, in which hundreds of broadcasters have participated. The object has been to improve radio's handling of news, particularly local news. We have ample evidence that, as a result of these meetings, more and more stations are setting up their own staffs to cover local news, and increasing amounts of time are being allocated to this valuable service.

I mention this especially because the commission set out to accomplish the same purpose in the Blue Book. We do not quarrel with its objective, but we do with the method.

We can not by any means agree with all the programming principles outlined in the Blue Book, but the overall suggestion that programming be improved is heartily endorsed by the radio industry.

Categorically, however, we object to the premise that a Government agency can, even indirectly, determine what program shall be broadcast by America's radio stations. Such an illegal assertion of power abridges rights guaranteed by the Constitution and specifically written into the Communications Act of 1934.

The quick way to achieve change is by Government decrees, but that may also lead to disastrous loss of liberty. The safer and surer way is by continual self-improvement. The latter method has given us already the most popular program service on earth; I fail to see why it will not continue to do so.

WASY Rehires NABETmen, Pays $6,290 Back Pay

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 21.

Brown Radio Service and Laboratories, operator of WSAY, has agreed to comply with an NLRB order of last August to offer reinstatement to four former employees, and payment of $6,290. The former employees, all NABET members, are Joseph Durante, Beryl Shay, Mrs. Clara Waugh and Francis Ciccoricco.

Gordon Brown, owner of the station, also agreed to post an NLRB notice stating that employees would be free to join a union without management interference.

Radio Aids Undermanned German School System to Re-educate Young

Berlin, Jan. 12.

Military Government, which may be short of everything else, is plentifully supplied with ideas. An elaborate program for "reorientation" of German youngsters—another word for denazification—has been introduced through elaborate use of the air waves in the U. S. Zone.

Schulfunks (schools of the air) of Radio Stuttgart and Radio Frankfurt are serving as effective backstops in the German educational system because of the critical shortage of textbooks and the need for more properly trained teachers. Radio Munich is planning similar services.

Radio Stuttgart's school has been clicking for almost a year, serving the pupils of Wuerttemberg-Baden as a supplementary source of instruction and lesson material. In addition, Radio Frankfurt has also begun a series of programs which are broadcast specially for the schools of Greater Hesse. The lesson material at both stations is compiled by German staffs. They consult with German educational authorities in both Laender, but the overall supervision of the programs and special guidance are provided by U. S. radio control officers.

The broadcasts cover such subjects as the development of democratic movements, history, geography, natural sciences, literature, culture and recent inventions. Biography also is an important item, but like the other subjects, is presented in dramatized form in order to avoid the monotonous lecturing method. Most of the subjects are offered in the form of a radio play, thus making the presentations interesting as well as informative. The procedure then is for teachers and pupils to review the specific subjects conversationally, as in American schools.

Radio Stuttgart broadcasts regularly direct to the schools on five days a week and has Saturday morning English lessons for beginners in the higher grades. Radio Frankfurt schedules programs Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Responsibility for providing radio receivers in various schools rests with German officials. Many schools, however, still lack receiving sets and because of the shortage of such equipment there has been an unavoidable delay in setting up reception facilities in all schools.

Teachers in Favor

Close contact between radio stations and educational authorities is maintained to determine the utilization and effectiveness of the broadcasts. German educators react favorably to the programs because they not only are a vital supplementary source of lesson material but they provide an instruction play for the teachers. Schedules and subject matter are distributed among the schools prior to broadcasts, thus enabling the teachers to choose subjects underlying current lessons.

Radio Frankfurt broadcasts school programs four days a week, and repeats its morning lessons in the afternoon as does Radio Stuttgart. The cultural chief editor of Radio Frankfurt is responsible for the Schulfunk.

The regular writing staff consists of five members whose professional background either is academic or journalistic. However, a number of freelance contributors, mostly teachers, assist in shaping the program.

Officially, the School Authority for Greater Hesse (Kultorministerium) is not connected with the Schulfunk, but for technical reasons edits the program booklet which the Schulfunk staff prepares for distribution among Greater Hesse public schools.

Military Government's policy in the operation of these radio schools is that they must never attempt to replace the schools, but only to supplement the regular courses of instruction, especially in view of the current textbook shortage.

News Programs

or the "great suspense story" of the Munich days is taxing the imaginative resources of network news departments in finding punchy leads. Cross-country domestic pickups, a technique adapted from worldwide coverage, have become the most popular form of presentation for news programs on all the nets. With the accent on domestic affairs has come a revival of feature material, on-the-spot broadcasts of three-alarm fires, stunt shows and life stuff that was considered drivel during the stress of the war years. Another sign of the times is Mutual's airing of a show which kids the news.

Chief determinant in the nets' continuing emphasis on news programs is their ability to sell them as readily as they did during the war. Like the other elements in the situation, sponsorship of news programs has not changed markedly one way or another. According to the figures in the above table, there was a total of 340 minutes of bankrolled news broadcasts on Jan. 13, 1944, as against 320 minutes on Jan. 13, 1947, a negligible variation.

Network news chiefs were frankly worried during the reconversion period over the possibility of a public reaction against news shows. But they've come smilin' through with news firmly established as one of the biggest staples in program schedules.

San Antonio—Local radio stations are cooperating and going all out in the current March of Dimes campaign. Monte Kleban, program director of WOAI, allows the listener who sends in the highest amount each day to become program director for a day of the "Once Over Brightly" studio presentation. The person selected may have any and all of the artists play his favorite tunes.

Jimmie Smith, disk jockey of "Tippin Inn" at KCOR and Bud Whaley, disk jockey at KMAC both are playing request and dedication tunes only upon the receipt of a dime with each letter request.

Everything's Up-to-Date In Kansas City

By JOHN QUINN

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

Broadcasting is in for a boom in Kansas City and may find 1947 one of its topnotch years on the basis of plans already under way.

Improvement is to come in coverage of the trade area and service to the listener under pending developments, and indications are that nothing can stop them. Principal expansions include station KCMO, Crown Drug Co.-owned ABC outlet, WHB, Mutual affiliate, and KMBC, Arthur Church's member of the CBS net.

As its trade paper ads have heralded, KCMO is "up to something," and that something is completion of its 50,000 watt transmitter, okayed early in 1946 by the FCC. E. K. Hartenbower, station manager, and Tom Evans, drug co. prexy, have directed work toward a Jan. 1 opening for the heavy power. That date has gone by the boards, but KCMO is certain to have its "something" up and going early in 1947.

What this means is evident in the area where there is nothing stronger to compete with it than 10,000 watts. Benefits for the net and the station should be something like 10-fold, and of course this brings out a new rate card.

WHB likewise is deep in the throes of a construction project—readying its new 5,000 watt transmitter for use full time, ending the handicap of daytime—only broadcasting it has suffered for years. An early spring opening was in the original plans of Don Davis and John Schilling, who guide the station policies, but that, too, appears to be unlikely. Summer should see the station on with night broadcasts, however, and a big boon for Mutual in the area. This probably will knock Mutual off of KCKN, which has been carrying net evenings.

Always strong for rural coverage, KMBC-Arthur Church is going in for still more of it with a sort of assistant station to be set up in Concordia, Kans. Station has filed with the FCC for 550 kc. and 5,000 watts, daytime only, for purpose of extending its farm coverage. Programs would originate in KMBC's Kansas City studios and reach the Kansas outlet by wire, but would not be duplications of KMBC's regular programs. Plan would use the large roster o. hillbilly and western talent now in KMBC stable.

Housing shortage meanwhile has caught up with KMBC, which stepped out last week and bought itself a $175,000 home. Arthur Church, prexy, announced Friday (10) purchase of the American Red Cross building, formerly the Ararat Shrine Temple, on the edge of the downtown loop.

While station has managed pretty well for office space in its present quarters in the Pickwick hotel, studio expansion plans have been seriously crimped, according to Church. The four-story marble structure just purchased is expected to take care of needs for some years to come, with 100,000 sq. ft. of floor space.

At the other stations 1947 looks for improvements of present operation. At WDAF, NBC -member owned by the Kansas City Star, this will be observed with a new emphasis on sports. Year just closed saw the beginnings of this when Manager Dean Fitzer began to develop his own sports department, as distinct from that of the Star.

With Randall Jesse back from service and at the mike WDAF for the first time went in for direct broadcasting of Big Six football games. The coming year is to see more of this, with probable expansion into basketball and other sports where the opportunity offers.

KCKN, the Arthur Capper 250-watter, also is doing its part in rearing sports interest in the area, and made much more of area football in 1946 than ever before. This will likely be continued through 1947, according to Ben Ludy, station exec, and the emphasis will spread to other sports when possible and profitable, either from a sponsor's standpoint or that of public service.

While stations mostly spent 1946 getting ready for big things in 1947, one of the biggest of local radio's promotion did come off as strictly a 1946 affair. That was KMBC's observance of its 25th anniversary, commemorated with the publication of Ed Shurick's book, "The First Quarter-Century of American Broadcastings." Opus climaxed a year of research and work, and already is making its mark as a valuable reference book for the radio industry.

FM also has bright prospects in the K. C. area in 1947. KMBC-FM has been licensed for 30 kw., and station is building to that as soon as possible. To begin 1947, KMBC-FM is using 12 kw's, and full 30 won't be in use until well into the year.

FCC just granted FM allocations to three new owners who will set up in the area. Sunflower Broadcasting System is to set up an independent FM in Kansas City, Kans.; the World Company in Lawrence, Kans.; and the Topeka State Journal, Inc., in Topeka.

Mostly this boils down to an expansion of broadcasting facilities for this area which had its wartime population hypo and is now credited with as many as 800,000 in the metropolitan area. What it will mean on station ledgers is another matter, and anybody's guess. Almost certainly it means increased billings, but how much only the year's economical developments can tell. In any event, new rate cards are announced or in the making—just in case.

BORDEN'S WQXR SHOW

Borden's has bought a new show, locally on WQXR, N. Y., to plug its Ricciardi ice cream. Cross-the-board stanza, starting March 24 and running 26 weeks, will use the station's present Latin-American Rhythm show in the 5:15-5:30 Monday-Friday slot, but title of the program will be changed to "Ricciardi Rhythm" thus giving name of product in title.

Young & Rubicam placed the deal.

Pittsburgh—Ray Starr, formerly of WAAT in Newark, has been added to the announcing staff of KQV. He replaces Sumner Granby, who resigned recently to open a Los Angeles office as a jewelry manufacturer's rep.

Mort-Josef Combo Split, But Business Continues

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Partnership between Josef Cherniavsky and Morton Jacobson, in Mort-Josef Radio Productions, Chi packaging firm, has been dissolved, with Cherniavsky continuing in biz on his own.

Cherniavsky, former musical director for WLW, Cincinnati, retains ownership of two shows produced by firm, "Hurdy Gurdy Dan," moppet open-end package, and "My Lucky Break," network-type live show.

Civic Opera House is mulling idea of producing musician's operetta based on life of P. T. Barnum. Mort-Josef, which came into being with the death of Johnnie Neblett, who was Jacobson's partner in Neblett Productions, continues.

African Safari Planned to Study Radio Phenomena

Chicago, Jan. 21.

In an effort to overcome transoceanic broadcasting difficulties, an expedition will sail this summer for the Lost Lakes of Ruwenzori region in Africa. The party will study radio phenomena under climatic conditions ranging from mountain peaks to equatorial jungles. Expedition will be under the sponsorship of the Hallicrafters Co. of Chicago and will be led by Commander Attilio Gatti, who has spent over 14 years on African explorations. In collaboration with Hallicrafters are several other companies working on atmospheric radio conditions, along with technicians from the Army Signal Corps.

A powerful radio station will be set up on the slopes of the Ruwenzori mountain range with supplementary shortwave stations throughout the area. The radio station in Africa will be capable of contact with a home station in Chicago, besides setting up schedules with stations throughout the world.

Atmospheric conditions to be studied will range from glacial fields 17,000 feet high over an area of 100 square miles to craters hundreds of feet below the mountain area. Expedition will take along a specially adapted helicopter to photograph and record animal life; a landing barge which, besides carrying a transmitting unit, will also photograph and record both animal and human material, and the company will photograph sub-marine life with an aquatic photographic unit.

Recordings will be made of the sound of mass migration of animals plus tribal languages and primitive music. An attempt will be made to use recordings and films for video purposes as well as travel and educational pictures. Expedition will be in the field for six months.

Downey Down For 26 More Cokes

Although Morton Downey's afternoon "Coke Club" session for Coca-Cola bows off Mutual on Jan. 31 after a two-year run on the network, the singer has signed a new 26-week contract with the coke outfit for another daytime program.

Indications are that Downey will return to the air next season under the new commitment, but whether it will be on Mutual appears problematical.

The fadeout of Downey and the three-nights-a-week "Spotlight Bands" show represents a loss of nearly $3,000,000 in Coca-Cola billings for Mutual. Company led the list of spenders on Mutual's year-end statement, with the D'Arcy agency, which handles the account, a runner-up contender for top position among agencies doing business with the network.

Coke company eventually expects to come back into nighttime radio with a top-budgeted half-hour show. It's been in radio since 1927.

Columbus — Howard A. Donahoe has resigned as a promotion and publicity director of WCOL. He is one of the pioneer broadcasters of this city.

Frigon Denies CBC Wears Dominion Collar; Tele Interest in Infancy

Refuting persistent reports that the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. was either owned or subsidized by the Canadian government, CBC's general manager, Dr. Augustin Frigon, declared in N. Y. last week that the web is strictly a private enterprise, operated by its nine-man board of governors. Only way the government enters into the picture is in licensing new stations from a technical standpoint, to make certain no two stations operate on the same frequency.

Stressing that CBC is not a monopoly, Dr. Frigon pointed out that there are now some 100 privately-owned stations in Canada. Licenses of all these, however, must be approved by the CBC board, under Dominion law. Of the stations in the Trans-Canada web of CBC, some 20 are privately-owned, with CBC operating only seven; CBC has only one station in the Dominion net, along with 28 privately-owned outlets; and the French network (in Quebec) comprises three CBC plus four privately-owned stations.

CBC affiliates, according to Dr. Frigon, receive on the average more revenue than affiliates of any U. S. network. For the privilege of being a CBC affiliate, each station must provide a certain free period each day for network sustainers, for which it receives no pay, but it may also pick up sponsored show from which it derives revenue. Web charges line rates for the commercial shows but not for public service sustainers.

CBC derives its revenue from two main sources, Dr. Frigon said. Chief source is from the taxes levied on home set owners, with the web receiving $2.50 yearly from each set operating on electric current; $2.50 for each car radio; and $2 yearly from each battery set. Government's Dept. of Transport collects the money for the web, deducts the cost of collection, and turns over the balance to the CBC board. Other source of revenue derives from the sale of time on its owned-and-operated stations to sponsors, and from the sale of lines to sponsors.

CBC has never received one cent from the government as a subsidy, Dr. Frigon emphasized.

CBC is highly interested in television, but so far has confined its interest to observation. Chief stumbling block, Dr. Frigon said, is the high cost of building and operating any kind of tele network. One transmitter in the N. Y. area, he pointed out, can reach more people than there are in Canada's total population, meaning that CBC would have to build a complete network in order to afford any kind of coverage. Dr. Frigon, together with several members of CBC's board, witnessed a demonstration of the CBC method of sequential color television in N. Y. last week and termed the show "interesting."

B. Goodman Exits Columbia Roster In Wallerstein Tiff; Goes to Capitol

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

A dispute between Benny Goodman and Ted Wallerstein, head of Columbia Records, last week resulted in Goodman's exit from the Columbia roster after a seven-year connection and his signing with Capitol, Coast outfit, which in the space of four years or so has moved from a position as just another indie label to a place alongside the majors as one of the "Big Four." And the circumstance has launched a verbal barrage as to whether Columbia let B.G. go or whether Capitol snagged him away from its stronger rival. It seems, however, that Columbia washed its hands of the leader first.

Goodman's contract with Columbia expired Jan. 10. He had at various times said he was going to renew and the scheduling of a recording date for Columbia on the Coast had been accepted as signifying completion of a new deal. However, last Wednesday (15) Goodman and Wallerstein got into a hassle on the long-distance phone over B.G.'s asserted procrastination in fulfilling the date and Wallerstein assertedly blew up, told Goodman off and hung up on him. Which leads to the assertion Columbia let him go. However, there's no question but that Columbia would like to have kept the band on its roster; B. G. was one of its highest paid artists, drawing a guarantee of $1,000 a side for a minimum of 40 sides per year against the usual royalty percentage (basically, 5% of the retail purchase price of records). Much of the dispute with Wallerstein was over B. G.'s reserving the tune, "Open the Door, Richard," holding it for four weeks and then failing to do it while other companies were rushing it out.

Following his dispute with Wallerstein, Goodman went into a huddle immediately with Johnny Mercer, Capitol v.p., and signed a five-year deal which marked Capitol's initial pick-up of an outstanding artist from a major company. Heretofore, Cap has developed its own people. Financial details of Goodman's deal with Capitol are undisclosed; it gives him, however, complete control over his recording. He can do anything he chooses, from trio disks to symphonic stuff, with a large band. There are a few top artists on various major labels who have the same privileges, but as a rule the companies do not look kindly on allowing such freedom.

Goodman's move to Capitol is his third change of label affiliation since attaining popularity that has made him financially independent. He was with RCA-Victor years ago and that company has such a tremendous backlog of his standard and instrumental material that it pays him in the neighborhood of $60,000 yearly. Columbia grabbed him seven years ago and it, too, has a considerable backlog of the best things he has made since.

In moving to Capitol, Goodman gives that company's prestige, which has been constantly building anyway, a sharp shot in the arm. How he will conflict with Stan Kenton, heretofore Capitol's top band, is something that may become Capitol's headache.

As a result of the final tiff with Goodman, Columbia has halted pressing of whatever pops he had riding. This will put a stopper on B. G.'s recording of "Hora Staccata."

CUGAT IN NEW COL. PACT AT HIKE IN COIN

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Xavier Cugat, actor with Metro pictures and a maestro who might have been expected to succumb to the lure of a contract with that company's M-G record subsidiary, has renewed his contract with Columbia Records. Deal is said to be for five years, but there is no confirmation.

What Columbia agreed to pay the No. 1 maestro of the rhumba crews is undisclosed, but it's known here that Cugat demanded and got quite a hike over his expired pact, at least in so far as guarantee-per-side is concerned.

Cugat, incidentally, has a deal cooking with the Copacabana, Miami, to open Feb. 28 at $15,000 per. This is the spot that's paying Danny Kaye $20,000 per (he opened Sunday past). Last year, Cugat worked the Colonial Inn.

Mercury Retools

Chicago, Jan. 20.

Mercury Records, Chi disker, is retooling for larger production and adding facilities for Vinylite and other plastic pressings. Disker has one plant in Chicago and another in St. Louis.

Plant is currently doing outside pressings for Majestic, Diamond and other indie operators. Berle Adams, exec, is out on the Coast, and may look for other facilities there.

Seattle Jazz B.O. Hot

Seattle, Jan. 21.

Norm Bobrow, local jazz impresario, has scheduled first jazz concert of the year at the Metropolitan January 25. Young promoter is trying a new wrinkle, with curtain set for 10, rather than former 8 p. m.

Current weekly series of jazz concerts on Sunday afternoons at the Seattle Repertory Playhouse are drawing capacity crowds, and there is more interest locally in good jazz than ever before, due largely to Bobrow's championing of local talent, of which there is a goodly supply.

BMI Sets Out On Trail of Midwest, Coast Fee Pacts

Chicago, Jan. 21.

With Eastern states almost sewed up, BMI has stepped out to sign Midwest and Coast ballroom and cocktail owners who previous to this paid no license fee to BMI for use of its music. Only previous payoff has been to ASCAP, except for members of the American Hotel Assn. who are covered by BMI under a national contract.

BMI feels that 95% of Latin tunes being used by artists and numerous pops that are BMI property will swing operators in line. Group is also giving out long term contracts with non-revokable clauses preventing yearly raises in fees. Contract calls for $40 minimum for bars and such with $750 maximum. Fees are based on 1½% of moneys spent on music by a spot up to $50,000 and ¼ of 1% of dough above that figure.

Harold Ornstein is organizing Midwest territory, with Harry P. Somerville heading out to the Coast to set up an office in L. A. Operators are waiting to hear if there will be any concerted action by their associations, but as yet no refusals have been made. No pacts have been executed either. If ops don't sign with BMI now, all future contracts will be retroactive from 1947. Other field offices will be set up as soon as possible.

McINTYRE TO DISK FOR M-G IN 2-YR. PACT

Hal McIntyre's orchestra was added to the roster of the new M-G recording company last week. He signed a two-year deal with one one-year option and will do his initial recordings under it Jan. 30 at the Longacre theatre, New York, where most all of the new label's disks are being made.

McIntyre, who was the top band on the Cosmo label during the past year, realizing quite a chunk of coin (about $55,000), joins Jimmy Dorsey on the Metro subsid roster as a alto-sax playing leader.

T. Dorsey Plunks Down 23G for Cabin Cruiser

Tommy Dorsey's intention to quit the band business and relax for an unknown length of time following his current Capitol theatre, New York, date, took a new tack last week. He bought a 40-foot cabin cruiser at the boat show at Grand Central Palace, N. Y., and intends sailing it to California via the Panama Canal.

Dorsey bought a Consolidated skiff sleeping five for $23,000, and will get delivery on it some time next week. He's taking the floor model at the show.

Incidentally, while the bottom Dorsey bought should knock off 18 to 26 knots, it will never get him over the water as fast as Guy Lombardo. Last week, at the sneak-preview in New York of the Dorsey freres' "Fabulous Dorsey" pic, T. D. flattened a lot of bandsmen by cracking to Lombardo "if it takes every nickel I've got I'm going to have a speedboat this summer that'll beat your Tempo VI next summer—and bring swing back."

'Pops' Pops Toledo B.O.

Toledo, Jan. 21.

Paul Whiteman orchestra, doing an all-Gershwin program, played matinee and evening shows at the Civic Auditorium here Saturday (18) to 5,000 persons, grossing $7,800 at $3.60 top.

Ray Mitchell, Inc., sponsored the booking.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By George Frazier

There are some real sleepers among this week's releases and the jukes would do well to investigate. Etta Jones's "Among My Souvenirs" (Victor), for example, could, with any kind of exploitation, become a national earache. As a singer, Miss Jones is nothing special (although she's not to be snuffed at either), but on this face she does a clever new lyric to an old ballad and she does it to a fare-thee-well. It is, on the whole, rather earthy wordage, scarcely appropriate for the film, "The Best Years of Our Lives," but it is immensely amusing. Miss Jones, in a style slightly reminiscent of Billie Holiday's, complains about the man who left her among her souvenirs—mice in the sink, garbage in the kitchen, etc. It's an extraordinarily effective job and it should go places. Miss Jones is backed on this side, as well as on the reverse ("Blues to End All Blues"), by J. C. Heard's band.

It is probably not quite accurate to call anything by Buddy Clark a sleeper, but the fact remains that he has yet to come up with a substantial click. It should, however, be only a matter of time before he does. His Columbia of "On the Other End of a Kiss" and "You Are Everything to Me" may turn the trick. Clark, a superb singer, who has kicked around for years without getting anywhere really important, makes the most of good tunes—and these tunes are very good. "Kiss" has a clever lyric that should put it right up there with the money-makers and the Clark treatment will probably enrich every Wurlitzer in the country. Backside is bedroom stuff and he handles it languorously. This, in short, is our conception of a good record and we recommend it to everyone. Clark, who is nothing if not ubiquitous, is also on two Columbia faces by Ray Noble—"Love Is a Random Thing" (from "Toplitzky of Notre Dame") and "Linda." Hit here sounds like "Linda," which utilizes considerable imagination and manages to come up with a reasonably fresh approach.

Moving on from sleepers, we find that several established performers are back in top form this semester. Dinah Shore, for one, does "My Bel Ami" (Columbia) in an altogether enriching way. The tune is pleasant and, for a change, Miss Shore takes the hot potato out of her mouth. It shapes up as nickelodeon stuff. Backing by Mischa Russell is highly effective. Other side is really nothing much. King Cole Trio, another established name, is out on Capitol with "You Should Have Told Me" and "I Want to Thank Your Folks." Latter is the cheek to hear. It's a brand new tune that may go places fast. There's nothing wrong with "Told Me" either. Cole's Trio apparently can do no wrong these days.

Bing Crosby's newest Decca couples "My Heart Goes Crazy" and "So Would I" (both from "My Heart Goes Crazy"). If they're not top-flight Crosby, they are unquestionably superior to most of his recent stuff. He sings carefully, feelingly, and, on the whole, rather as if he were concerned about his sponsor's renewing. Better side is "So Would I" and you'll be hearing it everywhere. Russ Morgan batons the accomp on both sides.

"September Song," one of the big plays of the moment, is out on two labels this week—by Jo Stafford on Capitol and Tony Martin on Decca. Martin interpretation (a reissue, presumably) is the better of the two and should be a juke sensash. Its backside, "Begin the Beguine," won't hurt sales. Miss Stafford's cutting isn't very commanding, although her name will aid and abet sales. Best Decca of the semester, however, seems to be a reissue of Crosby's "Clementine," which is a wonderful thing. It is backed with "The Old Oaken Bucket," which isn't bad either. But "Clementine" is the main attraction.

Also this week, Decca comes through with the first pressings by the Joe Mooney Quartet—"Just a Gigolo" and, of course, "September Song." The Mooney foursome has collected so much favorable publicity that it undoubtedly seems presumptuous to suggest that it is something less than it is cracked up to be. Presumptuous or not, however, it's the truth. This is a listenable group, but obviously not in the same class with a Goodman trio, sextet, etc., or the old John Kirby band. Goodman's combinations had genius, while the Mooney assemblage has taste and competence, but no vestige of anything resembling genius. Despite this, though, these are pleasant faces and the jukes and the jocks should not ignore them. But please let's not confuse them with inspiration.

Best Bets

Latin-American—"Mi Bumba Ne" (Maya and his Rhumba Ambassadors).

Hillbilly — "Them Hillbillies Are Mountain Williams Now" (Hoosier Hot Shots) and "If You Knew Susie" (Cliffie Stone).

Ballad—"You Are Everything to Me" (Buddy Clark), "Linda" (Buddy Clark), "So Would I" (Bing Crosby), "What Am I Gonna Do About You" (Perry Como), and "The Girl That I Marry" (Dick Haymes).

Hot — "Ain't Misbehavin'" (Fats Waller), "Jalousie" (Harry James), and "Melancholy Baby" (Sam Donahue).

Dance—"All By Myself" (Sammy Kaye), "Snootie Little Cutie" (Tommy Dorsey), and "Sonata" (Claude Thornhill).

Novelty — "Bridget O'Flynn" (Louis Prima) and "Among My Souvenirs" (Etta Jones).

Wax Facts

List of coin-machine potentials this session should certainly include Dick Jurgens' "Wyoming" (Columbia); Dick Haymes' splendid version of both "The Girl That I Marry" and "Easy to Love" (Decca); Perry Como's "What Am I Gonna Do About You?" and "I Gotta Gal I Love" (Victor), both nickelodeon naturals; Louis Prima's "Bridget O'Brien" (Majestic), in which Prima assumes a none - too - convincing brogue; Sammy Kaye's Victor of Irving Berlin's "All By Myself"; Tommy Dorsey's Victor of "Snootie Little Cutie" (the vocal by the Sinatra with the Frank frontpiece); Claude Thornhill's "Sonata" (Columbia); Vaughn Monroe's "We Could Make Such Beautiful Music" (Victor)—and please remember we did not say we liked it; and Jo Stafford's "That's Where I Came In," a lesson in how to sing without removing the shortnin' bread from the mouth. Some of these are good and some simply goshawful, but all of them sound like hits.

Best of the hot stuff is Fats Waller's Victor of "Moppin' and Boppin'" and "Ain't Misbehavin'". Performances are swell, but this is a 12" cutting and, therefore, not for the jukes. No jazz fan should pass it up, however. Another worthwhile bit of hot jazz is Harry James' Columbia of "Jalousie," with the "horn" playing fine trumpet... Sam Donahue's instrumental of "Melancholy Baby" (Capitol) is fraught with promise. This sounds like an up-and-coming band. Skitch Henderson's "Faraway Island" and "Misirlou" on the same label are really dreadful, however. For some reason beyond our comprehension we once praised the Skitch. Oh, boy, but were we wrong. He is, in truth, the Vaughn Monroe of the piano... This week's sagebrushsammy output includes, among other things, the Hoosier Hot Shots' "Divorce Me C.O.D." and "Them Hillbillies Are Mountain Williams Now" (Decca). "C.O.D." has been done to a frazzle, but "Hillbillies" should amortize 'em in the cactus corners. So, for that matter, should Cliffie Stone's Capitol of "If You Knew Susie."

Suggested Program

"The Maine Stein Song"—Rudy Vallee (Victor).

"Texas Tea Party" — Benny Goodman (Columbia).

"California, Here I Come"—Tony Martin (Decca).

"Connecticut" — Paula Kelly and the Modernaires (Columbia).

"Carry Me Back to Old Virginny"—Louis Armstrong and the Mills Brothers (Decca).

Phil Spitalny's all-girl orchestra booked to work the Fair Park Auditorium, Dallas, Feb. 17.

MAESTROS VICE DISK JOCKS?

SEEN CREATING BIG INFLUENCE

By BERNIE WOODS

While the use of bandleaders as disk jockeys could not possibly become a nationwide trend for the obvious reason that there is only a handful with name value enough to warrant or attract such work, it can have some influence on the employment of people who have a better knowledge of the entertainment field. Such a trend many maestros and singers would like to see, for many of the people who are constantly on the road believe that the present crop of disk spinners have in recent months been doing a lot of harm to the business that made them possible.

It's claimed that there are dozens of obscure and prominent jocks in various key cities and small towns who, because of the sharp rise in the importance of disk shows as money-makers for radio stations, have come to deem themselves the lord of all they survey—meaning the disks they are handed, out of which they form a "radio program." Out of the experience they might have had as radio announcers, publicity people and wherever else disk jockeys spring from most of them have become musical connoisseurs for no other reason than they have control over what they play. Too many of their vast number have become vitriolic critics and dictators to the public. They pull records off turntables, it's claimed, after half a chorus, accompanying their action with cutting remarks about an item that experienced recording men, singers and bandleaders have deemed worthy enough to invest a lot of money in on the simple premise that a disk is as good as they can make it and with luck it can become a hit. They break records in front of the microphones, attack the ability of top artists who have proved they have something—by the very fact that the public is in their corner, and otherwise ride roughshod over disks in a manner to make experienced showpeople gasp.

Artists and record men who have listened to such people spout on the air feel that the attitude is one that can kill the goose that laid the golden egg; that if they keep telling the public so many of the disks they play aren't worth the trouble, disk shows themselves will suffer. They would like to see a trend toward experienced people riding herd on record programs and if a small flood of interest in it, even temporarily, by name maestros will accomplish that end, they're all for it, they say.

CHARLTON NOW ASKS FOR 'EXCLUSIVES'

Charlton Publishing Co., one of the three song lyric publishing groups which are paying major and minor music publishers around $750,000 yearly for use of lyrics, is revising its contract terms due mainly to the lowering sheet sales. Charlton, from here on as contracts expire, will ask pubs for exclusive deals only and is reverting to some extent its cash offers for material.

Heretofore, Charlton has not bothered too much with exclusive deals for the simple reason the lack of them did not interfere with sales. That it now wants such arrangements can start trouble with rival outfits, the Richard Davis firm and Lyle Engel.

Manie Sacks Named To Col. Records Directorate

Manie Sacks, head of Columbia Records' artist and repertoire department, was elected to the company's board of directors in meeting last week in New York. He previously had been named a v.p. of the organization.

Sacks joins such Columbia Record and Columbia Broadcasting luminaries on the disk arm's board as Bill Paley, Frank Stanton, Paul Runyon, Jim Hunter, et al.

Arcadia Ballroom, N.Y., Shifting Into Name Policy

Arcadia Ballroom, New York, which all during the war contented itself with no-name music, apparently is moving into a name policy, which brings it into competition with the rival Roseland Ballroom, nearby. Arcadia has signed Jimmy Palmer and Randy Brooks to follow its recent use of Les Elgart. Palmer opens Jan. 30 for weeks and Brooks Feb. 13 for four, with options. They'll have network wires.

For the Arcadia date, Brooks will cut his band down to 13 men and two vocalists. Palmer had previously reduced his combo to 12 men and switched from a swing style to a sweet-swing one.

Music Printers Vote on Strike Move Fri. (24)

Amalgamated Lithographers union members will decide by vote Friday (24) whether they will strike or not. If they do, their action will have great effect on the music publishing industry since the printing of scads of pops and standards, etc., is almost entirely a lithographic process.

As it stands now, the union and the employers have both made an offer which drew counteroffers and the employers are standing pat on theirs. Originally, the union had selected tomorrow (Thursday) as the deadline for new negotiations after which a strike was possible. Effect of this will be delayed now until the vote.

Meanwhile, some major publishers have frantically gone about stocking up on copies of hit tunes and others which appear to be. One publisher went so far as to place advance orders for 1,000,000 copies, 250,000 each of three songs it has riding and 250,000 of various standards that always sell.

Decide Cosmo's Status This Wk.

Current week will determine whether Cosmo Records will remain in business or pass into the limbo which has already claimed a number of the war-born indie disk manufacturers. Since the exit last week of president Nick Wells, a contingent headed by Les Roberts, installed by the major stockholders in the firm, has been endeavoring to make head or tail out of the company's situation and on their final analysis, expected this week, will depend its future.

However, those now working out Cosmo's possibilities feel that something can be salvaged. If that is found to be true there is a possibility that fresh coin will be injected into the setup in an attempt to make it run smoothly.

Cosmo's current difficulties are not much different from the positions a much greater number of indies are in at the moment. Apparently the greatly increased production achieved in recent months by the majors, with their top stars, has made tremendous inroads on the welfare of the odd labels. Royalty statements to publishers by virtually every one of the indies have been steadily declining monthly as the major output accelerates. And there are few, if any of the indies who are not behind schedule in payments to publishers. Add to this, the coin owed pubs by companies that have already folded and those still in existence amounts to a couple hundred thousand iron men.

'Richard' Tune May Open Legal Doors in Dispute

Few novelties that have come along in recent years have caused as much stir artistically (if it can be called that) and legally as the new Duchess copyright, "Open the Door, Richard." Started on the Coast by a Black & White label recording by Jack McVae, which quickly became that area's top disk, the tune is now being prepared for national promotion amidst a flood of threatened suits and countersuits to determine who originated the basic idea and who has rights to the tune. Involved are Duchess, McVae, Dusty Fletcher and National Records, plus John Mason, who along with Fletcher is a vaude comic.

Lou Levy, head of Leeds, of which Duchess is a subsidiary, took the tune from McVae last November. When it began to show up as a best-seller in that area he rushed it to the major companies for recording. That's when Fletcher started to act up. He claimed ownership of the theme since he had been framing and doing a vaude sketch based on the title line. He recorded it for National Records and the latter has advised Duchess that they own the idea and that any other version is an infringement.

Levy was about to make a deal with Fletcher and National when he dug up comic Mason, who chimps, and asserted he has facts to back him up, that he originated the vaude sketch and that Fletcher got it from him when the latter worked with Mason in the early 30's. Mason asserts he did the sketch as far back as 1919, when a Richard Perry was his partner, Fletcher joined the act later.

What makes it all more complicated is that while McVae's arrangement may be based on somebody else's idea, the music it is fitted to, which is only a "riff," is his own. And Leeds owns this. Leeds now asserts that Fletcher's recording for National partially uses that same music, hence Fletcher's version is a infringement. Fletcher's vaude bit was not fitted to any melody. Mason, incidentally, opens at the Apollo theatre, New York, next week, where Fletcher has often used his skit.

While all this is going on, the major disk companies are racing to market their own versions of the tune. From the original 16-bar tune Leeds has expanded it to a full 32-bars and added a pattern. RCA-Victor has cut it with Count Basie and Charlie Spivak; Columbia with Charioteers and Three Flames; Decca with Louis Jordan and may add Bing Crosby; Capitol, Pied Pipers; Majestic, Merry Macs and possibly Louis Prima; Mercury has two different ones, and all other indies at least one.

Denton & Haskins Sues T.D., RCA, Embassy On Oliver's 'Blue Blazes'

Music publisher Denton & Haskins has filed suit against Embassy Music, Tommy Dorsey and RCA-Victor for use of "Blue Blazes," tune written by Sy Oliver, Dorsey's former arranger; Jimmy Lunceford and Sam Wood in 1926. D&H is asking for an injunction and an accounting of profits.

Meanwhile, the three defendants have asked the New York Supreme Court for a pretrial examination of Oliver and two members of the D&H firm, prior to putting in a counterclaim for $15,000 damages. Both Embassy and Dorsey are asking for a dismissal of the claim on the ground that it is barred by the statute of limitations, since original use of the tune was made in 1942. They also allege there was no consideration given by D&H for the rights to "Blazes."

Case comes up this week.

Freddy Martin Looks Set For Summer Dates in East

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Freddy Martin may come east this summer for first time in several years to play theatre dates and a location job or two. Deal is currently being cooked up by Music Corp. of America to package Martin as head of a unit for theatre work. It's possible he may play the Waldorf hotel, too.

Jinx Martin's spot at the Cocoanut Grove, L. A., MCA is endeavoring to work Jack Fina orchestra, new Coast outfit the agency is pushing as a candidate for top rating in the band field. He works the Palmer House, Chicago, later in the spring.

Top Hotel Spots In N. Y. May Drop Name Band Policy

There is a possibility that the Cafe Rouge of the Pennsylvania hotel, New York, will back out of years-old policy of name bands this spring and summer and the same "if" applies to the Commodore hotel's Century Room. As it stands, the success of Jimmy Dorsey's current run at the spot will determine the room's immediate future. Frankie Carle is due to follow and if things don't turn out, he'll be the last band booked for at least the summer, or until biz picks up. There is no signed contract on Dick Jurgens, set to follow.

If the Penn drops bands the circumstance will be one of the blackest eyes the slump-happy band business has run into yet. Cafe Rouge is one of the top prestige bookings in the country and if it folds, even temporarily, it will have great influence on other bookings across the country.

Commodore normally darkens for the summer, but has tentatively set March 12 as its final day if biz doesn't pick up or a strong name available by then to stimulate business. Eddy Howard follows the current Ray McKinley next Wednesday (29) for six weeks.

Latouche Denial On Song Suit Vamp

John Latouche, co-writer of "Taking a Chance On Love" last week put an end to the idea that he had been artfully ducking the service of papers on him in a suit by Fetter. After reading a story in last week's Variety that process servers had been unable to catch up with him, which necessitated delay of trial of the action, Latouche, claiming he knew nothing of what was going on, called authorities in N. Y., advised them of his whereabouts and a short time later accepted service of papers.

Fetter's suit will now go to trial. It involves Fetter's claim that Latouche, Arew's, Inc., and Feist and Miller music companies conspired to do him out of his quarter interest in the above tune. He also accuses Loew's of failing to give him screen credit for the tune in the film, "I Dood It." He seeks $87,500 damages.

Latouche says he was aware of the suit when it was originally filed in July, 1944, but never deliberately dodged process servers. When he came back from service, during which time the suit was delayed, he says he was advised the action had been discontinued. It hadn't and process servers were still endeavoring to catch up with him when he doubled back and caught up to them instead.

RCA-Victor has leased a portion of a government factory at Canonsburg, Pa., to make phonograph Records. Company plans to employ 700 persons and has taken a five-year lease at a little over $40,000 annually.

STICKWAVERS EYE PLATTER POSTS

By AL SCHARPER

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

With band biz skimpy at present, attention of many name batoneers here has reverted to disk jockeying. Following debut of Woody Herman on KLAC Sat. (18), a rush is on. Al Donahue, current with combo at Avodon ballroom, is cooking up a possible deal with KMPC. Bob Crosby is talking earnestly with two potential sponsors. Freddy Martin has let it trickle out that he would be interested in a platter-spinning proposition as an adjunct to bandstanding at the Cocoanut Grove.

Awakened to the possibilities, Music Corp. of America is querying batoneers on its roster as to whether they would be interested in jockeying, with agency clearing decks to get them in the field. It's claimed that Herman is getting $750 (which, if it is the lure to rival maestros, will turn out to be dead bait since it's indicated by the time you should know, that Herman is drawing AFRA scale. His stint is a time-filler until he reorganizes) for three hours each Saturday on KLAC. Station is pinning hopes on his presence to provide a listener stimulant. With word of colin Herman is supposed to be getting rapidly more noised around country, interest of batoneers all around has perked.

Meanwhile, the regular jocks here do not seem too pleased with turn of events. For Herman bow, every spinner hereabouts was invited to blow-out, but the relatively poor turn-out reflects plainly the feeling. Some of the veteran jocks bitterly complain that they largely helped make many a name band leader by constant ether buildups, and now they are faced by some of these same leaders doing an about-face and invading the field of the regulars who helped plug them up the ladder to renown.

At his debut Herman blew a whistle and brought in for free so many guests that the program ran 10 minutes overtime. Among those who showed up included Johnny Mercer, Margaret Whiting, Johnny Desmond, Art Kassel, Freddy Martin, Skinnay Ennis, Mel Torme, Phil Moore, Louis Jordan, Anita Ellis, Peggy Lee, Jo Stafford, Al Donahue and Jeri Sullivan. While the regular record-twirlers can always evoke a great interest in free appearance to hypo programs, fact that Herman corralled a covey, each with name value, did not pass unnoticed in the trade.

SHELLEY TO MAJESTIC AS HAMMOND VAMPS

Dave Shelley, adopted son of Buddy DeSylva, one of the founders and owners of Capitol Records, joined the Majestic Record setup in New York last week. He replaces John Hammond as talent scout and jazz consultant. Hammond left the organization last week after failing to induce Count Basie, who left Columbia to go to Victor, to join Majestic's roster.

Shelley was originally with Capitol when it was launched. He cut loose from the organization several years ago and has been working in various phases of the entertainment field since.

20th's Buy Into Metro's Music Setup Still on Fire

Deal by which 20th-Fox may buy into the Metro music setup by taking over the 26% interest Metro purchased from Jack Robbins last December is still sizzling. It will be a couple of weeks before anything definite comes out of the negotiations, one way or the other.

Meanwhile, there have been consistent rumors that 20th, which has long evidenced a desire to get into the music business, has been talking to Edwin H. Morris. Prior to that Bregman, Vocco & Conn has been mentioned. Neither is accurate; both companies have emphatically denied any talks.

Cress Courtney Named Head Of Morris Band Dept. Vice Kalcheim

Cress Courtney, second in command of the William Morris agency band department under Nat Kalchein since the exit last year of Willard Alexander, has been given complete charge of the division. Kalcheim, who has been devoting attention to vaude and cafe bookings as well as band division affairs, becomes coordinator of all nitery, vaude, and band selling.

Courtney's elevation to the top slot of the band department is part of a plan to makeover and strengthen the department, which has been shorthanded in recent months. None of the existing salesman will be changed, but some will be added in the near future.

At the moment, those working in New York under Courtney include Bill Burnham, locations, Phil Brown, one-nighters and Milt Berger, band theatre bookings. In Chicago there is Bob Ehlert and in Hollywood the staff consists of Jack Archer, Bill Brown and, Pat Robkins with Archer local head.

Morris move follows closely on the heels of changes at Music Corp. of America, which saw Russ Facohine, Lyle Thayer and Jack Whittemore exit from that agency, the latter occurring only last week.

FOUR PUBS FILE SUIT VS. ILLINOIS NITERY

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Continuing their drive against musical copyright offenders, four music publishers filed suit in Chi Federal District Court against Steve Harris, owner of "Hollywood Theatre Restaurant," Franklin Park, Ill. Injunction was asked by the publishers and $250 damages was sought by each company.

Plaintiffs in the suit and the songs they claim were infringed without payment are: Shapiro Bernstein, "On the Sunny Side of the Street," Edwin H. Morris over "It's Been a Long, Long Time," Harms Inc., publishers of "Tea for Two," and Mills Inc., copyright owners of "Truckin."

SPA, MPPA Agree To 30-Day Pact Extension

Songwriters Protective Assn. and the Music Publishers Protective Assn. last week agreed to extend again the terms of the expired pact between them, pending the working out of a new contract. Extension is for another 30 days, following the original lengthening of the old agreement from the Dec. 31 expiration date. It holds now until Feb. 28.

Meanwhile, there has been no progress on the writing of a new contract and no meetings are scheduled between the two factions to further work toward that goal. So many of the principals of both sides choose this time of year for Florida vacations that it may be another three or four weeks before all are available to sit down on the problem.

Granz Scrams Esquire Board, Hits Condon For 'Disservice to Jazz'

Norman Granz, producer of the "Jazz at the Philharmonic" units, who has been pushing jazz music into key city auditoriums for some time, took a pot shot at Esquire mag and his rival jazz promoters, Ernie Anderson and Eddie Condon, last week. Granz resigned from the board which annually selects the outstanding musicians in that field and returned to the sheet a check for his services on the recent issue, the current jazz scene. It was edited by Anderson.

Granz's move was based on charges that this year's work was more a Condon issue than a true picture of Granz, incidentally, has scheduled a "Jazz at the Philharmonic" performance at Carnegie Hall, New York, for Feb. 15. It will be a midnight performance preceded by a matinee show at Philadelphia. Band will be flown in from the latter.

MCA Asks Extra Time to Parry Finley's Action

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Music Corp. of America late last week asked for and received 20 additional days to file answer to $3,000,000 suit hurled against agency last month by Larry Finley, who seeks triple damages on losses allegedly incurred when he operated Mission Beach ballroom in San Diego and MCA had an exclusive booking arrangement with rival terpalace, Pacific Square.

Finley's legal advisers were quite willing to grant agency the stay. Lawyers would prefer the calendaring of appeal in circuit court here before recent suit comes up. Appeal was made by Finley after he won $57,000 damages against agency last March, only to have decision reversed by Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick, who ruled, on appeal by MCA, that Finley was not specific enough in showing precise losses suffered because of exclusive booking deal.

HUDDLE ON SINATRA'S BARTON % TAKEOVER

Frank Sinatra, Ben Barton and Hank Sanicola have reopened negotiations whereby the latter two may buy out Sinatra's interest in the Barton Music catalog. Since the original dispute between Sinatra and his two partners has been more or less smoothed over and all is friendly, Sinatra is said to be amenable to giving up his one-third interest in the firm, a course he has changed his mind on quite often. Meetings are proceeding between attorneys for both sides.

Involved in whatever settlement will be made with Sinatra for his piece of Barton will be two copyrights, "Nancy," the tune written about his daughter, and "Put Your Dreams Away," his theme.

Meanwhile, Sinatra's new music firm, set in partnership with Edwin H. (Buddy) Morris, titled Sinatra Songs, goes ahead. It already has tunes on the "most played" list.

"I'll Close My Eyes," Peter Maurice tune, topped previous marks for air plugs last week, getting 153 shots.

MUSIC PUBLISHERS' BATTING AVERAGES

Following batting averages of publishers are based on number of points scored in a one-year period in The Billboard's Honor Roll of Hits. To simplify the scoring this system was used: For every week a tune was No. 1 in the Honor Roll it was awarded 15 points; for every No. 2 position, 14 points, etc., down to one point for a No. 15 position. . . . Only the top 12 publishers' averages appear in this issue. Remaining 26 will appear in next week's issue.

'Twas Ever Thus

When Draper and I did our first concert tour, our accompanist was J. Calvin Jackson, who happened to be Negro. He also happened to be quite the finest musician that we could find.

One of our first concerts took place at a girls' school in the south. We showed up in the morning in order to check the mike, piano, floor, etc. The head of the concert committee took one look at Jackson and set a new world record for the standing back broad jump. He signalled wildly to me to join him in a quiet corner.

"Mr. Adler," he whispered, "you never told me that your accompanist was a Negro."

"That's right," I agreed, "nor would I have thought to mention that he was white, if that were the case."

"But good Lord, man," he said, "this is the south! You can't have a white and a colored artist on the same stage together. It just isn't done."

"Well," I said, "the solution is very simple. Let's cancel the concert."

"We can't do that," he replied, "we have a full house."

"All right," I said, "you brood about it for awhile. I'll be at the hotel. Let me know your decision later."

He called me back in about two hours. "It's all set," he said happily, "you can use Jackson. We'll just put the piano in the wings so that he won't be visible to the audience."

"I've got news for you," I said sweetly, "the format of a concert is such that the accompanist is in the center of the stage with the soloist. Look, why don't you just call it off?"

"Call you right back," he said gloomily.

He called back and said that they'd decided to let the concert proceed as scheduled. That night I walked onstage, followed by Jackson. There were no visible spells in the audience. The concert went as the others had gone—very well. After the concert the usual number of people came backstage to ask for autographs. I thought that a few more seemed to ask for Jackson's than for mine or Draper's, but that was the only change.

No punch, is there? Just an ordinary concert. Jackson's subsequent history is fairly interesting. He was hired away from us by Harry James, who makes more money than we do and later was engaged by M-G-M, who make more than James does.

That's where he is now—as stranger, pianist and conductor. I used this yarn in some talks to high school students in Chicago last week to illustrate what I consider the fundamental democracy of show business. Generally speaking, we don't inquire as to racial or national origin and the only yardstick is, "Got any talent?" Larry Adler.

Mills May Battle Songpluggers On Hiring New Man

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Mills Music, Inc., and the Music Publishers' Contact Employees are going to the mat, probably, as a result of union failure to admit Al Gannaway as a member. Mills wanted to hire Gannaway as Coast plugger, recommended him and saw that he filed application and posted initiation fee three months ago. After many inquiries, publisher last week learned via wire from union headquarters in N. Y. that Gannaway drew a thumbs-down. It is first time within memory on Coast that an aspirant plugger, with job assured, has been nixed by organization.

According to Paul Mills, office manager here of pub, union advised that Gannaway was turned down on recommendation of Coast contingent of pluggers. Mac Green, western regional director of union, has withheld comment, merely stating that he personally has not been informed that N. Y. headquarters had reached a decision.

Mills has its firm lawyer probing matter further in the east, seeking a direct answer on why Gannaway cannot get a card. According to organization's by-laws any man hailing from some phase of music industry is eligible for union membership, providing he can show he has a job waiting. Gannaway is a former small-combo batoneer and has written a sheaf of songs.

Headquarters Explains

New York headquarters of the MPCE explains that in refusing the application of the man preferred by Mills it was doing nothing more than following the recommendation of the Hollywood contactmen's board, headed by Mack Green. This group had turned thumbs down on the disputed application, presumably on the grounds that there are seven or eight MPCE members out of work in that area and that they should come first before any new members.

In such cases, the MPCE head man, Bob Miller, acts one way or the other only after the regional boards have passed judgment. This is in accordance with the MPCE's by-laws.

STATUS OF JAMES ON L.A. TO N.Y. IN DOUBT

There is still no definite word as to whether Harry James is coming east earlier this year than has been his custom in the past. Music Corp. of America, which originally expected the leader to hop toward New York sometime next month is not certain yet as to just when he might take off, due, it seems to the fact that nothing definite in the way of bookings have been arranged.

James is said to have been offered to Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook and also to Glen Island Casino, now operated by Shep Fields. Other dates are being talked about with the exception of the Astor hotel, N. Y., which James assertedly doesn't want to play, but so far there is nothing concrete. As a result, what the leader intends doing is pretty much up in the air.

Inside Stuff—Orchestras-Music

Booking of Rudy Vallee into the new Copacabana nitery, Chicago, plus the preceding run by Jimmy Savo, who opens next week (31) for four and possibly more weeks at $2,500 per, seems to put an end to any ideas the Copa, or band bookers, might have had in making it a name band spot. Bookers have been pressuring the cafe in recent weeks trying to set name bands, and the spot's owners had been listening intently. Joe Glaser, of Associated Booking Corp., booked both Vallee and Savo.

Vallee and Glaser have formed a partnership that will develop into a personal appearance comeback for Vallee and expanded activities for Glaser's Associated Booking Corp.

Vallee, it's said, joins Glaser's ABC in an executive capacity and assumes charge of all radio activities of the agency. Glaser will handle Vallee for all nitery and theatre personal appearances, and the ultimate aim is for ABC to include both radio and picture representation for Vallee. Pair will settle in new Beverly Hills offices, with Glaser establishing his own shop on the Coast for the first time and Vallee abandoning his long-standing Hollywood and Vine site.

Mac Cooper, contact man on the staff of Santly-Joy in New York, found himself ducking a fusillade of bullets fired at him by cops recently. Cooper had driven maestro Ray McKinley home to his Kew Gardens, L. I., apartment and was standing alongside his car for a moment before driving away when he noticed a guy in plain clothes walking toward him with a gun in hand. Thinking it a stickup, he jumped in his car and backed down the street at full speed while the cop, a detective, thinking him a footpad trying to get away, pumped bullets into his radiator, windshield, etc. Followed a long auto chase. Cooper got away, got home and called a nearby station house. Then it all came out, but not to Cooper's satisfaction. And the cop shooting at him turned out to be one of the N. Y. force's crack shots.

Broadcast Music, Inc., tackling a show for the first time for one of the winter dinners to the President, came off with flying colors Saturday night (11) at the National Press Club's annual dinner, Washington, D. C.

M. E. Tompkins, who handled the chore for BMI, came up with Ed Gardner and his company; Kathleen Kersting, young Met soprano, who was shoved in instead of Dorothy Kirsten; Marais & Miranda, Jan August, Ben Berl, and the Debonairs. Ben Grauer served as emcee. Jane Davis and the Candlelight Trio furnished music after the dinner. Local production was under the direction of Gene Ford, of Loew's here.

Interesting aspect of the show was that BMI moved in on what had been a private preserve of ASCAP.

Premiere on CBS Sunday (26) of the Hire's show, "Here's To Ya," will be a tribute to the late Glenn Miller. Not only will tunes formerly identified with Miller, such as "Moonlight Serenade" and "Chattanooga Choo-Choo," be featured, but three ex-members of his band will be in the Hire's group. They are Bill Conway, vocal arranger; Trigger Alpert, bass fiddler, and Bernie Previn, trumpeter.

Loesser Due in N.Y. To Set Up New Par Subsid; Salvatori Set as Mgr.

Frank Loesser is due in New York next week to activate the music firm being financed and operated in his behalf by Paramount Pictures' publishing subsidiaries. Loesser is bringing with him from the Coast Paul Salvatori, who will be installed in N. Y. as general professional manager, under Eddie Wolpin, head of all Paramount music activity. Company is named Susan Publications for Loesser's daughter.

Unusual angle of Loesser's deal with Paramount is that while the film firm's music subsid will finance Loesser's baby and operate it on a full scale for him with staffs in Chicago and on the Coast, he will eventually own it outright. Deal calls for the entire catalog, including the copyrights placed in it, to revert to him at the end of 10 years. Initial score on which the new outfit will work is from Par's "Perils of Pauline," for which Loesser penned three tunes.

COAST TERPALACES ON OAKLEY OFFENSIVE

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Whereas ballrooms here used to wage "battles of bands" for patronage trying with their attractions and ballyhoo of them to lure patrons, biz of late has set so blized terpalace potentates have become cynical and are resorting to out-doing each other by papering the town with passes. Hope is that those who amble in on oadsies will fill floor-space and also spend some shekels on grog and gruel.

Meadowbrook has commenced giving out 6,000 ducats monthly via tieups with three drug chains. Palladium distribs ducats chiefly through mail, and when Vaughn Monroe opens on Feb. 4, site will give away 2,000 stubs on opening night to stimulate interest. Casino Gardens, Tommy Dorsey's beach spot, is tossing paper primarily through colleges.

All the hoofing halls are concentrating on disk jockeys. Last holdout was the downtown Avodon, but late last week manager Barney McDevitt broke down, and henceforth will issue 1,000 passes weekly through jocks. Through same medium Palladium disposes of 400 stubs each stanza, Meadowbrook, 600; Casino and Aragon distribute an indeterminate but sizable quota. Jocks use the ducats as bait in their patty-cake contests.

RAY DOREY TO MAJESTIC

Boston, Jan. 21.

Ray Dorey, WBZ baritone, signed a two-year contract with Majestic Records to disk with Paul Barron's orch. He'll start recording within a week or two.

Formerly with Benny Goodman, Dorey is featured on network "Boston Tune Party," plus three or four local shows.

Mull Annual Fee For 30,000 N. Y. Diskboxes

New York City is preparing to follow other key towns in slapping a license fee on diskboxes as a means of adding to its income. Legislation is being prepared for placement before the City Council requiring a $10 annual license fee from between 25,000 and 30,000 diskboxes in the city.

N. Y. has never before turned its attention to diskboxes as a means of adding to its income. Other cities have long required licenses for them, some after protracted legal disputes.

Cal. Juke Tax Proposed

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

State Senator Jack Tenney, of Los Angeles, late last week introduced a bill to tax jukeboxes and pinball machines throughout California.

According to Tenney estimates, enactment of his proposal would net the state about $5,000,000 annually, which his bill would earmark for state hospital fund.

MPCE NAMES SCHAFFER FIRST CHICAGO REP

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Music Publishers Contact Employees has appointed for the first time a regional director for the Chi territory.

New rep is Morton Schaffer, attorney and tax consultant, who has been connected with entertainment biz for 30 years.

Schaffer is to be located in the Woods Bldg.

Enterprise Pitches To Diskers on 'Arch' Album

Enterprise Productions is trying to interest either Decca, Columbia or RCA-Victor in releasing an "Arch of Triumph" four-sided album, which primarily would be designed to plug the picture.

Incorporated into projected layout would be two songs chirped by Ingrid Bergman, co-star of film. These vocals, one in Russian, one in Italian, would be star's first excursion on disks. Included in package also would be two dramatic sequences from soundtrack, rendered by Miss Bergman and Charles Boyer, plus two sides devoted to Louis Gruenberg's score for the film.

Night Club Reviews

Carnival, N. Y.

Nicky Blair presents "Jerkz-Berzerk;" starring Olsen & Johnson and Beatrice Kay, with Salici Puppets, Yvonne Adair, James Allison, Paul Garrett, Blackburn Twins, June Johnson, Andreo Ratoushejf, Ernest D'Amato, Shannon Dean, Billy Young, Charles Senna, Patricia Basso, Shorty Renna, Mason Curry, Michael Edwards, Corpina & Tito Valdez, Eddie Franklin, J. C. Olsen, Cliff Crist, Line and Showgirls. Devised and staged by John Murray Anderson; costumes, Thomas Becher; settings, Robert Davison; music, Henry Sullivan; lyrics, Ira Left; dances staged by Richard Barstow; orchestra under direction of John Mc-Manus; Morty Reid's Orch; orchestrations, John McManus and James Toliver; $2.50 minimum

What will go in the theatre need not necessarily find favor in the nightclub, and that's something that Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson must certainly have found out in the more than 30 years that they have been partnered in show business. But here at the Carnival the veteran comics are doing little to impress, with all their usual madcap fol-de-rol, that nitery patrons could very easily find offensive. Their zaniems, by and large, are not especially conducive to proper digestion for dinners. Which creates the thought that maybe the corner druggist is the unbilled star of this show. He can, at a moment's notice, supply the bicarbonate.

Olsen and Johnson are by words on all the circuits of America. Every gesture, every quip is complete with the showmanship of their years in the business. But they're making a mistake in using such props as dead rats and an unmannerly cow, plus creating the ghastly illusion of Chic Johnson with one hand cut off and his body completely covered with blood as part of one blackout.

Where was Nicky Blair during the rehearsals? No nightclub operator should permit this—unless he feels that he would divert the patron's attention from the food for one or more reasons.

For the out-of-towners there is much, however, in this show to garner laughs, though the Broadway sophisticates would be inclined to brush off the zany comics as too obvious. But there's no pretense that this is for Broadwayites. This is a show for the hinterlanders, obviously, and the Carnival remains one of the lures for New York visitors, especially in the wake of the great word-of-mouth engendered by the bistro's previous headliner, Milton Berle.

Here is a show replete with corn, and this isn't said in any manner of disparagement. Corn remains as commercial today as yesteryear, and the O-J brand of that commodity, in many respects, has a basic element of laugh-getting. It's hammer-on-the-head stuff, not a letup for a second—gal lookers in scanties, old-time blackouts, Chic Johnson chasing the dames, props that are frequently suggestive of that which they are not.

All this, and Beatrice Kay, too. And the vet trouper comes pretty close to stealing the play away from the top-billed pair. Her songs of the gay '90s are just as clicko in the gayer '40s. Showmanship—that's what it is, and Miss Kay can really belt out those tunes with a brand of selling that remains an object lesson for the newer crop of would-be chantooseys. She really has to beg off—an act that boffs 'em whatever the medium, radio, theatre or nitery floor. And she's proved herself in all three.

Otherwise, it's a long bill of many people. The Salici Puppets have a few moments of their ever-sock stuff. Yvonne Adair handles production tunes neatly, Corinne and Tito Valdez do an applause-winning Spanish dance, Michael Edwards is a good-looking, effective production baritone, the male Blackburn Twins are at least handsome-looking and energetic in their hoofing. And there's a host of lesser performers assisting Olsen and Johnson.

John Murray Anderson has staged, and there are few who can direct a sprawling performance such as this with the flair of the veteran director, he girls are beauts, and that goes for ponies, showgirls as well as the supports to O-J. And Henry Sullivan and Ira Left have written a couple of tunes that are quite numerable, particularly the reprised "Carnival Cocktail." Kahn.

Wedgwood Room, N. Y.
(HOTEL W. ILDORF-ASTORIA)

Morton Downey, Emil Coleman and Mischa Borr Orchs; $2 cover

Showmanship and talent are still the basic common denominators in show business, and his approximate quarter-century of performance has put Morton Downey in the edge of tributes wherein Morton Downey is concerned.

Remember the sweet-voiced, baby-faced tenor of the '20s, a kid who really rocked 'em with those Irish ballads and lullabies? Well, the boy has grown older, the girth more expansive — and so has Downey's flair for presentation. The voice isn't as sweet, maybe, nor the timbre so vibrant, but when a tenor can hold an audience for almost an hour with as varied a repertoire as one could possibly ever hear—then, brother, that's selling. Especially selling to as hep an audience as that which attended Downey's opening night last Friday. Stork Club or Roxy Bar and Grill—Downey remains equally as palatable.

At the preem performance of his Waldorf date, Downey, with a self-accomp at the piano, must have done at least 40 numbers, and they included everything—ditties, pops, Irish folk songs, current pops that all mixed up with a change of pace that found him forced to bow away. Emil Coleman's orch and Mischa Borr's Latin outfit are, as usual, still selling danceable music to the customers. Kahn.

Five O'Clock, Miami

Miami Beach, Jan. 18.

Joey Adams, Marie Hart & Tony Canzoneri, Pat Rooney, Pupi Campo Orch; $1.50-$3 min.

One of the smarter rooms around town, this operation has been in box-office doldrums, despite a policy of class, intime entertainment. Along with other spots in the same number, they can blame offish-biz on the fact that, though there are people in town, they just don't seem to have enough dough to visit all niteries.

If the recognized draw of the Joey Adams setup doesn't bring them in, nothing will. For in the author-comic the club has a lad who knows practically all of the spenders in town.

Opening night, the room was filled to capacity. Pupi Campo, the personable orch-batoneer, paces the show with his Latin rhythms, then intros Adam who purveys his standard stories for a good measure of laughs.

The Cuckish guy then brings on Pat Rooney who clicks with his dancing. Winds up in bit with Adams that gets him a solid sendoff.

Ex-pug Tony Canzoneri comes on for his foolery with Adams a natch diction, ring history and there ambitions—none of it changed, and all of it still funny. Winds up with the impression of Robinson, Cable among others, with that laugh-getting trick of straying into the Little Caesar talk.

Only change in the Adams-Canzoneri-Plant combo seems to be in the big bang. He's essaying a softer delivery on his vocals now. Perhaps a bit too soft for his robust appearance. Utilizes the new delivery in "September Song" and "I Hum a Waltz," then socks with full voice in the "Porgy and Bess" medley. Encores with Adams in "Sonny Boy" satire.

Closing bit with Plant, Canzoneri and Campo earns the heaviest laughs for the comic. Pantolo—"then I Henry Stillman and Ira Left have written a couple of tunes that are quite numerable, particularly the reprised 'Carnival Cocktail.'" Kahn.

La Martinique, N. Y.

Al Bernie, Ronnie & Ray, Robert De Lisle, Ernie Stuart Orch, Marcelino Guerra Orch; $3.50 minimum.

Dario and Jimmy Vernon are apparently going along with the Broadway salaries & admission policy until better times hit the street. They're currently anticipated by the comfortable headliners inasmuch as the name-buying competition from the Florida hotels and the larger spots is proving great at the moment.

Time was when La Martinique got promising and unpromising names at salaries. But the day when performers of the type of Danny Kaye, Danny Thomas, Jack Haley, and others who first made good in the bigtime in La Martinique at salaries under four figures, has long since passed.

Until La Martinique gets performers who can fill up the place, the days will be comparatively weak inasmuch as there's no applause from empty tables.

Its current topliner, Al Berne, recently had a chance to demonstrate that he can make good in gigantic spots, when he played the Roxy theatre. Difference in reception of his chatter at the Roxy that there were people in the theatre, and a handful at the cafe. Bernie is a clever chap with his material and a winning delivery who could panic a full house. His takeoffs on varied comics and radio commercials have a different slant. He also does a satire on the "Men of Distinction" liquor ads, which is one of his better efforts.

Rest of the show has Ronnie and Ray, a youthful and energetic terp twain with jitterbug and rhumba versions in tap. They're both competent dancers with the male getting the edge in that department. Femme has a tendency to accent sex, which detracts from the fresh impression the team strives for. They're okay for the spot.

Robert De Lisle (New Acts) is a singer who does better with vigorous numbers than with the slower tempo.

Wood, who precedes him on the bill; and he is also strong in silent pantomime of a singer to a record of Paul Robeson singing "Glory Road."

Miss de Wood has a warm contralto which would be more appreciated if she postured less. It is notable that it is those postures which bring down the house when Corey imitates them a few minutes later.

The songsters goes best in an encore medley which includes "It Had to Be You," "Embraceable You" and "Coax Me" in which she gets the diners to sing with her. Earlier numbers include "South America Take It Away," "To Each His Own" and "Babalu."

Surprise of the show is a young dance team, James and Beverly Payne, whose smooth ballroom technique bring them top applause. They do two fine numbers to "Clair de Lune" and "All the Things You Are" and wind up with a hot jazz finish for variety. Definitely a sprightly act.

Another dance act, Ted Taft and the four Debutantes, is woven in and out of the bill's opening and closing the show with its third number tucked in between Miss de Wood and Corey. Ted Taft and Debs hold-over but offer new numbers and costumes.

Jane Simpson Orch cuts neat show and also clicks in couple selections, "Time On My Hands" and "September Song." Lowe.

Joe E. Lewis with Austin Mack, Jay Marshall with Andy Ackers, Borrah Minevitch Harmonica Rascals featuring Johnny Puleo, Miriam Lavelle, Bette Kraft Dancers (3), Kent Edwards, Betty Heather, Ray Malone, Line (18); Harry Cool Orch, Dacita Orch; produced by George Wood; staged by Lew Kessler; music and lyrics by Robert Wright and George Forrest.

Current production here is too much entertainment for the bigger rooms around Miami that feature top names. For this 1,000-seater, with the aid of the big grosses from the tables, can book in any collection of toppers and not worry about losses. The spot last season took in well over $2,500,000. And the $50,000 installed for the season's real beginning is the most expensive to hit here since the Tucker-Sinatra times. It's the current bill at the Royal Palm*in pre-war days.

Joe E. Lewis is in better form than ever. And his material is new—outside of "Please, Mr. Truman." He gravel-voices a fresh line of chatter and applause-builders that have the place mob howling. Coming on to a boff reception, comedian purveys his plaints of "Social Security" and "Income Taxes"—his income tax problems with the topper "It's Deductable," then zanies several tunes on how to be successful an indie pic. Observations on his horse-betting are followed with a satire on the current craze for the French glamour boys. Hot sequence is "There's An Awful Lot of Felsies in Brassieres." The bere comes late after that one and he could stay on all night.

Lewis follows the sock turn of Jane Froman. Niftily gowned she comes on a black stage, with the lights hitting her. Zings into "It's a Great Life," then blends stint with a varied selection of class arrangements, among them "September Song," "Carioca" in Brazil," "Paris Is Where They Do in Rio," and "Closing Number Blues." It's class song styling all the way with the patrons begging for more.

Though okay in their spot, the Harmonica Rascals don't go too well here. Johnny Puleo is still a laugh-getter with his panto-antics, but the rest of the group seem out of place and their harmonica making isn't exactly of the best. Somehow the classier the text and pace it had when Minevitch himself led the group.

Miriam La Velle's acro-spins and dancing are in the finer vein. A classy looker, she socks with her talents. She adds a pace and zest to the proceedings that make her presence felt long after she's left the stage. The finale with the Beatrice Kraft dancers is class stuff. Miss Kraft and her male aides had them pounding with their artfully devised East Indian head and arm moving routines.

Introduction wise, Betty Heather is a smart-looking blonde who bandles the songs in top style; Ray Malone, who ditloes on dance, and Kent Edwards, who vocals the Wright-Forrest lyrics, plus the well-staged routines given the chorus and showgals round out the top setup. All of it adds up to the most lavishly staged and expensive setup current here. Harry Cool and his unit cut a neat show, while Dacita and her rhumbaists get the hip-swingers on in large numbers for the interim seshes. Lary.

Latin Quarter, Chi

Ted Lewis, Geraldine DuBois, Paul White, Elroy Peace, Mack Triplets, Corwin Sisters (3), Line (14); Buddy Shaw Orch (13); $3-$3.50 min.

By far the best buy for Chi nitery goers is this show that gallops at a fast pace, with Ted Lewis sparking it throughout.

Lewis tells 'em in song, "I'm Still Going Strong," and it would be mighty tough to give him an argument.

Plenty of gals, with the room's own ponies and showgirls who fill most of the small stage to good advantage in three production numbers and a couple of sister teams of singers and dancers. The niftiest looker is Geraldine DuBois, who clicks with her singing, dancing or playing straight to Lewis' comedi-antics.

Paul White, sepia lad, registers with his mugging and comic song, "Is Everybody Chilly?"

Mack Triplets tumble and twirls provided by the Corwin sisters while chained together at the ankles rate applause which grows louder when the chains are removed for some fancy somersaults and spins. The Mack Triplets, in vocal about radio commercials, do well, and really cook on "Irish Lullaby."

Elroy Peace comes into the picture several times as he pairs with White for some soft shoe comedy work that gets over for top returns.

While everyone is waiting for the peanut wagon to come into view, Lewis tells you all about "his family," during which time you are to learn that his mother is Sophie Tucker and his dad is none other than Joe E. Lewis, while his grandfather is, yes, Harry Richman. Lewis doesn't do much of his stock stuff

Morton Downey, Emil Coleman and Mischa Borr Orchs; $2 cover

Showmanship and talent are still the basic common denominators in show business, and his approximate quarter-century of performance has put Morton Downey in the edge of tributes wherein Morton Downey is concerned.

Remember the sweet-voiced, baby-faced tenor of the '20s, a kid who really rocked 'em with those Irish ballads and lullabies? Well, the boy has grown older, the girth more expansive — and so has Downey's flair for presentation. The voice isn't as sweet, maybe, nor the timbre so vibrant, but when a tenor can hold an audience for almost an hour with as varied a repertoire as one could possibly ever hear—then, brother, that's selling. Especially selling to as hep an audience as that which attended Downey's opening night last Friday. Stork Club or Roxy Bar and Grill—Downey remains equally as palatable.

At the preem performance of his Waldorf date, Downey, with a self-accomp at the piano, must have done at least 40 numbers, and they included everything—ditties, pops, Irish folk songs, current pops that all mixed up with a change of pace that found him forced to bow away. Emil Coleman's orch and Mischa Borr's Latin outfit are, as usual, still selling danceable music to the customers. Kahn.

Five O'Clock, Miami

Miami Beach, Jan. 18.

Joey Adams, Marie Hart & Tony Canzoneri, Pat Rooney, Pupi Campo Orch; $1.50-$3 min.

One of the smarter rooms around town, this operation has been in box-office doldrums, despite a policy of class, intime entertainment. Along with other spots in the same number, they can blame offish-biz on the fact that, though there are people in town, they just don't seem to have enough dough to visit all niteries.

If the recognized draw of the Joey Adams setup doesn't bring them in, nothing will. For in the author-comic the club has a lad who knows practically all of the spenders in town.

Opening night, the room was filled to capacity. Pupi Campo, the personable orch-batoneer, paces the show with his Latin rhythms, then intros Adam who purveys his standard stories for a good measure of laughs.

The Cuckish guy then brings on Pat Rooney who clicks with his dancing. Winds up in bit with Adams that gets him a solid sendoff.

Ex-pug Tony Canzoneri comes on for his foolery with Adams a natch diction, ring history and there ambitions—none of it changed, and all of it still funny. Winds up with the impression of Robinson, Cable among others, with that laugh-getting trick of straying into the Little Caesar talk.

Only change in the Adams-Canzoneri-Plant combo seems to be in the big bang. He's essaying a softer delivery on his vocals now. Perhaps a bit too soft for his robust appearance. Utilizes the new delivery in "September Song" and "I Hum a Waltz," then socks with full voice in the "Porgy and Bess" medley. Encores with Adams in "Sonny Boy" satire.

Closing bit with Plant, Canzoneri and Campo earns the heaviest laughs for the comic. Pantolo—"then I Henry Stillman and Ira Left have written a couple of tunes that are quite numerable, particularly the reprised 'Carnival Cocktail.'" Kahn.

La Martinique, N. Y.

Al Bernie, Ronnie & Ray, Robert De Lisle, Ernie Stuart Orch, Marcelino Guerra Orch; $3.50 minimum.

Dario and Jimmy Vernon are apparently going along with the Broadway salaries & admission policy until better times hit the street. They're currently anticipated by the comfortable headliners inasmuch as the name-buying competition from the Florida hotels and the larger spots is proving great at the moment.

Time was when La Martinique got promising and unpromising names at salaries. But the day when performers of the type of Danny Kaye, Danny Thomas, Jack Haley, and others who first made good in the bigtime in La Martinique*at salaries under four figures, has long since passed.

Until La Martinique gets performers who can fill up the place, the days will be comparatively weak inasmuch as there's no applause from empty tables.

Its current topliner, Al Berne, recently had a chance to demonstrate that he can make good in gigantic spots, when he played the Roxy theatre. Difference in reception of his chatter at the Roxy that there were people in the theatre, and a handful at the cafe. Bernie is a clever chap with his material and a winning delivery who could panic a full house. His takeoffs on varied comics and radio commercials have a different slant. He also does a satire on the "Men of Distinction" liquor ads, which is one of his better efforts.

Rest of the show has Ronnie and Ray, a youthful and energetic terp twain with jitterbug and rhumba versions in tap. They're both competent dancers with the male getting the edge in that department. Femme has a tendency to accent sex, which detracts from the fresh impression the team strives for. They're okay for the spot.

Robert De Lisle (New Acts) is a singer who does better with vigorous numbers than with the slower tempo.

Jose.

Club Cairo, Wash.
(HOTEL TOURAINE)

Washington, Jan. 15.

"Professor" Irwin Corey, Lorraine de Wood, James & Beverly Payne, Ted Taft & Debutantes (5); Bob Simpson Orch (7); min. $3 weekdays, $5.50 weekend.

Current show moves along at medium gait but does not compare with some the Cairo has racked up in the past.

Topping the bill is Irwin Corey whose warming, disjointed monologe occasionally goes beautifully and then again falls flat. Corey is some little time warming house up, but finishes very strong. His psychistry chatter has some good laughs, but he does best with mimicry. His top bit is an imitation of Lorraine de Wood, who precedes him on the bill; and he is also strong in silent pantomime of a singer to a record of Paul Robeson singing "Glory Road."

Miss de Wood has a warm contralto which would be more appreciated if she postured less. It is notable that it is those postures which bring down the house when Corey imitates them a few minutes later.

The songsters goes best in an encore medley which includes "It Had to Be You," "Embraceable You" and "Coax Me" in which she gets the diners to sing with her. Earlier numbers include "South America Take It Away," "To Each His Own" and "Babalu."

Surprise of the show is a young dance team, James and Beverly Payne, whose smooth ballroom technique bring them top applause. They do two fine numbers to "Clair de Lune" and "All the Things You Are" and wind up with a hot jazz finish for variety. Definitely a sprightly act.

Another dance act, Ted Taft and the four Debutantes, is woven in and out of the bill's opening and closing the show with its third number tucked in between Miss de Wood and Corey. Ted Taft and Debs hold-over but offer new numbers and costumes.

Jane Simpson Orch cuts neat show and also clicks in couple selections, "Time On My Hands" and "September Song." Lowe.

Court Refuses to Enjoin Chas. Yates On Vamp of 10-Yr. Pact With FB

New York court of appeals in a no-opinion decision, last week, upheld the lower court's decision denying Frederick Bros. an injunction to prevent Charlie Yates from working for any other agency until terms of the 10-year pact in effect between FB and Yates had been completed.

The court decision ends the year old battle to force Yates, now with Joe Glaser's Associated Booking Agency, to return to FB. At outset of the legal tiff, Frederick won the nod in the N. Y. supreme court. Decision was reversed in the appellate division, and latter decision was affirmed.

Outcome of the case has the trade muttering about the implications of the decision. It's the contention of several attorneys close to the trade that employment contracts between an agency and its personnel are no longer enforcable because of this suit. It's pointed out that the case gives legal direction to any agent who wants to leave an agency with whom he has a contract.

However, attorneys claim the way is still open for Frederick Bros. to collect monetary damages in a civil suit. It's pointed out here that the court decision would weaken the Frederick Bros. case considerably, but despite that, if Fredericks can prove that its business has been damaged by Yates' departure, he may be able to collect.

In this case, Frederick could also sue Joe Glaser if it could be proved that Glaser induced Yates to breach the pact. Music Corp. of America could also be a party to an action of this type inasmuch as Glaser's office, until recently was partially owned by MCA.

The injunction aspect of the case, by last week's decision, is definitely ended inasmuch as no point of constitutional law is involved and consequently cannot go to the U. S. Supreme Court.

During the trial, Frederick attempted to prove that Yates' talents as an agent were unique and irreplaceable and attempted to picture him as the "greatest agent in the business." Lower court upheld that contention, but appellate division said it was no basis for holding Yates to the contract.

Yates originally signed a 10-year contract with Frederick Bros., and left that firm after three years.

Block & Sully Re-team

Jackie Gleason has been set for State following week (13). He'll double from the Diamond Horseshoe.

Ringling B&B Pays Off 37½% of Fire Claims

Hartford, Jan. 21.

Payment of some $1,500,000 to estates and victims of the 1944 circus fire holocaust has been authorized by Superior Court Judge Charles J. McLaughlin. Will be equivalent of a 37½% dividend to claimants.

The sum was made possible by a receiver's receipt of a check for $1,000,000 from the earnings of the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey circus last year, the biggest year financially in its history. Totaled with some $536,000 the receiver has on tap, the total disbursement will come to over the million and a half mark. A first dividend payment of 25% approximate l $1,000,000. Total claims on the circus amount to $3,912,000.

Nitery Biz Slump Socks Seattle

Seattle, Jan. 21.

Local night clubs have been hard hit by the slump, with biz at its lowest ebb in 10 years, according to local nitery operators. Downtown clubs that serve only beer and wine have been the hardest hit, but straight dance halls and highway night spots are also feeling the decrease in business. Biz at smaller places has slipped from 60 to 75 per cent.

El Rancho, north end nitery, is planning to close for an indefinite period, and the Oasis, other north end spot, is now open only on Fridays and Saturdays. China Pheasant, south end night club, where Bob Harvey's band is the chief draw, is holding up better but biz is definitely off.

The Olympic Bowl, only hotel night club, is feeling the pinch, with good biz now only on Saturday nights. Hotel spot serves set-ups only; no food, no beer nor wine, so there is no way to offset drop in attendees. Bowl, like other spots, feels competition of private clubs keenly. These clubs have bars and can serve mixed drinks and operate slot machines, hence revenue can be bolstered by these services. There are two downtown clubs, the Town and Country and Magicians Club, which are typical night clubs, offering dancing, dinners and floor shows, perhaps the only ones in the country. Attendance is strictly limited to members and guests, but fees are not high and one member can take a party, so nitery operators moan about "unfair" competition.

Operation of state's peculiar liquor laws also hurts talent, with less work now available for musicians, hoofers, singers, etc., than for many a year. During the war which created boom conditions here many late spots and speaks flourished in the south end, but these have mostly closed or drastically curtailed floor shows and bands.

Proser's 15G Budget For H'wood Copa's Preem

Monte Proser is attempting to get a show, cost of which will exceed $15,000, for the preem of the Hollywood edition of the Copacabana in April.

Proser is currently dickering for Joe E. Lewis and Xavier Cugat band. Carmen Miranda has already been signed.

USO-CS Winds Up 'Curtain Call' On ETO Operation

The last of the USO-Camp Shows entertainers in Europe arrive in the United States tomorrow (Thursday) on the Army transport Gen. Holbrook, which for this trip has been tabbed by the GIs working on the sailing the "S. S. Showboat." Ventnor labeled by the Army "Operation Curtaincall" represent 200 performers, approximately 17 units. Units are not complete inasmuch as several have previously been returned to the United States.

Camp Shows activity in the European Theatre of Operations ceased Dec. 30, because of USO shift from the ETO to the Pacific. The Army felt that sufficient recreational facilities existed in the ETO to consonate for withdrawal of USO units. Organization which disbands at the end of 1947 will concentrate on the Pacific area and hospital shows.

Much of the USO-Camp Shows work in the ETO will be assumed by the Army, which is now on a program of recruiting civilian actress technicians (CATS) who will help stage Army-planned entertainments. Setup in Army's film buying is also seen as compensating for the withdrawal of USO-Camp Shows in the ETO.

Keeps Mardi Gras, N. Y.

Harry Finkelstein, operator of the Mardi Gras, N. Y., reveals that the spot is not being sold to Ben Harriman, owner of the Aquarium restaurant, which is across the street. Report had it that Finkelstein was selling.

Mardi Gras has inaugurated a new entertainment policy which has Jack Eigen interviewing guests from the spot and proceedings broadcast over WINS, N. Y.

Bonifaces, Union Heads Plan Unity Huddles to Salvage Waning Nitery Biz

Viewing the current faint recovery moves of nitery business as a temporary stopgap, a group of AFM heads, bonifaces, and band business people are planning huddles to work out an overall plan by which a general reduction can be made in cafe prices.

Members of the group, none of whom will be quoted, say that all concerned are worried over the recent slide in nitery business and feel a widespread drop in tabs will act as a shot in the arm for attendance at local boites. Reported involved in the move are musicians union people, currently most alarmed at their own drop in demand. Booking agencies report an unprecedented call for small cocktail units and single song-and-piano acts, where bands were booked before.

Bonifaces have made clear, however, that they can't lower prices unless union people are willing to make a similar reduction. Local 802 has been reported mulling such a move for the past few weeks but haven't been able to figure a way to lower rates without losing face. Result is that other labor organizations involved in niteries probably will be called into the meets in an effort to make pro rata deductions all the way down the line without hitting one more than any of the others. Then, if business pops back up to previous levels, wage scales will move accordingly.

At present the confab is still in the talking stage, but will become an actuality if the biz slide doesn't stop.

Top Budget Shows For Vanity Fair, Zanzibar, N.Y.

Joe Howard and Carl Erbe, who'll operate the Vanity Fair and the New Zanzibar, N. Y., will be the largest talent buyers on Broadway once those two cafes are opened. Vanity Fair, which opens Jan. 30, will spend around $15,000 weekly, while the Zanizabar, opening of which is set for Feb. 5, will shell out around $8,000 weekly.

Contracts with the Mills Bros., at around $2,500 weekly and Eddie Heywood's orch, for the Zanzibar show, are expected to be closed this week.

Vanity Fair's layout will have Gertrude Niesen, Jan Murray, Hal LeRoy, Boyd Raeburn's orch, Donita, and Nelle Fisher. Donn Arden will do the production.

Fla. Cafes Begin To Repeat Acts

Scarcity of name attractions for Florida cafes, despite its brief 10-week season is seen by the fact that Miami Beach spots are repeating headliners and are using names that have played other cafes in the area. Jackie Miles has been re-signed to play the Beachcomber following current stand of Martha Raye. Miles wound up an engagement there two weeks ago.

Jane Froman, current at the Colonial Inn at nearby Hallendale, Fla., has been signed for the Latin Quarter, Miami Beach, March 21.

Practice, until recently, was confined to non-name talent, many of whom played the round of minor cafes. However, inability of talent agencies to supply a continual flow of fresh b.o. names, is causing the operators to repeat talent that clicked previously during the season.

MLLE. BOYER'S CAFE DATE

Lucienne Boyer, French singer, signed for Cafe Society Uptown, N. Y., is due to arrive in the United States Jan. 31 on the S. S. America.

She opens Feb. 10 at $2,500 weekly.

SWING ST. MUTED BY LACK OF JITTERBUG COIN

New York's famed 52d street, which incubated name bands and has been the showcase of numerous swing stylists, currently presents the saddest facade since beginning of the war. Several spots haven't been able to weather the post-New Year slump and have given up, and most bistros are feeling the pinch of shorter takes since war work isn't providing the jitterbugs with lush spending money.

The street was further decimated by a fire at Kelly's Stable, last week, which closed the spot.

Other casualties on the lane include the Onyx club which is now a straight eatery, and the Swing Club, converted into a liquor package shop.

They Tell Me

the thing to do after an opening is to take a "THANK YOU AD" in VARIETY. Having directed and written for SID CAESAR, who opened so brilliantly at the Copacabana, New York, January 2, and, having directed JULES MUNSHIN, who debuted sensationally at Cafe Society, Uptown, January 13, as well as having written his material in collaboration with Mel Tolkin, I want to express my appreciation to those who were so helpful during the period of preparation and rehearsal. I want to thank James, the elevator man in my building, for being so patient though knee-deep in pianists, arrangers, press agents and comedians. I'm most grateful to my neighbors for not calling the cops during the practice. I want to thank the Sixth Avenue Delicatessen for the swell sandwiches and the Russian Tea Room for the hot borscht. And I won't forget my janitor for keeping the steam going during those cold Winter nights.

Night Club Reviews

but what he does is solidly commercial.

The line is seen in some lush, colorful costuming as it parades behind Lewis' songs and provides a nifty Samba routine for finale.

Buddy Shaw orch is augmented by five pieces here and provides good music background batoned by Sol Klein. Loop.

Panther Room, Chi

(SHERMAN HOTEL)

Chicago, Jan. 17.

Claude Thornhill Orch (19) with Fran Warren, Buddy Hughes, Line (7). Carl Marx; $1.50-$2.50 min.

Claude Thornhill shows good basis for his present booking; his is first orchestra to repeat here in a six-month period. Musically it is far above most of the aggregations that have appeared in this room in the past few months.

Band is large compared to recent combinations seen here, carrying 19 men with two soloists. Brass and reeds make up most of the combo with four trumpets, three trombones, six saxes with doubles on clarinet, two French horns, and four rhythm including Thornhill on piano. "Boys look smart with light blue jackets over brown trousers.

After "Snowfall" theme, band follows with "Arabian Dance" from "Nutcracker Suite" starting off minor key theme by two F.H. and featuring work of Ted Goddard on alto sax and Bob Walters on clarinet. Bob Jenney, trombone player, steps forward with vocal of "Don't Call Me Boy." Thornhill goes heavy on piano show pieces with "Yours Is My Heart Alone," "Autumn Nocturne," and "Warsaw Concerto." "Nocturne" introduces male vocalist, Buddy Hughes, who displays good timing and diction. Repeats with solid job on "Begin the Beguine." Other vocalist is Fran Warren, who does neatly on "Falling in Love With Me," "Sunday Kind of Love," and a revival of "I Get the Blues When It Rains." Band takes off with Fats Waller tune, "Stealin' Apples," riffing all the way with sustained brass blowing and drum beating.

Line has a couple of numbers that are only so-so. Carl Marx continues to clown with payees. Loop.

Normandie Roof, Mont'l

(MOUNT ROYAL HOTEL)

Montreal, Jan. 16.

Romo Vincent, Renee & Roof, Buddy Clarke Orch (14) and Norma Hutton, Erni Ardi Quintet; $1 couvert weekdays, $1.50 Saturdays.

Romo Vincent's 'nth engagement at the Normandie still is one of the things local nitery followers look forward to. Since there's ten, if not many of these followers these days, Vincent's socko preformance is witnessed by only-fairish houses, but he doesn't disappoint those who do show up. He's still as fresh as ever, timing perfect, material clean, and the result is that he registers big.

Portly comic, working with a bad case of laryngitis, comes through to knock 'em dead with some of his well-known stuff and other items that are on the newish side. Best of the things not seen here before is his takeoff on the guy down south running for mayor.

His known stuff like "Jose O'Neill" still goes big and his patter and clicko salesmanship sends him off to a hefty palm.

Renee & Roof round out the layout with some nifty ballroomology featuring waltz, samba and a cute item called "Evolution of the Jitterbug."

Buddy Clarke's orch is solid in the backgrounding. Norma Hutton handles vocals in top fashion. Erni Ardi Quintet does neat reliefing. Biz so-so. Lacs.

Blue Room, N. O.

(HOTEL ROOSEVELT)

New Orleans, Jan. 16.

Johnny Long Orch (16) with Francey Lane, Buster Shaver, with Olive, George and Richard; Sonny Skylar, Chester Dolphin; $1.50 min. Saturdays and Sundays.

Town's only hotel nitery, continues to attract top patronage, and while current show lacks quantity it does have quality. Show runs about an hour and packs variety.

Johnny Long's orch provides the dansapation as well as playing for the acts, and gets top billing on the marquee. Crew headed by southpaw fiddler produces a brand of sweet and jive music that fits this spot nicely.

Buster Shaver and his midget trio —Olive, George and Richard—cop top honors of the show with Sonny Skylar, the warbling songwriter. Little people dance and sing with plenty of energy and enthusiasm and net plenty of palm pounding. Shaver accompanies on the piano, and does a ballroom dance with gal for additional applause.

Skylar is no stranger here and patrons like his personality and work. He sings a medley of his tunes, plus a few other pops, for nice reception.

Chester Dolphin balances balls on his head, juggles, and spins discs while standing upside down. He does everything with ease and has a pleasant line of chatter which keeps patrons in good humor.

Francey Lane, warbler with Long's outfit, sings with the band as well as in the floor show. She is easy on the eyes and has nice pipes. Gal knows how to sell a song. Goes over big.

Long aggregation keeps dance floor packed before and after show. Biz capacity when caught. Linz.

Esquire, Mont'l

Montreal, Jan. 17.

Eddie Kinley, Pat Morgan, Tops & Wilda, The Workmans (2), Armand Meerte's Orch (10), Line (10), Eddie La Sante Trio; $1 min.

Esquire parley makes up in quantity what it lacks in quality. Whole show is on the longish side and needs tightening.

Eddie Kinley does the emceeing. Opens weakly with some off-hand gags that doesn't quite sell but warms up nicely in his own spot. Kinley does a zany kind of comedy routine and shows clicko timing and salesmanship, but the guy's in bad need of material. Scotch routine is okay and even the Toy Soldier bit but his tired chatter handicaps his breezy style.

The Workmans get nice returns for a neatly dressed novelty musical act. Work with glasses, rubber hoses, with guy registering with solid horn blowing.

Tops & Wilda are sepia terpers who do okay but could do better if they cut that opening and unintelligible song as well as bring up their fast off dance routine. It's slow and faded. Jitterbug item, nothing new, but well done gets 'em off to a solid mitt.

Tenoring of Pat Morgan tops layout on the way it sells. Lad has picked up many stage tricks since last around and also acquired polish. Has to beg off after "Blue Skies," "Lamp Lighter" and other pop tunes.

Al Webber's line is clicko and one of the best things in the show. Armand Meerte's orch hits the show cues nicely. Eddie La Sante Trio are okay in relief spot. Lacs.

Clover Club, Miami

(FOLLOWUP)

Miami, Jan. 17.

Included in the group of clubs that have been wondering where the hell to go, the Clover Club has brought back the Vagabonds, who proved its best draw last year, to bypo biz with an arrangement whereby the quartet double between the main room for two shows, then take over in their own intime spot for four latecomers.

Opening night pointed to good chances for the current set to pull the year 'round mainland spot out of the doldrums. The foursome have added plenty of know-how to their stint since their last appearance here and were sock from their entrance. Laugh-getting stint includes their "Angelina" the Ink Spots, the Mex takeoff and the hillbilly satire for toppers. Encore of "Mark Time" showed comedy proclivities of Pete Petersen, bass player-soloist and the dead pan accordionist. All of the four blend into biz with smoothness that adds to the gayety. They should do top biz for rooms.

Boots McKenna has changed his line, to better advantage, what with good dancers and giving them some niftier routines. Betty Reilly has definitely hit a bull stride with her mixture of Hebew-Irish-Spanish-English songs. Hers is a zingy quality that clicks. Copsey & Ayres add the fast pace of the production with their top Balinese styled terps for begoff returns. Ken Delaney and Tony Lopez split the show stalling chores in nice style. Lary.

'Bedelia's 2 Ends

who escaped justice via killing himself violated the production code.

As a result, Goldsmith spent an additional $80,000 to make a last reel in which Margaret Lockwood, in the title role, is shown giving herself up to the police. When he brought the film to the U. S., Goldsmith showed it first with the British ending and discovered the Breen office had had a change of heart. Which left him in the dilemma of having both ends unacceptable.

While the pic was highly successful in England with the suicide finish, tests showed it had a much stronger femme appeal in America when Miss Lockwood was shown handing herself over to the cops. Goldsmith figures the difference is that in the British reel the husband is made the hero, while in the American the femme is made to look heroic by her boldness in submitting herself to justice—and women liked that.

That American Appeal

Goldsmith pointed out that the film was one of the first made in England with the very clear objective of appealing to American audiences. It was thus, he said, that an American writer was used and the tempo was stepped up to American tastes, rather than British. He said he felt the net result was that it gained in its appeal to the British as well as Americans, and he thought more English producers should follow step.

Regarding the current controversy over the British quota, Goldsmith said he felt the only solution to getting playing time for English pix on American screens was the process of shaping them more carefully to the American audience. "Pictures for export are just like automobiles for export," he declared. "The British know that if they want to sell their cars to Egyptians they have to make them with special wheels and equipment to fit the physical conditions of desert driving. It's the same with films. If you want to sell them abroad, you must fashion them for the conditions in the territory to which they are to go."

Costs of production are about one-third less in England than in Hollywood, said Goldsmith, who is in the U. S. to make a film for Eagle-Lion. Savings, he asserted, come from lower costs of stories and stars. Labor charges are about one-half those in Hollywood, but English workers are less than one-half as efficient, so there's no saving there, Goldsmith said. He said American studio unions were much more cooperative than those in Britain.

Goldsmith is east to attend the preem of "Bedelia" in Harrisburg and Reading, Pa., next week. He returns to the Coast to start shooting on "Out of the Blue" on a one-picture deal for E-L.

Rank's Pressure

dustry chiefs. "Now I had thought all along I had done good work with 'In Which We Serve,' " Wilby said. "It had been at a time when the two countries were fighting allies. So I was surprised when our hosts let us know the million dollars the picture grossed here did not satisfy them. The Rank outfit made it clear they considered American exhibitors should have done much better."

Pointing out that Paramount owns 50% of the Wilby-Kincey circuit, Wilby declared "Barney Balaban (Par prez) can't make me play a Paramount picture if I don't want to." As for "shaming" American exhibs into playing English pix. "It's the one thing you can't do to an exhibitor—shame him," Wilby said. "You may be able to fool him into buying a famon, you may even be able to kid him into doing you a favor—but you're barking up the wrong tree if you tell him he ought to be ashamed of himself."

Jansleys' Later Date

The Jansleys, who were slated to open Thursday (16) at Loew's State theatre, N. Y., have been given a new date at that house, instead. Risley act was cut from the current layout because of the more than two hour running time of the film "The Jolson Story.".

They'll return Feb. 13.

Copa, Chi, Tagged For Overtime Pay for Chorines

American Guild of Variety Artists last week collected $1,500 from Sam Rinella, operator of the Copacabana, Chicago, for overtime pay for choristers in current show.

Gals had complained to the Chi branch of AGVA that they had rehearsed two weeks beyond time allotted by union. There had been some controversy as to whether Wally Wanger, who produced the show, or Rinella, operator of the bistro, should be tagged for the overtime pay.

Matt Shelvey, national head of the union, planed to Chi, sifted the gals' complaints and decided Rinella was responsible and latter paid off.

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

With vaude doing a fast fade hereabouts when the Million Dollar, Los Angeles, drops acts early next month, playing time has become so scarce and budgets generally so pruned, most turns are ignoring it. With the single exception of the Golden Gate, San Francisco, there is no house in the entire far west paying much more than AGVA minimum scale.

Aside from the San Francisco spot, only two other theatres in all of California continue with stages lighted at any time. In Long Beach, the Strand uses four acts, split-week, on a budget of $800 per stanza. In San Jose, the Victory plays acts on Saturdays and Sundays only.

In the Pacific Northwest there are full-week stands at Capitol, Portland; Paloma, Seattle; Strand, Vancouver. But salaries are low and theatres seldom take on any names. The Vancouver house, for instance, will use only three acts, and one must be a stripper. The Capitol, Yakima, and Post St., Spokane, use acts three days weekly. Probably best spot west of Rockies, the Golden Gate excepted, is Lyric, Salt Lake City, a full-week date. House is owned by Mormon Church, and consequently will play only finely sieved acts. Humor must be well above the belt and hoofers strictly straight. Lyric has a penchant for western film leads, and will expand the budget to get one. Ken Maynard recently got $1,500 for himself and hoss. A standard turn of known quality can get a catch of coin also, as witness the $1,000 stipend secured by Nick Lucas for a stanza.

With theatres' tightened budgets, it has become increasingly difficult even to sell a modest unit, which formerly played many of the above theatres. Irene Vermillion, Kermit Dart and Benny Ross and Maxine Stone, all standard acts, put together a small unit and recently was ready to go into rehearsal under tag "Hollywood and Vine," when they discovered they could get no playing time at figure they asked, $3,000 weekly. Going begging here now is projected unit, headed by Riders of the Purple Sage, put together by Danny Winkler agency to sell at $2,750. Count Bernivici within past fortnight figured out personnel of a unit, and when he couldn't sell it to houses on straight fare of flesh at $3,000, planned on taking it up the Coast on a barnstorming trek. However, he changed his mind when AGVA asked him for cash bond of $4,600, amounting to cast salaries for fortnight. Bernivici figured the hit-or-miss operation would be too precarious an undertaking.

Increasingly, standard acts are thinking strictly in terms of niteries when they trek west today. Spots like the Last Frontier in Las Vegas and San Francisco still pay wartime figures.

Talent Union Rules Acts Must Carry Cards, Pacts on All Dates

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

The American Guild of Variety Artists has launched a campaign to cause all members to carry union credentials as well as performing contracts with them on all jobs. Any act found without cards and pact will be fined. AGVA's local office has instructed its four field reps to make constant calls on performers working niteries to ascertain if they have paid dues to date and if their working papers are union-approved.

Late last week Pat O'Shea, warbler at Ace Cain's, was fined $15 and Tommy Williams, Starlit Room singer, $25, after being picked up by AGVA reps. Joe Cappo, Ruth Hazen and Barbara Styles, who failed to appear at union office to answer charges, have had preliminary fines chalked against them and must appear at a hearing (Thurs. (23).

The drive is an adjunct to campaign AGVA has uncorked against booking agencies in Far West. Florine Bale, union chief here, hailed in all agents before issuing franchises for this year and read 'em the riot act. Hereafter, Miss Bale declares she will revoke license of any booker who fails to submit to union a weekly and accurate list of all bookings, anyone who fails to pay full minimum scale to performers or tries to dodge posting salary bonds on touring shows.

Murray's Drops Shows

Steve Murray's Inn, N. Y., dropped its floor show last week due to general slump in nitery biz.

Spot operated by Murray, comedian-emcee, had been playing five acts and a line of girls. Talent was paid off Monday (20) from security up at American Guild of Variety Artists.

STATE GETS 'SONGWRITERS'

"Songwriters on Parade," a unit composed of tunesmiths, is slated to go into Loew's State, N. Y., Feb. 13. Layout is headed by Charlie Tobias and is tentatively slated to include Nat Simon, Herman Hupfeld, Bennie Benjamin, George Weiss and Susan Allen, vocalist.

Other dates are being lined up by the William Morris agency.

DANCER 'MISSING'

Johnnie Mae Thompson, femme half of the dance-team of Smiles and Smiles, has been reported missing by her husband and partner Charles Thompson. Thompson told the police that his wife failed to return after a shopping trip last Tuesday (14).

Team had appeared in several musicals, but had not been working lately.

Sale of Bradford, Boston, Shifts Bookings to MCA

Booking of the Bradford Roof, Boston, which last week was sold to Alfred Kaskel, who also owns the Belmont Plaza hotel, N. Y., has shifted from the Arthur Fisher office to Music Corp. of America. MCA takes over the spot Jan. 30, with Johnny Greenhut of that office booking. Opening show under the change of bookers is still to be set. Current headliner in the spot is Jimmy Savo, who remains until Feb. 1.

Change of management may give the other Boston spots a breather in the booking of names, since it's likely that the new management may go in for a policy similar to that of the Belmont Plaza where medium-priced names are used.

AGVA Convention In Chicago April 3

Initial national convention of American Guild of Variety Artists has been set for April 3, 4, 5 at the Sherman hotel, Chicago. Date was definitely set this week by Matt Shelvey, national head of AGVA, who stated the confab, originally set for a month earlier, had to be set back because of enormous amount of work necessary to set up machinery to contact the 32,000 members of the talent union on the plans. Just how many of the membership will be available to attend is problematical at this time.

Shelvey, who returned to New York after pacting the Chi convention site, stated that he would meet with 15 key reps of the union in Chicago, March 28, to set up the machinery of the convention, its agenda, etc.

Main point of business on the agenda will be election of officers, viz: president, five veepees, secretary, treasurer and a directorate board of 50. All will be honorary posts. Only salaried post, via appointment by officers and board of directors, will be that of executive director, with duties similar to those which Shelvey now has with the union as national director.

Shelvey has had his current post through appointment in 1943 by Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent of all talent unions, which took over affairs of AGVA at that time when it had accrued an indebtedness of $71,000 to sister unions (Equity, Chorus Equity, Screen Actors Guild) and its future seemed doubtful.

PROVIDENCE HOTEL SALE?

The Biltmore hotel, Providence, is in process of being sold to the Sheraton hotel chain for $5,000,000.

Saranac Lake

By Happy Benway

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Jan. 21.

Tom Curry, veteran stagehand, underwent "Rib" operation and resting comfortably.

Among the ex-Rogerites continuing treatment in the downtown colony and doing okay are Margo Meredith, Ruby Galez, Marion Green, Carol Phelps, Oscar Price, Bernard Illion, Ann Commerford, Helen O'Reilly, Margaret Daugherty and Len Grotte.

Returning home from the local pix theatre John Louden was stricken with a heart attack. He has recovered and is now resting comfortably.

Benny Ressler and frau back from N. Y. City to resume the routine at his 96 Park Ave. cottage. Ditto for the Mac Shapiros who spent a two week vacash in Brooklyn.

Forrest "Slim" Glenn and Victor (IATSE) Gamba upped for pix once a week.

Mary and Gertrude Scheedel in for weekend to visit Frank (RKO) Scheedel who has been upped for meals, pix and mild exercise.

Princess Elda Benedict and Lillian (Par) Bergson flashing good clinic reports.

Thanks to Rhea B. Potier, James Lee, Toole Holmes, Fred Doringer, Ford Raymond and Uncle Henry Berlinghoff, who made the holidays brighter for the gang with gifts and reading matter.

Julia Kaufhold in from Harrisburg, Pa., mitting husband Charles Kaufhold, Ernest Lalis and Mrs. H. Harrison in from Hollywood to visit William Lalis.

Despite Slump, Several New Montreal Niteries Set to Snare Tourist Trade

Montreal, Jan. 21.

Montreal nitery bonifaces, are in a quandary trying to figure out the paradoxical situation in the mushrooming of new spots within the past few weeks despite the general slump in nitery biz.

Though there's talk of some spots (not the established ones) cutting out their floor shows if biz doesn't pick up by the middle of February, the fact remains that ops who have never had shows before have put them in, or are planning to do so, and other places have opened their doors for the first time with entertainment.

Le Quartier Latin is the most recent of the new spots. Spot is an atmosphere bistro aiming to catch the tourists seeking a continental atmosphere. Another class spot due to open in a few weeks is The Algiers also playing up atmosphere.

There's also been a mushrooming of Yiddish spots with Suffrin's, where Jennie Goldstein just closed, being the initialer. Now Sloppy Joe's a block down from Suffrin's in the Jewish section of town, is getting its first show set which will probably open next week. Ray Cooper is booking Yiddish niteries. Palm Cafe has again begun to bring in shows and is spending hefty coin on remodelling in an effort to attract class clientele.

Tic Toc, top spot here during early war years and a cocktailery, has been sold by Puggy Dettner for $90,000 and will within a few weeks begin undergoing alteration to revert back to a nitery. Tic Toc's union headaches have been ironed out and new owners are planning to book name performers for the shows.

Meanwhile, established niteries like the El Morocco and Esquire are trying to figure out different gimmicks do perk up their biz. El has started samba lessons and champagne hours and may open for Saturday matinees to attract femme trade. Straight rhumba quintet is being brought in and Dino & Rosita, ballroomologists are being held over to attract the payees via rhumba and samba events.

Joan Edwards Stage Dates

Joan Edwards has been set for the Paramount theatre, N. Y., starting Feb. 26. Singer, who 'wound up on the "Hit Parade" airshow Saturday (18), has been signed for the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, for a week starting today (22).

Miss Edwards plans to play other theatres en route from the Coast.

Guild Rules Matinees Out for New Yorker Hotel's Blade Show

American Guild of Variety Artists is cracking down on matinee sessions of current ice revue at the Hotel New Yorker, N. Y. It has notified spot that matinee sessions are in violation of its pact with the union.

Hotel recently signed a new pact with talent union calling for two shows nightly and no provision for matinees, which are against regulations of the union for nitery operations.

Union, however, may arbitrate on matter of permitting a Saturday matinee of the blade show if performers are given extra pay for this performance. But until AGVA gives the green light matinees are out. According to union spot had been running several afternoon sessions weekly.

King Cole Trio's 17G Take on Philly Date

King Cole trio in its date last week at the Earle theatre, Philadelphia, took out $17,115 as its cut on a near-record gross of $45,230.

Cole had to pay the salaries of support acts, Luis Richardson's band, Edwards sisters and Dusty Fletcher.

Ohio Fair Taxes 'Unfair'

Columbus, Jan. 21.

Proposals to establish a headquarters office in Columbus and campaign to abolish state and federal admissions taxes on fairs is being studied by managers of Ohio's 93 independent and county fairs.

Bruce Burgess, Delaware, O., who sponsored the move, said small fairs were "getting gargantuan competition from all kinds of entertainment businesses, and unless we organize we are going to perish."

Corey Into Copa, N. Y.

Irwin Corey has been signed for the Copacabana, N. Y., starting Jan. 30. Corey, who started in New York cafes at the Village Vanguard, has played the Blue Angel and Le Ruban Bleu. Copa marks his first large eastsiderie.

Loew-Ent.

run was not announced but it's believed to be indefinite, depending on how long the arrangements are mutually advantageous. With Metro having announced a cut in the number of pictures to be produced in 1947 from 31 to 24, the international company was reportedly in need of outside product such as Enterprise will produce, since M-G has almost absorbed its foreign backlog built up during war years and is presently distributing close to its current releases abroad. Ent's first-year production slate, with most pictures having some kind of an international flavor, calls for six films, five of which are now in various stages of production.

Arthur Loew returned from the Coast last weekend, where he viewed prints of Ent product, including Erich Maria Remarque's "Arch of Triumph," a rough cut of "The Other Love," also filmed from a Remarque novel, and rushes of the first week's shooting of "Body and Soul."

While no arrangements have been made yet for Loew's to distribute Ent product as part of its foreign 16m program, it's believed the deal will also include this phase of distribution. Shortage of product has been one of the chief stymieing factors to the expansion of the company's narrow-gauge operations overseas, so that Ent pix will reportedly be welcomed by the 16m department.

New Acts

MARTIN and LEWIS
Comedy Singing
15 Mins.
State, N. Y.

This new act, composed of Dean Martin, who at one time began making an impression on the crooner parade, and Jerry Lewis, a young comic, has a good future. Deriving maximum benefit from the fresh, clean, youthful appearance of the pair the turn does a smart job of tickling customers' funny-bones at the State, which is playing to capacity houses with "The Jolson Story."

Though there's a pattern to the act, based on Martin's neat vocaling and Lewis' complete lack of inhibition, it seems to the customers to be almost completely ad lib. The two combine to work over "That Old Gang of Mine," Martin foiling for Lewis, decked out as a moronic bartender, do vocal takeoffs of various top stars, etc. All they do cannot be detailed, but virtually every bit of it is good for solid laughs. Finale bit finds Lewis directing the pit band as "Jose Disturbi" for Martin's gagged-up version of "Old Man River."

All in all, these two kids have themselves a fine act. There are rough edges, but they'll wear away and what's underneath will wear a good deal longer. Wood.

JOSEPHINE PREMICE
Songs
8 Mins.
Village Vanguard, N. Y.

Josephine Premice appeared in concert halls before starting her cafe career. In her nitery bow the sepia songstress, backed by a bongo player, displays sufficient vocal versatility to impress as fitting fodder for the uptown boites.

Miss Premice has a full-bodied voice that shows up equally well in the low as well as higher registers, and she injects a great deal of personality in projection. She does especially well in the calypso department and is able to knock off a French chanson with equal ease.

She's done dancework in her concert tours, last jaunt being with Josh White. However, small confines of the Vanguard floor prohibits a display of her terps. Jose.

OLIVETTE MILLER
Harpist
10 Mins.
Cafe Society Downtown, N. Y.

In Olivette Miller, Barney Josephson has hit upon a performer who has the exploitation possibilities that could build her up to the status of Hazel Scott. This sepia harpist with a feeling for swing as well as classic versions of pops, puts her stress upon personality and has no trouble getting across.

However, in stressing personality, she shows a tendency to mugg too much, which detracts from her music. The harp and fingering technique have sufficient visual interest to hold for the audience, making further visual gimmicks superfluous. Jose.

ROBERT DE LISLE
Songs
11 Mins.
La Martinique, N. Y.

Robert De Lisle, a newcomer in N. Y. class cafes, although with obvious experience elsewhere, has visual and vocal assets of interest to the femme trade. His distinguished appearance is sufficient to keep the ladies quiet, but unfortunately, not all his notes are true on the slower tunes. He does much better in pieces of the calibre of "Stand Up and Fight," which gets him his biggest response.

His stage demeanor is good and once the vocal kinks are ironed out, he'll do in the choice locations. Jose.

CISCO HOUSTON
Songs
10 Mins.
Cafe Society Downtown, N. Y.

Newest entrant in ranks of balladeers impresses as a personable chap with a set of pleasing pipes, but still has to adapt this folk-song form to commercial levels. Accompanying himself on the guitar, he does a quartet of acceptable tunes with too little interpretation to maintain interest. Delivery is on a one-toned level, which doesn't point up the potent portions of the song.

He's also to develop more fully a personable line of small-talk to explain the various ballads. Jose.

Raftery Fights Selznick

by DOS to 20th, but later deals of a similar nature with RKO.

Selznick's attorneys, Lowell Wadmond and Chester Bordeau, of White & Case, were trying to establish in the testimony that in drawing up the pact to bring Selznick into UA it was long argued and well understood that he was to have the right to abandon story properties and lend actors unlimitedly. Louis Frohlich, acting for Chaplin, aimed to prove that Selznick had promised in talks and in publicity releases to make for UA the three pix he sold to 20th.

24th Draft

One of the amusing and amazing facts disclosed in the depositions is that the agreement finally accepted by which UA contracted to advance Selznick $1,000,000 for production was the 24th draft. Raftery and Dan O'Shea, Selznick's rep, went on drafting and redrafting the contract from the spring right through the summer and into the fall. At draft No. 11 (Sept. 15, 1941), the negotiations fell apart because of Raftery's insistence that DOS should not have the unlimited rights he demanded on story abandonment and player loanouts.

When O'Shea phoned Raftery to tell him the deal was off, Raftery declared: "I told him I was very happy over it; that I was going to take the Stratoliner home that day."

Raftery hadn't caught the plane, however, before Korda got Chaplin, Pickford, Selznick and himself into a huddle that lasted from dinner until 4 a. m. At the end of it they told Raftery and O'Shea to keep on drafting and a complicated compromise was finally reached later that month. Raftery's attitude was that UA would have no protection from Selznick's using coin, advanced him by the company, to pay overhead on stories which he could sell someone else and stars he could loan out and never use for UA's benefit. Final agreement was that part of the income from sales of abandoned stories would be applied to the overhead with which they had been charged.

No Compromise

Inasmuch as Selznick still was under contract to deliver two pix to UA under a four-picture 1937 distrib deal, Raftery's attitude was not to compromise in the new negotiations, but force DOS to deliver the two pix, since he couldn't work for anyone else until he did. Miss Pickford agreed with him. Korda, however, got angry and Raftery quoted him as saying:

"You are like all lawyers. You and Charley Schwartz (Chaplin's attorney) come out here and all you try to do is queer the deals we set up. We're making the deal and we're hiring you to draft the papers, and that's all."

At one point Raftery sought a compromise by which Selznick would have to offer any story or star to the producers associated with UA before he could let them go to an outsider. Selznick objected strongly, rattling off a list of minor UA producers whom he wouldn't trust to make pix with his players. Korda shrugingly agreed.

Korda's mood changed, however, when he returned from England a year later and learned that Selznick had sold "Keys of the Kingdom," "Claudia" and "Jane Eyre" to 20th. Korda testified: "I was upset and I said to Mr. Raftery that if there is a cause, if we have any possibility of winning a lawsuit, he should sue Mr. Selznick, but if he thinks we have no rights, no chance to win, we should not make fools out of ourselves."

"Outrageous" Action

Korda also wrote a four-or five-page letter to Chaplin calling Selznick's action "outrageous" and protested to Selznick personally. Selznick replied that he was "bored" with the stories. Korda testified that he also remonstrated with Selznick later because he had provided UA with no films during 1942 or 1943. He said he saw Chaplin about Selznick's 20th-Fox sales, and Chaplin felt the same as he did, "but was more violent."

Raftery was doubtful UA had a suit against Selznick that would hold up in court and wrote an opinion to that effect for the owners.

Frohlich didn't have too much success in establishing through questioning Korda, that Selznick wouldn't have been taken into UA if Korda had known he intended selling the three stories. Korda repeatedly maintained that he had great respect for Selznick as a producer, and he "wouldn't weigh up his value to what he owns at any moment." VARIETY of Oct. 6, 1941, was introduced in evidence to prove that Selznick said he planned making the three films in dispute.

Selznick and O'Shea later claimed to Korda and Raftery that DOS had good reason for selling each of the stories. On "Keys," O'Shea is quoted as telling Raftery, Selznick feared opposition of the Catholic Church. He had called in the Rev. Wilford Parsons, former editor of the American Jesuit Magazine, who said "he could not give any advice or assurance that if Selznick followed the story he could make a picture with which the Catholic Church would be satisfied. The dogmatic tolerance is particularly bad."

As for "Claudia," Selznick thought it "too inconsequential" for his first after "Gone With the Wind" and he wanted something more significant, "with a home front angle." "Jane Eyre," Selznick thought, was "too much like 'Rebecca'."

Going back to the negotiations, which lasted from April to October, 1941, to get Selznick into the company, Korda testified, under cross-examination by Frohlich, that he wanted DOS in since the UA overhead was $60,000 a week domestic and $120,000 worldwide, and pix were needed in a hurry to support the organization. Selznick, as a result, laid out a flock of terms, including one that personnel should be reorganized at an additional expenditure of $6,000 weekly. Korda testified that such reorganization of the management and the addition of a new general salesmanager were unanimous anyway. (UA at the time had no general salesmanager, having eastern and western managers, Harry Gold and Jack Schlaifer, respectively. As a result of the subsequent organization, present distribution chief, Grad Sears, was hired.

Korda was brought into the deposition-taking as a Selznick witness, but Frohlich frequently turned him into a witness for the plaintiff. Since he's no longer a UA partner and has no particular interest in the current intramural squabble, deposition clearly shows his efforts to keep himself out of the middle and take a non-partisan course. To Frohlich's question as to whether he didn't think terms asked by Selznick were "drastic and unusual," for instance, he replied:

"I couldn't call them drastic, because when I myself became a UA stockholder, although I didn't pay anything for the stock, I became immediately, before I fulfill (conditions for ownership) of the stock a full-fledged owner and had voting right of the stock. So he didn't have any more on that account than I had."

Korda admitted, however, under Frohlich's prodding, that he fulfilled his promise for delivery of pictures.

Metro Tests

bidding in Philly, "Holiday in Mexico," the William Goldman outfit outbid Warners to get the picture for its top downtown house.

Metro apparently succeeded in its efforts to anticipate the decree by conducting the tests almost exactly as the decree outlines. Exhibs are given 10 days after notice of a picture's availability to send in their bids to the branch office via registered mail. Bids are then sent into the homeoffice, where a specially-constituted committee of the sales staff makes the decision. It's possible that if competitive bidding emerges as a part of the decree from the appeal slated to be taken to the U. S. Supreme Court, that Metro might turn over the decision duties to its branch managers, but nothing has been definitely decided yet on that.

Metro, meanwhile, is continuing to offer pictures for bidding in all territories where the system has been inaugurated, and it may even broaden its scope by going into other territories that are also strictly competitive but not so tied up.

"Competitive bidding," the M-G spokesman said, "hasn't cost Metro any money, but it has got pictures flowing, and that's what is necessary."

Paramount, N. Y.

Mills Bros. (4), Olga San Juan, Tim Herbert, Renauld & Rudy, Elliot Lawrence Orch (17) with Jack Hunter, Don Baker; "Perfect Marriage" (Par), reviewed in VARIETY Nov. 20, '46.

Big item on this bill is the preem appearance of Elliot Lawrence at a firstrun Main Stem house. And Lawrence manages well enough, although there are a few rough edges to be polished off his fronting and introductory chores. Boyish ebullience grates occasionally.

Fortunately for the evidently nervous maestro, the band is, with only two exceptions, definitely a background piece in this bill. With 5 reed plus an oboe, 6 brass plus French horn, and 4 rhythms, orch cuts well behind the acts and shows to good effect in its two solo spots. Its opener is "They've Got a Lotta Coffee in Brazil," followed by baritone Jack Hunter doing an original and cleverly paced arrangement of "Over the Rainbow." Great returns here bring him back for "September Song" and the manner in which he discharges his duties marks him a fortunate find for this upcoming outfit.

Ghezzis, originally booked in this spot, were hurt in the first show and replaced by Renauld and Rudy, another hand-to-hand act. Besides the usual accoutrements of biceps, team has youth and passable good looks. In the briefest trunks and Roman sanda's they look like a couple of cover boys for "Everlasting Strength and Health" and draw plenty of squeals from the femme moppets. Slow motion gymnastics, ranging from straight stands and presses to a one-armed hand-to-hand planche, are fine, but some of the posturing could be dispensed with.

Olga San Juan is no stranger to Paramount auds, having been on screen there recently in "Blue Skies." Combining the best of Betty Hutton with the worst of an errant firecracker, she opens with "Bim Bam Bum" and follows with "Cuba," tune she did with Bing Crosby in the film. Incidentally, she's turned blonde for her p.a. chores. She does a couple of other Latin numbers in which, as well as in her first, her voice seems to get lost in the big house. She seems to have plenty of volume, but mike placement probably is partially responsible.

A fast line of comedy chatter and gimmicks is dished up by Tim Herbert, fast enough to keep the occasional laughs hiding some weakish material. Best bit is a parody on the Russian delegate who's always late, called "When I Walk In, Gromyko's Walking Out." Comic has a nice personality but needs to tighten his act. More terping would help.

Lawrence Orch bridges here with the maestro doing an 88 solo on "Rhapsody in Blue." It's good commercial pash, but also nice piano technique.

Great performers from beginning to end and certainly the big draw on this stagebill, the Mills Brothers could stay on all day and keep the crowd happy. They don't do as much "instrumental" work as they did in the earlier days, sticking to straight word vocals, but from any angle they're top entertainment. They do their bestselling recorded tunes, "Guess I'll Get the Papers and Go Home," "Paper Doll," "Don't Know Enough About You," "Lazy River" and an encore on "Basin St. Blues," one of their oldtimers. More care on mike balance is indicated in a couple of spots, but not obvious. Appealing comic work helps to occasional chuckles, too. A sock closer of which payees couldn't get enough. Tomm.

Capitol, Wash.

Washington, Jan. 18.

Smith & Dale (4), Cardini, Deane Carroll, Boy Foy; "Mighty McGurk" (M-G).

Capitol takes a breather between two high budget stage shows this week with a modest but pleasant offering featuring "something old, something new."

The old part of the show is the headliners, Smith & Dale, whose act goes back basically unchanged for at least a generation. Gags that drew laughs in the same doctor's office scene before Warner's "Jazz Singer" altered the face of vaude, are still drawing laughs today. The lines have been brought up to date here and there, where a topical angle could be added, but the act continues familiar to old timers and its Weber & Fields type humor is still good for chuckles. A couple of male singers are included and at the end the four men wind up with a barbershop quartet rendition of "If You Were the Only Girl in the World."

The newness comes from Boy Foy, a clever English juggler who flips Indian clubs, dishes, balls, high hats and anything else he can get his hands on while rampaging about the stage on a unicycle. Foy works first from a low cycle and then changes over to a high one, saving his toughest stunts for the wobbly seat of the high machine. The stunts would not be particularly sensational performed by a man anchored on his own two feet, but by a man turning and twisting 10 feet in the air on a one-legged bike they are good. The audience pours out its heaviest applause for this novelty turn.

Cardini is his usual suave crowd pleaser, featuring first an endless flow of cards which keep coming out of nowhere as he tosses them away pack after pack. Highlight of the number is the cigaret stunt in which he keeps producing, smoking and tossing away lighted cigaret after lighted cigaret to the amazement of the audience. Unfortunately much of Cardini's fine handwork, particularly with cards is lost to those in the rear of a house as large as the Capitol.

Deane Carroll is a pert singer whose best number is "Indian Love Call," but who gets along very nicely with a medley in French, Spanish, English and a touch of Russian. Lowe.

Apollo, N. Y.

Stepin Fetchit, Mantan Moreland, Sarah Vaughn, Walter Green, Edwards Bros. (3), Lora Pierre, Dizzy Gillespie Orch (14) with Pancho, Milt Jackson, Ray Brown, James Moody; "GI War Brides" (Rep).

Harlem's hothouse of rebop comes up this week with one of its better bills and grabs a nice payee sendoff all around. Great favorites in this house, Stepin Fetchit and Mantan Moreland close with some fast running patter that gives Fetchit, despite his long absence from the screen, somewhat the best of it.

Dizzy Gillespie's sometimes fine, sometimes annoying band opens the session with Pancho, male vocalist, doing "These Foolish Things Remind Me of You," following an instrumental, "Cool Breeze." Lora Pierre, a well-stacked looker handles the intros for the Edwards brothers and their ofay gymnast act. Trio is okay and garners a nice sendoff in a house which is usually n.s.h. for this type of stint.

Gillespie trots out one of his Esquire poll winners, Milt Jackson, for some sensitive work on the vibes with "Man I Love," in which a medley of other tunes is trickily worked. Jackson is strictly for show, since he doesn't work with the band otherwise. Tapper Walter Green underplays very smoothly during a suave, non-stop rhythm stanza. Guy does some difficult footwork with the greatest of ease.

Miss Pierre does another intro before bowing out until later in the bill. Her psuedo-comic patter is delivered stiffly, but the heavy political angle is daubed on to grab a few yocks at the expense of Bilbo followers.

Still another poll winner, Sarah Vaughn, comes through with the sock musical work of the evening, singing "You're Not the Kind of a Boy for a Girl Like Me." Phrasing and voice technique are a little too subtle for a vaude house, but she still grabs a great mitt for "September Song" and "Mean to Me."

Band works next to closing with a couple of rebop numbers in which some good tenor work by James Moody is almost lost because of Gillespie's hogging the spot with his unsharp clowning. Jackson returns with vibes embroidery.

Fetchit and Moreland provide a nice closer, with band's poor backing fouling up Fetchit's little piano ditty. Might have been funny but they couldn't get together. Tomm.

Adams, Newark

Newark, Jan. 16.

Stan Kenton and Band (18), with Ray Wetzel, Eddie Safransky, Shelly Mann, Pastels (5), June Christy; Steve Evans; Meribeth Olds; "Larceny in Her Heart" (PRC).

Stan Kenton's crew is still something to shout about in this season of bad news for swing bands. The lanky lad has lots on the ball for the jivers, including a new approach to the problem of making music sound new.

The outfit deals mostly in impact, conveyed through a 10-man brass section that bears down a little heavily on the ears at times. But nicely balanced in the saxes and rhythm section. Kenton's fine pianoing was dimmed at the opening through lack of a suitable mike at the sounding board. "Artistry in Jumps," "Concerto to End All Concertos" and "St. James Infirmary" set forth the Kenton touch at its peak of efficiency—powerful in blast effect and crowded with tricky syncopations and trickier harmonies.

June Christy is doing the vocals. She uses her pipes to the utmost advantage in "It's a Pity to Say Goodnight," "No Misery for Me" and "She's Funny That Way," going for boff results. The Pastels, harmony quintet, croon neo-barber shop in "Zip-a-dee-doo-dah," "Sentimental Reasons" and "River St. Marie," in a torrid swingy version. Wetzel, trumpet; Safransky, double bass, and Mann, drums, offer hot instrumentalities.

Roxy, N. Y.

Gracie Fields' appearance on any stage, anywhere, is an event of importance—and her current engagement at the Roxy is no exception. The English comedienne again proves herself one of the top personalities of international showdom. Only squawk concerning her Roxy appearance is that there's not enough of it. In its endeavor to get big grosses via rapid turnover, the house is holding the stageshow down to 45 minutes—of which Miss Fields' gets 17, and which seems like nothing, since she's able to get in only about six verses of "The Biggest Aspidistra in the World."

Despite the seeming brevity of Miss Fields' turn—which the stopwatch somewhat belies — the Roxy presentation is well-rounded and pleasantly entertaining. Debonaire, male terpling-warbling quintet, tees it off with a nifty mechanical man dance that has appeal for both the ballet and giggle trade.

Mimic Arthur Blake follows with carbons of Frank Morgan, Louella Parsons, Charles Laughton, Jimmy Stewart, Katharine Hepburn, Peter Lorre, Bette Davis and F.D.R. Routine is average, suffering from the plethora of mimics, most of them doing the same personalities. While the impressions themselves are pretty good, Blake's lines aren't funny or satiric enough to get him particular notice. Carboning of Miss Davis, particularly the physical aspects of her manner of acting, is by far the best, while the most that can be said of the F.D.R. biz is that it is in as good taste as this kind of thing can be.

Latino production number winds up the pre-Fields portion of the layout. It's colorful and well-executed, with Jean Gramas doing a neat vocalizing job, although Roxy production staff seems to show a decided lack of imagination in that awkward device of having a guy stand in front of her in midstage holding a hand mike. That's peculiarly disturbing to the illusion and might be easily eliminated by hiding the instrument in a fan or a bonga, such as the other femmes carry.

Also wedded into the production number is terping by modernist Beatrice Seckler, aided by a couple boys from the line. It doesn't matter much.

Miss Fields' opens with a fave, "The Simpleness, The Sinfulness, the Wickedness of Man," tells some Scotch and Irish stories (relatively inoffensive, Mr. W.) and then does a pip of a number in one-half Afrikaan and one-half English. She follows with a blend of straight vocalizing and satire on "My Hero" from "The Chocolate Soldier" but ends it in unmistakable fashion with a cartwheel. "Walter, Walter" and "South America, Take It Away" are other great laugh-garnerers, in addition to "Aspidistra." Then comes a 20th-Fox plug for the next pic into the Roxy, "Shocking Miss Pilgrim," with Miss Fields leading the audience in singing "Forever" from the pic. She encores with a New Zealand Maori tune in which she also leads the audience for a whopping finale. Herb.

Hippodrome, Balto.

Baltimore, Jan. 19.

Pat Henning, Candy Stevens, Merry Madcaps (3), Felice Iula House Orch (12); "The Jolson Story" (Col).

Change of stage portion to accommodate continued h.o. of film ("The Jolson Story") is necessarily brief with only three entries lined up for a fairly entertaining setto.

Highlight is Pat Henning, who closes in bell-ringing style with clicko comedy and knockabout. Funny impressions and expertly timed gaggery is a standout and just right to top off balance of bill which opens nicely with The Merry Madcaps, trio of clowning harmonica blowers. Essay spots of legit instrumentation but emphasize comedy bits throughout for a breezy getaway.

Candy Stevens in between is fair with some comedy singing, mild conversation and a topping bit of solo stuff on trumpet, sax and drums. Good support from Felice Iula and house orch brought up on stage for presentation setup. Biz continues good. Burm.

RKO, Boston

Boston, Jan. 17.

Andrews Sisters, Les Paul Trio, Mack & Desmond, Bob Evans; Vic-Shoen House Orch; "Betty Co-Ed." (Col).

Andrews Sisters, consistently popular around here, handle about a third of this show and take it away without any trouble. Neither style nor gags changed very much, but that's okay with the customers who gave them a wow reception plus a beg-off.

They open with "Show Business," and then "South America Take It Away," etc., later appearing with the Les Paul Trio for "Rumors Are Flying," "Rum and Coca-Cola," the whole very sharp jazzing with good clear melody lines and above average thumping. House goes big for it, and likes the on and off routine since the gals appear throughout the show. Patti Andrews m.c.'s knowingly and keeps things plenty informal.

Variety acts sparse but strong. Mack and Desmond, dance team, whose stuff may not be too novel but have style and appearance which lifts them well above the average hoofing fare. Bob Evans, ventroing with his Jerry O'Leary, has smart line of chatter and a highly expert presentation, so goes big. And the Paul Trio, with Paul on the guitar, does an interlude on "Steel Guitar Boogie" and "Blue Skies" which is plenty satisfactory. Biz was very big. Elie.

Earle, Philly

Philadelphia, Jan. 17.

Earl Carroll's "Vanities of 1947" with Coley Worth, Vernon & Draper, Mercer Bros., Jimmy & Joyce Vey, Joe Mole, Ben Yost's Guardsmen; "The Fabulous Suzanne" (Rep).

After an absence of several weeks, flesh comes into its own at the Earle this week via "Earl Carroll's Vanities of 1947," featuring a line of 16 girls, a variety bill, and several production numbers.

Garnering the most applause opening day (17) were Bobby Vernon and Jessie Draper, comedy team, with Vernon carrying the brunt of the patter and pantomime. Team has funny routine of satirical ballroom dancing.

Coley Worth held his own with opening day audience by playing (?) half a fiddle, imitating Groucho Marx, and stepping around in general zany fashion. He's an energetic comic, and times his gags well.

Joyce and Jimmy Vey run through a fast-stepping tap routine, and then lad gets into spotlight for nimble work out on the xylophone. This is a personable young couple with lots of appeal. Gal is cute and vivacious, and should be on stage more than she is in present act.

Joe Mole, looking like a cross between Groucho Marx and an absent-minded professor, builds up slowly to good climax with unicycle act. The Mercer Brothers do spoofing tap routine and burlesque Spanish terp.

Ben Yost's Guardsmen present five husky male singers in costumes remindful of Superman in the comic strip, but boys have good voices and please with college medleys, operetta numbers, and excerpts from operas.

Production numbers include "African Baball," with plenty of color in costumes; "Gaiety on Wheels," in which the gals of the line pedal bicycles as prelude to Mole's unicycle number; Spanish dance, also colorful, and finale of 'Beautiful Lady' parade.

Biz fair when caught. Shal.

Olympia, Miami

Miami, Jan. 17.

Lanny Ross, The Colstons, Bob Hopkins, Kay & Kay, Wally Dean, Les Rhode House Orch; "Lady Luck" (RKO).

Well balanced layout current, makes for diverting vaude bill.

Topliner Lanny Ross scores with his singing stint. Gives them plenty, too, with a medley from "Annie Get Your Gun," "The Lamplighter," "Whole World Is Singing My Song" and "September Song."

Personable Bob Hopkins emcees smoothly and in own spot carbons Crosby, Frank Morgan, Hugh Herbert, Red Skelton and others for solid applause.

Comedy dance duo, the Colstons, rack up plenty laughs via the femme's acrobatics. Routines are carefully planned for the breakups which garner the laughs.

Wally Dean purveys a mixture of puppetry and card and ciggie manipulation that adds up to novel effect for good returns.

Kay and Kay offer muscle control sequence that gets over nicely. Les Rhode and house orch back show in nice style. Biz good when caught. Lary.

Tower, K. C.

Kansas City, Jan. 17.

Judy Kelly, Francisco, Marshall Bros. (2), Dolores Durrett, Tower Orch (9) with Jack Parks and Kenny Field; "Bringing Up Father" (Mono) and "My Dog Shep" (SG).

Current layout is well knit and rates as one of the best shows in several weeks.

House band opens on "For Sentimental Reasons," with Kenny Field taking the vocal and Jack Parks on muted trumpet. Judy Kelly follows with flips and spins through an acrobatic-adagio terp and winds with an interpretive boogie routine.

Midshow spot is taken by Francisco, in a sock juggling turn. Gets plenty of applause for his manipulation of small batons and tennis balls, interlarded with comedy effects. Dolores Durrett, discovery contest winner, takes a turn at boogie on the piano, and also gets off a pretty fair tap routine.

Closing spot has Marshall brothers alternately satirizing Frankie, Bing, Danny Kaye and a host of radio commercials. They wrap it up with a comedy face-slapping inning that sends them away to solid returns. Quin.

State, N. Y.

Blair & Dean, Leonard Sues, Thelma Carpenter, Walton & O'Rourke, Martin & Lewis, Louis Basil House Orch; "The Jolson Story" (Col).

State theatre, one of the few straight vaudeville houses in the country and the only one on Broadway, is more or less a proving ground for acts. It is putting a new turn up for bookers' opinions this semester which, when it works off the rough edges, has a fine chance of pushing itself into a prominent spot among comedy teams. That's the Martin & Lewis combination (New Acts). It is by far the mainstay of this layout and the reason why the stage show, coupled to the big b.o. "Jolson Story," leaves patrons with a very pleasant feeling.

With the Jolson picture on screen, State's bookers seem to have made their current show a nostalgic one, at least by proxy. It presents two performers connected in the past with Eddie Cantor's radio show and he gets prominent billing in the introductions. They are Thelma Carpenter and Leonard Sues, singer and conductor respectively on the comedian's air slot.

Sues follows Blair & Dean, a pleasant pair of ballroom dancers. Same "pleasant" reaction can be applied to Sues. He plays trumpet, not very outstandingly, but does it in a boyish manner that endears him well enough to the customers. He works over "Blue Skies," "Summertime" and "St. Louis Blues," employing open and growl trumpet nicely so that things don't get monotonous. It's unusual to see a musician of Sues' type doing a single and his job is not easy to make it stick with patrons.

Miss Carpenter, a good-looking Negro, who has worked with various name bands such as Count Basie's before achieving Cantor's program, is a far more excellent singer than she appears here despite the fact that she goes over neatly. Too, it's obvious that she is not yet accustomed to stage work. Her faults lie in her selection of material and pacing. She opens with "Give Me the Simple Life," a faded pop which never was too strong, "You Keep Coming Back Like a Song," "South American Way" and encores "Happiness Is a Thing Called Joe" and "September Song," the last a tune she shouldn't do until her interpretation is decidedly improved. She has no special material of the type she can do. While the act is highly successful here, it could be better.

Marionet acts seem to be enjoying a resurgence from whatever, if any, depths they might have slipped to. In recent weeks every Broadway house has featured one and they all show a sharp tendency toward maximum showmanship, which has become a lost art with too many vaude turns. Walton & O'Rourke can't be accused of losing sight of it, however. They put on a smartly worked out turn. Working from a small stage, they first work out the old skeleton dance routine, using, however, two dolls, one outfitted as a femme, doing a rhumba. Then comes a pair of sepias, a male pounding piano and a femme singing "St. Louis Woman," voices by W. & O. A hula dancer and dolls in lion and tiger costumes doing a nice skating bit finish the thing up with a wallop. It's all well done.

Radio Budgets

as $3,000. To achieve the lower figure, the name values have been eliminated from the format, corresponding to the new agency thinking that the $3,000-$4,000 added expenditure for a star personality (frequently doubling the cost of a show) in most instances simply doesn't pay off in audiences to warrant the upped costs.

Similarly, the trend toward "the show's the thing" is reflected in the brushoff the costlier "name" programs are getting upon submission to agencies. For example, a Judy Garland show has just been packaged on the Coast by a Hollywood indie radio production outfit. The asking price is $17,000. But thus far nobody's interested.

The "rating stealing" among the low-budgeted shows on the air is chiefly apparent on the whodunits, but also include some of the comedy programming, where the emphasis is directed at the writing and production values rather than in names. It's in the latter respect that the trend toward low-cost shows is seen having healthy and beneficial overtones for radio as a whole.

Betty Reilly Set for Havana

Betty Reilly has been booked for the Casino Nacional, Havana, starting Jan. 31 at $1,000 weekly. Singer current at the Clover club, Miami, will follow with the Copacabana, Chicago, Feb. 25.

Loew-Ent.

run was not announced but it's believed to be indefinite, depending on how long the arrangements are mutually advantageous. With Metro having announced a cut in the number of pictures to be produced in 1947 from 31 to 24, the international company was reportedly in need of outside product such as Enterprise will produce, since M-G has almost absorbed its foreign backlog built up during war years and is presently distributing close to its current releases abroad. Ent's first-year production slate, with most pictures having some kind of an international approach, calls for six films, five of which are now in various stages of production.

Arthur Loew returned from the Coast last weekend, where he viewed prints of Ent product, including Erich Maria Remarque's "Arch of Triumph," a rough cut of "The Other Love," also filmed from a Remarque novel, and rushes of the first week's shooting of "Body and Soul."

While no arrangements have been made yet for Loew's to distribute Ent product as part of its foreign 16m program, it's believed the deal will also include this phase of distribution. Shortage of product has been one of the chief stymieing factors to the expansion of the company's narrow-gauge operations overseas, so that Ent pix will reportedly be welcomed by the 16m department.

New Acts

MARTIN and LEWIS
Comedy Singing
15 Mins.
State, N. Y.

This new act, composed of Dean Martin, who at one time began making an impression on the crooner parade, and Jerry Lewis, a young comic, has a good future. Deriving maximum benefit from the fresh, clean, youthful appearance of the pair the turn does a smart job of tickling customers' funny-bones at the State, which is playing to capacity houses with "The Jolson Story."

Though there's a pattern to the act, based on Martin's neat vocaling and Lewis' complete lack of inhibition, it seems to the customers to be almost completely ad lib. The two combine to work over "That Old Gang of Mine," Martin foiling for Lewis, decked out as a moronic bartender, do vocal takeoffs of various top stars, etc. All they do cannot be detailed, but virtually every bit of it is good for solid laughs. Finale bit finds Lewis directing the pit band as "Jose Disturbi" for Martin's gagged-up version of "Old Man River."

All in all, these two kids have themselves a fine act. There are rough edges, but they'll wear away and what's underneath will wear a good deal longer. Wood.

JOSEPHINE PREMICE
Songs
8 Mins.
Village Vanguard, N. Y.

Josephine Premice appeared in concert halls before starting her cafe career. In her nitery bow the sepia songstress, backed by a bongo player, displays sufficient vocal versatility to impress as fitting fodder for the uptown boites.

Miss Premice has a full-bodied voice that shows up equally well in the low as well as higher registers, and she injects a great deal of personality in projection. She does especially well in the calypso department and is able to knock off a French chanson with equal ease.

She's done dancework in her concert tours, last jaunt being with Josh White. However, small confines of the Vanguard floor prohibits a display of her terps. Jose.

OLIVETTE MILLER
Harpist
10 Mins.
Cafe Society Downtown, N. Y.

In Olivette Miller, Barney Josephson has hit upon a performer who has the exploitation possibilities that could build her up to the status of Hazel Scott. This sepia harpist with a feeling for swing as well as classic versions of pops, puts her stress upon personality and has no trouble getting across.

However, in stressing personality, she shows a tendency to mug too much, which detracts from her music. The harp and fingering technique have sufficient visual interest to hold for the audience, making further visual gimmicks superfluous. Jose.

ROBERT DE LISLE
Songs
11 Mins.
La Martinique, N. Y.

Robert De Lisle, a newcomer in N. Y. class cafes, although with obvious experience elsewhere, has visual and vocal assets of interest to the femme trade. His distinguished appearance is sufficient to keep the ladies quiet, but unfortunately, not all his notes are true on the slower tunes. He does much better in pieces of the calibre of "Stand Up and Fight," which gets him his biggest response.

His stage demeanor is good and once the vocal kinks are ironed out, he'll do in the choice locations. Jose.

CISCO HOUSTON
Songs
10 Mins.
Cafe Society Downtown, N. Y.

Newest entrant in ranks of balladeers impresses as a personable chap with a set of pleasing pipes, but still has to adapt this folk-song form to commercial levels. Accompanying himself on the guitar, he does a quartet of acceptable tunes with too little interpretation to maintain interest. Delivery is on a one-toned level, which doesn't point up the potent portions of the song.

He's also to develop more fully a personable line of small-talk to explain the various ballads. Jose.

Raftery Fights Selznick

by DOS to 20th, but later deals of a similar nature with RKO.

Selznick's attorneys, Lowell Wadmond and Chester Bordeau, of White & Case, were trying to establish in the testimony that in drawing up the pact to bring Selznick into UA it was long argued and well understood that he was to have the right to abandon story properties and lend actors unlimitedly. Louis Frohlich, acting for Chaplin, aimed to prove that Selznick had promised in talks and in publicity releases to make for UA the three pix he sold to 20th.

24th Draft

One of the amusing and amazing facts disclosed in the depositions is that the agreement finally accepted by which UA contracted to advance Selznick $1,000,000 for production was the 24th draft. Raftery and Dan O'Shea, Selznick's rep, went on drafting and redrafting the contract from the spring right through the summer and into the fall. At draft No. 11 (Sept. 15, 1941), the negotiations fell apart because of Raftery's insistence that DOS should not have the unlimited rights he demanded on story abandonment and player loanouts.

When O'Shea phoned Raftery to tell him the deal was off, Raftery declared: "I told him I was very happy over it; that I was going to take the Stratoliner home that day."

Raftery hadn't caught the plane, however, before Korda got Chaplin, Pickford, Selznick and himself into a huddle that lasted from dinner until 4 a. m. At the end of it they told Raftery and O'Shea to keep on drafting and a complicated compromise was finally reached later that month. Raftery's attitude was that UA would have no protection from Selznick's using coin, advanced him by the company, to pay overhead on stories which he could sell someone else and stars he could loan out and never use for UA's benefit. Final agreement was that part of the income from sales of abandoned stories would be applied to the overhead with which they had been charged.

No Compromise

Inasmuch as Selznick still was under contract to deliver two pix to UA under a four-picture 1937 distrib deal, Raftery's attitude was not to compromise in the new negotiations, but force DOS to deliver the two pix, since he couldn't work for anyone else until he did. Miss Pickford agreed with him. Korda, however, got angry and Raftery quoted him as saying:

"You are like all lawyers. You and Charley Schwartz (Chaplin's attorney) come out here and all you try to do is queer the deals we set up. We're making the deal and we're hiring you to draft the papers, and that's all."

At one point Raftery sought a compromise by which Selznick would have to offer any story or star to the producers associated with UA before he could let them go to an outsider. Selznick objected strongly, rattling off a list of minor UA producers whom he wouldn't trust to make pix with his players. Korda shruggingly agreed.

Korda's mood changed, however, when he returned from England a year later and learned that Selznick had sold "Keys of the Kingdom," "Claudia" and "Jane Eyre" to 20th. Korda testified: "I was upset and I said to Mr. Raftery that if there is a cause, if we have any possibility of winning a lawsuit, he should sue Mr. Selznick, but if he thinks we have no rights, no chance to win, we should not make fools out of ourselves."

"Outrageous" Action

Korda also wrote a four-or five-page letter to Chaplin calling Selznick's action "outrageous" and protested to Selznick personally. Selznick replied that he was "bored" with the stories. Korda testified that he also remonstrated with Selznick later because he had provided UA with no films during 1942 or 1943. He said he saw Chaplin about Selznick's 20th-Fox sales, and Chaplin felt the same as he did, "but was more violent."

Raftery was doubtful UA had a suit against Selznick that would hold up in court and wrote an opinion to that effect for the owners.

Frohlich didn't have too much success in establishing through questioning Korda, that Selznick wouldn't have been taken into UA if Korda had known he intended selling the three stories. Korda repeatedly maintained that he had great respect for Selznick as a producer, and he "wouldn't weigh up his value to what he owns at any moment." VARIETY of Oct. 6, 1941, was introduced in evidence to prove that Selznick said he planned making the three films in dispute.

Selznick and O'Shea later claimed to Korda and Raftery that DOS had good reason for selling each of the stories. On "Keys," O'Shea is quoted as telling Raftery, Selznick feared opposition of the Catholic Church. He had called in the Rev. Wilford Parsons, former editor of the American Jesuit Magazine, who said "he could not give any advice or assurance that if Selznick followed the story he could make a picture with which the Catholic Church would be satisfied. The dogmatic tolerance is particularly bad."

As for "Claudia," Selznick thought it "too inconsequential" for his first after "Gone With the Wind" and he wanted something more significant, "with a home front angle." "Jane Eyre," Selznick thought, was "too much like 'Rebecca'."

Going back to the negotiations, which lasted from April to October, 1941, to get Selznick into the company, Korda testified, under cross-examination by Frohlich, that he wanted DOS in since the UA overhead was $60,000 a week domestic and $120,000 worldwide, and pix were needed in a hurry to support the organization. Selznick, as a result, laid out a flock of terms, including one that personnel should be reorganized at an additional expenditure of $6,000 weekly. Korda testified that such reorganization of the management and the addition of a new general salesmanager were unanimous anyway. (UA at the time had no general salesmanager, having eastern and western managers, Harry Gold and Jack Schlaifer, respectively. As a result of the subsequent organization, present distribution chief, Grad Sears, was hired.

Korda was brought into the deposition-taking as a Selznick witness, but Frohlich frequently turned him into a witness for the plaintiff. Since he's no longer a UA partner and has no particular interest in the current intramural squabble, deposition clearly shows his efforts to keep himself out of the middle and take a non-partisan course. To Frohlich's question as to whether he didn't think terms asked by Selznick were "drastic and unusual," for instance, he replied:

"I couldn't call them drastic, because when I myself became a UA stockholder, although I didn't pay anything for the stock, I became immediately, before I fulfill (conditions for ownership) of the stock a full-fledged owner and had voting right of the stock. So he didn't have any more on that account than I had."

Korda admitted, however, under Frohlich's prodding, that he fulfilled his promise for delivery of pictures.

Metro Tests

bidding in Philly, "Holiday in Mexico," the William Goldman outfit outbid Warners to get the picture for its top downtown house.

Metro apparently succeeded in its efforts to anticipate the decree by conducting the tests almost exactly as the decree outlines. Exhibs are given 10 days after notice of a picture's availability to send in their bids to the branch office via registered mail. Bids are then sent into the homeoffice, where a specially-constituted committee of the sales staff makes the decision. It's possible that if competitive bidding emerges as a part of the decree from the appeal slated to be taken to the U. S. Supreme Court, that Metro might turn over the decision duties to its branch managers, but nothing has been definitely decided yet on that.

Metro, meanwhile, is continuing to offer pictures for bidding in all territories where the system has been inaugurated, and it may even broaden its scope by going into other territories that are also strictly competitive but not so tied up.

"Competitive bidding," the M-G spokesman said, "hasn't cost Metro any money, but, if has got pictures flowing, and that's what is necessary."

Paramount, N. Y.

Mills Bros. (4), Olga San Juan, Tim Herbert, Renauld & Rudy, Elliot Lawrence Orch (17) with Jack Hunter, Don Baker; "Perfect Marriage" (Par), reviewed in VARIETY Nov. 20, '46.

Big item on this bill is the preem appearance of Elliot Lawrence at a firstrun Main Stem house. And Lawrence manages well enough, although there are a few rough edges to be polished off his fronting and introductory chores. Boyish ebullience grates occasionally.

Fortunately for the evidently nervous maestro, the band is, with only two exceptions, definitely a background piece in this bill. With 5 reed plus an oboe, 6 brass plus French horn, and 4 rhythms, orch cuts well behind the acts and shows to good effect in its two solo spots. Its opener is "They've Got a Lotta Coffee in Brazil," followed by baritone Jack Hunter doing an original and cleverly paced arrangement of "Over the Rainbow." Great returns here bring him back for "September Song" and the manner in which he discharges his duties marks him a fortunate find for this upcoming outfit.

Ghezzis, originally booked in this spot, were hurt in the first show and replaced by Renauld and Rudy, another hand-to-hand act. Besides the usual accoutrements of biceps, team has youth and passable good looks. In the briefest trunks and Roman sandals they look like a couple of cover boys for "Everlasting Strength and Health" and draw plenty of squeals from the femme moppets. Slow motion gymnastics, ranging from straight stands and presses to a one-armed hand-to-hand planche, are fine, but some of the posturing could be dispensed with.

Olga San Juan is no stranger to Paramount auds, having been on screen there recently in "Blue Skies." Combining the best of Betty Hutton with the worst of an errant firecracker, she opens with "Bim Bam Bum" and follows with "Cuba," tune she did with Bing Crosby in the film. Incidentally, she's turned blonde for her p.a. chores. She does a couple of other Latin numbers in which, as well as in her first, her voice seems to get lost in the big house. She seems to have plenty of volume, but mike placement probably is partially responsible.

A fast line of comedy chatter and gimmicks is dished up by Tim Herbert, fast enough to keep the occasional laughs hiding some weakish material. Best bit is a parody on the Russian delegate who's always late, called "When I Walk In, Gromyko's Walking Out." Comic has a nice personality but needs to tighten his act. More terping would help.

Lawrence Orch bridges here with the maestro doing an 88 solo on "Rhapsody in Blue." It's good commercial pash, but also nice piano technique.

Great performers from beginning to end and certainly the big draw on this stagebill, the Mills Brothers could stay on all day and keep the crowd happy. They don't do as much "instrumental" work as they did in the earlier days, sticking to straight word vocals, but from any angle they're top entertainment. They do their bestselling recorded tunes, "Guess I'll Get the Papers and Go Home," "Paper Doll," "Don't Know Enough About You," "Lazy River" and an encore on "Basin St. Blues;" one of their oldtimers. More care on mike balance is indicated in a couple of spots, but not obvious. Appealing comic work helps to occasional chuckles, too. A sock closer of which payees couldn't get enough. Tomm.

Capitol, Wash.

Washington, Jan. 18.

Smith & Dale (4), Cardini, Deane Carroll, Boy Foy; "Mighty McGurk" (M-G).

Capitol takes a breather between two high budget stage shows this week with a modest but pleasant offering featuring "something old, something new."

The old part of the show is the headliners, Smith & Dale, whose act goes back basically unchanged for at least a generation. Gags that drew laughs in the same doctor's office scene before Warner's "Jazz Singer" altered the face of vaude, are still drawing laughs today. The lines have been brought up to date here and there, where a topical angle could be added, but the act continues familiar to old timers and its Weber & Fields type humor is still good for chuckles. A couple of male singers are included and at the end the four men wind up with a barbershop quartet rendition of "If You Were the Only Girl in the World."

The newness comes from Boy Foy, a clever English juggler who flips Indian clubs, dishes, balls, high hats and anything else he can get his hands on while rampaging about the stage on a unicycle. Foy works first from a low cycle and then changes over to a high one, saving his toughest stunts for the wobbly seat of the high machine. The stunts would not be particularly sensational performed by a man anchored on his own two feet, but by a man turning and twisting 10 feet in the air on a one-legged bike they are good. The audience pours out its heaviest applause for this novelty turn.

Cardini in his usual suave crowd pleaser, featuring first an endless flow of cards which keep coming out of nowhere as he tosses them away pack after pack. Highlight of the number is the cigaret stunt in which he keeps producing, smoking and tossing away lighted cigaret after lighted cigaret to the amazement of the audience. Unfortunately much of Cardini's fine handwork, particularly with cards is lost to those in the rear of a house as large as the Capitol.

Deane Carroll is a pert singer whose best number is "Indian Love Call," but who gets along very nicely with a medley in French, Spanish, English and a touch of Russian. Lowe.

Apollo, N. Y.

Stepin Fetchit, Mantan Moreland, Sarah Vaughn, Walter Green, Edwards Bros. (3), Lora Pierre, Dizzy Gillespie Orch (14) with Pancho, Milt Jackson, Ray Brown, James Moody; "GI War Brides" (Rep).

Harlem's hothouse of rebop comes up this week with one of its better bills and grabs a nice payee sendoff all around. Great favorites in this house, Stepin Fetchit and Mantan Moreland close with some fast running patter that gives Fetchit, despite his long absence from the screen, somewhat the best of it.

Dizzy Gillespie's sometimes fine, sometimes annoying band opens the session with Pancho, male vocalist, doing "These Foolish Things Remind Me of You," following an instrumental, "Cool Breeze." Lora Pierre, a well-stacked looker handles the intros for the Edwards brothers and their ofay gymnast act. Trio is okay and garners a nice sendoff in a house which is usually n.s.h. for this type of stint.

Gillespie trots out one of his Esquire poll winners, Milt Jackson, for some sensitive work on the vibes with "Man I Love," in which a medley of other tunes is trickily worked. Jackson is strictly for show, since he doesn't work with the band otherwise. Tapper Walter Green underplays very smoothly during a suave, non-stop rhythm stanza. Guy does some difficult footwork with the greatest of ease.

Miss Pierre does another intro before bowing out until later in the bill. Her psuedo-comic patter is delivered stiffly, but the heavy political angle is daubed on to grab a few yocks at the expense of Bilbo followers.

Still another poll winner, Sarah Vaughn, comes through with the sock musical work of the evening, singing "You're Not the Kind of a Boy for a Girl Like Me." Phrasing and voice technique are a little too subtle for a vaude house, but she still grabs a great mitt for "September Song" and "Mean to Me."

Band works next to closing with a couple of rebop numbers in which some good tenor work by James Moody is almost lost because of Gillespie's hogging the spot with his unsharp clowning. Jackson returns with vibes embroidery.

Fetchit and Moreland provide a nice closer, with band's poor backing fouling up Fetchit's little piano ditty. Might have been funny but they couldn't get together. Tomm.

Adams, Newark

Newark, Jan. 16.

Stan Kenton and Band (18), with Ray Wetzel, Eddie Safransky, Shelly Mann, Pastels (5), June Christy; Steve Evans; Meribeth Olds; "Larceny in Her Heart" (PRC).

Stan Kenton's crew is still something to shout about in this season of bad news for swing bands. The lanky lad has lots on the ball for the jivers, including a new approach to the problem of making music sound new.

The outfit deals mostly in impact, conveyed through a 10-man brass section that bears down a little heavily on the ears at times. But nicely balanced in the saxes and rhythm section. Kenton's fine pianoing was dimmed at the opening through lack of a suitable mike at the sounding board. "Artistry in Jumps," "Concerto to End All Concertos" and "St. James Infirmary" set forth the Kenton touch at its peak of efficiency—powerful in blast effect and crowded with tricky syncopations and trickier harmonies.

June Christy is doing the vocals. She uses her pipes to the utmost advantage in "It's a Pity to Say Goodnight," "No Misery for Me" and "She's Funny That Way," going for boff results. The Pastels, harmony quintet, croon neo-barber shop in "Zip-a-dee-doo-dah," "Sentimental Reasons" and "River St. Marie," in a torrid swingy version. Wetzel, trumpet; Safransky, double bass, and Mann, drums, offer hot instrumentalities.

Roxy, N. Y.

Gracie Fields' appearance on any stage, anywhere, is an event of importance—and her current engagement at the Roxy is no exception. The English comedienne again proves herself one of the top personalities of international showdom. Only squawk concerning her Roxy appearance is that there's not enough of it. In its endeavor to get big grosses via rapid turnover, the house is holding the stageshow down to 45 minutes—of which Miss Fields' gets 17, and which seems like nothing, since she's able to get in only about six verses of "The Biggest Aspidistra in the World."

Despite the seeming brevity of Miss Fields' turn—which the stopwatch somewhat belies — the Roxy presentation is well-rounded and pleasantly entertaining. Debonaire, male terpling-warbling quintet, tees it off with a nifty mechanical man dance that has appeal for both the ballet and giggle trade.

Mimic Arthur Blake follows with carbons of Frank Morgan, Louella Parsons, Charles Laughton, Jimmy Stewart, Katharine Hepburn, Peter Lorre, Bette Davis and F.D.R. Routine is average, suffering from the plethora of mimics, most of them doing the same personalities. While the impressions themselves are pretty good, Blake's lines aren't funny or satiric enough to get him particular notice. Carboning of Miss Davis, particularly the physical aspects of her manner of acting, is by far the best, while the most that can be said of the F.D.R. biz is that it is in as good taste as this kind of thing can be.

Latino production number winds up the pre-Fields portion of the layout. It's colorful and well-executed, with Jean Gramas doing a neat vocalizing job, although Roxy production staff seems to show a decided lack of imagination in that awkward device of having a guy stand in front of her in midstage holding a hand mike. That's peculiarly disturbing to the illusion and might be easily eliminated by hiding the instrument in a fan or a bonga, such as the other femmes carry.

Also wedded into the production number is terping by modernist Beatrice Seckler, aided by a couple boys from the line. It doesn't matter much.

Miss Fields' opens with a fave, "The Simpleness, The Sinfulness, the Wickedness of Man," tells some Scotch and Irish stories (relatively inoffensive, Mr. W.) and then does a pip of a number in one-half Afrikaan and one-half English. She follows with a blend of straight vocalizing and satire on "My Hero" from "The Chocolate Soldier" but ends it in unmistakable fashion with a cartwheel. "Walter, Walter" and "South America, Take It Away" are other great laugh-garnerers, in addition to "Aspidistra." Then comes a 20th-Fox plug for the next pic into the Roxy, "Shocking Miss Pilgrim," with Miss Fields leading the audience in singing "Forever" from the pic. She encores with a New Zealand Maori tune in which she also leads the audience for a whopping finale. Herb.

Hippodrome, Balto.

Baltimore, Jan. 19.

Pat Henning, Candy Stevens, Merry Madcaps (3), Felice Iula House Orch (12); "The Jolson Story" (Col).

Change of stage portion to accommodate continued h.o. of film ("The Jolson Story") is necessarily brief with only three entries lined up for a fairly entertaining setto.

Highlight is Pat Henning, who closes in bell-ringing style with clicko comedy and knockabout. Funny impressions and expertly timed gaggery is a standout and just right to top off balance of bill which opens nicely with The Merry Madcaps, trio of clowning harmonica blowers. Essay spots of legit instrumentation but emphasize comedy bits throughout for a breezy getaway.

Candy Stevens in between is fair with some comedy singing, mild conversation and a topping bit of solo stuff on trumpet, sax and drums. Good support from Felice Iula and house orch brought up on stage for presentation setup. Biz continues good. Burm.

RKO, Boston

Boston, Jan. 17.

Andrews Sisters, Les Paul Trio, Mack & Desmond, Bob Evans; Vic Shoen House Orch; "Betty Co-Ed" (Col).

Andrews Sisters, consistently popular around here, handle about a third of this show and take it away without any trouble. Neither style nor gags changed very much, but that's okay with the customers who gave them a wow reception plus a beg-off.

They open with "Show Business," and then "South America Take It Away," etc., later appearing with the Les Paul Trio for "Rumors Are Flying," "Rum and Coca-Cola," the whole very sharp jazzing with good clear melody lines and above average thumping. House goes big for it, and likes the on and off routine since the gals appear throughout the show. Patti Andrews m.c.'s knowingly and keeps things plenty informal.

Variety acts sparse but strong. Mack and Desmond, dance team, whose stuff may not be too novel but have style and appearance which lifts them well above the average hoofing fare. Bob Evans, ventroing with his Jerry O'Leary, has smart line of chatter and a highly expert presentation, so goes big. And the Paul Trio, with Paul on the guitar, does an interlude on "Steel Guitar Boogie" and "Blue Skies" which is plenty satisfactory.

Biz was very big. Elie.

Earle, Philly

Philadelphia, Jan. 17.

Earl Carroll's "Vanities of 1947" with Coley Worth, Vernon & Draper, Mercer Bros., Jimmy & Joyce Vey, Joe Mole, Ben Yost's Guardsmen; "The Fabulous Suzanne" (Rep).

After an absence of several weeks, flesh comes into its own at the Earle this week via "Earl Carroll's Vanities of 1947," featuring a line of 16 girls, a variety bill, and several production numbers.

Garnering the most applause opening day (17) were Bobby Vernon and Jessie Draper, comedy team, with Vernon carrying the brunt of the patter and pantomime. Team has funny routine of satirical ballroom dancing.

Coley Worth held his own with opening day audience by playing (?) half a fiddle, imitating Groucho Marx, and stepping around in general zany fashion. He's an energetic comic, and times his gags well.

Joyce and Jimmy Vey run through a fast-stepping tap routine, and then lad gets into spotlight for nimble work out on the xylophone. This is a personable young couple with lots of appeal. Gal is cute and vivacious, and should be on stage more than she is in present act.

Joe Mole, looking like a cross between Groucho Marx and an absent-minded professor, builds up slowly to good climax with unicycle act. The Mercer Brothers do spoofing tap routine and burlesque Spanish terp.

Ben Yost's Guardsmen present five husky male singers in costumes reminiscent of Superman in the comic strip, but boys have good voices and please with college medleys, operetta numbers, and excerpts from operas.

Production numbers include "African Baball," with plenty of color in costumes; "Gaiety on Wheels," in which the gals of the line pedal bicycles as prelude to Mole's unicycle number; Spanish dance, also colorful, and finale of "Beautiful Lady" parade.

Biz fair when caught. Shal.

Olympia, Miami

Miami, Jan. 17.

Lanny Ross, The Colstons, Bob Hopkins, Kay & Kay, Wally Dean, Les Rhode House Orch; "Lady Luck" (RKO).

Well balanced layout current, makes for diverting vaude bill.

Topliner Lanny Ross scores with his singing stint. Gives them plenty, too, with a medley from "Annie Get Your Gun," "The Lamplighter," "Whole World Is Singing My Song" and "September Song."

Personable Bob Hopkins emcees smoothly and in own spot carbons Crosby, Frank Morgan, Hugh Herbert, Red Skelton and others for solid applause.

Comedy dance duo, the Colstons, rack up plenty laughs via the femme's acrobatics. Routines are carefully planned for the breakups which garner the laughs.

Wally Dean purveys a mixture of puppetry and card and ciggie manipulation that adds up to novel effect for good returns.

Kay and Kay offer muscle control sequence that gets over nicely. Les Rhode and house orch back show in nice style. Biz good when caught. Lary.

Tower, K. C.

Kansas City, Jan. 17.

Judy Kelly, Francisco, Marshall Bros. (2), Dolores Durrett, Tower Orch (9) with Jack Parks and Kenny Field; "Bringing Up Father" (Mono) and "My Dog Shep" (SG).

Current layout is well knit and rates as one of the best shows in several weeks.

House band opens on "For Sentimental Reasons," with Kenny Field taking the vocal and Jack Parks on muted trumpet. Judy Kelly follows with flips and spins through an acrobatic-adagio terp and winds with an interpretive boogie routine.

Midshow spot is taken by Francisco, in a sock juggling turn. Gets plenty of applause for his manipulation of small batons and tennis balls, interlarded with comedy effects. Dolores Durrett, discovery contest winner, takes a turn at boogie on the piano, and also gets off a pretty fair tap routine.

Closing spot has Marshall brothers alternately satirizing Frankie, Bing, Danny Kaye and a host of radio commercials. They wrap it up with a comedy face-slapping inning that sends them away to solid returns. Quin.

State, N. Y.

Blair & Dean, Leonard Sues, Thelma Carpenter, Walton & O'Rourke, Martin & Lewis, Louis Basil House Orch; "The Jolson Story" (Col).

State theatre, one of the few straight vaudeville houses in the country and the only one on Broadway, is more or less a proving ground for acts. It is putting a new turn up for bookers' opinions this semester which, when it works off the rough edges, has a fine chance of pushing itself into a prominent spot among comedy teams. That's the Martin & Lewis combination (New Acts). It is by far the mainstay of this layout and the reason why the stage show, coupled to the big b.o. "Jolson Story," leaves patrons with a very pleasant feeling.

With the Jolson picture on screen, State's bookers seem to have made their current show a nostalgic one, at least by proxy. It presents two performers connected in the past with Eddie Cantor's radio show and he gets prominent billing in the introductions. They are Thelma Carpenter and Leonard Sues, singer and conductor respectively on the comedian's air slot.

Sues follows Blair & Dean, a pleasant pair of ballroom dancers. Same "pleasant" reaction can be applied to Sues. He plays trumpet, not very outstandingly, but does it in a boyish manner that endears him well enough to the customers. He works over "Blue Skies," "Summertime" and "St. Louis Blues," employing open and growl trumpet nicely so that things don't get monotonous. It's unusual to see a musician of Sues' type doing a single and his job is not easy to make it stick with patrons.

Miss Carpenter, a good-looking Negro, who has worked with various name bands such as Count Basie's before achieving Cantor's program, is a far more excellent singer than she appears here despite the fact that she goes over neatly. Too, it's obvious that she is not yet accustomed to stage work. Her faults lie in her selection of material and pacing. She opens with "Give Me the Simple Life," a faded pop which never was too strong, "You Keep Coming Back Like a Song," "South American Way" and encores "Happiness Is a Thing Called Joe" and "September Song," the last a tune she shouldn't do until her interpretation is decidedly improved. She has no special material of the type she can do. While the act is highly successful here, it could be better.

Marionet acts seem to be enjoying a resurgence from whatever, if any, depths they might have slipped to. In recent weeks every Broadway house has featured one and they all show a sharp tendency toward maximum showmanship, which has become a lost art with too many vaude turns. Walton & O'Rourke can't be accused of losing sight of it, however. They put on a smartly worked out turn. Working from a small stage, they first work out the old skeleton dance routine, using, however, two dolls, one outfitted as a femme, doing a rhumba. Then comes a pair of sepias, a male pounding piano and a femme singing "St. Louis Woman," voices by W. & O. A hula dancer and dolls in lion and tiger costumes doing a nice skating bit finish the thing up with a wallop. It's all well done.

Radio Budgets

as $3,000. To achieve the lower figure, the name values have been eliminated from the format, corresponding to the new agency thinking that the $3,000-$4,000 added expenditure for a star personality (frequently doubling the cost of a show) in most instances simply doesn't pay off in audiences to warrant the upped costs.

Similarly, the trend toward "the show's the thing" is reflected in the brushoff the costlier "name" programs are getting upon submission to agencies. For example, a Judy Garland show has just been packaged on the Coast by a Hollywood indie radio production outfit. The asking price is $17,000. But thus far nobody's interested.

The "rating stealing" among the low-budgeted shows on the air is chiefly apparent on the whodunits, but also include some of the comedy programming, where the emphasis is directed at the writing and production values rather than in names. It's in the latter respect that the trend toward low-cost shows is seen having healthy and beneficial overtones for radio as a whole.

Betty Reilly Set for Havana

Betty Reilly has been booked for the Casino Nacional, Havana, starting Jan. 31 at $1,000 weekly. Singer current at the Clover club, Miami, will follow with the Copacabana, Chicago, Feb. 25.

Wing's GI School Broadens Scope, Develops Craftsmen, Stage Skills

The American Theatre Wing's GI school (staffed by professional Broadwayities) will begin its fourth semester Feb. 24 with several important changes in courses, length of sessions, etc. Most noteworthy change, however, according to several producers interested in the project, is in the scope of the school itself.

Where the institution was originally set up as a refresher course, to brush returning GI theatre vets in various branches of the business, it has now begun to function as a trade school, a place to develop craftsmen and advance an actor further. Although still open only to vets, school has been broadened from a vet retraining center to an industry-wide training project, to fill (according to such producers as Margaret Webster) a glaring lack in the modern theatre—a basic training ground for the professional actor. There has been no such practical school before in theatre history.

Producers are now using the Wing school as a pool for properly trained talent. The Theatre Guild, Cheryl Crawford, Miss Webster, Oscar Hammerstein, Metro, and others have hired people from there. These producers, according to Wing officials, have also sent actors to the school who were in need of special training for some role—for vocal training, for instance.

In addition, actors playing on Broadway in small or medium-size roles—stuck in these roles for a season or more for economic reasons—have also been attending classes for further development, or, as something to do for stimulation. This season, Hayes Gordon of the recently-closed "Show Boat"; Bart Henderson, Michael Corhan and Thomas Grace, of American Repertory Theatre; William Scully, of "Finian's Rainbow"; William Horne, who was in "Helen of Troy" but more recently in grand opera; Alan Hewitt, legiter lately concentrating in radio, among others, have been taking Wing courses.

Showcase Alumni

Wing graduates who recently got jobs out of showcase performances at the school include George Keane ("Brigadoon" and "Park Avenue"); Bruce Gordon (in the touring "Hamlet"); Will Kuluva (Experimental Theatre's "Wanhope Building"), Henderson, Corhan and Grace (ART), and others. Wing officials feel they've left the realm of vet sentimental angle, however, to the hard-boiled status of a place where professional people can go and work.

School has had three eight-week terms in the past two seasons (current one ending Feb. 8). Fourth session, starting Feb. 24, will be enlarged to 10 weeks, as previous sessions were found too condensed. Because of the current increase in Broadway revivals, and the lack of properly trained actors in the classic repertory, the school has added a course in classical plays, to be given under various Broadway directors. Stephen Fry, formerly of BBC, will give a course in special events in radio.

Because it's so tough now for an actor to making a living strictly in legit, the Wing feels it necessary to train him in radio, television, musical comedy as well, and is furnishing cross-service courses—a course in acting for singers, one in radio acting for stage actors, dramatic character work for radio actors, etc.

Enrollment at first session was 400, with present total 730. Winston O'Keefe is director of the Wing's professional training program, with Mary Hunter director of courses.

Garfield Into 'Corner'

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

John Garfield plans returning to Broadway this fall after seven years in pictures. Actor will star in Robert Rossen's legiter, "Corner Pocket," which also will be produced and directed by author.

Pair are currently working in "Body and Soul" for Enterprise.

'LOST COLONY' BOARD MEETS

Raleigh, Jan. 21.

Former Gov. J. Melville Broughton, chairman of the Roanoke Island Historical Assn., has called a meeting of the directors in Raleigh Jan. 23 to lay plans for next summer's production of Paul Green's historical drama, "The Lost Colony," on Roanoke Island.

LUNT OKAY; THESPERS TREK BACK TO WORK

Alfred Lunt, who had an emergency kidney operation recently, is reported recovering in St. Luke's hospital, N.Y., and he's expected to go home some time this week. Until then no visitors are received. "O Mistress Mine," suspended because of the ailment, is still advertised to relight at the Empire on February 10. His wife, Lynn Fontanne, who is co-starred in the play, and a sister are the only visitors permitted at the hospital.

Kay Francis, who left "State of the Union" for an operation, returned to the show Monday (20). Ilnesses have required understudies to step into a number of casts. James Barton was out of "The Iceman Cometh," E. G. Marshall subbing, but Dudley Digges who was out of the same show with a heavy cold is in action. Ralph Symonette subbed for Norman Cordon in "Street Scene," and when Florence Eldridge was forced abed, Diana Rivers stepped into "Years Ago."

Minn. U. Rejects Bid On Outside Show Bookings

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Univ. of Minnesota board of regents rejected the request of C. C. Milkes, local impresario, to rent the 5,500-seat Northrop Memorial auditorium on the campus for presentation of attractions sponsored by private individuals. The auditorium now is used by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and for the Metropolitan opera season and university concerts, etc.

Milkes, in addition to bringing in concert attractions, has been trying to land legit roadshows, although the Lyceum here holds the UBO franchise. In his proposal requesting that the auditorium be "opened up" for non-university functions, Milkes pointed out that it was built from funds provided by public subscription.

In its reply turning Milkes down, the board of regents declared that "the university, as a publicly supported institute of higher education, cannot enter into any joint sponsorship of any project or program that is to result in profit or private gain for the cooperating group or groups."

Anderson as 'Medea'

Judith Anderson, last seen on Broadway in 1942 in "Three Sisters," is due in the spring in Robinson Jeffers' "Medea," as first production effort of new firm of Robert Whitehead and Oliver Rea. Two-act verse-play, adapted by Jeffers from Euripides, was written for and dedicated to Miss Anderson last year.

Actress left N. Y. for Coast last Saturday (18) for a film stint in RKO's "Tycoon," and will return thereafter for the stage chore.

Mitchell Back to Legit

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Thomas Mitchell returns to legit chores for the first time in over a decade when he both stars in and directs "The World and Mr. Wilkins." Madge Kennedy will costar with Mitchell in the Joseph Schrank comedy.

One-setter is budgeted at $40,000 and opens Feb. 24 at the Geary in San Francisco for three-week run followed by jump to Broadway. Lewis Deak is producing, and cast includes Skippy Homeier, Eddy Ryan, Paul Langton and Jean Ruth.

'STRAUSS BOYS' FOR COAST

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

U. S. production rights to "The Strauss Boys" have been given to Franz Steininger, Coast conductor and composer, who is dickering to stage the Viennese hit musical here.

Show is now past its 100th performance in Vienna and is first post-war Austrian stage smash. Understood that several other showmen are interested in it, including Edwin Lester, with possibility it may be used in the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera season.

Saving ($40) Face

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Jap entertainers received a break last week when General MacArthur okayed the release of face powder, perfume, cream and other cosmetics to Japanese people.

Previously, the only face and cold cream Nip showfolks could obtain was through the black market, and came at around 600 yen ($40) per jar.

Local Authors Lacking in Arg.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 12.

Political difficulties and disturbances notwithstanding, and despite the intrigues of the Peron-minded acting talent to try and supplant the front-rankers, the 1946 Argentine legit was prosperous.

One of the most significant features of the season was the lack of a good play by an Argentine author. All the hits were achieved on the basis of translations of French, British or U. S. plays. One U. S. precedent, however, did not repeat itself in Buenos Aires; although the Diaz-Collado Company production of "Life with Father" was a fairly attractive one, their backers eventually took a loss of some $6,000. This proves once more that Argentine audiences go for melodramatic fare and like subjects. This same company was rather more successful later in the season with "O Mistress Mine," the Terence Rattigan opus, at the Politeama, where it had a two-month run.

The best production of the season was undoubtedly Luisa Vehil's at the Smart theatre of "The Shining Hour," which was given an added boost from the attacks launched against the actress by anti-Semitic nationalists believed to be acting on behalf of the Senora de Peron, once a rival of Senorita Vehil's for starring honors at the National Comedy theatre. This production was instrumental in bringing to the fore young actress Maria Rosa Gallo, who gave a magnificent performance as Judith. Young actress is now playing the lead with Esteban Serrador in Eugene O'Neill's "All God's Chillun Got Wings," and her work has earned her unstinted praise from the local critics.

"My Dear Ruth" at the tiny Empire theatre, had the longest run of all the season's plays, with a record of 400 performances in eight months.

MME. FLAGSTAD SET FOR U.S. TOUR UNDER ENGELS

Kirsten Flagstad, noted Norwegian soprano and former Metopera stalwart, is returning to the U.S. concert stage, as first announced artist of George Engels. Latter, vet impressario who directed diva's previous U. S. tours, is now prez of newly formed Consolidated Concerts Corp.

Mme. Flagstad, now singing in London and Paris, will sing in four "Tristan" performances in February at La Scala, Milan, and sails March 7 for America, to see her daughter and embark on a concert tour here. She'll sing through April, and return for next season.

Soprano reportedly bears with her a "testimonial of patriotism" from Chief Justice of Norwegian Supreme Court Emil Stang for her conduct during the war. Mme. Flagstad, who left U.S. for home in 1941, has sung in public only four times during the war, in Switzerland and Sweden.

Rodney Duals in 'Macbeth'

Santa Barbara, Jan. 21.

John Rodney, legit thesp, who recently made his film bow in "Pursued," returns to the stage here in a modernized version of "Macbeth."

In addition to playing the top role, Rodney will co-direct the tragedy, which opens at the Lobero theatre next week.

KIEPURA-EGGERT MEX PIC

Mexico City, Jan. 16.

Mexican producers are dickering for the production of a pic in Spanish and English by Jan Kiepura and his wife Marta Eggert. Singers are conducting these negotiations while vacationing at Acapulco.

Trade expects a deal will be made and the pic produced before summer, when Kiepura said he intends to visit Poland, his homeland.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Rarely does Paul Dullzell use a byline in Equity magazine contributions but his name appears over an editorial in the monthly's current edition, headed "A Plea For Peace in 1947," an appeal to end factionalism within the association. He referred by inference to such turmoil as that stirred up last season when allegations were whipped up over a radio address piped in at a Madison Square Garden rally which resulted in bitter arguments of a religious nature, the main target being Communism. Significantly he said: "I don't know how much longer my voice is coming to you. I want you to listen to this, because it's serious." Equity's executive secretary was referring to his age.

Dullzell called Equity a tool, "a fine tool which we . . . have worked on for more than 30 years. . . . It was made for a special purpose and for that purpose there never has been a better tool. But if you take a special purpose tool and try to do some other job with it, the chances are you'll ruin it. . . . I want you to remember that, when people get up and argue about some of the things they think Equity ought to be used for, things it wasn't built to do. There are tools for those jobs, too. Use them, not Equity.

"Using Equity to get this or stop that will ruin it for the one job it can do better than anything else in the world—the protection of the actor, his job, his pay, his working conditions. And when we wrangle and argue about these other things, we are the blindfolded men in the ring in a battle royal. I care too much for Equity to see that happen without raising my voice against it. I ask all members . . . to cease the bickering and brawling that has beset us for so long and strive for peace, and unity and co-operation . . . that the prestige and usefulness of Equity, built so slowly . . . over so many years, may live and grow to protect us in this new year and for generations of actors as yet unborn."

Donald Wolfit, who heads an English repertory troupe now in Canada prior to Broadway, attracted attention in London during the war playing Shakespearean works. The performances started at noon because of the blitz and were said to have been well supported. Charles G. Stewart will be associated with Hall Shelton in presenting Wolfit in the U. S.

John Gielgud, the English star, arrived in New York on the Queen Elizabeth Friday (17) with Lawrence Langner of the Theatre Guild. Although it was a stormy passage Gielgud was highly amusing with comic stories. Theresa Helburn, who was supposed to have been aboard, remained in England. Gielgud's rep company will open on Broadway late next month under the management of John C. Wilson and the Guild.

Langner revealed that George Bernard Shaw is completing a new play for the Malvern Festival and it is likely to be presented in America next season. Showman also made preliminary arrangements for "Oklahoma!" in London next summer with Prince Littler but the date and theatre are not definite.

Theatre Inc. will sponsor first Experimental Theatre production, John Finch's "The Wanhope Building," at Princess theatre, N. Y., Feb. 9, 10 and 16, and the Theatre Guild will sponsor the second, Glendon Swarthout and John Savacool's "O'Daniel," Feb. 23, 24, 28 and March 2. Because the theatre seats only 299 persons, with less than 1,500 people to attend all performances, the theatre's producing committee co-chairmen, Cheryl Crawford and Clarence Derwent, are taking unusual step of announcing suspension of the ordinary press list to newspapers, and soliciting subscriptions from them instead. Subscriptions are $15 for five plays, available as memberships in American National Theatre & Academy, the overall sponsor, and hence deductible for income tax purposes because ANTA is tax-exempt.

Cara Williams, 20th-Fox starlet making her legit debut in touring company of "Born Yesterday," got her first notices when show opened last week at Nixon in Pittsburgh and came off very neatly. She hadn't previously been reviewed, having gone into cast during tag end of Boston run when Eleanor Lynn withdrew as the lead femme to await birth of her first child. One Smoky City critic, Karl Krug, of Sun-Telegraph, who had previously seen the Garson Kanin comedy on Broadway, even wrote that he thought Miss Williams was as good as Judy Holliday in the original production.

Gal has two unreleased pictures coming up, "Bob, Son of Battle" and "Boomerang." Best previous flicker break was as wife of Perry Como in "Something for the Boys."

For the first time, a critic was billed over actors—in fact the latter weren't even mentioned— on the banner inside Leon and Eddie's N. Y. night club for "Celebrity Nite" Sunday (12) last week. Robert Garland, reviewer for the N. Y. Journal American, sat on the stage under the banner which carried his name in large letters and was called "that eminent theatre writer and first nighter." Seated with him and also introduced by Eddie Davis were John Beal, rehearsing with "Carrot and Club"; Jean Kean, who recently replaced Betty Garrett in "Call Me Mister"; Jose Ferrer, starring in "Cyrano De Bergerac," and Sidney Blackmer, who recently appeared in the closed "Wonderful Journey."

N. Y. PM, in the special "Hats Off!" box on the letter page usually used to hail some individual for a noteworthy deed or cause, last week did the unusual in saluting "Finian's Rainbow." PM saluted the new Broadway musical, "and everyone connected with it, for bringing to Broadway entertainment with a social conscience, for making so ridiculous some aspects of racial discrimination, for poking such fun at some of the Southern diehards who keep the south in the grip of age-old, discredited biases. Above all, hats off to the 'Finian's Rainbow' people for having a sense of humor as well as a sense of justice."

John Antonello and Jimmy Nixon, partners in the booking office of A & N Presentations, Kansas City, are taking their second fling at angeling a legit production with a sizable interest in "The Story of Mary Surratt," which recently opened on the Coast. Deal was set with Howard Lewis and Russell Young, producers, when they brought their production of "The Desert Song" to the Music Hall, K. C., under A & N banner last season.

Antonello and Nixon previous flier was on "Easy for Zeezee," which opened in Chi and closed in short order.

Similarity accounts for switching of the title of "It Takes Two," which George Abbott and Richard Aldrich are trying out at the Wilbur, Boston. Because the current "The Big Two" arrived on Broadway first, the other "Two" was changed to "Apartment 17" and then "-B" was added, but last week the original label was decided on. Newest "Two" is dated to open at the Biltmore, N. Y., Feb. 5, the other play being at the Booth, where closing notice went up Monday (20).

John Golden has abandoned a comedy based on "The Goldbergs," former comedy radio serial, which has been off the air for around two years. Gertrude Berg, who worked on the play script, is said to have received a production offer from another manager and is writing new material for proposed radio usage.

Frank J. Sampson, who is endeavoring to assume the leadership of Tammany Hall with the backing of N. Y.'s Mayor O'Dwyer, is rather well known on Broadway. He was formerly in the boxoffice of the St. James, when it was called Erlanger's. After leaving show business Sampson entered politics and is a leader in Greenwich Village.

Harry Fromkes, who operated the Playhouse, N. Y., for a couple of seasons and is now in the disk field, proposes to specialize on legit show recordings. He figures that cutting records of individual parts will appeal to actors, if the whole play is not put on discs.

Same Old Debbil—House Shortage—Plagues Producers; 2 Shows on Deck

A theatre shortage which seasonally looms on Broadway is again in evidence and although there is only one fresh booking problem in respect to musicals, a number of new shows on the road trying out have not been allotted main stem berths. There was a temporary jam concerning "Sweethearts" which opened Tuesday (21) at the Shubert but it was necessary to send "The Red Mill" to the road after it wound up with a strong gross. "The Chocolate Soldier" has no definite berth yet.

Reported booking of an English Shakespearean troupe, headed by Donald Wolfit, into the big Century came as a surprise, as it infers the exit of "Toplitzky of Notre Dame," there being talk of moving that musical to the comparatively small Barrymore. Century is designed for musicals and although the much heralded Old Vic repertory was spotted there last summer, the incoming dramatic outfit hasn't the Vic reputation.

Among the shows not booked in, are "Eagle Has Two Heads," with Tallulah Bankhead, and "John Loves Mary." Latter comedy opened to promise in New Haven last week and was booked into Boston for two weeks starting Monday (20) but indications are that the Hub date may have to be extended. There are several houses with weak grossers which are becoming available but booking contracts have not been sought for one reason or another. Early this week only two out of 10 attractions trying out are definitely booked in, they being "It Takes Two" ("Apartment 17-B"), at the Biltmore, and "All My Sons," coming to the Coronet next week.

AN EX-MUGG TRIES TO EXPLAIN A POSER

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

Your piece on the critic's b.o. interested me because you put into words something that has puzzled me for weeks. "The American Repertory Theatre," you said, "which presented four revivals thus far, presented a poser for the scorekeeper, who decided that ART's attractions should be counted as one, and a reviewer's judgment as one."

Well, that's fine. I've been trying to make that point ever since the ART got started. The ART is a repertory company. It should be viewed —and reviewed—as a repertory company. At least, that is my humble opinion.

And that is the very thing the New York critics, in reviewing the ART plays, failed to do. That goes for VARIETY, too, which sent three different men to look at the four plays and wrote four separate pieces, none of them leaning on any of the others.

Not that I'm beefing. No squawks. But when the reviewers, by and large, looked at "Henry VIII," and talked about what a bad writer Shakespeare was, it seems to me that they were not actually, doing their job. Mind you, I'm a reformed critic. I can remember only too well the days when I was one of the untouchables. And I know just where, in the closet (in plenty of mothballs), I hung my holier-than-thou toga. Some day, when I have a few dollars in the bank account and can afford myself the luxury of going back to work for a newspaper, I'd like to find a job like that again. So I think that any critic, any time, anywhere, is entitled to say whatever he thinks in any language he can dream up But—what is repertory? It is an acting company. It is a series of plays It is a group of productions. And it must be weighed from that multiple standpoint.

Only one New York critic, John Chapman of the News, seems to have understood this. He said, "Only by seeing all the plays of a repertory company can you judge them . . ." You're so right, John. And now that VARIETY joins this viewpoint, I add —You're so right, muggs.

Incidentally, since most of the reviews of most of the plays were very good, thanks all down the line, and please understand that I am not picking on the Jukes family, much as they enjoy being picked on. It's just a thought, a viewpoint, an approach, which I am discussing here. But a viewpoint, or thought, which, it seems to me is terribly important. If, that is, there is any importance to the idea of repertory per se.

Gibson 'Come'-&-Go Stunt Gets Equity Frown; Coast Actor Is Nicked for $600

Charges by J. J. Shubert that Harry Gibson, a Coast actor, breached his run-of-the-play contract by quitting "Come On Up" when the Mae West show was booked in Canada, were not sustained by Equity's council last week, but actor was fined two weeks salary ($600) for violating the association's rules. The fine will go into Equity's emergency fund, with no financial consideration to the manager who could have been liable for Gibson's salary for the balance of the season, had he been dismissed.

Fact that Gibson came from Hollywood to answer the charges probably influenced the council in his favor. He presented a statement from a doctor that he was ill and under treatment at the time he left the show, but the company manager erred because he did not have the actor examined by a doctor. Gibson was reputed to have complained that he couldn't stand the cold weather across the border but when the case was heard he expressed willingness to rejoin the play.

Management said that was up to Miss West who has not indicated she wished him back in the cast. Had the charges been sustained Gibson might have been unable to appear professionally during a term of suspension. Show opened on the Coast last summer and has been on tour, an expected Broadway date not yet being definite.

Case is somewhat similar to that in which Mary Boland was involved when engaged by the Theatre Guild for "The Rivals." She claimed illness and walked, but although the Guild filed charges, it refused to press the case. Miss Boland however was fined $500 when she refused to permit an Equity doctor to examine her. Actress also left "Jubilee" and "Face The Music," both Broadway musicals, but neither management filed charges.

SAN CARLO TROUPING BOFF ONE-NIGHTERS

San Carlo Grand Opera Co. opened its annual tour last week in Massachusetts with one-nighters to excellent business, warbling outfit playing stands which only occasionally receive stage attractions. Most unusual booking had the troupe appearing in Brockton, near Boston, Sunday (19) afternoon and then at the Hub's Opera House at night. Before reaching Boston the troupe played Springfield, Worcester, Fitchburg and Lowell, taking in the latter town approximating $3,900. It was virgin territory for San Carlo except for Boston.

Outfit will play Jersey City, which hasn't had a show in more than 20 years, performance to be given in the town's largest high-school auditorium. Operatic attraction then goes into southern territory and heads for the Coast.

ELT Rockets High With New 'Moon' Production

Extending its record of excellent production, Equity Library Theatre's staging of Clifford Odets' "Rocket To The Moon" is one of its best efforts to date. At the Hamilton Grange Library, N. Y., last Wednesday (15), Alexander Scourby was standout in the central role of a dentist caught in a marital crisis. First-rate support was furnished by Fran Malis, Stefan Schnabel, Barbara Lipton, Milton Selzer, John Sylvester and Eugene Francis.

Direction, which was patterned closely after the original Broadway production, was handled by Casey Allen while Ruth Birnholz' setting made the most of the library's miniature stage. Lighting was also effective. Herm.

'Norway' Home to L.A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

After three years of far-flung trouping, "Song of Norway" will return to its birthplace, Los Angeles, April 21, to open the 1947 Civic Light Opera season at the Philharmonic.

Company made its bow here and grossed $130,000 for a three-week run. Since that time it has drawn $4,000,000 in the U. S. and another $1,000,000 in England. Meanwhile the musical, based on the life of the composer Grieg, is being measured for a screenplay at Universal-International.

AVC Takes Hand In D.C. Jimcrow Issue

The New York Theatre Chapter of the American Veterans Committee has joined the protest against segregation in Washington theatres. Letters were sent to managers requesting the use of their names to further the movement and in addition asked producers to sign pledges not to present shows in the capital. Both moves are reported to have had negative results. Idea of attempting to secure pledges probably stems from the stand taken by dramatists when the agitation started, during the engagement in Washington of "Joan of Lorraine." Some showmen are known to have ignored the communication from the vets, feeling that the group was attempting to exceed its purpose.

Showmen queried on the Negro discrimination situation believe that the campaign against one theatre is wrong procedure. They feel that the capital citizenry should be appealed to on the grounds of tolerance, to lift the ban in all theatres, schools, cafes and hotels. That is akin to the view taken by Equity following a survey of opinions expressed there.

A meeting held Monday (20) at the Alvin, N. Y., where "Joan" is playing, was conducted by the AVC group, purpose being to compliment the company on its stand against discrimination during its Washington engagement. Equity designated a spokesman to state its position in the situation to the assemblage.

Participants in the Alvin session, with Myron McCormack the chairman, were enthusiastic in voicing protests to Negro discrimination. Actor speakers declared they would not sign contracts to appear in shows which played stands where there is such segregation and one manager, co-producer Lee Sabinson of "Finian's Rainbow," said he would decline bookings in cities where the color line is drawn.

None of the protestants mentioned motion pictures in the Washington situation, but some who appeared on the stage there and voiced objection were exhibited on screens in nearby film houses at the same time. Playwrights who went on record as saying their plays would not be permitted in the capital until the situation is cleared up, were named but there was no statement of such a stand by the Dramatists Guild.

Villa-Lobos in N.Y. to Work On New Lester Operetta

Heitor Villa-Lobos, Brazilian classical composer, arrived in New York over the weekend to start work on "Magdalena," forthcoming South American Operetta. Based on an idea and original play by Homer Curran, musical is to be produced by Edwin Lester on a budget close to $250,000. Robert Wright and George Forrest will collaborate with Villa-Lobos, creating the lyrics and handling adaptation of the music.

It was originally planned to produce "Magdalena" during the spring season of the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera. However, Lester stated that in all likelihood early fall would see the curtain up on the new show. Plan is to open in Los Angeles prior to taking the musical east.

Curran will leave for the east shortly to join Villa-Lobos, Wright and Forrest in conferences on the show. Lester expects to arrive around Feb. 1 to confer with the authors. South American composer was accompanied to the U. S. by his wife and an interpreter, Dr. Jose Brendao.

Two British Rep Groups To Compete In N. Y., One With Bard, Other Comedy

Two English repertory outfits impend on Broadway, headed respectively by John Gielgud and Donald Wolfit and dated to open within a week of each other. But they are hardly opposition attractions, as the latter is strictly Shakespearean, while the former schedules comedy classics. Wolfit is slated for the large Century, N. Y., Feb. 18 although that house is currently tenanted by the comparatively new musical "Toplitzky of Notre Dame." Gielgud is advertised to debut Feb. 25.

Unusual extra space copy for Gielgud appeared in Sunday's (19) papers, the date of debut being set forth but the name of the theatre omitted. Mail orders for a scheduled eight-weeks date for "The Importance of Being Earnest" were solicited, such applications to be sent the offices of the Theatre Guild, which will present the star in association with John C. Wilson.

No mention was made of "Love For Love" in which the Gielgud company will appear April 21. The company immediately trained to Canada for appearances, first date being in Ontario Thursday (23). English showman H. M. Tennent is interested in the performances over here.

Gielgud Drops Bard

Gielgud first attracted attention on Broadway by appearing in "Hamlet" which fared so well at the Empire that it was moved to the more spacious St. James. The star has dropped the Bard for the time, for a season of comedy. Supporting players in Oscar Wilde's "Earnest" are Margaret Rutherfor, Pamel Brown, Jane Baxter, Jean Cadell, Robert Flemyng, John Kidd, Richard Wadsworth, Stringer Davis and Donald Bain. Wolfit's troupe is scheduling "King Lear," "Hamlet," "As You Like It," "Merchant of Venice," as well as Jonson's "Volpone."

Sunday extra space ads were used too for the first time for "The Iceman Cometh," mail orders being sought. Guild announced that a mail-order department has been set up at the Beck with the house treasurer, Dora Chamberlain, in charge. Mail orders for tickets are also advertised in extra space copy for "State of The Union" and "Another Part of The Forest." All three attractions are aimed into spring but it's possible that "Iceman" may go on tour before summer. Eugene O'Neill drama has not had a losing week but is expensive to operate and requires exceptional grosses for its six weekly performances. If and when "Iceman" takes to the road, the setting which is virtually in two scenes will be combined.

Understood that Gielgud is slated for the Plymouth, which has "Present Laughter," but another theatre is possible. The Barrymore is mentioned for "Toplitzky," that house being occupied by "Cyrano de Bergerac" one of the season's most successful revivals.

Wolfit Cleans Up in Canada

Toronto, Jan. 21.

Donald Wolfit troupe, first British theatrical company to visit Canada since the outbreak of war in 1939, is currently cleaning up in its six-weeks' Canadian tour. For its two nights at the Capitol, Ottawa, with the Governor-General and the Prime Minister present, it grossed just under $10,000; did $27,800 in 10 days at His Majesty's, Montreal, top gross there for several seasons, often to turnaway business; had over $20,000 in advance sales for the two weeks' engagement at the Royal Alexandra, Toronto, which opened to a sell-out last night (20).

Wolfit is doing "King Lear," "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice," "As You Like It," and Ben Jonson's "Volpone," this also to be his Broadway repertoire.

Equity Setting Up Plan Whereby Actors Can See More B'way Shows Cuffo

Believing that actors should see the performances of fellow professionals more often than is now customary, Clarence Derwent, head of Equity, is working out a system whereby members would be enabled to attend Broadway shows gratis. Heretofore actors asking for courtesies would apply to the company manager on the day of performance and not infrequently their requests were denied. New plan is for the producer to set aside a specified number of tickets for actors, they being identified with slips issued by Equity.

Already two attractions are available and managerial response is such that quite a number of shows will be on the free list for actors. "Cyrano De Bergerac" and "Lovely Me" tickets may be had at this time for performances on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 20 tickets weekly having been allotted to Equity, it being figured that the shows are less likely to sell out on those nights.

Although the idea has been talked about for some time, no announcement has been made about the cuffo tickets, other than a notice on the association's bulletin board. Word got around in professional circles, however, that Equity reports it has been "sold out" for the next week or two. Slips carry the name of the producer and show and read: "In accordance with your desire to invite Equity members, this will serve as an introduction," the name of the actor and the date of the performance being filled in. Such tickets are subject to the admission tax as are other courtesy admissions.

WYMETAL TO MANAGE PITT ALFRESCO OPERA

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

William Wymetal, former stage director of the Metropolitan Opera and for the last several years a consultant in Hollywood on musical sequences, has been appointed managing director of Civic Light Opera Co. for its second season of outdoor operas at the Pitt Stadium. He succeeds Max Koenigsberg, who resigned on account of ill health.

At the same time, Edwin Wappler, who manages legit Nixon, which closes down during the warm months, has been named company manager for the alfresco productions, replacing Walter Ecker.

Continuation of under-the-stars productions locally was assured last week by another $50,000 gift from Kaufmann's department store.

L.A. Open-Air Legit Set For '47 in Greek Bowl

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Greek Bowl in Griffith Park will be the scene of another outdoor season of summer entertainment by the Hollywood Starlight Theatre Assn., starting July 7.

Gene Mann, managing director, announced that the company is spending $35,000 on improvements on the Bowl and will toss five shows into the arena when warm weather arrives. Operetta schedule will be complete about March 1.

Legit Moppets Map Own March of Dimes Assist

Forming plans of their own to aid the March of Dimes campaign, some 100 child actors, aged 7 to 16, at a meeting held at the Professional Children's School in New York Monday (20), organized the first Junior Actors' Committee to help the paralysis drive. Richard Tyler, who plays the title role in "Christopher Blake," was named chairman.

In lining up contributions to support the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, moppets set up a speakers' bureau, will make talks in schools and take collections from their own casts backstage among other things. All 38 of the children currently appearing in 10 Broadway shows have volunteered to ask their stage managers for permission to make curtain speeches.

Dallas Operetta Season Sets $300,000 Budget

Dallas, Jan. 21.

The State Fair of Texas operetta committee voted an appropriation of $300,000 for alfresco presentations to be presented here this summer. The figure makes the Dallas Casino 70-day operation the second largest in the country, next to the St. Louis Municipal Opera.

Charles R. Meeker, Jr., general manager for the Casino and Fair Park Auditorium, will leave next month for New York to arrange repertoire, casting and production personnel.

Plays Out of Town

John Loves Mary

New Haven, Jan. 16.

Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein, II (in assn. with Joshua Logan) production of comedy in three acts by Norman Krasna. Directed by Logan; scenery and lighting by Frederick Fox; costumes by Lucinda Ballard. Opened at Shubert, New Haven, Jan. 16, '47; $3.60 top.

Mary McKinley..................Nina Foch
Oscar Dugan..................Ralph Chambers

John Lawrence..................William Prince
Senator James McKinley..........Loring Smith
Mrs. Phyllis McKinley..........Ann Mason
Lt. Victor O'Leary..........Lyle Bettger
George Beechwood..........Max Showalter
Lily Herbish..................Pamela Gordon
Brig.-Gen. Harwood Biddle.Harry Bannister

In its present state, as a play, "John Loves Mary" rates only a B on the report card. As entertainment, that's another story. They say that Burbank, the famous horticulturist, could cross fruits and vegetables with unusual results. Rodgers and Hammerstein will go him one better with this one. They are about to plant on Broadway some corn that will no doubt materialize as heavy spinach when the stage and film harvest is in.

Plot is implausible as a confirmed toper's alibis but in spite of that, playgoers will probably enjoy the production somewhat as they would a good variety show—except in this case, the performers juggle words instead of Indian clubs; the animal act is confined to making a brasshat look like a jackass; and the entire troupe is on a merry-go-round instead of bicycles.

The above "corn" comment stems from such old reliable laugh sequences as the situation where the hero innocently doffs his pants in the presence of the heroine just as her parents enter the room; and the obvious complications that ensue when he marries a girl in whom he has no romantic interest, just so he can pave the way for her sealing to a buddy.

Play is billed as comedy but actually it's farce with a plush lining. The farce classification gives script certain license such as establishing an early problem which could be solved easily in the first act but if it were, there would be no need for the other two stanzas. This observation, incidentally, reflects the present status of the show—act one sets such a terrific page that the following sessions are going to have difficulty in catching up to it.

Tale tells of a GI, John Lawrence, about to see his girl for the first time after a three-year overseas stretch. Girl, Mary, is daughter of U. S. Senator McKinley, living in New York, and she has cooked up a scheme whereby her parents will be in Washington while she welcomes her hero alone. Instead, a former buddy, Fred, who had saved the GI's life in battle, and who had preceded him home by a year, shows up and it's a three-way reunion.

It develops that Fred had had an overseas romance with Lily, an English nightclub entertainer who was reported blitzed. Actually the girl had been located by John who, as a mark of gratitude to Fred, married the girl as the only means of getting her to America, with plans of a Reno divorce clearing the way for Fred to take over. All this is unknown to Mary, who wants John to marry her, and to Fred who, meanwhile, has married elsewhere, thinking Lily dead. Unravelling of this mixup is what serves as foundation for some very funny lines that get a healthy assist from generally expert delivery.

Scripter Krasna offers herewith another exhibition of his skill at garnering laughs by the proper manipulation of words and phrases. While some of his situations also involve good comedy ingredients, it is primarily the verbiage department that snares the snickers. Weaknesses of the second and third acts are glossed over largely by diverting dialog. Staging of Joshua Logan works hand in glove with the writing assignment and indicates a shipshape product by the time show hits Gotham.

Casting is uniformly good. Play should help to establish William Prince and Nina Foch as a personable pair of youthful thesps. They have romantic appeal combined with good sense of comedy values. Tom Ewell walks off with the laugh wreath with a honey of a performance that rings the bell from start to finish. Harry Bannister likewise cashes in on chuckle possibilities as a brasshat general. Pamela Gordon registers as the cockney lass.

Loring Smith attacks the senator part like an actor who is so anxious to get his teeth into the role he includes the scenery too. His performance requires toning down, which it undoubtedly will get with added playing, inasmuch as Smith is a capable actor. Ann Mason does well as the senator's wife; Lyle Bettger adds good support as a former lieutenant turned Paramount usher; Max Showalter has a brief but amusing role as a Red Cross representative; Ralph Chambers fits as a hotel flunkey.

A handsome living room in the St. Regis hotel sets an attractive background for the goings-on and femme cast members exhibit eye-appealing attire. Bone.

Evening at the Lab

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Actors' Lab production of four one-act plays, three by Tennessee Williams, one by Sean O'Casey. Features Jessica Tandy, Vincent Price, Art Smith, Henry Morgan, Whitner Bissel, Anita Sharpe-Bolster, George Tyne, David Clark, Mary Davenport, Francis S. White. Directed by Jules Dassin, Hume Cronyn, Alfred Ryder, Roman Bohnen. Technical direction, Gene Callnon; lighting, Milton Starr; settings, Gene Callnon, Duane Finn, Peter Klain, Sidney Dubin. Opened at Las Palmas, Hollywood, Jan. 14, '47; $3 top.

Following the pattern of its first professional production, well over two years ago, Actors' Lab has returned to a series of one-acters, running the gamut from socially conscious, vague propaganda to downright good theatre for entertainment purposes only. Tennessee Williams is responsible for the two "messages" that somehow fail to arrive to Garcia. On the other hand, he also can be credited for one exquisite character study, "Portrait of a Madonna." Sean O'Casey contributes the sole comedy, "The End of the Beginning," a farce of classic proportions.

The first two offerings, "Mooney's Kids Don't Cry" and "The Last of My Solid Gold Watches," are bleak studies of frustration. In the former, a pair of wretched starvelings and their month-old baby are the subjects on which Williams tries to hang a moral. Whatever Williams' moral is, it is lost in some pretty dull play construction. "The Last of My Solid Gold Watches," practically a monolog concerning an old die-hard Southern drummer, gives Vincent Price an opportunity to appear as an ancient, obvious Bilbo supporter. Price tries, in fact a little too hard, but the dialog rambles in an obvious manner. Clinton Rosemond and Whitner Bissell do well by the minor roles handed them.

Jessica Tandy triumphs in "Portrait of a Madonna," giving this one gem by Williams everything in the book. As a mentally unbalanced old maid, with sexual delusions concerning a non-existent lover, Miss Tandy works back and forth from gentle sanity to nervous unbalance that sets her among the great First Ladies of the theatre. Certainly no finer performance ever has been given locally. Hume Cronyn did a superb job on direction and David Clarke and George Tyne efface t hemselves deftly in support of the actress.

Roman Bohnen directed the final piece, "End of the Beginning," and deserves top directorial award for wringing the audience dry with laughs, to say nothing of handling his cast. Art Smith, Henry Morgan and Anita Sharpe-Bolster have the chores in this wild, slapstick hoedown. Throwing in, quite literally, the kitchen sink and other household appurtenances, O'Casey shows what havoc can be wrought when husband decides to do wife's household chores. After the misery of the first three plays, this not only comes as a welcome relief, it almost breaks up the theatre to say nothing of the audience.

Production, direction, set and lighting credits are all of topflight nature for this minnie-house. Show should remain and play to SRO audiences on strength of word-of-mouth campaign, to say nothing of rave reviews from local press. Huts.

It's hard to say yet whether Donald Wolfit's repertory group will hit the financial jackpot, but on the basis of audience and critical reactions, it looks favorable. British thesps are drawing well-filled houses at every performance.

If the group does go to Broadway, (negotiations are now under way) chances for its success appear okay. There'll be a natural tendency to compare it with the Old Vic but that difficulty will probably not count to any great extent due to the fact that Wolfit is doing at least two things that haven't been seen in N. Y. for years: "King Lear" and Ben Johnson's "Volpone." Besides that, the group has three of the Bard's top attractions in its repertory, "Merchant of Venice," "Hamlet" and "As You Like It," which should in themselves keep the boxoffice active.

Opened here with "Lear" Wednesday (8) and followed by "As You Like It" Thursday matinee (9). Wolfit, doing title role in "Lear," showed himself a powerful figure who plays the tragedy to the hilt, broadly and with full force, ignoring the subtle underplaying used by many present-day tragedians. The picture of the monarch slowly going mad is drawn in bold strokes, so much so, in fact, that Wolfit's Lear stands out above all the other players. And this is perhaps the main fault, if it can be labeled a fault—the other thesps suffer by comparison. Through no fault of their own it is Wolfit's show.

Balance of cast all do solid jobs. Most notable is their elocution and clarity of speech. Sets and costuming in "Lear" are on the shoddy side, the reason being the British need for skimping and saving during the war.

"As You Like It" finds the group doing a complete switch, and it's a happy one, with the rest of the cast looking more like participating than supporting players, as in the case of "Lear." Wolfit himself takes a modest role, that of Touchstone, the clown. Comedy lines are played to the hilt. Settings are on the debit side of the ledger, but deficiency can be overlooked. Laza.

Volpone

Montreal, Jan. 16.

Donald Wolfit repertory production of play in two acts by Ben Jonson. Staging and settings by Wolfit. Musical arrangements by Rosalind Watson. At His Majesty's, Montreal, Jan. 15, '47; $3.32 top.

Volpone..................Donald Wolfit
Mosca..................John Wynyard
Voltore..................Frederick Horrey
Corbaccio..................Eric Maxon
Corvino..................Alexander Gauge
Bonario..................Kempster Barnes
Sir Politick Would-Be..........Robert Algar
Peregrine..................Malcolm Watson
Nano..................Richard Blythe
Castrone..................Geoffrey Wilkinson
Androgyno..................David Dodimead
Celia..................Rosalind Iden

Only non-Shakespearean play done by Wolfit group appears to click even better than some of the Bard's works in which Wolfit is a specialist. Jonson's bawdy comedy is treated in best Elizabethan tradition with all the villainy and foxiness played to the hilt.

Wolfit, naturally, stands out above everybody else, his Volpone being played, as are his Shakespearean parts, in a broad manner. Broadway success, however, is a gamble since there's much corn here that may not register.

Main fault with the Wolfit productions, the so-called stock style of playing, is evidenced here. Supporting players aren't given free enough rein.

Sets are on the shoddy side as is the costuming. Laza.

office, but that there probably will be no full-scale move to cut down quantity in favor of quality.

There's a new type of Hollywood film executive, rising out of the writer ranks and therefore more inclined to judge a film artistically as well as commercially, Bernhardt says. "Dore Schary is representative of this type, Bernhardt stresses. "He could well develop into another Irving Thalberg, who hasn't had a replacement in Hollywood."

Bernhardt maintains that foreign film competition is having a healthy effect on Hollywood production. In contrast to the easier days, when Coast producers were just competing among themselves, director says, "You can feel the growing uneasiness in the studios as a result of the growing threat of foreign films. We're going to be forced to more careful production." So far, he adds, foreign films selected for distribution in the U.S. have generally been better than our own.

While in N. Y. Bernhardt is gandering Broadway legit and pronounces it appallingly bad in comparison to previous years. He says that high costs have choked off originality and made it necessary for producers to have a pre-tested product to sell, which results in the use of old, tried formulae for shows. Interlaced union rulings, which have almost trebled a producer's labor nut, form a large part of the total overhead, he adds.

Bernhardt's contract with Warners is up Feb. 1 after seven years with the studio. While he has no immediate plans outside of a trip to Sun Valley, he says it's unlikely that he'll go back with the studio except on a freelance basis.

Plays on Broadway

Little A

Sam Nasser production, in association with Harry Lambert, of drama in three acts (one scene) by Hugh White. Features Otto Kruger, Jessie Royce Landis and Wallis Clark. Staged by Melville Burke; setting by Watson Barratt. Opened at Miller, N. Y., Jan. 15, '47; $4.20 top.

Aaron Storm..................Otto Kruger
Lucinda Storm..........Jessie Royce Landis
Mary Howard..................Ottilie Kruger
Phoebe Painter..................Frances Bavier
Clyde Painter..................Harry Mehaffey
Dr. Duncan Brown..........Wallis Clark
Donald Storm..................Robert Willey

A well-intentioned presentation by a managerial newcomer and an author new to the theatre figures to evoke a difference of opinion but is doubtful of drawing enough patronage.

First two acts are fairly interesting although the performance seems much too quiet. Final act veers to melodrama and there's a bit of unbelievable gunplay which switches the story from the psychological to the lurid. It is very well enacted, however, by two name players plus the supporting short cast. Also "Little A" is performed within an excellent interior.

Otto Kruger returns from Hollywood to characterize Aaron Storm, who operates a northern Coast cannery in a small town. His father, who owned the plant before him, was known as Big A and the appellation of small is given the son, because the heir hasn't the father's dynamic personality. Jessie Royce Landis, one of Broadway's leading actresses, appearing as Aaron's wife Lucinda, seems a bit too voluptuous for a deceptive wife, but the performances of both are of the higher plane.

Aaron, who likes classical music and plays chess with his doctor friend, is a quiet, mannerly fellow dominated by Lucinda. For 19 years he has had the suspicion of not being the father of their son Donald, back on vacation from college. It is not until the youth strikes Aaron, who berates Donald for attempting to rape Mary the maid, that the truth is conceded. But it's late in the play when it develops that Big A was the boy's actual parent and that Lucinda tormented Aaron's mother until she lost her mind and died. The play then becomes lurid.

When Aaron erupts he is minded to commit murder. First there is a poison potion but that is discarded. The deceived husband then toys with a pistol and then hands the gun to the hated Lucinda, which seems to be incredible. Luckily she is a bad shot for, after aiming at Aaron the slug strikes Donald. Whether he dies isn't indicated, as the curtain then drops

Wallis Clark does well as the friendly doctor. Ottilie Kruger, daughter of Otto, gives a very good performance as the maid Mary and scenes beteween them are the pleasant interludes in the play. Ibee.

If in the Greenwood

Blackfriars production of play in blank verse in three acts by Victoria Kuhn. Staged by Dennis Gurney. At Blackfriars' Guild Playhouse, N. Y., Jan. 16, '47; $1.80 top.

Elena..................Katherine Hamilton
John Barron Mark..........Ray Colcord
David Landor..................Edwin Ross
Father Benedict..................Joseph Boley
Peter Conrad..................John Young
Robert Wilde..................Paul Gregory
Anne St. John..................Ann Linsley

The Blackfriars have made anything but a happy choice in its attempt to transfer this blank verse opus from the written page to a stage production. It may have read great but it doesn't come off in the transition. It's doubtful even if the most arty-minded followers of this semi-pro group will evince much enthusiasm over it. First nighters, exclusive of those who had accompanied the youthful author, Victoria Kuhn, from Washington for the preem, were decidedly non-committal on appraisal and for the most part nearly as bewildered as the cast reading the lines on the other side of the foots.

The author starts out with a close-up of nations bereft of a lasting unity between the powerful and the weak. Locale is in a mythical country, which would recall its former leader to carry the ball in the unity stakes.

After much stilted gab and actionless meanderings, it appears that a man must put his own house in order before settling the problems of troublesome nations and the world. Sex romps in by a clandestine affair between the man's wife and his chief adviser, which carries on to the ultimate denouement, when after practically cursing the man, the culprits find solace in suicide. At the tag, the man has regained strength by their act and will carry on in his purpose.

The cast does the best it can with the material at hand, and Dennis Gurney has directed with his accustomed skill—to little purpose. Edba.

Ruth Draper Monologs Reveal Her Old Magic

Returning to Broadway after a five-year stay abroad, Ruth Draper in her collection of character sketches is proving an artistic success during the first two weeks of her limited engagement at the Empire theatre, N. Y. With the playhouse temporarily vacant at night, pending resumption of "O Mistress Mine," Miss Draper switched her schedule of performances, largely booked for matinees, to evening shows mainly. The one-woman show is set for about 40 performances—an unusually large number for this type of attraction.

For the current series, the diseuse is introducing two new sketches to her gallery of female portraits, both based on contemporary war themes. Bulk of each show, however, consists of Miss Draper's best-known pieces including "Opening a Bazaar," "Doctors and Diets," "Three Women and Mr. Clifford," "The Italian Lesson," etc. Diseuse is displaying her best form in the familiar pieces, especially in her characterization of the jaded Mrs. Clifford where she mixes a bit of acid with her general sympathy for the distaff side.

One of the new sketches, "The Return," is a sentimental affair, divided into two scenes, depicting the homecoming of a wounded English officer. Miss Draper makes the milk of human kindness overflow the brim in this piece. The other sketch, entitled "Vive La France," is an effective dramatic monolog, delivered wholly in French and concerned with the wife of a young Frenchman who is about to sail to join DeGaulle's forces in England. Herm.

'Cyrano' Switcheroo Draws Ferrer Kudos; Subs Trot Stuff Well

Jose Ferrer is to be commended for his sound theatrical enterprise and business judgment, as well as the artistic gesture, in scheduling two performances of his "Cyrano de Bergerac" with understudies taking the lead parts. A good-sized audience that included managers, agents and other theatre gentry attended the first special matinee Thursday (16) at the Barrymore, N. Y., and undoubtedly was impressed with the proceedings and with Ferrer's stated hope "that other producers will follow suit, and thus establish a helpful method of uncovering and encouraging promising talent for the general betterment of the theatre."

It was a good performance, with the substitute actors giving a competent account of themselves. William Woodson, who ordinarily plays Le Bret, took the Cyrano role. His voice lacks the dramatic bite of Ferrer, and he bounced around a little too hectically, but otherwise conveyed the poetry, the tortured frustrations, of the long-nosed lover with intelligence and skill.

Patricia Wheel, the Orange girl, made a sweet, appealing Roxanne. Stewart Long, normally a lackey, was a bit boyish but otherwise agreeable as Christian. Charles Summers, a guardsman, did a fine job as Ragueneau. Nan McFarland, playing the duenna, and Robert Carroll, essaying De Guiche, made individual portraits of these roles.

An added gesture that proved as much fun to the actors as to the audience was the taking of bit parts by the play's regular leads. Ferrer was a porter and ragged poet; Ernest Graves (Christian) a lackey; Ralph Clanton (De Guiche) another lackey; Paula Lawrence (Duenna) a flower girl and nun; Francis Compton (Carbon) a cook, and Frances Reid (Roxanne) a soubret and nun. Hiram Sherman, normally Ragueneau, made the bit part of a ragged poet an inspired one.

Admission charge of $2 for orchestra and $1.50 for balcony helped cover salaries and incidentals. Bron.

British Legit Troupe In Japan to Act for Tommies

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Ten British actors and actresses arrived in Kure last week to present the plays "Patsy," "George and Margaret" and "Peg O' My Heart" to British Occupation Force personnel in Japan. Troupe arrived from Australia, where it gave 2,000 performances to servicemen. Group consisted of Beverly Myles, troupe leader; Phyllis McLean, Lois Roby, Gloria Robins, Jack Dwyer, Alistair Roberts, Jack Guest and John Alden, producer.

Also arriving was Czechoslovakian ballerina Evelyn Ippen, who is scheduled for a six-month tour of the British area.

Bowouts for Chi Shows Bring B.O. Lift; 'Harvey' 21G, 'Apple' 21G, 'Flag' 18G

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Usual rush due to last-week notices on most shows made for general upward swing at wickets. "Flag Is Born" and "Apple of His Eye" closed Saturday (18) after short runs, while "Pygmalion" and "Student Prince" are due to follow soon, the latter having opened last week for good biz.

Big legit turnover due soon with several shows coming in. "Lute Song" returns to Studebaker Wednesday (22). "Three to Make Ready" goes into Blackstone Feb. 7; "Springtime For Henry" follows "Pygmalion" into the Selwyn next week, and "Born Yesterday" hits the Blackstone Feb. 24. "Magnificent Yankee" went into the Erlanger Monday (20) for a five-week stay.

Estimates for Last Week

"A Flag Is Born," Studebaker (4th wk) (1,246; $4.20). Last week was best for this one, with $18,000.

"Apple of His Eye," Erlanger (4th wk) (1,334; $3.60). Took to road after final good week of $21,000.

"Harvey," Harris (24th wk) (1,000; $4.20). Tickets hard to get again with a swing to $21,000.

"Pygmalion," Selwyn (7th wk) (1,000; $4.20). Doing plenty well, around $20,000.

"Song of Norway," Shubert (7th wk) (2,100; $4.80). Continues high with $36,000.

"Student Prince," Blackstone (1,358; $4.20). Opened Sunday (12) for good biz after rave crix reviews; $17,000 for eight performances.

European Concertists To Make U. S. Debut

National Concert & Artists Corp. has signed several prominent concert artists who will be making their first U. S. appearances shortly. Signed by NCAC are Mihaly Szekely, Hungarian basso, due shortly; Louis Fuorestier, conductor of the Paris Opera, who led at the Met recently; Nikita Magaloff, pianist; and Daniza Ilitsch, Czech soprano. Magaloff is already signed for an appearance with the San Francisco Symphony in February and Miss Ilitsch for concerts with the Detroit Symphony.

NCAC is also sponsoring return of Torsten Ralf and Joel Berglund, Swedish singers, who debuted at the Met last season. It has also booked European tours for some of its American artists, by way of talent exchange, as follows:

Claudio Arrau, two months' tour through England, France, Switzerland, Scandinavian countries, January and February, 1947; Dusolina Giannini, from January to May, '47, all through Europe; Lotte Lehmann, fall of '47, England and France; Raoul Jobin, the Paris Opera, from March 15 to June, '47, also concerts throughout Europe; Mack Harrell, concert tour, Europe and Scandinavia, end of February to end of April; Jess Walters, Covent Garden, January to April, '47, and Doris Doree, Covent Garden, December, '46 to Feb., '47, and two performances at the Royal Copenhagen Opera.

'John' OK 12G, N. Haven

New Haven, Jan. 21.

Preem of "John Loves Mary" built from moderate advance to Saturday night SRO, following optimistic press at opening at Shubert last weekend (16-18). Word of laugh content got around and was reflected in good b.o. which mounted to an okay $12,000 on four shows at $3.60 top.

Another breakin holds forth currently, with "Washington Square" in for a last half (23-25). Fourth consecutive tryout gets an airing here Jan 30-Feb. 1 when "Carrot and Club" comes in for four shows. Fifth in a row follows, with preem of "Brigadoon" set for Feb. 6-8.

Wolfit Group Wolfs 30G For 10 Shows in Montreal

Montreal, Jan. 21.

Donald Wolfit and his Shakespearean company closed a 10-day engagement Saturday (18) garnering socko $30,000 gross at $3.32 top. Group at 1,850-seater His Majesty's played to sro houses but take was dented by cutrates for school moppets whose matinee admissions were set at 50c.

John Gielgud opens here Jan. 28 in "Importance of Being Earnest" and advance sale is heavy.

'Sons' 8G Sleeper, 'Blossom' $25,000, 'Spirits' 4G, Hub

Boston, Jan. 21.

"All My Sons," only opener last week, proved something of a sleeper at the Colonial. Show got good notices in all but one slot, and word-of-mouth did the rest to build to a nice first weekend. "Blossom Time" was big at the Opera House in final week, and "Call Me Mister" remained plenty staunch at the Shubert. But other two shows were way off.

Openers this week are San Carlo Opera at the Opera House (Jan. 19); "John Loves Mary," at the Plymouth (20), and "Apt. B-17" at the Wilbur (21). Next week, "Washington Square," at the Colonial and Jooss Ballet at the Copley. Plenty of prospects ahead.

Estimates for Last Week

"All My Sons," Colonial (1,500; $3.60). Got off to a slow start but gained when the notices came in to build to a not-too-bad $8,000 first week estimated. Second week current and should be better. Play has good hit possibilities.

"Best of Spirits," Plymouth (1,200; $3.60). Never caught on with second week remaining at first's estimated $4,000 level. "John Loves Mary" here now.

"Blossom Time," Opera House (2,900; $3.60). Second week did capacity biz final days of week to bring estimate up to $25,000, which is very good.

"Call Me Mister," Shubert (1,590; $4.80). Fifth week still in groove with sock $33,000 estimated.

"Young Man's Fancy," Copley (1,100; $3.60). Failed to click on second week with estimated $3,000 so didn't remain third week as indicated. House dark until Jooss Ballet comes in next week.

'LUTE' FINALES IN L.A. AT 40G; 'BLACKOUTS' 17G

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Legit grosses tallied neatly here this past week, with pleasing reports from all sides. "Lute Song" climaxed its fortnight at the Biltmore with $22,500 for the final frame and $40,000 for the run, which could have lasted another three weeks. Ken Murray's "Blackouts of 1947" stood steady at $17,000 for the 239th week at El Capitan.

"She Dood It in Dixie" encored a nice sum with $10,150 for the third stanza at the Belasco. El Patio took in $5,700 for "Pinafore," which was about $1,000 below the nut, but a higher gross than this house has seen in some time. Musart's "Shared Wife" went on the two-for-one plan, with members participating on a co-op basis and climbed slightly to $2,700 for the third week.

'Park' 22G in 4th, D.C.

Washington, Jan. 21.

"Up in Central Park" wound up the fourth and last week of its run at the National Saturday (18) with a gross of $22,000 for the week, indicating that a month is too long for practically anything in these parts, no matter how good it is as theatre.

"Blossom Time" is back for the umpteenth time, for a two-week stint.

'Dream Girl' 17G, Balto

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

"Dream Girl" built a fine gross of $17,000 at Ford's here last week but folded nevertheless because operating nut required even more than this imposing figure to mount a profit. Fine critical reaction to performance of June Havoc in lead.

Tallulah Bankhead in "The Eagle Has Two Heads" is current with "The Red Mill" and "Craig's Wife" set to follow.

'Turtle' $17,800, Toronto

Toronto, Jan. 21.

Here for a fortnight's engagement, "Voice of the Turtle" reversed the local pattern when the gross for the second stanza exceeded the first week's figure.

Second saw a healthy $17,800, with Royal Alexandra (1,525) scaled at $3 top. Meant that "Turtle" grossed $33,300 on Toronto engagement.

B'way Attendance Up; 'Rainbow' 41½G, 'Street' 38G, Both Register as Hits; 'Beggar' 34½G, 'Annie' 45½G; 2 Out

Broadway's attendance to legiters improved last week along the line, as most showmen predicted. Weather was depressing on almost every day and while the soggy going did not affect night business, midweek matinees, especially those on Wednesday, saw a drop even among the sturdiest draws. By the end of the week, however, agencies were busy trying to fill orders for Saturday's (18) performances.

"Finian's Rainbow" and "Street Scene" lived up to enthusiastic notices with virtual capacity and great grosses. There was very little agency call for "The Big Two." Last week's sole arrival, "Little A," evoked sharply divided notices, attendance indicating some promise, however. Revival of "Sweethearts" the only opening this week, although Sonja Henie opens at Madison Square Garden in her "Hollywood Ice Revue." "The Big Two" and "Temper the Mind" are closing this week.

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), M (Musical), O (Operetta).

"Annie Get Your Gun," Imperial (36th week (M-1,427; $6.60). Agencies won't accept orders except six weeks in advance as a rule for this leading musical, which approximates $45,500.

"Another Part of the Forest," Fulton (9th week) (D-968; $4.80). Continues to gather profits weekly; somewhat better, with count being around $21,000.

"Beggar's Holiday," Broadway (4th week) (M-1,900; $4.80). Staying chances appear promising, with takings strong and audience reaction favorable; improved to $34,500.

"Born Yesterday," Lyceum (51st week) (C-993; $4.80). Still selling out and is among the clicks figured to play into next season; $21,000.

"Call Me Mister," National (40th week) (R-1,104; $6). Vitality of GI revue keeps it among the musical leaders; takings continue at capacity plus; nearly $33,000.

"Carousel," Majestic (92d week) (M-1,667; $6). Business varies considerably but musical makes money right along; last week improved to around $32,000.

"Christopher Blake," Music Box (7th week) (D-979; $4.80). Slated into spring, if not longer; tear-jerker has plenty of theatre parties; over $23,000.

"Finian's Rainbow," 46th Street (2d week) (M-1,319; $6). First full week of new musical click approximated $41,500, even with party or two; capacity.

"Happy Birthday," Broadhurst (12th week) (CD-1,160; $4.80). Cinch into summer with capacity the rule; rated close to $30,500.

"Harvey," 48th St. (116th week) (C-920; $4.20). Back to virtual capacity and never much affected despite seasons and conditions; $18,500 quoted.

"Icetime," Center (31st week) (R-2,994; $2.40). Will have Sonja Henie skating show at Madison Square Garden against it but Radio City crowds support this one; around $30,000.

"Joan of Lorraine," Alvin (9th week) (D-1,331; $4.80). Three and one-half months to go (May 3) and should play to standees until then, as now; over $32,500.

"Life With Father," Bijou (372d week) (C-613; $3.60). Run leader held its own last week when takings were $8,000; probably some profit.

"Little A," Miller (1st week) (D-940; $4.20). Divergent first-night opinion affected second night but business improved; around $5,500 in first five times. Opened Wed. (15).

"Lovely Me," Coronet (4th week) (C-1,095; $4.80). Must move or fold; improved to $8,000 but needs more; "All My Sons" follows here next week.

"O Mistress Mine," Empire (CD-1,082; $4.80). Played 42 weeks until forced to suspend (Alfred Lunt operated on); Ruth Draper solo attraction at the theatre.

"Oklahoma!," St. James (204th week) (M-1,509; $4.80). Plans call for London to witness champ musical next summer; grosses have varied lately; up again to $25,500.

"Present Laughter," Plymouth (12th week) (C-1,063; $4.80). May go through winter; while not among leaders, has made the grade; eased to $16,000 last week.

"State of the Union," Hudson (62d week) (CD-1,057; $4.80). Very little affected except midweek matinee and the gross approached $24,000.

"Street Scene," Adelphi (2d week) (M-1,434; $6). Virtual capacity throughout first full week when gross was around $38,000; higher figure except for parties.

"Temper the Wind," Playhouse (D-865; $4.80). Final and 4th week; picked up to $9,000 but drama needs considerably more to break even.

"The Big Two," Booth (C-812; $4.80). Final and 3d week, after weak press, little action in agencies; takings first full week around $12,000 indicated.

"The Fatal Weakness," Royale (9th week) (CD-1,025; $4.80). Business continues to be highly profitable with takings around $20,500.

"The Iceman Cometh," Beck (15th week) (D-1,213; $5.40). Held to about the same figures, $18,500 being approximated; ticket sale extends to mid-March.

"The Voice of the Turtle," Morosco (146th week) (C-939; $3.60). Little change to pace of three-person play; around $9,000, to some profit.

"Toplitzky of Notre Dame," Century (4th week) (M-1,712; $4.80). Talk of moving to another house next month; business claimed to be profitable however; up to $22,500.

"Years Ago," Mansfield (7th week) (C-1,001; $4.80). Appears to have caught on firmly with nightly capacity; bit off midweek matinee; over $25,000 quoted again; great for straight play.

REVIVALS

"Bloomer Girl," City Center (2d week) (M-2,693; $2.40). With Sunday added, gross spurted to better than $25,000; musical back for six weeks date.

"Burlesque," Belasco (4th week) (C-1,077; $4.80). Among the revival standouts with business again approximately $20,000; big in this house.

"Henry VIII," "What Every Woman Knows," "John Gabriel Borkman" and "Androcles and the Lion," International (11th week) (1,172; $4.20). American Repertory Theatre plans adding "Yellow Jacket" to its bills; "Androcles" most popular in four revivals so far; fair $16,000.

"Lady Windermere's Fan," Cort (14th week) (C-1,064; $4.20). Another revival standout; getting highly profitable business; estimated over $21,000.

"Cyrano de Bergerac," Barrymore (15th week) (CD-1,096; $4.80). Attracting attention, too; special matinees with understudies replacing leads; around $17,000.

"Sweethearts," Shubert (M-1,382; $4.80. Presented by Paula Stone and Michael Sloane, show replacing "The Red Mill"; opened Tuesday (21).

'Sweeth'ts' 28½G; 'Lucasta' $20,000, 'Eagle' 16G, Philly

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

When the management of "Lady Passing Fair" decided to close, last week's one skedded legit opening was eliminated and the number of Philly legiters was cut to three. The entire trio did excellent biz. Real sensation was the Stone-Sloane revival of Victor Herbert's "Sweethearts," which bounced to $28,500. Last half of last week was a sellout.

"Anna Lucasta," which is going along at a hot pace now after an indeterminate stay. Xmas week, got nearly $20,000 in its fourth week at the Locust and is definitely staying here for at least eight weeks. Tallulah Bankhead's personal following accounted for $16,000 done by "The Eagle Has Two Heads" in its second and final session at the Forrest.

Three openings are on tap this week, including a return of "Up in Central Park," which opened last night (20) at the Shubert; Elisabeth Bergner in the double bill, "Miss Julie" and "The Proposal," at the Forrest and the comedy tryout, "Best of Spirits," at the Walnut. Last two open tonight (21) and like "Central Park" are listed for two weeks. "Park's" advance was very big and it looks as if this one would duplicate local success of "Bloomer Girl" on return. Erlanger relights next Monday (27) with "A Flag Is Born," also in for a fortnight.

'Yankee' Boff 23G, Detroit; 'Rope' Does Fadeout

Detroit, Jan. 21.

"Magnificent Yankee" closed a two-week run at the Cass with top biz of $23,000 for nine performances at a $3.60 top.

"The Rope," with John Carradine in the starring role, suddenly cancelled out at the Shubert-Lafayette.

'Union' 21G, Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Jan. 21.

"State of the Union" company, headed by Neil Hamilton and Erin O'Brien-Moore, did a bang-up $21,000 in its first week at the Davidson.

Advance orders indicate that second week will be better.

Plays Abroad

The Alchemist

London, Jan. 15.

Joint Council of National Theatre and Old Vic Theatre Co. presentation of comedy by Ben Jonson. Directed by John Burrell. At New, London, Jan. 14, '47.

Subtle, the Alchemist........George Relph
Face, the Housekeeper...Ralph Richardson
Dol Common..................Joyce Redman
Dapper.......................Frank Duncan
Abel Drugger................Alec Guinness
Sir Epicure Mammon....Nicholas Hannen
Surly.........................Michael Warre
Ananias, a Deacon.............Peter Copley
Tribulation Wholesome....Michael Raghan
Kastril..........................George Rose
Dame Pliant............Margaret Leighton
Lovewit.........................Cecil Winter

This fine antique dug up and restored by the Old Vic Co. is considered by many critics to be Jonson's finest play. Probably it would not have attracted much attention if revived by one of the longhair companies out in the suburbs, but directed by John Burrell with infinite resource and pace, and with the Old Vic Co. headed by its new knight, Ralph Richardson (he cannot be called "Sir" until given his accolade by the King) it drew extraordinary interest and applause.

Its characters have all the vices of the time. Its comedy of quacks, molls, pimps and crooks gives it a blacketeering air analagous to the most blackguardedly deeds of our present age. Charlatans, bawds and dealers in fake philosopher's stones pile up on the stage and at times suggest a magnificent scrimmage of the music hall, at others a comedy of pure wit and debauched manners. Even the period trick of allusive names, Subtle, the Alchemist; Face, a rogue; Dol Common, a bawd—played, respectively by George Relph, Ralph Richardson and Joyce Redman—suggest unspeakable villainies to come, and they faithfully arrive.

Ralph Richardson's Face is lusty, cackling and crafty, what you might call a tour-de-force with every point sharply taken, though it is by no means the best part in the play. George Relph's Subtle is a close competitor, as is Nicholas Hannen's superb Sir Epicure Mammon. Joyce Redman's Dol Common is a juicy piece of low caricature, but on the first night her lines could not always be heard.

The production mainly owes its success to the admirable Old Vic teamwork, in which stars such as Alec Guinness, playing Abel Drugger (and playing it brilliantly) take what comes and make the best of it. Though naughty in the good old period sense of stopping at nothing, it is played in a spirit of ripsnorting fun which is irresistible, and its gusto is due alike to the direction of John Burrell and a certain noble madness provided, unrationed, by the author.

Morts Sans Sepulture
(Dead Without Burial)

Paris, Jan. 2.

Simone Berriau production of drama in two acts (four scenes) by Jean Paul Sartre. Directed by Michael Vitold. Sets by Andre Masson. At Theatre Antoine, Paris.

Francois......................Serge Andreguy
Sorbier......................R. J. Chauffard
Canoris......................Francois Vibert
Lucie...........................Marie Olivig
Henri..........................Michel Vitold
Jean..............................Alain Cuny
Clochet.........................Robert Moor
Landrieu........................Yves Vincent
Pelerin........................Roland Bailly
Corbier...................................Maik
Militiamen...Claude Regy, Michel Jourdan

Jean Paul Sartre, head of the Existentialist school of philosophy, has already penned "Vicious Circle," after getting a strong following as a novel writer. "Morts Sans Sepulture" is a gruesome play depending much for effect on scenes of violence normally staged here at the Grand Guignol.

Play received considerable notice overnight due to the uproar created in the audience by sensitive women who could not stand the staging of torture, and of many men who protested the use of a theme depicting men of the Underground about to die in order to make the play a sensation. This, together with double-billing the play with "Putain Respectueuse," title of which is so unusually raw as to draw attention by itself, explains rumors in many quarters that Sartre is looking for publicity by any kind of means.

The play shows a group of the Underground who have been arrested by Vichy militiamen. Latter still have to find where the head of the Underground is hiding. They stage a philosophical discussion as to whether liberty is worth dying for, and the prisoners submit to physical torture without giving in. Play opens in the garret of a school building where the prisoners are locked up, including a woman and her kid brother, and remains in the talky stage until the second scene of the first act when one of the prisoners is brought on the ground floor in the schoolroom where the jailers try to make him talk. They tie him up to an armchair and start crushing his wrists with a rope device, causing a sharp audience reaction.

In the first scene of the second act, the woman, who has herself been roughly handled, tells her prisoner friends that she is afraid her kid brother will talk if submitted to torture. To prevent this the men strangle the kid. This does not affect the audience as much as the torture scene. The end comes when the militiamen are warned that they have to leave soon and bump off their prisoners without having drawn from them the information they wanted.

Apart from the two brutal incidents, the play is very talky and suffers from overacting and shouting. The sets look authentic enough.

Smith in Arcady

London, Jan. 16.

Envoy Productions presentation (in ass'n. with Arts Council) of new comedy in three acts by N. C. Hunter. Directed by Peter Dearing. At Embassy, London, Jan. 15, '47.

Dr. Patrick McConnell......Milton Rosmer
Col. Sir Geoffrey Chater...Kynaston Reeves
Anthony Chater..............Bryan Coleman
Smith....................Charles Lloyd Pack
Miss Yearpley.......Rosamund Greenwood
Elizabeth Parsloe.............Pamela Nell
Mrs. Goodchild...........Margery Caldicott
Mrs. Tucker.....................Beatrice Rowe
Elvira Tucker....................Vere Williams
Joe Batee........................Peter Albrecht
James Farley..................Horace Sequeira

Hunter's lightweight comedy is not quite certain where it is going. It is a mild satire on the bossy intrusions of planning and bureaucracy on private life and shows what happens when a social centre enforces state happiness on a village which, till then, was in a condition of blissfully-arrested development. Some of the workers welcome the plan, some answer "don't know," as in a Gallup poll, and the last surviving aristocrat, Sir Geoffrey Chater, drinks buckets of brandy with an old Irish friend and goes out to burn the centre down.

Upshot is we don't know whether the author is really interested in the problem or sees in the current schemes of organized enlightenment a genuine comedy of the time. He makes some good points and has some witty lines, but as the evening wears on they dissolve into nothing.

Hunter, with some adroit characterization, manages to keep the play alive and has one scene of uproarious fun when doctor and aristocrat get drunk together. These two parts are admirably played by Milton Rosmer and Kynaston Reeves, respectively, with good support from James Sequeira and Charles Lloyd Pack. But on the whole, the play's intentions are divided and the interest suffers accordingly.

Its prospects in America on so local a theme are negligible. First night audience nevertheless gave it a cordial reception.

La Putain Respectueuse
(The Respectful Prostitute)

Paris, Jan. 2.

Simone Berriau production of one-act (two scenes) drama by Jean Paul Sartre. At the Theatre Antoine, Paris.

Lizzie...........................Helena Bossis
The Negro.......................Habib Benglia
Fred..............................Yves Vincent
John..............................Roland Bailly
James..........................Michel Jourdan
The Senator......................Robert Moor
First Man.......................Eugene Durand
Second Man...................................Maik
Third Man........................Claude Regy

Jean Paul Sartre, who was recently in the United States, has written a vicious piece of anti-American propaganda. Based on the color problem in the southern states, it shows a Negro attempting to escape from those bent on lynching him, with the whites all claiming that a white man should be exonerated of a murder by charging an innocent Negro with attempted rape. To a man, Americans are shown as hypocrites, conniving in the miscarriage of justice.

The title of the play is deliberately raw. The subway company refused to permit posters to be used with the complete title, resulting in tease posters reading "The Respectful .....".

The two scenes take place on the same day in the same set, showing the bedroom of Helena Bossis, who acts a prostitute who came down from New York to practice her trade in a southern town. A Negro, done by Habib Benglia, comes in and begs her to protect him from the mob he knows is after him.

It develops that he and another Negro were in the same railroad car with the girl when two white drunks got in and insulted the Negroes, killing one of them. The murderer has been arrested but is falsely claiming that he did it to protect the girl from an assault by the dead Negro, meaning that the one who escaped will be killed if the mob catches him. After the girl has refused to shelter him, but says that she will tell the truth in court, a white man who has spent the night with her comes out of the next room, explains that he is a relative of the accused white and wants her to give false evidence, which she refuses to do.

She still refuses to do it when he brings in some police friends to coerce her into it. Finally he brings in a Senator who in a suave manner explains to her that her duty to America is to exonerate the white man, and obtains from her a statement to that effect, explaining that nothing will happen to the surviving Negro. He returns later with only part of the bribe money he had promised her, and by that time the mob is after the Negro who again comes to the woman for shelter. She rushes him out of the place when three men from the posse come in with guns, but the first white, who had slept there, finds him and some shots are heard outside the room, when the final curtain drops.

Helena Bossis, who does the frightened and gullible prostitute, gives a very good performance. She is also a looker. Habib Danglia, a veteran Negro actor and dancer in Paris, does the hounded man frantically trying to escape. Robert Moor gives a good impersonation of the smooth-tongued politician who fools the girl. Balance of cast make the unsavory story realistic.

That the play could be done at all here evidences the anti-American trend that has been developing here for some time.

Quatre Femmes
('Four Women')

Paris, Jan. 5.

Jean Darcante production of drama in three acts by Mouloudji. Directed by Darcante. Set by R. Ph. Couailler. At the Renaissance, Paris.

Catherne.....................Louise Fouquet
Hazel.............................Olga Montes
Helene...........................Anne Brusley
Zoe..............................Annette Poivre
Warden.....................Germaine Ledoyen
Louise Maucaire..............Jeanne Hardeyn

Mouloudji, a North African, once a film extra who turned poet and writer, has written an unusual play for his initialler. Acted by an all-femme cast, the story approaches the resistance theme with a twist that brings action and dramatic punch in a story set entirely within a prison cell where four women are confined during the German occupation. Play, which was well received, has screen potentialities.

Story is well told though a few scenes might be shortened. The prison atmosphere is well rendered and suspense progresses until the climax. Anne Bruslay manages perfectly to act the irresponsible girl who is frightened to death for her father as well as for herself and might turn informer as well as not.

Olga Montes is in direct contrast as the woman who has sacrificed everything and nevertheless cannot entirely give up all hope.

Louise Fouquet, as the third prisoner, does very well as the unintelligent girl who thinks only of the man she left outside and gets hysterical at times when she has fits of despair. In direct contrast with her is Annette Poivre as the well-bred girl who has been jailed for putting her tongue out at a German officer. Jeanne Hardeyn, as the stool pigeon, has only a bit in the second act, and Germaine Ledoyen as the warden has a minor part.

The atmosphere of the cell where the four women of different types must live together is authentic, as is their listening to calls of voices outside and communicating with other cells by using water pipes as a telephone. The set by Couailler, showing the one bed the prisoners use in rotation, while the others sleep on mattresses on the floor, and the lighting effects are good.

Darcante's direction has made the most of the four different types of women to characterize their varied reactions.

He's No Critic

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

USO-Camp Shows players received a boost in the Pacific Stars & Stripes here last week from T/5 John Lopez, stationed in Yokohoma, who blasted those GIs who leave a show before it ends, and "who never give the actors and actresses the curtain calls due them."

"Having been in several minor stage productions myself, I know what curtain calls mean to the cast," Lopez wrote. "It gives the performers an inspiration. They travel across the globe to bring plays to us; why can't we show our appreciation?"

Maas Stresses Pix Priority

and seems to have regained its prewar prestige, he avers, top officials and business executives in every country have pleaded with him to select films carefully and exclude those not showing the U. S. in a true light. Maas emphasizes that this was official opinion wherever he'd been.

Seeks Soviet Sanction

Exec reveals also that MPEA is making overtures to the Russian government for admission of American films, and although it's still maintaining its contact, little of a concrete nature has been accomplished, in spite of commendable help from the State Dept. He mentions that he'd tried for several weeks to obtain admission to Yugoslavia and Rumania but was blocked by the Russian high command. Gene Birkham, European supervisor for MPEA, is either due in Yugoslavia or on his way after waiting since November for admittance. In that country, according to Maas, the government has seized American film properties and is showing them without permission—and keeping the revenue. He frankly admits that the Soviet has been the biggest obstacle to resumption of distribution in many countries under his jurisdiction, most of which lie behind the "iron curtain."

Maas dwelt at great length upon the revival of native German film industry, calling it a dangerous factor in the de-Nazification of that country. "Nazi poison has deeply pervaded the mentality of the German people, and strong corrective measures are necessary," Maas maintains, adding that heavy native German film production, no matter how purified by occupational authorities, is dangerous material for the deeply-rooted nationalist feeling in that country. Under the sponsorship of the four occupying powers, production in each area is getting under way so fast that, said the exec, between 50 and 60 films will be produced in 1947 as against a maximum of around 100 for the best prewar year.

Maas insists that films from everywhere except their own studios should be shown the Germans—as a "mental cathartic." He told of how Rosenhugel, Seivering Nebabelsburg (formerly UFA), Remagen, Munich, Berlin and Vienna studios are already in work, under sponsorship of the occupying powers. This full-scale native production, Maas claims, constitutes a real threat to curing the Germans of Nazism.

The Dutch Quota

MPEA veepee points out that distribution under the Dutch quota pact began Jan. 3 with "Mrs. Miniver," "The Seahawk," "Spring Parade," "Going My Way," "The Mark of Zorro," "Gaslight," "Laura," "Back to Bataan" and "Five Graves to Cairo." Under the agreement, concluded by the U. S. legation and reps of the Dutch Government, no theatre is allowed to play more than 28 weeks of American films out of the year, and that, of $2,400,000 in exchange set aside by the government as a limit on foreign film rentals, the U. S. would get 60%. The Dutch held to these stipulations in spite of "100% exhibitor resistance and protests by legation heads that the action was ill-advised and contrary to the spirit of the accord," said Maas, who added that exhibs there would like nothing better than continued free trade by film companies.

Maas states that there were two reasons for the Dutch quota action: they claim that, unless they limited trade, they won't be able to buy from anyone else because of the shortage of dollar exchange, and they "want to keep the screens of Holland open to other countries." Speaking of dollar exchange, Maas says there's little likelihood that any but a small amount of the huge blocked currency credits piled up by American film interests will ever be converted to dollars, making special reference to Germany. He also reveals that there was general hope expressed that U.S. producers would refrain from flooding the European film markets. Concerning the quota, MPEA exec says that under the free release it's unlikely that U. S. films could get more than 65% of Dutch screen time. "If we could be sure of 28 weeks in every theatre it would be fine," he added, "but some theatres have heretofore run on an all-American policy, while others won't play our films at all, which means we'll average out to to a good deal less than 28 weeks per house." Under the system, a certain number of American films are submitted to Dutch exhibs, from which they choose 65 a year.

Other Agreements

Agreements were also concluded for exhibition of American films in Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, film topper points out, but the market has been limited by theatre destruction and political factors. In Warsaw, with a prewar total of 80 theatres, there are now five functioning, he adds, showing snaps of a completely devastated city to illustrate his point. There is no limit on the number that can be sent to Poland, but films will be held to about 65 per year. Maas tells also of how native Czech production is resuming, that it will show about 18 films in 1947. That country can't handle more than 80 films a year now, he claims.

Veepee adds that the theatre field in Hungary is dominated by four political parties: the Independent Farmers, Communists, Social Democrats and Peasants, each of which is allotted 60-70 theatre licenses which they can sell. This has made dealings with that nation somewhat difficult, he stated.

MPEA has just released its first newsreel in Holland, Hungary and Roumania, with probability that it will go next into Czechoslovakia, Poland and Austria. Narration is in the native language in each case, and the reels go under the trademark, "Motion Picture Export Assn. International News." The reels are not made up of clips from American news films, but are of local interest as well as international.

It's interesting to see, in countries supposedly surfeited by war, how well good war pictures can sell in certain situations, Maas specifically citing "Air Force," which is doing big business in Prague, and "Back to Bataan" and "Five Graves to Cairo" in Holland. As a rule, however, war films do not go well, he emphasizes.

Maas is planning a Far Eastern trip to look into Japan, Korea and the Dutch East Indies. Either that trip or one to Europe will be made in the next few months.

Open Theatres in Germany

Washington, Jan. 21.

During 1946 there were 520 film houses opened in the American zone of occupation in Germany, the War Department has diclosed. This made a total of 856 in business since the U.S. occupation began. In the U.S. area, theatres are divided as follows: 364 in Batavia; 245 in Greater Hesse; 156 in Wuerttemberg-Baden; 31 in Bremen Enclave, and 60 in the American sector of Berlin.

Due to the relatively few theatres scattered over large areas—outside of Berlin—there is nothing to indicate that the United States has the making of a large future market for itself on the basis of what it is screening now. The Army reports that $35,000 worth of film base has been acquired to be used for U.S.-British newsreels approved by the authorities and that an additional $140,000 of raw stock has been contracted for.

Bing Between Covers

Bing Crosby has finally arrived. As a unique American phenomenon, he's now the subject for a learned biographic and discographic study written by a musicologist with five university degrees, Dr. J. T. H. Mize. Published by Who Is Who In Music under the title of "Bing," book is profusely illustrated with photos of Crosby at all stages of his career in addition to including a complete listing of the Groaner's records for collectors. Indicative of the book's professorial approach is the number of footnotes, whose total wordage equals the actual text.

U. S. Books Lose Paris Ground

Dissemination of American culture in Paris will suffer a considerable setback from the decision of the American Book Export Group, which is now closing there after having barely operated a year. Since October, '44, American books were displayed and transported by OWI. From October, '45, it gave up the job when it was taken over by the civilian organization, U. S. International Book Assn., which is now folding, leaving it to individual enterprise to satisfy the heavy demand existing here for recent American literature.

The USIBA, which was sponsored by the State Dept., had 5,000 books on display in Paris, and ran exhibits here, also in Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and Scandinavia. Another 10,000 books are still scattered in Brussels, Prague and Stockholm. The organization had undertaken to carry out the experiment for two years and this unforeseen decision is causing unrest here, just when it was really getting under way. Result will let English publishers reap the benefit of the American advertising, either through English books or English reprints of American works.

Understood that the American book publishers, who never did much business in Paris, don't want to bother about export. USIBA included 86 of the major American book publishers.

Laval For Sale, Again

Memoirs of Pierre Laval, former French Premier who was tried and shot during the early days of the purge for his activities during the Petain regime, are currently offered for publication to French book publishers for a reported $25,000.

Seller is Fernand de Brinon, who under German occupation acted as Laval's contact man with the Hitler gang. Currently in jail awaiting to be tried, he claims that he has the ms. hidden and that, though he was a rich man, he is now broke and needs the money to pay for his defense. Laval is survived by his widow and his daughter, Renee, countess of Chambrun.

Purge Nips Nips

Latest Tokyo purge of Japanese bigwigs took a healthy whack at the Nip journalists. Officers of newspaper and publishing companies with circulations of 20,000 or more are now regarded as public workers, and subject to the purge. They'll now be prohibited from holding positions in firms concerned with journalism, motion pictures, theatres and radio broadcasting if they supported or advocated Jap military actions between July 7, 1937, and Dec. 7, 1941, or lent support to Jap government with connection to the war effort. And that will catch at least 90% of them, it is expected.

Under the details, persons up to the third degree of kinship (great grand-children, wife, nephews and nieces of the person) will be prevented from holding the offices evacuated by their relatives because of the purge.

Gannett Settles With Typos

The Gannett Co. settled its controversy with the typographical union, for a $16-a-week wage increase, the same amount which would have prevented the nine-weeks news blackout in Rochester, N. Y., except for a "joker" clause. This would have forced the typos to give up all future rights to the company's wage dividends. The "final" offer after more than three-months negotiations was branded by the typos a "yellow dog" contract.

But the settlement left the company with a new problem when the pressmen, stereotypers and mailers, who were barred from the plant by typo pickets, demanded full back pay before returning to work.

Meanwhile, members of the Rochester Newspaper Guild, who were invited by the typos to go through the picket lines and get out radio and window bulletins, signed a new contract giving a similar pay increase. The management in addition voluntarily gave a bonus of two-weeks pay to all employees who had continued to work, including members of the Guild.

Gannett officials asked employees in the three unions to return to work and arbitrate the back-pay issue. When they refused, the management asked Mayor Samuel B. Dicker to intervene so that the people of Rochester might again have their two daily newspapers.

Strikers Elect Prexy

Disgruntled by failure of some of their leaders to speed up negotiations in the 10-week-old strike of the Philadelphia and Camden chapter of the American Newspaper Guild against J. David Stern's Philadelphia Record and Camden Courier-Post, dissenting group of Guildsmen put up their own candidates in last week's annual election for key posts on the governing board.

However, with the backing of both parties, Arthur Pierce, chief editorial writer for the Record and Courier-Post, was elected prexy. Maurice F. X. Donahue of the Inquirer became comptroller, defeating Mark Dolbey, also of the Inquirer. Treasurer William G. Miller, Inquirer, was re-elected. Six vice-presidents, all supported by the dissenters, were chosen. They are: William Connor, Frank Hussey, Ruth Edgar, Thomas P. O'Neil, Jack Boucher, Wilmer Cressman, N. Irene Frost and Klosta Lawrence.

In an election marked by spirited campaigning, Pierce won his contest on the platform that "The time is now when Stern must come to the Guild; our doors are open to him."

Japs Yen U. S. Mags

Japanese, for the first time since Pearl Harbor, are able to scan through American publications freely now that Gen. MacArthur's Civil Information & Education Section has opened a library in Tokyo's Hibiya Hall. An average of 405 Japs daily scan through the 235 magazines and 25 daily newspapers made available to them. Most popular are books and magazines on science and technology, especially Industrial Engineering & Chemistry and the Journal of the American Medical Assn. Women, who form about 20% of the daily guests, usually make a beeline towards Vogue and Harper's Bazaar.

Time's Year Sabbatical Plan

Time Mag employees are working on a plan to arrange a one-year sabbatical leave with pay for all personnel who have been with the company for 15 years or more.

In spite of the fact that the Life and Time Christmas bonuses were the smallest in several years the plan is reported to stand a pretty good chance of going through.

Book Kudos to DSP

Winner of the 1946 Carey-Thomas award for last year's best example of creative publishing will be Duell, Sloan & Pearce whose handling of "The New World," edited by Stefan Lorant, topped a final ballot of nine other titles. Prize is slated to be presented to C. Halliwell Duell, head of firm at a luncheon today (Wednesday) at the Hotel Roosevelt, N.Y., by Frederic C. Melcher, prexy of the R. R. Bowker Co., publishers of The Publishers' Weekly, founders of the award.

Established four years ago in memory of early-American publishers Matthew Carey of Philadelphia and Isaiah Thomas of Worcester, the award seeks to honor publishers who are most enterprising in all phases of the business. Prize-winner in 1945 was Alfred A. Knopf for treatment of H. L. Mencken's "The American Language," while same publisher received honorable mention this yea for presentation of "Mexico South," by Miguel Covarrubias.

A Danish Mystery

Striking resemblance to the literary style of Danish baroness Karen Blixen has been noted by observers in Denmark in Pierre Andrezel's whodunit, "Gengeldelsens Veje" ("Ways of Retribution"), which was acquired by the Book-of-the-Month Club in the U.S. a few months ago. Tome, published by Gyldendal in Copenhagen during the German occupation, reportedly has had several Hollywood offers.

Book's author, "Pierre Andrezel," is said to be a pseudonym of the baroness who, under the penname of Isaac Dinesen, wrote another American best-seller 10 years ago, "Seven Gothic Tales." As yet the baroness has not confessed authorship of the Andrezel shocker, which deals with two young girls who become enmeshed in the toils of a murdering old hypocrite in a small French village. Publisher also refuses to disclose the writer's true identity.

De Kobra On Hell

Maurice de Kobra's next one, entitled "Hell Is Sold Out," is dedicated to Molotov, Byrnes and Bevin and is already set for London, Paris and New York publication. French author who has already willed his library of thousands of volumes to the Tahitians, takes a morbid view of the future until the atomic bomb is actually lap-dissolved into atomic energy. In addressing the three distinguished statesmen he compares them with the four horsemen of the apocalypse and refutes the belief that three men walking can do less harm than four riding.

De Kobra spent last summer in Paris where he has two plays running but returned to Hollywood a month ago for the winter, planning short hops to New York now and then.

She's currently writing a chapter for Alma Archer's new opus, "Ah, Men," and begins a regular monthly column for Sweet 16 Mag starting with the June issue.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Inspiration Point, Cal., Jan. 19.

That a writer could ever master the magic of supervising a picture production was held for years as the last heresy. Even those who somehow had worked into studios presumably as "authors" were quick to disavow any connection with writing once they wrangled their way into a producer's vacant chair.

People seem to forget that Darryl Zanuck began his career by publishing a volume of his own stories and moved into Warners before a gate-keeper could separate him from his slender volume. Mark Hellinger, too, has proved that the difference between writing stories and producing pictures is that producing them is easier and pays better. There are a few others who wrote their way up to command cars.

But this Dore Schary! Now contracted to handle all RKO production for five years, he has moved, in 10 years, from the bottom of the writing heap to bossing all production in a major studio. He has worked under, with and around some mighty tough hombres in the picture business, yet has retained a soft answer which has turned away a lot of wrath.

The Bite

Once by mail I put the bee on him for a campaign contribution. He not only came through for $50, but expressed great pleasure in doing so. As I possess no "or else" bargaining power whatever, I regard these responses to my bites as proof of the other fellow's nobility of character. Indeed, the best responses came from writers turned producers. An exception was Gregory Peck, who came through in much the same manner, which led others to believe that I must have something which even Ingrid Bergman hasn't got. But I insist I have nothing and the contributions are proof that these are superior fellows.

Schary's case fetches me. He first broke through at Metro not so many years ago. Moreover, he seems to have a skill at getting released from contracts without leaving hard feelings behind. He got his Metro release to become a producer under Dave Selznick, where he was farmed out to RKO. Now he slides once again, this time out of a Selznick contract to RKO as v.p. in charge of production.

Cain's Storehouse may remember him for "Too Many Heroes," an anti-lynching item that was quietly hung on Broadway 10 years ago. But since that time he has mastered many phases of a complicated industry.

On a loanout last year to RKO he produced "Till the End of Time," which I thought a notably fine picture, "The Spiral Staircase," "The Farmer's Daughter" and "The Bachelor and the Bobby Soxer." He got on so well with everybody and his pictures go on so well with the public that he seemed a good man to follow the late and very lamented Charlie Koerner.

The Egg and the Byrd

Schary is really one of those fellows who was once a newspaper man himself. He began on the Newark Call, handled publicity for Admiral Byrd, acted, directed and wrote plays for little theatres. Back in '32, when he came to Columbia as a junior writer, he was tagged as a junior miss because Harry Cohn thought Dore was a girl's name. I guess it is. With an accent over the "e" in French it means "golden," and even without the accent it seems a name that from now on is in the money.

He turned out five screen plays in his first year at Columbia and recommended himself for a raise. He was getting $100 a week. The recommendation got him fired. I don't think he has been fired since. He won an Oscar for an original story. That was "Boys Town" in 1938.

His fellow writers thought enough of him to elect him a president of the Screen Writers Guild. He has shown himself politically liberal without being plastered as taking orders from anybody further east than Newark, N. J. While at the height of his negotiations I observed him dining at the Brown Derby with a junior writer enduring the pangs of a layoff. This I submit as further proof that he is highly regarded.

Schary bargained with N. Peter Rathvon, head of RKO, and drew negotiations out long enough to give his status dignity and standing. Indeed, for a man who wears specs, a very remarkable fellow.

Hollywood Screen Writers

turning out those originals themselves. The latter, if they're accepted, command a sales figure many times that of their salary, of course. But how many want to take a speculator's chance of giving up many months of their own time to write originals at the possible cost of a turndown?

Right now, one guess is that there are about 30 writers in Hollywood who have enough faith in their own ability to knock off original screenplays. Norman Krasna, for instance, has repeatedly chanced it by working for a year or more on original works, either for Hollywood or the Broadway stage. And the payoff has been worth it. He gets about $100,000 for an original screenplay; his "Dear Ruth," Broadway legiter, was a smash hit and sold to Paramount on a sliding percentage scale that could net him as high as $450,000. His "John Loves Mary" play opened to impressive reports in New Haven last week.

And there are others like Nunnally Johnson, Edward Chodorov, Joseph Fields, Albert Maltz and Ben Hecht, who frequently take time out from what could be assured Hollywood incomes, (adapting the stories of others) by sitting down and writing original works—plays, novels, short stories and the like. Chodorov, for instance, took about a year to write "Barnaby and Mr. O'Malley," a play that had to be removed before it even played Broadway. And he feels that he'll stay on the Main Stem writing plays until he clicks again. He feels that an originally creative work is worth the trouble in the long run.

Chances of clicking for these literary efforts are comparatively small, of course. It all stems from the primary purpose of being fundamentally creative. The payoff on a click is thus that much greater. Nunnally Johnson, for instance, an assured and established film craftsman—with an income in the bigger Hollywood writing brackets—took time out during the past season to help write the recent Broadway musical, "Park Ave."—a flop. Robert Riskin had enough faith in his own screenplay of "Magic Town" to also put money into it; he's producing it for RKO release.

Hollywood's favorite pastime among many writers seems to be to tear down the other writers' works at the Beverly Hills Tennis Club or the schmooz tables at Romanoff's—all at salary—instead of using that energy at something constructive.

Generally, it's figured that every year there are about 10 books that find their way to the screen. Add to that, perhaps, 10 plays from Broadway. Then there are, maybe, 10 magazine stories. Where can Hollywood go for the rest of the approximately 400 films per year that it needs to supply the nation's theatres?

The answer is that Hollywood's producers must come up with new ideas all the time—and, as the reviews ultimately indicate, they're more often than not just a lot of frantic ideas.

One of the more successful "idea" men has been Warners' Jerry Wald, who has come up with a number of stories by just being an avid reader of the nation's headlines. He subsequently huddles with his writers—and the results have been such pix as "Objective Burma," "Destination Tokyo," "Action in the North Atlantic," among others. Fortunately, they have emerged as boxoffice winners.

Hillman Mag Buy

Anne Daggett, West Coast exec for Hillman Periodicals, Inc., announced that that company had bought Screen Guide and would continue to publish the fan mag under its old title, beginning in April. Screen Guide, an Annenberg publication, was reported folding up with the March issue.

OBITUARIES

FRANK McCOY

Frank McCoy, 58, legit producer, died in New York Jan. 16. He had produced shows on Broadway, operated shows on tour as well as stock companies when latter were enjoying boom years. He had recently been associated in legit production with Jules J. Leventhal.

McCoy, who had been in show business for 42 years, had started out as an actor when in his youth, playing a small part in support of Thomas W. Ross in "Checkers." After deciding acting was not for him he became company manager for Ethel Barrymore, who was then touring in Barrie's "The Twelve Pound Look."

He left Miss Barrymore to serve in the Navy in the first World War, and when he returned to civilian life, he decided to become a producer. He subsequently established stock companies in Milwaukee, Trenton, N. J., Toronto and other cities. He returned to New York and was stage manager for Comstock & Gest for several years and later operated companies at the Erlanger, Buffalo, and Maplewood, N.J.

In 1930, he produced a series of motion picture shorts featuring McIntyre & Heath, blackface comedians. With Morris Green he produced "Love and Babies," in 1933.

Successful road shows he produced, alone or with others, included "Abie's Irish Rose," "Springtime for Henry," with Edward Everett Horton; "School for Brides," "Arsenic and Old Lace," with Walter Hampden; "Stage Door," with Glenda Farrell; "You Can't Take It With You," with Fred Stone; "Without Love," with Constance Bennett; "The Old Soak," with Guy Kibbee; "Janie," "Rebecca," and "Cordelia."

Other of his Broadway shows included "A Goose for the Gander," with Gloria Swanson and Conrad Nagel; "Three's a Family," and "Song of Bernadette."

At the time of his death McCoy had only one show running: his "Springtime for Henry" company in Cincinnati.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Ethel Britton McCoy, an actress; three sisters and two brothers.

RICHARD ARGYLE

(Dec. 15, 1898—Jan. 16, 1947)

Beloved Husband and Brother

Marcella Roltner Argyle
Bob Russell

JOSEPH ERBER

Joseph Erber, 70, pioneer motion picture theatre owner in the St. Louis area and one of the first in the U.S. to combine vaude with pictures, died last week in St. Louis.

Erber's first house was the Dreamland in East St. Louis. He later owned the Majestic and Avenue in East St. Louis and in 1907 inaugurated the combo policy.

In 1920, he built a $400,000 house in the same city but lost control of it a year later. He was once St. Louis representative of the Orpheum Circuit and later became a booking agent. For the past several years he was a relief manager for the St. Louis Amus. Co.

Survived by widow.

ROBERT S. GEMAS

Robert S. Gemas, 45, on WWSW business staff for past 10 years, died suddenly at his home in Pittsburgh on Jan. 15. He was hospitalized two months ago for pneumonia but was released shortly before Christmas and was apparently on the road to recovery when he suffered a heart attack. Gemas had been a well-known Pittsburgh advertising man for more than 20 years, joining WWSW in 1936.

He leaves an aunt.

JAMES MARSHALL

James Marshall, 54, house manager of the Apollo theatre in Harlem, N.Y., died in New York Jan. 11, following a heart attack. Prior to going to the Harlem house he had managed theatres for Leo Brecher chain.

Marshall started in show business as a child tap dancer, working for Jesse Lasky in several of latter's production acts before going into theatre management. After managing the Harlem Opera House for several years, he moved over to the Apollo.

RICHARD ARGYLE

Richard Argyle, 48, vaudeville and legit actor, died Jan. 16 in New York following a short illness.

Argyle appeared as baritone lead in "My Maryland," "Desert Song," "New Moon," "Song of the Flame" and other shows and was also in vaude for a time. He retired from stage several years ago to devote his time to script and magazine writing.

Survived by widow, mother, two brothers and four sisters.

CHARLES A. HILL

Charles A. (Al) Hill, vice-president of the Atlantic City Amusement Men's Assn. and representative of the owners of the old Million Dollar Pier, now Hamid's pier, died in Atlantic City Jan. 15. He had been identified with the pier since shortly after its erection at the turn of the century.

He was stricken with a heart ailment on Jan. 3 and had been confined to the hospital until his death.

WALTER GRAINGER

Walter Grainger, 52, personal representative of Walt Disney for Australia and New Zealand, died Jan. 11 in Sydney following a brain operation.

Grainger was an American who had made his home in Australia for 16 years, and was just returning from a visit to the United States when he became ill aboard ship, necessitating an operation. He died the day after the ship docked.

OTTO N. RATHS

Otto N. Raths, 72, credited with opening the first film theatre in St. Paul, died in Veterans hospital, Fort Snelling.

In 1932, when owning and operating several St. Paul theatres, he was president of the Independent Exhibitors and Allied Theatre Owners of Minnesota and North and South Dakota. He retired from the theatre business a few years ago.

FATE MARABLE

Fate Marable, 56, Negro jazz band leader and pianist, died of pneumonia in St. Louis last week. Marable is credited with having helped Louis Armstrong, Johnny and Baby Dodds in the jazz field. He had been playing at the Victoria Club, St. Louis, in recent years. He also led orchs on Mississippi river steamboats between 1918-40.

MRS. PATTI PICKENS

Mrs. Patti Pickens, 64, mother of the several Pickens sisters, died in her sleep in Bucks county, Pa., Sunday (19).

She had managed the professional careers of her songstress daughters for many years and had also been well known as a guest on many radio programs.

RICHARD WALDEMAR

Richard Waldemar, 77, veteran actor, noted for his performance in "Belle of New York" at the Carl theatre, Vienna, at the turn of the century, died in Vienna recently.

Until two days before his death Waldemar did a singing and dancing act in "Straussbuben" at the Raimund theatre, Vienna.

CHARLES BLANCHARD

Charles Blanchard, 74, retired vaude producer, died in Hollywood Jan. 16.

Blanchard was producer of top-flight production acts on Keith and Orpheum circuits for 25 years. He went to the Coast 19 years ago to establish a talent agency, retiring in 1943.

MEYER GOULD

Meyer Gould, 55, comptroller of Filmack Trailers, died in Chicago, Jan. 9. He had been with Filmack for over 20 years.

Survived by widow.

'Years' Tiff

Kantor's beef is just a faint echo of the screams director William Wyler has been letting off privately about Goldwyn and the film. Wyler maintains he was likewise not given full credit for his contribution. It's understood that he wanted at least partial producer credit. Dispute got so hot that Wyler claimed he was barred for a time from the Goldwyn lot.

Producer, on the other hand, charges that Wyler didn't want to make the film at all, and was only forced into it by a threat of legal action for not living up to his contract. "Before he made the picture, Wyler said he didn't like it and didn't want to do it, and now he's mad because he's not getting all the credit," Goldwyn declared.

Kantor, in addition to his plaint about Goldwyn, got in a battle a couple weeks ago with Tom Pryor, of The New York Times, over an interview Pryor did with Wyler. Director was quoted as saying that Kantor's story was largely rewritten and the picture bore little resemblance to the original book.

Kantor called Wyler, who claimed he was misquoted. Pryor maintained the quote was accurate. Telephonic dispute between Pryor and Kantor ended up with Pryor declared Wyler "a liar" if he said he was misquoted, and Kantor slamming down the receiver with the remark: "You can't call my friend a liar."

Feud Breaks on Radio

Feud broke publicly when Kantor was being interviewed by Henry La Cossitt on Mutual's "Editor's Diary" show. La Cossitt inquired how Kantor felt about "Best Years," and the dialog went on from there:

Kantor: "Why, it's the greatest of all time. No doubt about it. But I don't get much satisfaction out of it."

La C.: "For Heaven's sake, why?"

Kantor: "Well, Henry, I'll tell you. There's such a thing as pride of authorship. . . . But to read magazines, newspapers . . . all the publicity about 'Best Years' . . . you wouldn't know I had anything to do with it. You'd think it was something Sam Goldwyn dreamed up himself. His idea. His characters. His writing. Not that Sam Goldwyn shouldn't get every recognition for producing a fine picture . . . but I'd like a little credit. After all . . . it was my idea . . . and my book. Sam Goldwyn just put up the dough to produce it."

Goldwyn, according to widely publicized stories, conceived the idea for "Best Year" from a piece he read in Time mag in 1944 concerning a returning soldier. He commissioned Kantor to do a book around the theme, with Goldwyn retaining screen rights and Kantor literary rights. Book was published as "Glory for Me" and had minor success.

Asked on the radio show about his future plans, Kantor said he'd do no more writing, except on pictures which he'd produce himself. He stated he had a deal with the King brothers, who release through Monogram, and would produce his initial film this summer. It will be "Gun Crazy," based on a story he wrote for the Saturday Evening Post in 1938.

which permits action by state or city officialdom without conviction first.

Other cohorts marshaled behind the fight on Fielding. In the legit field, League of New York Theatres staged a rally last week in support of Connolly's proposal. Along with the League were reps of Actors Equity, Society of Authors' Representatives, the ACLU, and a number of theatrical unions.

Hughes Wins One

Albany, Jan. 21.

Howard Hughes won a battle in his campaign to play "The Outlaw," above and below the Yonkers border, on a tricky loophole in New York's anti-obscenity laws. The board pointed out that it could not act on film advertising in periodicals but could on billboards and posters. In noting the gap, the board recommended amendment of the statute books by the Legislature to cover exploitation in any form reaching New York's public.

Victory by Hughes insures the producer's rights to peddle his pic anywhere in N. Y. except the metropolitan area, where legal skirmishing with N. Y. City License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding continues in the courts. Here, Hughes is seeking to dispel exhib fears of losing their licenses, should they play "The Outlaw," by snaring an injunction against both Fielding and the police to prevent them from purportedly intimidating local theatre operators.

Pulitzer Prize

the proposal is given the okay of the advisory body at its next meeting in April, Ackerman said, the first awards would be made in May, 1948.

Inasmuch as the prizes are primarily for journalism and letters, it is presumed that, as in the case of plays, the film prize would go to the writers. Ackerman said, however, that it would be entirely within the right of the advisory board also to give prizes to the producer, actors and director, if it chose. That would be a detail to work out, he said.

Committee which met Monday was named last spring to consider addition of films, as well as other reclassification of prizes. It consists of three members of the 12-man advisory board.

Recommendation of the committee coincides with increasing feeling in the film industry concerning the need of an impartial group to hand out annual awards for best pictures. There's no thought of discontinuing the annual Oscars of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, but they are recognized as strictly an intramural kudo of the industry to itself. Aside from the Oscars, so many organizations—for publicity or otherwise—are now handing out year-end prizes that most filmites are ready to agree the whole idea is getting close to the silly stage.

Guild Mag's Argument

John Corfield, exec of J. Arthur Rank's British picture empire, recently expressed a desire for the Pulitzer committee to add a picture award on an international basis. Strongest argument for a Pulitzer film prize, however, is made in the current issue of The Screen Writer, monthly mag of the Screen Writers Guild. Richard G. Hubler, in an article whose sentiments are widely shared in the industry, declares in a plea for such awards in the mag: "The most distinguished, able and well-established jurists are those of the Pulitzer Prizes."

Stating that "the awards have often been niggled at, but they remain among the chief recognitions of artistic merit in American journalism and letters," Hubler goes on to say: "In the single field where the sum of the arts—visual and aural—has at least its greatest potential medium, there is no provision for a Pulitzer Prize. The motion pictures are not upon the agenda of artistic awards."

Reason for this omission by Pulitzer himself is obvious, Hubler points out, since, at the time the publisher died in 1911, "the invention of Thomas Edison was barely unswaddled from the laboratory . . . In the 35 years since Pulitzer's death, the audience of the screen has grown from a few thousand to nearly a hundred million."

"Conspiracy of Silence"

"To a large degree," Hubler adds, "there is a conspiracy of silence and snobbery concerning the movies . . . Because of this conspiracy, the motion picture is forced to wind its own horn . . . This defensive neurosis . . has in turn produced the nonpareil of naivete—the Academy Awards . . . Like an old-fashioned powder train, this solemn back-slapping has inspired lesser emulation. In 1945, one fan magazine handed out 35 gold medals to compliment the producers of a single picture."

Pulitzer prize awards are made by the trustees of Columbia on recommendation of the advisory board. Prizes consist of $500 to individuals and a gold medal costing $500 to newspapers. Nominations must be made in writing, according to present rules, with competition, except in drama and music, limited to work during the preceding calendar year. Music and drama prizes are for works produced during the 12 months April 1 to March 31, and it is presumed that films would fall in this category.

Advisory board which must now pass on the addition of motion picture prizes and would choose winners in future years consists of Frank D. Fackenthal, acting prexy of Columbia; Sevellon Brown, publisher, Providence (R.I.) Journal; Robert Choate, publisher, Boston Herald; Kent Cooper, prez and general manager of Associated Press; Gardner Cowles, Jr., publisher, Des Moines Register and Tribune; Palmer Hoyt, publisher, Denver Post; Frank R. Kent, columnist, Baltimore Sun; John S. Knight, publisher, Chicago Daily News, Detroit Free Press and other papers; Arthur Krock, Washington chief of The New York Times; William R. Mathews, publisher, Tucson Daily Star; Stuart H. Perry, publisher, Adrian (Mich.) Telegram; Harold S. Pollard, New York World-Telegram, and Joseph Pulitzer, publisher, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, son of the Pulitzer Prize founder.

derful Journey," which was tried out at Bucks County, Pa., under the script's original title, "Heaven Can Wait" ("Here Comes Mr. Jordan," in films). "Journey" headed the list of possibilities, but played less than a week on Broadway.

"Made in Heaven," which tried out at Westport, Conn., under the title of "It's a Man's World," started out with considerable promise on the main stem, but hardly stayed long enough. It will probably turn a profit, as the English rights have been optioned and more than one British showman is in the field for the comedy. Stock rights have been purchased, despite the fact that the play calls for four settings.

In addition to "Burlesque," which has Bert Lahr in the leading part, two other plays of summer stock origin are on the current boards—"Temper the Wind" and "Little A." Latter, which opened last week, retains the title used when presented in Skowhegan, Me., but "Wind" was called "Drums of Peace" when done at Woodstock, N. Y. Closing notice for latter was posted Monday (20).

Of the 43 new shows tried out last summer it is doubtful whether any more will be shown on Broadway during the balance of the season. Out of 24 tryouts in '45 there was none that emerged as regular attraction. Outstanding stock showings to click in recent seasons were "Othello" (Paul Robeson) and "Dark of the Moon." The all-time plum from summer stock is "Life With Father," now in its seventh year on Broadway, for a record that will probably never be approached, the engagement now approaching the run mark of "Tobacco Road."

B'way Playing Musical Chairs Game As Booking Jam Presents Problems

Booking into Broadway theatres is still a problem and that of moving a show from one house to another seems almost as difficult of solution. It's increasingly evident that new plays must click at the start in order to stick. That was evidenced last week when "Lovely Me" was withdrawn after it had climbed to $12,000 at the Coronet, which had previously booked in "All My Sons" opening tonight (29). Play which was originally tried out by Vinton Freedley under the title of "The Temporary Mrs. Smith," was shown under the management of David Lowe.

"Lovely" opened at the Adelphi. It being a stop-gap because that theatre was booked for the musical "Street Scene," and after two weeks switched to the Coronet, that booking being an accommodation to Freedley, who retained an interest. An idea of moving "Lovely" again, to the Playhouse this time, failed to materialize, reportedly because

Tokyo Rose's Accent Strictly Nebraska Now, As Ex-WAC Wows Troops

Tokyo, Jan. 28.

GI's who once dialed in religiously to hear Tokyo Rose are still avid listeners of Radio Tokyo, but it's now an ex-WAC who affords the attraction.

Gal is Elsie Robinson, who handles the "Later Tonight" disk program, which tells GI Joe what theatrical, sport, etc., features are going on that evening in the Tokyo-Yokohama area.

Her "Hello, what are your plans for later tonight" opener now gaining Japan-wide recognition, Miss Robinson received her radio basic at KFAB, Lincoln, Neb., before signing for the WAC.

She received her discharge in Manila, and took a civilian job with WVTR, Armed Forces Station in Tokyo, in Jan., 1946. In addition to her feature show, she also handles chief clerk duties for the station, and does an English translation show for JOAK, Jap station also in Radio Tokyo.

OLIVIER'S 'HAMLET' DUE FOR LENSING IN MARCH

London, Jan. 28.

Laurence Olivier's filming of "Hamlet," which he is producing and directing for Two-Cities Films, is likely to take the floor at Denham Studios some time in March.

Rumored that this is the last pic in which Olivier will appear, as he prefers in future to concentrate on producing and directing. As soon as he returns from big summer tour in Australia, he intends to produce and direct film based on Thomas Hardy's classic, "Far From the Madding Crowd," in which Vivien Leigh will be starred.

Wall St. Buys Tele Time

Wall street moves into the commercial television picture for the first time tomorrow (Thursday) when the brokerage house of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane sponsors a New York Stock Exchange film, "Money At Work", on WCBS-TV, at 8:30 p.m.

On behalf of the client, Winthrop H. Smith, company biggie, will talk on the program.

'Duel' Drops In Oscar Derby Book

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Shift in odds in the future book on the Oscar Derby dropped "Duel in the Sun" to fourth place, a 6-1 shot. Picture was formerly a co-favorite with "The Best Years of Our Lives" and "The Jolson Story" at 3 to 1, but slipped back after the publication of protests by religious organizations. In third place, 4-1, is "It's a Wonderful Life."

Toppers in the best-actress division are Jennifer Jones and Olivia de Havilland, 9-5, and Rosalind Russell, 8-1. In the male sector Jimmy Stewart ('Life') and Larry Parks ('Jolson Story') are leading at 2-1.

These odds were laid by the original booker, who declared he would take no more bets between now and the date when nomination ballots are mailed, and Feb. 10, when the nominees are announced. Bookie explains that he doesn't want to be caught "in the middle" by sharpshooters with feedbox information.

Missouri Cows Prefer Pop Tunes, Survey Shows

St. Louis, Jan. 28.

Hillbilly music, via radio, has become passe with Missouri farmers, according to a one-day poll made by Charles Stookey, farm editor of KXOK. For years Stookey has maintained that mountain tunes are rapidly losing popularity, and last week he decided to conduct his own test. During his 6-7:30 a.m. program, Stookey used a gob of hillbilly transcriptions and asked the dialers to express their opinion of these tunes.

Of 105 letters received within 48 hours, 60% expressed preference for standard pop music; 28% favored the hillbilly type, and 12% expressed no preference. One writer said, "We listen to KXOK every morning while we're milking. Our cows prefer popular music." Another wrote: "Good orchestras and Bing Crosby are tops with us."

INFO GROUP AS ENVOY ABROAD

By HERB GOLDEN

Terrific lashing on the international front that Hollywood films have been absorbing during the past few months is sending the Johnston office into high gear this week in efforts to counteract and allay the cause of the criticism. Firstly, execs are meeting on the Coast under Motion Picture Assn. auspices to set up an International Information Centre. Principal function of the group will be to keep out of films, as far as possible, disproportionate emphasis on those aspects of American life which lead foreign critics to call the U. S. "uncultured" and which may lead to further restrictions on importing of Hollywood-made product.

Secondary, but no less important function of the IIC from a long-range viewpoint will be to feed producers information that can be introduced into their scripts to add positive values in the present world battle for international film markets. IIC will be a definite effort to woo the good will of the nations of the

Kaye Overflow Ups Fla. Bistros

Miami Beach, Jan. 28.

Miami Beach spots have picked up considerably with the opening of Danny Kaye at the Copacabana, Mlami Beach, Tuesday (21). Dinner business in most spots is on the SRO side, with the Copa getting the heaviest play.

Some believe that the overflow from the Danny Kaye business is seeping into the neighboring spots. A cafe like the Copa's neighbor, the Beachcomber, would naturally get a big slice of the business with Sophie Tucker headlining, but benefits of the Kaye engagement are reported reaching most every spot on the Beach.

Operators are still bemoaning the fact that the late business is virtually non-existent, except at the Copa and Beachcomber, would naturally get still go to adjacent Broward county, which permits gambling.

Prepares Visual Aid For China Education

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Hollywood cameraman James Wong Howe, chief advisor to the Chinese Mass Education Movement, is working out a 25-year visual education program in the hope of stamping out illiteracy in China. Program will get under way with a series of 24 short films on public health, farming, current history, democratic government and other essential subjects.

More than $500,000 has been raised in this country to carry on the campaign.

White Stirs 'Scandals'

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

George White, expecting to be paroled from prison road gang in April, is currently checking costume and scenery sketches for his new "Scandals."

Producer, serving a term for the hit-and-run killing of a couple, will begin work on the show shortly after his release. Backing reportedly is coming from a group of his friends.

Rap 'Greed' In Mex Tourist Lag

Mexico City, Jan. 28.

Slump in U. S. and other foreign tourist trade this winter, usually the lush time for visitors, is worrying local hotelmen and the press, though they say the drop is slight. El Universal, prominent daily, said editorially:

"Decreased tourist business is not due to the hoof-and-mouth epidemic that has recently appeared in the republic but to another plague that is even more dangerous and extensive: greed, the immoderate exploitation of gullible travelers who venture to cross our borders.

"If we are to attract tourists we must maintain moderation in prices and service."

French Find Child After Two Years Via Newsreel

Paris, Jan. 28.

A newsreel shot permitted a French family to recover its 12-year-old son, who had been lost for the last two years. The family, living near Brest in Brittany, had placed boy with Red Cross relief center, which was wrecked during a bombing raid.

Rescued by an American officer, boy suffered loss of memory, and could not be identified. He was then sent to a Paris home for children. For Xmas a newsreel cameraman filmed a clip there to show a children's choir singing. This was released by Pathe Journal and when it was shown in the boy's native town some of his former friends recognized him.

Recorders' Peak

According to statements being turned out by recording companies for the final quarter of last year, that period produced the heaviest sales weeks the recording business ever experienced.

RCA-Victor recently forwarded to publishers the largest overall quarter payment it ever distributed (well over $400,000) and the Columbia, Decca and Capitol statements, due Feb. 15, are expected to be comparable in percentage increase.

Upton Close's career as the self-proclaimed "voice of the right" on the air has encountered another double-barrelled attack from his Mutual network sponsor on one side and a renewed anti-Close campaign launched yesterday (28) by the Friends of Democracy on the other.

Merwin K. Hart, boss of the National Economic Council, which is bankrolling the nationalist commentator, has propositioned Mutual execs about having himself step into Close's gabbing spot when the latter's contract expires on Feb. 11. Mutual, however, turned Hart down, claiming that he was not a recognized commentator, and demanded that, if they don't want Close, to replace him by a recognized gabber.

Meanwhile, Dr. L. M. Birkhead, national director of the FOD, disclosed that individual letters had been mailed yesterday (Tues.) to each of the 67 Mutual stations carrying Close's talks, citing the latter's "anti-democratic" record and demanding that he be bounced from the airlanes as an "irresponsible" commentator. Previous representations made by the FOD to Mutual execs and the FCC have run into a stone wall of "freedom of speech"

Robeson Seen Playing In Pro-Negro Picture As Cry Vs. Prejudice

Withdrawal by Paul Robeson from the stage for a two-year period, to battle race prejudice, is not expected to interfere with his commitment to play the lead in filmization of Howard Fast's novel, "Freedom Road." Spokesman for Freedom Road Films, producer of the pic, said that Robeson would undoubtedly be available for lensing at the close of his current concert tour in May.

"Road" is currently slated to go before the camera in an eastern studio in June. Robeson, who declared this week in St. Louis: "It seems that I must raise my voice, but not by singing pretty tunes," would exempt the pic from his flat against the stage, it is thought, because the film itself inveighs against Negro discrimination.

USES DISK TECHNIQUE TO SELL STORY TO FILMS

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Device by which radio shows are sold is being utilized by Bill Hampton to sell an original story to pictures.

His yarn, "Minnie," will be recorded by actors from the American Federation of Radio Artists, and platters submitted to studios instead of customary script. Hampton experiment is costing him $750 but he reasons film producers can get a better feel of story by hearing dramatic highlights acted out in narrative.

How Hammo, Fluffo and Punko Louso Upo a Perfectly Good Studio

By ABEL GREEN

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Beacon Pictures Corp., indie unit for United Artists release, brought in its indie filmusical, "Copacabana," last week at $1,400,000 despite the east presence of three reckless journalistic characters who "play themselves," as it is laughingly called. A sideline audience of names included Irving Berlin, Hedda Hopper, Georgie Jessel, Sid Skolsky, Groucho and Harpo Marx, Frank Scully, Jimmy Starr and assorted Hollywood newspapermen and p.a.'s who came to jeer Louis Sobol, Earl Wilson and this VARIETY mugg. They went away the same way.

With everything on a semi-plush scale for the three unphotogenic Broadwayfarers, we were given Gloria Jean's private dressing room (only it was a three-man job in the small portable villa) and when the question of billing came up Wilson and your correspondent thought Sobol should get bottom billing and in 50% type. The N. Y. Journal-American columnist took the rib in stride and countered that, as star of an old Universal series of shorts, he was a past master of cinematic thesping. (Cameraman Bert Glennon's rushes show Sobol as a "cute" personality, Wilson as a comedian—including a tape measure bit he dreamed up for his w.k. measuring proclivities—and as for Green, ouch!)

The Topper

But the topper was three standins for these tired newspapermen. Bill Allison (who brags he has been stand-in for Danny Kaye) took the rap for this particular boot-camp thespian, Frank Chalfant (for Sobol) and Walter Craig (Wilson's stand-in) fainted. All three stand-ins cracked that they "could play the part better." And they weren't wrong, brother.

Alfred E. Green (whose last chore was "The Jolson Story") directed the picture, and the idea of utilizing three nitery habitues like Wilson, Sobol and Green was Monte Proser's and Sam Coslow's, the latter an ex-VARIETY staffer. Coslow is producer of the film but boniface Proser has 20% for the filmization of his N. Y. bistro, besides having received $25,000 for the Copa rights.

It wasn't long before this participant—inspired by the Marx Bros. billing—coined a set of names that read from left to right as Hammo, Fluffo and Punko in any given sequence. Groucho Marx, who costars with Carmen Miranda, Andy Russell and Gloria Jean in the film, watched one of the rehearsals, and when they were ready to shoot, Marx observed, "It'll always be a real event [for] Marx [ ] working solo for the first time, sans his freres, and his wife, Kay, leads one of the numbers. Tunes are by Coslow, who authored the idea of giving Berlin, Feist and Leeds two songs each to publish so as to spread the exploitation.

The most hearty query is: "What will the paper say about the picture?" Groucho Marx, Jessel and Darryl Zanuck are out front with requests to review Hammo, Fluffo and Punko for VARIETY. And when they get through counting, the studio will know if a new record has been hung up for retakes.

(If all the production and cast credits Green slipped in were printed, this script would run longer than "Wilson"—Ed.)

LARAINE, LIPPY SNARLED ON DIVORCE-MARRIAGE

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

"When is a divorce not a divorce?" is the problem confronting Laraine Day, Leo Durocher and Judge George A. Dockweiler in Superior Court. The judge has indicated that he will annul the decree he granted recently to the film actress in her suit against first husband, James Ray Hendricks.

Under the California law an interlocutory decree requires one year to achieve finality, but Miss Day hopped to Mexico, obtained a south-of-the-border divorce and became Mrs. Leo Durocher, all in the course of two days.

Attorney General Howser is drawing up papers for the annulment of the second marriage. Meanwhile, the Durochers are not permitted to live as bride and groom in California.

Glyn Will Probated

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Will of Elinor Glyn, who died in London in 1943, was admitted to probate here in Superior Court.

Novelist's California property, valued at $5,000, was left to her daughters, Lady Margot Davidson and Lady Juliet Rhys-Williams, of London.

20% Tax Nailed Down This Week

Washington, Jan. 28.

The House will nail down the high wartime excises—including the 20% admissions and nitery taxes—for at least another year tomorrow (29), when the Grant bill comes before the chamber under a "gag" rule.

The bill, which has the support of both the Administration and of Republican leaders, will be the first important law to go through the new Congress. It provides for an indefinite extension of the so-called "luxury" excises at their present rates. Otherwise, effective July 1, these taxes would drop to their old levels, meaning 10% for theatres and 5% for niteries.

Measure got the okay of the House rules committee last week which else gave it the "gag" rule, which prevents the bill from being amended from the floor. Debate was limited to three hours under the rule.

Louis Jordan Slashed By Wife; Out of Action For Indefinite Period

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Louis Jordan will be hospitalized at least a week after being severely slashed Sunday (26), assertedly by wife, Ernestine Jordan. Meanwhile, Jordan's combo is continuing at Billy Berg's nitery here, with Timmie Rogers fronting.

Berg, meanwhile, has not balked at paying outfit $3,500 weekly, despite Jordan absence, but will huddle with Jordan manager, Berle Adams, who is enroute from Chicago on salary reduction. Jordan's cuts on lips will preclude his singing or saxing for indeterminate period. Wife is being held.

Andy Russell to Make 'Quixote' in Mexico

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Andy Russell signed a deal with Aristides Fernandez, Cuban producer, to star in a bi-lingual film version of "Don Quixote," to be shot in Mexico City and Vera Cruz.

Larry Ceballos will direct both versions in English and Spanish. Negotiations are under way with Lina Romay as femme co-star.

Fields' 900G Estate To College Endowment

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Will of the late W. C. Fields, admitted to probate in Superior Court, left the bulk of his $900,000 estate to a trust fund for the establishment of a "W. C. Fields College," for the education of orphans.

Largest individual bequest was $25,000 in trust and $25 weekly to Carlotta Monti, dancer and longtime friend. His widow, Harriett, and only son, W. Claude Fields, Jr., were left $10,000 each.

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

William S. Hart, western star who died last June, left an estate of $1,044,919, according to the final accounting approved by Superior Court.

Will made no provision for the late actor's son, William, Jr., and bequeathed most of the estate to Los Angeles County for a memorial park.

Eva Tanguay, who had carried millions in her stage heydays and died Jan. 11, left nothing but personal effects valued at less than $500.

Estate, left without a will, was turned over to Mrs. Ruth Weeks, the actress' nurse, for administration.

Irving Berlin Writes Tune For Brotherhood Wk.

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Irving Berlin has put the finishing touches on a "brotherhood song," which the National Conference of Christians and Jews will use as the "theme song" for Brotherhood Week, Feb. 16-23. It is hoped the tune will become a key to universal understanding.

Titled "Help Me to Help My Neighbor," the song was first broached to Berlin by Eli Oberstein, Manie Sachs and Jack Kapp, Victor, Columbia and Decca record toppers, respectively. They promised him fullest cooperation via topflight waxing, etc., but Berlin felt that "unless it's a truly good song, it means nothing." Song

Help Me to Help My Neighbor

By IRVING BERLIN

Help me to help my neighbor,
Help me to understand.
Help me to hear the pleading
Of an outstretched empty hand.
Help me to do to others
As I'd have them do to me,
Help me to help by neighbor
Whatever his faith may be.
Help me to see a heavy heart
Behind a smiling face,
Help me to judge as I'd be judged
If I were in his place.
The night is dark
And the way is long,
On a road that has no end.
Help me to help my neighbor
Help me to be his friend.

Copyright, Irving Berlin.

will, of course, be non-commercial but Berlin's idea is to plug it fully regardless. The songsmith phoned the final tune and lyric changes from California to Jack Kapp, his New York general professional head, last week. Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, NCCJ prexy, became very enthusiastic about tune's promotion of the NCCJ campaign.

All proceeds of "Neighbor" will go to some cause, yet to be selected, presumably NCCJ or similar organizations dealing with "tolerance." Since Berlin feels strongly against usage of the word "tolerance"—favoring "brotherhood" — he would rather "Neighbor" achieved popularity as a straight commercial song, with the proceeds to go anonymously to whatever organization he, Dr. Clinchy and John G. Winant, ex-ambassador to Great Britain, designate. Winant is a leader in the NCCJ movement.

Fred Fisher Film Biog Planned by Al Green

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Career of the late Fred Fisher, songwriter, will form the basis of a picture to be made by Alfred E. Green, who recently directed "The Jolson Story." Fisher composed "Peg o' My Heart," "Dardanella," "Ireland Must Be Heaven" and other song hits.

Green has obtained permission from Fisher's widow, Anna, to film the story, which will be scripted by Will Gould.

'What Do I Need Zanuck For?'

One of my favorite characters is Gregory Ratoff, and he is also a favorite with the nation, for whenever "Information Please" wants to make certain of a few laughs, they invite him to be a guest. Of the various Ratoff yarns, my choice goes to the story of his discussion with his writer, Lou Breslow, about Darryl Zanuck.

"I know there are people who aren't thrilled to Darryl," said Ratoff, "but me, I know that I owe everything to Zanuck. If it wasn't for him I would be a bum. He gave me the chance to become a director, when no one would give me a job. I owe everything to Zanuck. The food I'm eating, the clothes I'm wearing, the chair I'm sitting in."

"It's very nice to hear such appreciation," said Breslow, "but I don't believe you would have been a bum. If Zanuck hadn't given you your opportunity to become a director, I think you would have become an agent."

Ratoff smiled. "That's correct. I would have been an agent. The best and biggest agent in town. I'd have my own business and I'd have made over a million dollars. What did I need Zanuck for?"

Mex Ups Upper Taxes

Mexico City, Jan. 28.

High-bracket showfolk who play Mexico must leave a bigger chunk of their earnings in this land than before. Also pared law of the income tax soaks big earners. Example:

Anybody who receives $17,000.01 (Mex.) to $20,000 a year from any source is nicked 22%; $20,000.01 to $23,000, 25%; $23,000.01 to $26,000, 28%, and $26,000.01, up 30%.

Income tax law amendment enacted some years ago that entertainers who perform transiently in Mexico must pay this levy, still stands.

Mayer Nag Sale Set for Feb. 27

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Louis B. Mayer's stable of thoroughbreds, valued at more than $4,000,000, will be sold at auction Feb. 27 on the Santa Anita racetrack. Reports of the Metro executive's impending retirement from the racing game had been in circulation for several weeks.

Auction, to be conducted by the Fasig-Tipton Co. of New York, will include Busher, Be Faithful, Honeymoon and all other Mayer horses currently in training. The remainder, including brood mares and foals on the ranch at Perris, Cal., will be sold later.

Owner Seeks Dismissal Of Danny Kaye Apt. Suit

Dismissal of Danny Kaye's suit to retain his New York apartment was sought by the owner of the house in New York Supreme Court last week. Kaye has been making a fight to keep possession of the Fifth avenue apartment, in which he is said to have invested some $50,000 for remodeling and furnishing on the basis of an oral guaranty from a previous landlord that he remain in it for at least three years.

Present owner, attorney William M. Chadbourne, is seeking to evict Kaye to sell his apartment, since the house has been put on a cooperative basis.

arguments. Birkhead declared that the recent firing of several liberal commentators from the air clearly reveals that networks look upon "freedom of speech as a one-way street for reactionaries of the Upton Close stripe."

Birkhead also expressed optimism over chances of banning Close from the air on the basis of a broad educational drive. He reported that Hart was becoming increasingly irked at Close because of the latter's extensive extra-broadcasting activities.

Although she made her last American film almost three years ago, Grace Moore, killed Jan. 26 in an air crash near Copenhagen, Denmark, left a permanent mark upon the artistic vision of Hollywood producers. The soprano, who climbed from musical comedy stage to the heights of grand opera before leaping to international fame through a series of operatic films, proved once and for all that classical music could be sold to the film-going public.

Since her cinematic peak in 1935, dozens of serious music films have hit the screen, many more are currently in the works and top-ranking operatic stars have been flocking to Hollywood's gates in a steady stream to star in the cycle of films which Miss Moore began with "One Night of Love" in 1934. Among the more prominent singing stars who have followed in her footsteps are Gladys Swarthout, Lily Pons, Lawrence Tibbett, Paul Robeson, Risa Martini, Beniamino Gigli, Rise Stevens, Lauritz Melchior and Jan Kiepura and his wife Marta Eggerth.

When the airliner Heralup at the Danish airport cut her career short, the singer was en route to Stockholm on a world concert tour. Killed with her in the disaster were Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden and 20 others, including Miss Moore's accompanist, Jean Loup Peltier; her impresario, Roland Bernard Maleo, and two other members of her staff.

'If Verses Had Wings'

Her final concert was given the evening of Jan. 25) in Copenhagen's largest hall, where she scored her greatest hit with Reynaldo Hahn's song, "If My Verses Had Wings." A few hours before her departure for Stockholm she had sent her husband, Valentin Parera, who is ill at Cannes, a cable telling him of her previous evening's success. Not long after, he received the other cable from Denmark informing him of his wife's death.

Miss Moore made her stage debut

JONES CANCELS DATE, AGMA GETS GRIPE

Charging Allan Jones with "arbitrarily and capriciously" ignoring the terms of a contract he signed on June 18, 1946, calling for his appearance the night of Oct. 27, 1946, at Memorial Hall, Dayton, O., with a resulting loss of $949 he forfeited out to ballyhoo the date, concert promoter Roy Crouse has filed a complaint with the American Guild of Musical Artists, asking the union to arbitrate the matter.

According to Crouse, less than 24 hours before Jones' scheduled appearance, he received a phone call from Jones' manager in Charleston, W. Va., who said that the singer was very ill and was cancelling the Dayton concert. Upon notice of cancellation Crouse stated all ticket money was refunded, and he prepared to take his losses under the contract's "act of God" proviso.

Immediately Crouse points out in his complaint, "Jones was in the best of health and gave a concert in Charleston Oct. 26, and upon further investigation, Crouse says, Jones' troupe arrived in Charleston with plans already completed to close there, indicating Jones had planned for some time not to honor his contract with me."

Declaring he had previously beefed to Jones, who ignored his letter, Crouse also noted that "General Artists Corp., Jones' agent, disclaimed liability. Should AGMA not arbitrate the matter, Crouse asks permission to file a civil suit.

Paramount Deflates Optimism Of SMPE Prez on '47 Theatre Tele

Home office execs of Paramount were not as certain as Loren L. Ryder, Par's director of recording and prez of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, that 1947 would see theatre television on full-size screens. Video in the flicker houses is feasible at the present moment, Par's biggies say, but opposition from projectionists' unions make the date of their introduction an unknown quantity.

Ryder, in the role of newly installed SMPE prexy, declared that "commercially satisfying pictures" photographed from cathode tube images would be perfected and introduced into some of the plush houses during the current year. He made no mention of labor difficulties disclosed this week by Par's execs. Squabble has arisen because projectionists insist upon the right of handling the intricate transition from image to films while tele toppers contend that video engineers alone are qualified for the job.

Use of tele generally in theatres is still some years ahead, Ryder opined, but the film industry can expect some houses to run off special events such as sporting contests sometime before '47 with the use of the technique of filming the cathode image and then projecting the negative causes a time lag, audiences would see the event from 10 seconds to five minutes later.

Four Phases

Theatre tele will develop in four phases, Ryder predicted. The first, he said, would be the intermediate film stage feasible this year. Second would come with the furnishing of houses with special video screens and equipment, an expensive process at best. Third, he continued, would

'Duel' Reported OK With Huston-Jones 'S.A. Glances' Cut

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Scissoring of the ogling sequences in David O. Selznick's "Duel In Sun," it is understood, will serve to give okay to final circulation of film, following squawks from the Legion of Decency and other church groups. Already shaved, the film is currently playing the Fairfax and Vogue theatres in Los Angeles, while similarly trimmed prints will be circulated to these other local houses, the Orpheum, El Rey and Westwood, next month.

Feeling knife are understood to be scenes in which Walter Huston, playing an evangelist, eyes Jennifer Jones, as well as other characters, giving the half-clad girl a suggestive up-and-down stare. Certain footage allotted to Lionel Barrymore is likewise understood to have been sheared. From five to 10 minutes is expected to be pared from the original running time of 134 minutes in Selznick's efforts to get the $5,500,000 Technicolor production into release sans further difficulties on censorship.

Henreid, Rank Due For Talks on Indie

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Paul Henreid is going to Europe following completion of Metro's "Song of Love." He will confer with J. Arthur Rank in London on the foreign release of "Cartouche," William Herzog novel which Henreid will produce independently with Merle Oberon.

Book, bought fon $75,000, has just been translated from the German.

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Benedict Bogeaus will set up offices in London and Paris to handle film distribution as well as purchase stories and talent. Carl Leserman, executive vice prexy, leaves this weekend for Europe.

He'll stop off in New York to huddle with United Artists execs on Bogeaus distribution during 1947.

Ruth Harbert Becomes 8th Femme Producer

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Uppage of Ruth Harbert to producer status at Eagle-Lion makes a total of eight distaff producers currently at work in Hollywood film studios.

Others under contract are Helen Deutsch, Frances Manson and Virginia Van Upp at Columbia; Harriet Parsons and Lillie Hayward at RKO; Joan Harrison at Universal-International; and Bebe Daniels at Hal Roach.

Reade in M-G Hotel Astor Bid?

Walter Reade, New York and New Jersey indie circuit operator, is reported tied up with Metro in the deal by which the distributing company is aiming to take over the title of the Astor hotel, N. Y., for a group of theatres and an office building. What Reade's part in the Astor deal would be is not clear, with all parties taking a hush-hush attitude on the whole project.

Reade had previously announced plans for building two theatres in the Broadway area, but has refused to divulge their location. They have been reported going up in the 51st street block which now includes the Republic theatre.

Second-guess denials last week of the Astor-Metro deal by the same real estate men who had the previous day confirmed it were not taken seriously on Broadway. It is understood the purpose of the backtracking was an attempt to prevent soaring prices on the other real estate which must be acquired in the 44th to 45th street block from Broadway almost to 8th avenue, to complete Metro's plan for a Radio City Music Hall type of development. Shuberts are said to have hung a $15,000,000 price tag on the seven theatres they own in the block. Astor price was said to be $5,700,000.

Helen Deutsch Buys Back Her Own Yarn

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Helen Deutsch, author of "But Is It Love?," bought the story back from the Carole Lombard estate, and will rewrite it for possible sale among the film studios.

Yarn, which appeared in the Ladies Home Journal in 1942, was bought for indie production by the late Miss Lombard, whose death in a plane crash prevented its filming.

FACE THAT LOSS IN TRUST SUITS

While staving off a grand offensive by the Government in the anti-trust campaign, the majors are eyeing with mounting concern the heightened attack on their flank via exhib triple damage suits. A total of $20,000,000 damages is at stake in the more than 20 suits now pending in the courts, and the battle is assuming all the earmarks of a fight equally dangerous to the one with the Government.

Of that 20, some 15 have been filed against the majors in the past six to eight months, and the possibility of it snowballing is not discounted by legalites in the know. The stampede has been given the gun by several factors, most important of these being the highly favorable decisions to exhibs handed out by the courts in the Goldman and Jackson Park cases. The partial slap against distribs administered by the three judges in the Government suit, which held illegal certain practices such as price-fixing and clearance, is viewed as also flattening the path for the litigous exhib.

The pummeling which the majors have recently taken lies not only in the Goldman and Jackson Park heavy verdicts but also last week's mountainous $896,000 handout to A. B. Momand by a Boston federal court has forced a 180-degree switch in the attorneys' attitude towards the actions.

Claims for astronomical damages, which were once shrugged off as al-

MPA Seen Revising Title Service Due To Metro-Selznick Row

Battle between Metro and David O. Selznick over rights to the title "Treasure Island" will shortly go to arbitration and is almost certain to bring about a revision of the Motion Picture Assn.'s rules regarding its title registration service. "Treasure Island" dispute likewise has a number of interesting facets involving international copyright.

Metro claims it owns the tale by a trick provision of French law, while Selznick maintains the famed Robert Louis Stevenson story is in public domain. Search of MPAA registration files shows Metro holds the right to the title, but Selznick

'Insolent' Kids Set Film Standards In Coast Preview Circuit, Sez Lewin

Teen-age critics are dictating the standards of too many Hollywood producers these days and reducing the prestige of American pix in foreign markets, according to Albert Lewin, United Artists producer currently in New York on a layover before making a trip to London next month. Lewin stated that the crowds attracted to theatres in Hollywood's preview circuit, where producers try out their pictures prior to final cutting, are predominantly made up of kids whose "arrogant, insolent and ignorant criticisms" terrorize producers into making unwarranted changes in their final product.

Lewin asserted that only adult films will gain acceptance in the world market and failure of Hollywood producers to recognize this fact will leave the door wide open to foreign producers. In addition, he declared, the way to bring to the boxoffice the millions of Americans who never, or rarely ever, go to see films is through sincere, grown-up entertainment.

Lewin recently completed work on "The Private Affairs of Bel Ami," which he wrote, directed and coproduced with David Loew for UA. Film will be released in the spring. Lewin's next production, scheduled for shooting in mid-1948, will be based on an original screenplay on which he's now working.

Mary Pickford Donates Early Pix to Congress

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Mary Pickford will present prints of nine of her early pictures to the Library of Congress in Washington, D. C., for inclusion in that institution's historical collection.

Films are "Tess of the Storm Country," "Poor Little Rich Girl," "Daddy Long Legs," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Secrets," "The Taming of the Shrew," "The Lonely Villa," "The New York Hat" and "The Violin Maker of Cremona."

Boff $41,182,000 B.O. Tax in Nov.

Washington, Jan. 28.

Show biz continued to head last November toward its biggest year of all-time, with a boff $41,182,000 in excise taxes taken in the nation's boxoffices that month, according to figures announced last night (27) by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Uncle Sam's jumbo-sized bite on admissions was the largest ever for a November and was the third largest of all time, falling behind only September, 1946, and September, 1945. Compared with the November figure was the mild $29,862,687 for November, 1945, and $36,893,291 for October, 1946. About 85% of the total was estimated to come from pictures.

Broadway had itself a nice, but not sensational, month on the basis of figures for the 3d New York Internal Revenue District, all of Manhattan above 23d street. The tax collector's take on theatres for November was $4,891,201, about $900,000 over the same month of 1945, but about $200,000 behind October, 1946. In addition, business at the niteries in Manhatan just about curled up its toes in November. The 20% take on nitery tabs was only $383,769, compared with $602,855 for November, 1945, and $604,719 for October, 1946.

Another little piece for the guy with the whiskers was broken off by Broadway's ticket offices. In November they paid $49,394 in taxes on their business done, which was a trifle over the preceding month and also a little more than in November, 1945.

National Boxoffice Survey

Biz Spotty in Keys; 'Madeleine,' 'Woman,' 'Guy' Top New Entries; 'Skies' Boffo

Business in the nation's key cities remained on the spotty side during the last week, with a mass of holdovers continuing to cut into grosses.

Broadway houses followed the trend, with mid-spring weather felt adversely at the boxoffice. Brace of newcomers kept Chicago at a high plane while several new entries aided Los Angeles to hefty takes. Washington and Pittsburgh, however, continued on the downbeat, with most of the midwest fair.

"13 Rue Madeleine" (20th) emerged as the top newcomer of the week, raking in a smasheroo $96,000 in L.A., stout $40,000 in Detroit and a good $21,000 in St. Louis. Film also grossed big $38,500 in its second N. Y. week. "Strange Woman" (UA) was off to a good start in several situations, with strong $26,500 in Denver, fair $22,000 in Pitt and powerful $25,000 for the second Detroit week. "Swell Guy" (U) looked headed for husky $35,000 opener in N. Y., with $37,000 in L.A., $24,000 in Chi and strong $8,000 for its second session in Cincinnati.

"Man I Love" (WB) teed off with plump $60,000 opener in Chi, trim $25,000 in Philly and big $62,000 in N. Y., while "Secret Heart" (M-G) entered the select circle with sock $27,500 in its St. Louis opener and rolled up sweet $21,000 for its third Philly week. "Blue Skies" (Par) set record $33,000 for its Cincy opener and continued to pace the holdovers, with strong $14,000 for its third week in Baltimore, fine $10,000 for its fifth Kansas City week, okay $23,000 for its second Washington frame and good $23,000 for its sixth L.A. stanza.

"Razor's Edge" (20th) and "Jolson Story" (Col) also continued strong in holdover spots throughout the country, along with "Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G), "Best Years of Our Lives" (RKO) and "Wonderful Life" (RKO). "Yearling" (M-G) opened with smasheroo $140,000 in N. Y., and chalked up good $11,000 for its fifth L.A. week. "Duel in Sun" (Selz) topped its opening week's take with an immense $39,000 for the second frame in L.A., only spot to date in the country.

WB Reports 1,700 Aides Still in U.S. Services

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Almost 1,700 former employees of Warners are still in military service, some overseas and some on duty in this country, according to statistics released by the studio.

Of the 5,000 or more workers who served during the war, approximately 1,500 have returned to Warners studio, theatres and exchanges.

ANOTHER WASHINGTON RED PROBE OF H'WOOD

Washington, Jan. 28.

The everlasting film studio strike and the Indépendent Citizens Committee for the Arts and Sciences will largely bear the brunt of the new investigation of Hollywood to be made by the House Un-American Activities Committee, according to reports here.

Committee reorganized itself under Republican leadership last week and promptly announced that one of its big goals would be to probe subversive influences in the film capital.

"The committee plans to give a good airing to Communist influences in Hollywood," declared Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), new committee chairman. "I intend to make it the most active year in the committee's history."

Metro Loses Lead, Slides to Fourth, As Par, 20th, WB 1-2-3 on '46 Net; Mayer's 500G Again Tops Pix Pay

Metro, longtime leader in the film industry, has slid into fourth position among the major companies in the annual net profits sweepstakes.

Company, despite its $17,958,945 take for it and its wholly owned subsids, trails Warners, which garnered $19,424,000 for fiscal 1946, and Fox considerably behind both Paramount, in top spot, and 20th-Fox, second. Warners' gross income was $158,613,000 against Metro's $188,476,317 but the latter's operating expenses were higher, including $20,926,606 paid to top personnel against WB's $10,186,830.

Additionally, Metro reported $3,650,976 for the first quarter of the new year after taxes and other deductions. Net represented a drop from the comparative period of the previous year, when the company took in $4,333,623, though gross revenues were closely similar with $41,400,000 collected currently against $41,710,000 last year. Quarterly earnings are 72c. per share against 86c. in '46.

Profits for fiscal year ended Aug. 31, '46, showed a solid advance over the $12,913,369 which Metro chalked up in '45. Per share earnings were $3.66 on 5,100,327 shares of common outstanding against $2.55 earned last year.

Metro's assets include $21,186,188 in cash and $16,635,835 in Government securities and bonds. Released films currently being amortized are evaluated at $18,480,449; unreleased pix at $9,489,143 and films in production at $46,915,780. Total current and working assets are fixed at

Mayer-Burstyn Win Metro Contest Over Italian Pic's Rights

Battle between Mayer-Burstyn, indie distribs, and Metro for American rights to "Paysan," Italian-made Lollow-up to "Open City," has ended with M-B the winner. Metro, in contracting its plans for distribution of foreign pix in dubbed versions in the U. S., dropped out of the dispute following visit to Italy of M-B pard Joe Burstyn. Latter returned from abroad last week. He expects a "Paysan" print in New York today (Wednesday).

Pic was made by Rod Geiger, who also made "Open City," which M-B is distributing. Shortly after Burstyn made his deal for "City," he also made a pact for "Paysan," which then hadn't yet gone into production. When Geiger got back to Rome, he found he required additional financing, and he and partner Robert Rossellini, film's director, took in a third member of the moneyed set. Latter was subsequently contacted by a Metro rep and inked a deal with that company for "Paysan" at considerably better terms than Burstyn had offered.

When Burstyn learned of this, he insisted on his rights under the prior contract and considerable squabbling and negotiating followed. It was finally agreed that he would turn his claim over to Metro for 10% of the net. Metro, however, subsequently decided to drop the deal altogether.

Burstyn also bought several other films in Italy and France for American release and is reported possibly entering into production on his own in Rome.

HOLLYWOOD AIDS ARMY IN ARCTIC OPERATION

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Film industry's latest service to the Government is in recruiting civilian crews here to assist the U.S. Army in its Task Force Frigid operation in the Arctic wastelands. A crew of 10 civilian photographers is enroute to Alaska to accompany the Army forces and make a celluloid record of the operation to determine the defense and war-making possibilities of the frigid zone.

The 10-men chosen, rounded up by the International Photographers, Local 659, in consort with associated unions, are on a six-month assignment under the control of the Civil Service Commission.

Portuguese to Ratify Tax on U. S. Pictures

Washington, Jan. 28.

New Portuguese tax to put a heavy pinch on U. S. films entering that country is expected to be ratified by the Portuguese legislature within the next 10 days. Action will come despite a protest from the U. S. Department, George Canty, motion picture specialist of the Department disclosed yesterday (27).

Tax will run $400 on each "A" picture and $200 on each "B," with rates of $8 to $20 for Newsreels and shorts.

Portuguese intend to devote the revenue to creating a national motion picture institute to stimulate their own film production. Decree was approved by government officials Jan. 1, but does not become law until the country's congress ratifies.

$10,186,830 Paid To WB Execs In 1946 Salaries

Salary nut for top executive personnel of Warner Bros. totaled $10,186,830 for fiscal 1946, ending Aug. 31, it's disclosed in a proxy statement of the company forwarded to stockholders this week. Proxy declares that 19 execs were paid over $100,000, 45 others between $50,000 and $100,000; and 119 more than $20,000 but not exceeding $50,000.

Harry Warner, WB prexy, led the parade with $182,200, with Jack L. Warner, production chief, snaring $182,100. Others in the six-figure take were Joseph Bernhard, former Warner head, $106,800; Harry M. Kalmine, veepee in charge of theatres, $107,344, and Albert Warner, v.p. and treasurer, $105,000.

In the five-figure bracket, following officers and directors were listed: Hugo Kalmenson, v.p. heading sales, $97,600; Samuel Schneider, v.p. and assistant to the prez, $87,650; veepee Herman Starr, $78,000; Robert W. Perkins, veepee and general counsel, $74,750; Stanleigh P. Friedman, veepee and attorney, $66,100; Mort Blumenstock, head of ad-publicity, $62,250; and Samuel Grisle, controller, $620.

Stock holdings of the three Warners continue over the 1,000,000 mark. Jack Warner tops the trio with 442,000 shares of common, Albert follows with 438,100 and Harry is third with 313,400. No other director has more than a four-figure block of shares.

Warners shelled out a total of $207,350 in legal fees during the year. Main slice of $115,000 was garnered by Proskauer, Rose, Goetz & Mendelsohn, WB's anti-trust counsel in New York. Frestone & Files picked up $68,350, and Defrees, Fiske, O'Brien & Thomson some $24,000. Auditing sliced off another $91,750 into the pockets of Lybrand, Waterhouse & Co., while Baker, Selby & Ravenel received $31,500 for tax counseling.

WB has set its annual meet for Feb. 18 in Wilmington, Del. Election of five directors for a two-year term is the only business to be transacted. Five up-for re-election to the board are Charles S. Guggenheimer, Morris Wolf, Carliste, Friedman and Schneider.

Bischoff, Dick Powell Officers of New Indie

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Officers of newly formed Regal Films was set today (28), with Sam Bischoff prexy and treasurer; Dick Powell, who will star in firm's first release for UA, "Pitfall," named veepee, and Herbert T. Silverberg, secretary.

Directors will be above officers plus Bischoff's wife and Morgan Maree. Charles Feldman also has a financial interest in company.

Reveal 'Mystery Man' As Key to $40,000,000 1945 Metro Financing

"Mystery-man" Serge Semenenko, who appears on Metro's proxy statement, issued last week, as having received $55,000, and whose name has frequently been listed by other companies as recipient of large chunks of coin, is v.p. of the First National Bank of Boston. Sums paid him are commissions for arranging financing.

Particular deal for which he received the 55G, it is understood, was getting together a $40,000,000 loan to Metro by a quartet of banks and a flock of insurance companies in July, 1945. Money was to be used for general corporate purposes, including theatre expansion in this country and abroad.

Under this arrangement set by Semenenko, $12,000,000 was loaned for an eight-year period by Guaranty Trust, Bankers Trust and Chase National, of New York, and Semenenko's own bank in Boston. The group of insurance companies advanced the other $28,000,000 for a 12-year period.

Coin reported last week was second payment to Semenenko from Loew's. He's understood to have received a hefty sum about five years ago when he set the refinancing of the company's preferred stock. He also participated recently in the deal by which Universal was advanced coin to purchase Castle Films and Bell & Howell, otherwise advancing the 16m interests. Participants in that loan were Semenenko's bank, Bank of Manhattan and Guaranty of New York.

Other Semenenko deals have provided coin to RKO and Columbia. It is reported that the banker until recently had as his constant adviser in film deals Sam Pinanski, partner with Marty Mullins in operation of the Paramount-affiliated Mullins & Pinanski circuit in New England.

RKO GETS 16M RIGHTS IN DISNEY MILLION LOAN

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Walt Disney agreed to an amendment of his distribution contract, giving RKO the right to release his cartoons and features throughout the world in 16m. Original agreement called for 35m only.

In return, RKO loaned Disney $1,000,000, to be repaid out of film earning from foreign countries.

ARI Scales Survey Costs

Hollwood, Jan. 28.

Audience Research, Inc., has adopted a new scale of prices, on a sliding scale, to survey public sentiment on forthcoming film productions.

One picture poll will cost $25,000. Sliding rate is $17,500 each for four films; $15,000 each for six, and $12,500 each for 10 or more.

AUTRY'S CHAMPION DIES

Wilby Attack Vs. Rank Originates From Booking Fight Over 'Cleo'

Johnston Raps Anglo Curbs on Yank Pix

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 28.

Despite mounting demands in Congress to kill the reciprocal trade program, Eric Johnston last night (27) told the Rochester Chamber of Commerce that the Republican Party should support the reciprocal treaties.

He also rapped Britain for threatening greater restrictions on U. S. pix, warning that reciprocation is a two-way street. Termination of the reciprocal treaties and a return to high tariffs would undoubtedly cripple Hollywood's overseas market, Johnson stated.

Butler's Attack

Washington, Jan. 28.

Senator Hugh Butler, Republican, of Nebraska, touched off a hot Congressional fight today (28) with a fierce attack against the reciprocal trade agreements program as "a gigantic hoax against the American people."

$4,565,219 Sets Record Net For Universal in '46

Universal hit an all-time company high for profits in the fiscal year ended Nov. 2, 1946, with a net of $4,565,219. Closest to the figure was $3,910,928 raked in during 1943. At the same time, U pushed up its gross to $53,934,865 from $51,040,428 in '45, of which $30,809,450 was drawn domestically and $23,125,415 from overseas.

Net was equivalent to $5.32 per share on 827,110 outstanding, against $4.86 in the year preceding, after allowing for payments on U's 4¼% cumulative preferred. Company had added $5,885,000 to its capital structure by sale of 60,000 shares of preferred in March, 1946. Profits were reached after payment of $3,250,000 on federal taxes and $379,486 for foreign nicks.

Total dividends paid on preferred and common for the year was $1,768,570, against $1,519,842 in '45, statement disclosed. Current and working assets amounted to $36,313,130 from $28,212,871, while net working capital climbed to $29,278,995 from $23,030,555. Ratio of current and working assets to current liabilities, according to the report, dipped slightly from $5.44 to $1 in '45 to the present $5.16 to $1.

Company's cash position improved considerably, since U now has $8,734,598, against $5,531,525 at the end of '45. Productions in progress are computed at $10,863,109; unreleased films at a nominal $40,314; released pix at $9,231,341 cost, less amortization figure. Scenarios and unpro-

Attack by Robert B. Wilby, head of the Wilby-Kincy circuit, against J. Arthur Rank for asserted attempts to "pressure" Yank exhibs into playing British pix stems from a running fight which Wilby is currently waging with both United Artists, distrib of Rank's "Caesar and Cleopatra," and the Rank division of Universal. In that give-and-take, playdates which Wilby has allocated to "Cleo" have been repeatedly rejected by both UA and U on the claim that Wilby is trying to pull a fast one.

Wilby-Kincy pacted to exhibit "Cleo" a number of months ago in its theatres, and that's as far as the deal has developed. When it came to actual playdates in the W-K houses, circuit head sought to slot the pic for midweek engagements, which UA and U promptly and vociferously nixed while maintaining that "Cleo" as a top bracket film was entitled to preferred weekend dates.

Moreover, tiff is still being waged over disputed point as to what consists a firstrun. Deal, it's said, calls for the pic to play first run in number of southern towns where the W-K circuit has its houses. Wilby, claim is made, is designating houses which customarily play third run to open "Cleo" on a first-run basis.

Distribs' execs maintain that Wilby's switch in usual runoff of a film is designed to fatten the grosses for his houses at their expense. Playing a strong pic during the midweek or grooving its firstrun in a third-run house spells heavier coin for the exhib but less for the distrib, producer and crew. Consequently, playdate designations have shuttled between Wilby and UA a dozen times and more while tempers approached the boiling point.

Wilby in the Jan. 22 issue of VARIETY declared that any attempts to a "pressure" or "shame" exhibs into playing their product "won't go."

UA Renews Stromberg On Heels of 'Sleeper' Biz for Lamarr Film

Renewal of Hunt Stromberg's distribution contract with United Artists last week came on the heels of the surprise success of his latest release, "Strange Woman." Hedy Lamarr starrer, with $2,750,000 in domestic rentals already in the till and a total of around $3,500,000 anticipated, has virtually turned out to be a "sleeper" and has accounted for a good chunk of UA profits in the past couple months.

While Stromberg was granted his renewal by UA's board, at least two other producers were not so fortunate. Andrew Stone and Arnold Pressburger were dropped from the rolls under UA's new determination that the large quantity of product it has lined up for this year makes it imperative that it pact only those producers who can guarantee to provide the company with top-grade pictures on a regular schedule. Number of other producers now in the UA stable may be expected to

FUROR ON 'TOO MANY REISSUES'

UA Follows Goldwyn's Lead, Leasing Houses to Solve Roadshow Problem

United Artists, on behalf of its indie producers, will follow Samuel Goldwyn's method in solving the problem presented by the recent court nix on roadshows and fixing minimum admission prices. Plan consists of "leasing" houses rather than the conventional exhibition method of "licensing" pictures.

UA's idea is to lease theatres in the name of the producer whose picture will be shown in them. This follows the Goldwyn pattern of leasing houses, rather than having RKO, which releases the producer's films, sign the "papers. While the major companies are bound by the decree, indie producers are not, and the Dept. of Justice has indicated it has no intent to interfere with them. David O. Selznick is likely to adopt the Goldwyn-UA technique for upped admish bookings of "Duel in the Sun."

Edward C. Raftery, UA prexy, and Grad Sears, distribution chief, huddled with D. of J. execs in Washington last week on the leasing plan and are understood to have been told they could go ahead without fear of Government action. Failure of the decree to permit roadshows was strictly the dictate of the court and not the D. of J.'s idea, which accounts for the leniency. Selznick execs had previously been given the same assurance by UA on their query, except in that case it involved only one film. UA desires to roadshow Enterprise's "Arch of Triumph," and possibly "Federal Films' "Carnegie Hall," in addition to others as they present themselves.

Method as currently being employed by Goldwyn for "Best Years of Our Lives," and likely to be followed by other outfits, is essentially, of course, a "four-walls" proposition. It differs only in that theatre-owners are given a choice of a

'Song of South' Gets Revived Ad Hypo After Dwindling Biz

Walt Disney's "Song of the South" is the second picture recently to get a completely revised advertising campaign following disappointing grosses in early engagements. The other one was Liberty Films' "It's a Wonderful Life."

Original Disney campaign caused the picture to suffer, it is figured, because of its emphasis on the live action and the live actors, rather than on the Disney name and its association with his pen-and-brush technique. Revised campaign played up Disney and the cartoon aspects, submerging names of live players, with almost immediate effect felt at the b.o.

How much the new advertising approach meant is seen in the fact that "Song" did as much in Detroit, Ford, N. J., with the revised campaign as it had previously done in Newark with the old one.

"Wonderful Life" is also perking as a result of the ad switches. Earlier campaign emphasized name of producer Frank Capra, taking some of the play away from Jimmy Stewart. This is Stewart's first pic since returning to Hollywood from the Army. New ads give top prominence to the star and also give a somewhat sexier touch to the art work, showing Stewart and co-star Donna Reed.

RKO Shifts

Following disappointing Broadway boxoffice openings of two consecutive releases, RKO has reshuffled its advertising and publicity department to put one man in charge of all Manhattan premieres. Assignment to work directly under ad-pub head S. Barrett McCormick, Hank Howard, former field exploitation man, has been given supervision of promotion for all of the company's Broadway bookings.

Move came immediately on the heels of preems of Liberty Films' "It's a Wonderful Life" and Walt Disney's "Song of the South," both of which opened under expectations.

Ted Gamble Buys 10th Oregon Theatre

Ted Gamble, board chairman of the American Theatres Assn. and Oregon circuit operator, has acquired the Downtown theatre in Portland, Ore. Gamble will rename the house the Century, remodel it extensively and switch the policy to first run. Acquisition sends his chain up to 10 theatres.

ATA chairman is currently in New York dickering for a midwest circuit. Deal involving transfer of long term leases is expected to be closed this week.

Auction Bidding Held Favorable For New Houses

By HAYDEN TALBOT

Savannah, Jan. 28.

With many exhibitors still squawking about the competitive bidding proviso in the anti-trust decree, those exhibs who've opened new houses in recent months and have run into the usual difficulty of obtaining product should find bidding to their liking. At least, that's the opinion, based on experience, of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Weis, who operate, jointly, Savannah's newest house, the Weis theatre.

Two years ago, according to the couple, the Government decided Savannah was underseated and gave them permission to construct a new theatre. Added to the normal 125,000 population, within a radius of 18 miles were 40,000-50,000 soldiers, with many thousands of imported shipbuilders. So Weis built a new 1,300-seater. And immediately, according to Weis, "I discovered I could get no product." It was the usual order of older exhibs having the top product sewed up.

"Out of the blue, sheer luck came to my aid," he said. "First there was Hollywood's cutting production in half. Of even greater advantage to me, some of the majors decided to jump the gun—and take a crack at selling by auction bidding.

"If the artificially-created shortage of product strikes you as being an extra handicap for me, instead of a help, your ignorance is understandable. Point is; it took all the power out of the whip of the chain monopoly which had been behind the move to keep my new house dark. It was the scarcity of first-run pictures that did the trick. No longer could the chain penalize distribs for selling me their product by refusing to play their pictures over their circuit. The chain needed all the product it could get."

Auction bidding and single selling, according to Weis, are "together the opportunity of a lifetime for the little independent." Let him build a house "comparable in class and capacity with his opposition," he declared, "and he can buy pictures as never before."

Par Execs Huddle On Prod. and Foreign Plans

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Full week of conferences of Paramount eastern, foreign and studio executives got under way yesterday (Monday) at the lot. Here are Barney Balaban, Adolph Zukor, Charles M. Reagan, George Weltner, Russell Holman, Frank Farley, Allen Jackson and Curtis Mitchell, all from the east or England.

Henry Ginsberg, studio topper, called semi-annual sessions which will take up foreign situation as well as release and production plans for coming season. Zukor will report on European trip and European chiefs will present hurdles to be overcome abroad.

EXHIBS PACE PRODUCT BEEFS

Reissues, once considered harmless filler for occasional use in subsequent-run houses, are rapidly becoming an industry cause-celebre. Exhibs throughout the country are rising in wrath at the number of reissues they claim they are forced to play because of shortage of new product, Hollywood's screenwriters are squawking that the plethora of oldies is throwing them out of work, and the public is unmistakably showing signs of starting a slow burn at the number of repeat bookings being foisted on them.

While figures belie the product shortage that has exhibs up in arms —there were 405 releases in 1946, as compared with 377 the previous year —there's no doubt that plenty of operators aren't getting an adequate supply of relatively good quality films and are forced to turn to the oldies in large number. One of the reasons, of course, is a jamup of product awaiting first-runs in some territories. Another factor, however, is exhibitor acknowledgment—despite the squawks—that they are frequently better off with a reissue than with a minor company's "B."

Exhibs know the necessity of using the oldies ties up with the gath-

'Abie' a Wallflower Comes Time to Dance As Exhibs Sit It Out Too

Although United Artists salesmen piled up a flock of contracts for "Abie's Irish Rose," Bing Crosby production is suffering from lack of dates. In other words, many exhibs are refusing to play the pic but are tardy in setting dates. Reticence is believed by UA execs to tie up with publicity anent the film since the exhibition contracts were signed.

One of the greatest blows to the film has been refusal of any of the five major affiliated circuits to book it so far, with the exception of a group of Paramount partners, particularly in the south. It has had no dates from Warner Bros., RKO, Loew's and 20th-Fox affiliated houses.

"Abie" has been condemned by the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith with other groups as caricaturing racial types.

B'nai B'rith Nix

Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith puts a definite nix on "Abie's Irish Rose" in the January issue of its Washington Newsletter, declaring the film was "not only distasteful to people of refinement but showed no originality of any kind." The original story had "merely been set in post-V-E Day locale," the publica-

RODGERS HOLDS CHI MEET ON 'YEARLING'

Sales policy for Metro's "Yearling" will be set next Monday (3) and Tuesday in Chicago, when M-G veepee over sales William F. Rodgers huddles with five Metro divisional sales managers and homeoffice execs at the Drake hotel.

Although Metro sales officials declined to comment in advance on what terms would be set for the picture, it's believed "Yearling" will be sold like any top M-G picture but given special treatment via big and individualized ballyhoo campaigns. No plans have been set as for roadshowing it in any situation outside Los Angeles, where it's currently playing its fifth week on a two-a-day, reserved-seat policy. Film is also in its first week at Radio City Music Hall, N. Y., and is slated to open in late February at an unspecified Balaban & Katz house in Chi.

Following the Chi meet, Rodgers will head for the Coast to look over forthcoming product, both completed pictures and those still in early stages of production. He'll also huddle with studio execs and is expected back at the homeoffice in six weeks.

Big 5 Surprised at U. S. Concession Of Theatre Replacements Without Govt. OK; Indies Beef on 'Pressure'

The Big Five extracted one surprising plum from the anti-trust pie during New York hearings last week, when the Government made the unsought concession that the quintet could replace existing theatres without even the formality of judicial sanction. Indie exhibs, on the heels of the backtrack, are squawking that it may be used to pressure higher distrib terms. By the threat of building plushier houses closer to recalcitrant exhibs, in the guise of replacing smaller, remoter houses, this could be done, exhibs asserted.

Otherwise, the Big Five drew little satisfaction from the court's impatient reaction to their pitch for a delay in competitive selling and a switch in a number of the decree's provisions. The indie exhibs, who for the most part were just as anxious as the majors to stall competitive bidding, felt that the majors had gained a solid advantage in what they thought was too free a hand obtained through the concession. It would, some said, restore economic power in the majors, outside court control, which could be again wielded to jack up rentals.

Court's Surprise

Extract from the minutes of the hearing, in which the Government made its concession though generally opposing the Big Five's proposal that they be permitted to acquire houses to protect investments or move into

Sues Wurtzel, 20th, Charges 'Millions' Theft

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Paul Gordon filed a $100,000 damage suit against Sol Wurtzel and 20th-Fox, charging infringement of copyright in the filming and distribution of "Dangerous Millions."

Plaintiff declares the picture was copied from a legit play, "Adam's Children," which he says he bought from the author, Victor Keleman, seven years ago.

Republic Signs With Loew's On Foreign Distrib

Republic, in a move to expand foreign distribution of its product, has signed with Loew's International for the latter to handle release of its pictures in a number of foreign countries. Deal follows by a week the signing of Loew's to handle all foreign distribution of Enterprise Pictures.

While full details of the Republic pact were unavailable, pending inking of the contract later this week, it's believed that Loew's will take over many of the franchises through which Rep pix are currently released in foreign countries. Rep itself has branches in only nine countries, all in Latin America, including Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Mexico, Peru, Puerto Rico, Colombia, Panama and Trinidad, while franchise-holders in six other countries have distributed Rep films. Sir Alexander Korda's British Lion Films, for example, distribute Rep product in England and British Empire Films release Rep pix in Australia and New Zealand.

Other franchiseholders handle Rep films in Cuba, Spain, South Africa and Venezuela. Until now, Rep has been cut off from most other countries and it's to get a foothold in those markets, such as France and the Near and Far East, that the company pacted with Loew's. Latter has the largest foreign staff among the major companies.

Loew's will also handle 16m distribution of Rep product abroad. Rep International prexy R. W. Altschuler has been interested in narrow-gauge operation for some time but has been stymied until now by the lack of adequate distribution facilities. He had been dickering with RKO for the latter to take over 16m distribution but that deal reportedly fell through when the contract with Metro was signed.

Eagle-Lion Sets Premiere Dates

Eagle-Lion Films has set preem dates for the first four of its pix. "The Adventuress," J. Arthur Rank film, is slated to hit first-run houses on national day-and-date openings March 17. "Lost Honeymoon," Bette Stone starrer, is set for March 29. "It's a Joke, Son," teeoff pic for the company, curtain-raised in Austin, San Antonio and Houston on Jan. 21, while "Bedelia" dual premiered Jan. 29 in Harrisburg and Reading, Pa.

"Bedelia" moves ahead of "Joke" in New York, with the British pic due to move into the Victoria following windup of 20th-Fox's "Wake Up and Dream." Meanwhile, E-L continued to augment its staff, adding Jerome Hodes as assistant to special sales rep M. J. Weisfeldt. Hodes for many years was on the RKO sales staff.

Bernhard's Buy Of 3 Exchanges Seen Key To Distrib Expansion

Purchase by Film Classics last week of three exchanges formerly operated franchiseholders was seen as furthering intentions of Joe Bernhard eventually to switch the company from its present role of distributing reissues to handling new films. Bernhard, former head of Warner Bros. Theatres and partner of Milton Sperling in a WB indie producing unit, recently bought into FC. He was elected prez of the company by its board last week.

Bernhard has been reported negotiating with David O. Selznick to handle physical distribution of Selznick product via FC and perhaps do part of the selling. FC is also been huddling with other indie producers, it is understood, on distribution of their films, although he has no thought of abandoning the reissue business at the moment.

Three new exchanges acquired by Bernhard give FC 10 of its own branches, with those in other keys still operated by franchiseholders. New acquisitions are in Portland, Seattle and Washington, D. C.

U HOLDS 3 MEETS TO SET SALES POLICIES

Universal has launched a series of three sales meets to set the company's distribution policy for the next half year. First of the huddles, chairmanned by William A. Scully, veepee in charge of sales, opened Monday (27) at the Mark Hopkins hotel, San Francisco. Others are slated for Chicago, Feb. 7-8, and New York thereafter.

Frisco meet is attended by A. J. Cohen, assistant general sales manager; John Joseph, national pub-ad director; Maurice Bergman, eastern ad-pub chief; and district managers Foster Blake and Barney Rose. Branch managers of Los Angeles, Denver, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland are also present.

"The Egg and I," top bracketed U-I film, will come in for heavy gabbing. Scully aims to carefully pick first-run spots "to prove the picture's boxoffice merit." Releasing plans for the film are to be announced in New York following the confabs.

"Boomerang" is gripping, real-life melodrama, told in semi-documentary style. It's the third such fact-fiction production by Louis de Rochemont for 20th-Fox release and carries plenty of entertainment punch for all situations. Based on a still unsolved murder case in Bridgeport, Conn., plot is backed up with strong cast and exploitation values to make it thoroughly saleable as suspenseful, thrilling whodunit.

Dana Andrews heads the convincing cast and furnishes a stout marquee name. His role is realistic and a top performance job. While carrying a fictional name as state's attorney, the role, in real life, has its counterpart in Homer Cummings, who went on from the state post to become Attorney-General of the United States. Case on which plot is based deals with murder of a Bridgeport priest and how the prosecuting attorney establishes the innocence of the law's only suspect. No attempt is made to fasten a phoney ending on tale, picture leaving case still unsolved as in real life.

Richard Murphy's script gives Elia Kazan's direction a solid foundation. All the leads have the stamp of authenticities. The dialog and situations further the factual technique.

Lee J. Cobb shows up strongly as chief detective, harassed by press and politicians alike while trying to carry out his duties. Jane Wyatt has only a few scenes as the wife of Andrews but makes them count. Arthur Kennedy is great as the law's suspect. Cara Williams, Sam Levene, Taylor Holmes, Robert Keith, Ed Begley and others reflect careful casting.

Lensing was done on location at Stamford, Conn., the locale adding to realism that features entire production. Credit for ace camera work goes to Norbert Brodine. Other contributions are in keeping with the general excellence. Brog.

Song of Scheherazade

(SONGS; COLOR)

Hollywood, Jan. 25.

Universal-International release of Edward Kaufman production (associate producer, Edward Dodds). Stars Yvonne DeCarlo, Brian Donlevy, Jean Pierre Aumont; features Eve Arden, Philip Reed, John Qualen, Charles Kullman. Written and directed by Walter Reisch. Story inspired by N. Rimsky-Korsakoff music; camera (Technicolor), Hal Mohr, William V. Skall; editor, Frank Gose; musical adaptation and direction, Miklos Rozsa; lyrics, Jack Brooks; choreography, Tillie Losch. Previewed in Hollywood, Jan. 24, '47. Running time, 105 MINS.

The music of N. Rimsky-Korsakoff and eye value of brilliant color give "Song of Scheherazade" entertainment elements not otherwise found in the fluffy, ineptly directed and played story. Production dress has plenty of sight appeal by virtue of magnificent color lensing by Hal Mohr and William V. Skall. Score contains 10 Rimsky-Korsakoff tunes, ably adapted to the screen by Miklos Rozsa. Three, with lyrics by Jack Brooks, get the benefit of Charles Kullman's fine tenor voice.

Basis for display of composer's music is his supposed escapades during a week in Spanish Morocco. Story has a comic-opera flavor, and Walter Reisch's direction of his own script often wavers in the treatment of plot elements and characters. Adding to ludicrous spots are a variety of accents, topped by the Broadwayese and 20th century flippancy tossed into the 1865 period by Eve Arden. Plot purports to be based on an incident in Rimsky-Korsakoff's life, when he was a midshipman in the Russian navy, and is aimed at showing the influence the background had on his music.

Jean Pierre Aumont plays the young composer. Yvonne DeCarlo is the Spanish dancer with whom he falls in love during the week's adventuring. Miss DeCarlo has three dance numbers, terped to musical accompaniment of "Gypsy Song," "Fandango" and "Scheherazade." Latter is elaborately staged for the finale. Charles Kullman is seen as the ship's doctor who encourages the composer. Role gives him chance to highlight "Song of India," "Hymn to the Sun," both with new lyrics by Jack Brooks, and "Fandango."

Brian Donlevy does a chain-smoking captain of the training ship who tries to make his students the pride of the Russian navy. Philip Reed is a Russian prince and midshipman. Reed and Aumont are called upon to stage a whip duel, only spot of action in the footage, and not too exciting at that, over the favor of Miss DeCarlo. Miss Arden is Miss DeCarlo's wise-cracking mother, who lives a fashionable life while her daughter supports the family by dancing incognito in a waterfront cafe. Richard Lane, ship's lieutenant; John Qualen and others in the cast do their best with characters.

The Edward Kaufman production has been beautifully dressed. Brog.

Miniature Reviews

"Boomerang" (20th). Thrilling fact-fiction melodrama with high boxoffice content. Told in semi-documentary style.

"Songs of Scheherazade" (Songs; color) (U-I.) Costumer with music of Rimsky-Korsakoff for customer appeal.

"Dead Reckoning" (Col.). Satisfying whodunit with Humphrey Bogart, Lizabeth Scott; good boxoffice.

"The Shop At Sly Corner" (British-Lion). Picturization of London legit hit dubious b.o. factor for American market.

"Trail to San Antone" (Songs) (Rep). Routine Gene Autry fare.

"Wild Country" (PRC). Dull oatuner in the Eddie Dean series.

"I Live As I Please" (Superfilm) (Italian-made). Weak operatic film slated only for Italian-language patrons.

Dead Reckoning

(ONE SONG)

Columbia release of Sidney Biddell production. Stars Humphrey Bogart, Lizabeth Scott; features Morris Carnovsky, Charles Cane, William Prince, Marvin Miller, Wallace Ford. Directed by John Cromwell. Screenplay, Oliver H. P. Garrett and Steve Fisher, from adaptation by Gerald Adams and Sidney Biddell of story by Allen Rivkin; camera, Leo Tover; editor, Gene Havlick; song, Allan Roberts and Doris Fisher; musical score, Marlin Skiles. At Criterion, N. Y., Jan. 23, '47. Running time, 100 MINS.

Rip Murdock	Humphrey Bogart
Coral Chandler	Lizabeth Scott
Martinelli	Morris Carnovsky
Lieutenant Kincaid	Charles Cane
Johnny Drake	William Prince
Krause	Marvin Miller
McGee	Wallace Ford
Father Logan	James Bell
Louis Ord	George Chandler
Lt. Col. Simpson	William Forrest
Hyacinth	Ruby Dandridge

Humphrey Bogart's typically tense performance raises this average whodunit quite a few notches. Film has good suspense and action, and some smart direction and photography. Despite occasional slowdowns or a mawkish bit, pic will satisfy the mystery fans. It should do okay.

Columbia borrowed Bogart from Warners to play the role of a tough ex-paratrooper captain returning home with a pal to be honored by the War Dept. for their achievements. When the pal jumps the D. C. train, to go home instead, the perplexed captain follows to find himself enmeshed in gangland, murders and romance. His pal, he learns, had enlisted under an alias because he was convicted of a killing. Two days after said pal arrives home, he gets bumped off.

Determined to solve the mystery and avenge his friend, the captain digs into his pal's haunts. He meets up with the nitery singer the pal loved, and with the tough club operator who has some mysterious hold on the girl as well as some vague part in the friend's disappearance. Bogart's interference brings about another death, several beatings to himself from the club-owner's gang, and a love-affair between singer and paratrooper, before the several mysteries are unveiled and the stories jelled. Gunplay and chase figure in the proceedings to heighten the interest. Script uses a flashback method for part of the telling, to add variety.

Bogart absorbs one's interest from the start as a tough, quick-thinking ex-skyjumper. Lizabeth Scott stumbles occasionally as the nitery singer, but on the whole gives a persuasive, sirenish performance. Morris Carnovsky is suavely unscrupulous as the gang chief, and Marvin Miller sufficiently sadistic as his somewhat shellshocked henchman. George Chandler and Charles Cane are realistic in supporting roles, while Wallace Ford makes a real portrait out of a safecracker bit.

John Cromwell's direction is sure and smooth, except where the script occasionally falters. Camera work of Leo Tover has some unusual shots and is uniformly good. Song, "Either It's Love Or It Isn't," sung by Miss Scott, has the appealing, sultry quality to suit the film's mood. Bron.

The Shop at Sly Corner

(BRITISH-MADE)

London, Jan. 23.

British Lion release of George King production. Stars Oscar Homolka, Derek Farr, Muriel Pavlow. Directed by George King. Music by George Melachrino. Screenplay by Katherine Strueby, from play by Edward Percy; additional dialog, Reginald Long. Camera, Hone Glendinning. At Studio One, London, Jan. 22, '47. Running time, 91 MINS.

Descius Heiss	Oscar Homolka
Robert Graham	Derek Farr
Margaret Heiss	Muriel Pavlow
Archie Fellowes	Kenneth Griffith
Corder Morris	Manning Whiley
Mrs. Catt	Kathleen Harrison
Major Elliot	Garry Marsh
Professor Vanetti	Jan Van Loewen
Ruby Towser	Irene Handl
Inspector Robson	Johnnie Schofield

Biggest boxoffice asset of this picture is fact that play, on which it is based, has run in London's West End for over two years. Absence of Oscar Homolka from screen for considerable period makes marquee value problematical. Picture will have to rely mainly on word-of-mouth and a 15-minute cut would speed up story and help considerably. Film gathers pace and is truly cinematic in the second half, but the first part is deadly slow and too explanatory without explaining much. More, too, should have been made of the romance between the two young lovers. This part of the story is unworthy of the talents of Derek Farr and Muriel Pavlow.

Homolka plays Heiss, the kindly old Frenchman, owner of an antique shop at Sly Corner, apparently interested only in beautiful things and the violin playing of his daughter. But now and again stolen jewels find their way to Sly Corner and Archie Fellowes, assistant in the shop, discovers that Heiss is an escaped prisoner from Devil's Island. Threatening to reveal this to the daughter, Archie systematically blackmails the old man, and climax comes when the young scoundrel decides he wants to marry the girl. Heiss strangles the blackmailed and, with the help of a friendly crook, dumps the body, which is discovered by the police. Scotland Yard takes up the chase, which ends in a box in a concert hall. Heiss commits suicide while his daughter is winning laurels playing the Mendelssohn Concerto.

Homolka gives an excellent performance as the shrewd, kindly fence. He makes real his love for his daughter and his passion for beautiful things. Kenneth Griffith reenacts his stage part and needs toning down for the screen. Derek Farr and Muriel Pavlow could do no more than they did with their nebulous parts, and two character gems come, as usual, from Kathleen Harrison and Irene Handl.

Direction is competent and production has a nice quality. Frederick Grinke was responsible for the violin playing of the Mendelssohn Concerto and Schubert's Ave Maria.

Picture should play to profitable business here, and may fit into dual spots in America where Homolka's name may draw. Cane.

Trail to San Antone

(SONGS)

Republic release of Armand Schaefer production. Stars Gene Autry; features Peggy Stewart, Sterling Holloway, William Henry. Directed by John English; original screenplay, Jack Natteford, Luci Ford; songs, Deuce Spriggens, Sid Robin, Joe Burke, Marty Symes, Spade Cooley, Cindy Walker, Autry; camera, William Bradford; editor, Charles Craft. Tradeshown in N. Y., Jan. 24, '47. Running time, 67 MINS.

Gene Autry	Gene Autry
Kit Barlow	Peggy Stewart
Droopy Stearns	Sterling Holloway
Rick Malloy	William Henry
Ted Malloy	John Duncan
Cal Young	Tristram Coffin
The "Commodore"	Dorothy Vaughan
Sheriff Jones	Edward Keane
Sam	Ralph Peters
Themselves	Cass County Boys and Champion

"San Antone" is standard fare for the oatuner circuit. Made from the pat formula of Gene Autry vehicles, pic canters along a simple story line with a full quota of cow-crooning and a moderate amount of knuckle-scraping and hoofbeating. Photography is marked by some exceptional scenic shots but production dress in general is at the usual level for low-budgeters.

In this one, Autry plays a horse breeder who's concerned with the rehabilitation of a crippled jockey. Pic's villain is a wild stallion that breaks into the stables and leads astray the mare entry in the big race. Introducing a postwar note into westerners, Autry conducts his search for the horses via airplane and, in a climax that won't be believed even though seen, lassos the stray horse from the air. Windup is a stock racetrack sequence ending in a photo-finish for plenty of excitement. Hardly discernible thread of romance between Autry and a neighboring femme rancher never intrudes long enough to slow the action.

Autry registers okay in the action sequences and handles three vocals in his usual style, with the Cass County trio backing up nicely. Peggy Stewart as the heart interest is a looker but not given much to do. Sterling Holloway furnishes the comic angles in broad enough manner for easy absorption. Rest of the cast is adequate. Herm.

'Brotherhood of Man'

"Brotherhood of Man," animated color cartoon short discussing the equality of mankind from a scientific basis, is a successful approach to an unusual subject, and an entertaining film to boot. Based on the w.k. pamphlet, "Races of Mankind," by Columbia profs Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish, the 10-minute short shows similarity in races through body makeup, blood types, brain, etc., and differences caused only by environment, training, etc., to preach in a simple, highly effective way the theme of racial tolerance. In concept, script, drawing and animation, the film shows cleverness, imagination and humor. Sometimes it's a little naive, and in a sense too sketchy and incomplete. But subject is vast, and on the whole the cartoon does an excellent job.

Film, previewed in N. Y. Thursday (23), was produced by Stephen Bosustow for United Productions, with Robert Cannon directing, and screen story by Ring Lardner, Jr., John Hubley and Phil Eastman. Cartoon is being sponsored for domestic use by the United Automobile Workers Union (CIO), and the War Dept. civil affairs division has just bought it for re-orientation purposes in occupied territory. Bron.

Wild Country

(SONGS)

PRC release of Jerry Thomas production. Stars Eddie Dean; features Roscoe Ates, Peggy Wynn, Douglas Fowley. Directed by Ray Taylor. Screenplay, Arthur E. Orloff; camera, Robert Cline; songs, Dean, Hal Blair, Pete Gates; editor, Hugh Winn. Reviewed in N. Y., Jan. 22, '47. Running time, 60 MINS.

Eddie Dean	Eddie Dean
Soapy	Roscoe Ates
Martha Devery	Peggy Wynn
Clark Varney	Douglas Fowley
Rif Caxton	I. Stanford Jolley
Josh Huckings	Lee Roberts
Sam	Forrest Mathews
Spindle	Bill Fawcett
Marshall Thayer	Henry Hall
Brown	Charles Jordan
First Guard	Richard Cramer
Dilling	Gus Taute
The Sunshine Boys	Themselves

With a slow story and indifferent acting, the latest in the Eddie Dean series is considerably below the standard of its predecessors. Sagebrusher appears headed for the lower half of double bills.

Replete with such dialog gems as "they must've taken the short cut," "Wild Country" deals with Dean, a U. S. marshal, and his pal Soapy (Roscoe Ates), who track down Stan Jolley, an escaped convict who kills the sheriff responsible for his time in stir. Conniving with the local tavernkeeper (Douglas Fowley), Jolley conspires to knock off Peggy Wynn, daughter of the late sheriff, and take over her ranch, but Dean foils the thugs, of course. Trite story is not improved by three so-so tunes.

Acting of Peggy Wynn is amateurish. Dean and Ates are adequate while Fowley and Jolley register. Production values are in keeping with the low budget.

I Live As I Please

(ITALIAN-MADE)

Superfilm release of S. A. Grande Film production. Stars Ferruccio Tagliavini; features Silvana Jachino, Carlo Campanini, Margherita Seglin, Carlo Michelussi. Directed by Carlo Bugiani. Story, Mario Mattoli; camera, Rodolfo Lombardi. At Cinema Verdi, N. Y. Running time, 87 MINS.

(In Italian; English Titles)

Except for houses catering to Italian-language patrons, this pic is no b.o. factor in the U. S. Music lovers may derive some satisfaction from the highly-touted operatic tenor of Ferruccio Tagliavini, but that's the sole commendable aspect of this film.

Hackneyed story is framed within a primitive production that's marked by poor thesping, mediocre camera and just passable sound recording. English titles are adequate.

Tagliavini plays an operatically-inclined peasant who's made the victim of a practical joke by his brother and gets packed off to Rome, where he thinks an opera contract is awaiting him. He discovers the hoax but makes good regardless. Rich and famous, he returns to his native village and marries his erstwhile music teacher. Herm.

Metro's Lead

$127,830,012. This compares with $120,835,889 for '45.

Pre-production expenditures for Metro's British studio was $828,079 to be amortized by future productions. Federal tax bite added to $12,929,627 of which $9,832,083 is the regular income nick and $3,097,544 excess profits taxes.

Mayer's 500G Again Paces Salaries for Pix

Metro production chief Louis B. Mayer, as usual, topped the salaried earnings of the entire film industry for the year ending Aug. 31, 1946, with his yearly contractual salary of $500,000 giving him a take of almost $10,000 a week on salary alone. In addition, Mayer gets a cut of the total gross profits of Loew's, Inc., which, in previous years, has upped his total earnings to more than $900,000.

Mayer's salary, along with those of other Metro chiefs, was revealed in the annual company proxy statement, distributed last week in advance of the annual stockholders' meet on Feb. 27. Statement disclosed that 52 Metro execs received salaries in excess of $100,000 and 90 earned pay between $50,000-$100,000. Salary of Sam Katz, exec producer and reported heir to Mayer's top production post at the studio, was not listed in the statement since he's neither an officer nor director of the company.

Second highest on the salary roster was prexy Nicholas M. Schenck's $224,767. J. Robert Rubin, veepee and general counsel, followed with $215,642, and exec producer Eddie Mannix received $202,607. Exec producer Al Lichtman and veepee Benjamin Thau, assistant to Mayer, were next in line with $200,000 each. Veepee-treasurer Charles C. Moskowitz received $128,428; veepee over theatre operations Joseph R. Vogel received $116,428; secretary Leopold Friedman earned $110,357, and veepee over sales William F. Rodgers followed with $114,714. In addition, Metro deposited in escrow $66,250 for the year, which may be paid to Rodgers if the company's gross rentals exceed a certain amount.

Metro's total exec pay for the year, including fixed expense allowance, totaled $2,006,725 (exclusive of Mayer's salary, since the latter is neither an officer nor director). Of this, $1,965,625 was paid to officers and $41,100 to directors who were not officers. For the first time, Mayer this year was given the title of "managing director of production." Fact that he's neither a director nor officer reportedly excluded him from any cut in pay that might result if Metro ever takes a loss.

Metro also laid out $206,649 for legal services for the year. Of this, $55,345 went to Alvord & Alvord, Washington; $26,503 to George W. Cohen, Los Angeles; $20,800 to Oscar Cummins, L. A.; $58,860 to Davis, Polk, Wardell, Sunderland & Kiendl, N. Y., and $45,140 to Loeb & Loeb, L. A. In addition, the company paid Central Casting in Hollywood $46,757 for extras' service; $46,280 for certified public accountants, and $55,000 to Serge Semenenko, Boston, for "services in connection with financing."

Several of the top execs received substantial pay hikes for the year, with Thau leading this category with an increase of $24,892 over 1945. Vogel's salary was upped $12,142, and Moskowitz, who became treasurer upon the death of David Bernstein Nov. 10, 1945, received a hike of $8,500. Marvin Schenck, veepee and eastern talent director, received a raise of $4,285, giving him a total salary of $82,285.

Proxy statement also disclosed that Nick Schenck had exercised his stock purchase option by picking up 15,000 shares on Dec. 27 and 31 for $600,000. In addition, under the 3-1 stock split, he received two additional shares for each share purchased. On the dates of the purchases, the closing market prices of the shares Schenck bought were 33½ and 34⅛, respectively.

Only point of business on the agenda for the forthcoming meeting is the election of 10 directors, with all incumbents renominated. These include Friedman, Eugene W. Leake, Moskowitz, William A. Parker, Rodgers, Rubin, Nick Schenck, Vogel, David Warfield and Henry Rogers Winthrop.

N.Y.'S KNOCKDOWN CENSOR FIGHT

Up to 8,000 Exhibs Participating In Polio Collections; Drive Big

"March of Dimes" drive of the motion picture division is rolling along in the middle of the campaign week with between 7,000-8,000 theatres taking audience collections for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, belying early indications that a paucity of exhibs would take an active part in the 1947 campaign. Week started last Friday (24) and winds up tomorrow (Thursday).

Although the number of theatres is far below the record 12,200 that took audience collections last year, results wired into New York headquarters so far reveal the film division may contribute a large share to the record $24,000,000 goal set for the campaign. Many exhibs have reported their first day's collections exceeded the entire week's drive in 1946. One 950-seater collected $211 the first day, as against an opening day last year of only $11.83, and a deluxe house in another part of the country raked in $1,859 this year, as against $1,096 in 1946.

One of the prime motives in the all-out cooperation being given the drive this year is the prizes announced for leading exhibs in the campaign. Emil C. Jensen, director of the film division, has announced three separate contests, with prizes going to exhibs on the basis of dimes collected for each seat in the theatre; percentage of increase in total collections over last year, and percentage of increase according to the size of the theatres. Prizes, contributed gratis by manufacturers, include items ranging from a camp trailer to a television set.

Basil O'Connor, prexy of the National Foundation, meanwhile declared the fact that only about half the nation's theatres had decided to take audience collections this year, claiming the adverse decision of the recalcitrants was "tragic." O'Connor said most indie exhibs had agreed to plate-passing, but that the large chains had banned it. Contention by circuit owners that the public resented audience collections "obviously could not apply to collections for infantile paralysis," he said, "since those collections have increased each year over the last five years."

Metro's Mpls. Policy On Moveovers Hikes Chances for Indies

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

Independent neighborhood and suburban houses in Twin Cities get their biggest break in years as result of new Metro policy not to permit the Minnesota Amus. Co. (Paramount circuit) to move over any of its long, first-run pictures from their original stands. At same time, company probably cuts itself off from considerable revenue and makes booking problem for Minnesota Amus. Co., which likely also will be affected adversely in financial way.

As far as M-G pictures are now concerned, it means that their downtown first-runs will be limited to many fewer weeks, sending the films to the neighborhood houses with much of their initial brat-run public demand probably still unsatisfied and a better play likely for the independent uptowners.

One example pointed out is current "Till Clouds Roll By," Radio City attraction. Despite its terrific business it can only be played two weeks at that house because of numerous other commitments. That limits its loop run to a fortnight whereas, previously, it probably would have remained an additional three or four weeks at moveover theatres at same admission prices as extension of first-run.

'MARTHA' GOES TO MEXICO

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

American Eagle will shoot its first picture, "Martha," in Mexico City, starting March 26, with a budget of $1,000,000.

Tuneflm will co-star Jan Kiepura and Marta Eggerth.

Lang to Produce '777' As a Documentary

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Otto Lang draws the producer chore on a factual story, tentatively titled "Call Northside 777," to be filmed by 20th-Fox with the same true-story technique that was employed in "13 Rue Madeleine" and "House on 92nd Street."

Most of the picture, dealing with the killing of a policeman, will be shot in Chicago.

Ent. May Up to 8 Or More in 1948

Charles Einfeld, currently in New York, disclosed last week that Enterprise, in which he is partnered with David Loew, may step up its production to eight films or more next year. Indie unit is slated to make six this year, its first. Einfeld pointed out that the Enterprise lot could easily handle 10 to 12 pictures, and even 16 films, in the $1,000,000 class, although there is no intention of turning to pix in that budget category.

Einfeld has been talking to sales execs in New York, seeking a general salesmanager for Enterprise. Carl Leserman, who was originally spoken of for the post, has bowed out. Bob Taplinger, v.p. in charge of advertising-publicity, is also in New York, buddiing with flack toppers at United Artists and Metro, which will handle unit's product in domestic and foreign fields, respectively.

Einfeld intends to leave New York for the coast Friday (31).

FORMER AIDES DIVIDE WILKIE DUTIES AT PAR

Paramount home office flacks were in something of a stew last week in the wake of a general reshuffling of duties among the ad-pub staffers. Chief gripe appeared to be the failure to fill the spot left vacant by the resignation of Al Wilkie, former publicity head, and the spread of his chores to other Par flacks following a general office huddle.

In the course of the shakeup, C. N. Odell was named to head a newly created press department, and Gordon Swarthout, director of special events, was tagged coordinator of the's publicity and exploitation activities. Swarthout will direct a service dept. which will handle all research work and conduct the physical operation of both publicity and exploitation.

Odell, it's understood, was considered for Wilkie's spot but the deal fell through. He's been with Par since 1931 and has been in charge of newspaper contacts. Publicity duties henceforth are to be split among Odell, Aileen Brenon, who heads the mag section, and the radio dept. under the direction of Burt Champion in the east and Martin Lewis on the Coast.

New photo dept. has been set up to be managed by Rex Taylor, formerly eastern pictorial coordinator. His assistant will be Ed Sullivan who, incidentally, is not to be confused with the Ed Sullivan p.a. of the same name. Other flacks continue in their posts without change.

IA's Exec Meet in Seattle

Regular mid-winter meeting of the general exec board of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees convenes Monday (27) in Seattle for a two-week session.

Union execs, headed by Richard F. Walsh, prez; William P. Raoul, general secretary-treasurer, and Thomas J. Shea, assistant prez, left New York last week to direct the meetings.

TRIPLE FRONT IN STATE STEW

New York state censorship kettle kept bubbling this week as a crossfire of developments on a triple front continued fomenting a knockdown fight. Attorneys for Howard Hughes filed application to dismiss defenses raised by municipal authorities in the suit to restrain them from interfering with city exhibition of "The Outlaw" and, and simultaneously, expressed determination to push the trial of United Artists' action to compel Harry Brandt to play the film in three Broadway houses.

Meanwhile, repercussions of the "Outlaw" battle were heard in Albany, where a bill was introduced to extend the power of the State Education Dept.'s motion picture division to revoke a pic's license when newspaper or magazine ads are adjudged obscene, sacrilegious, tending to corrupt morals or incite to crime. That move, recommended by the Board of Regents when it handed out the recent slap at the New York City License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding, is certain to kick up dust with civil liberties units already exposed to any extension of censorship powers.

Fielding sounded off during the week against "unwarranted agitation" to limit his powers, claiming that in the past year the theatrical industry and his department enjoyed

WB's Faith in Britain Shown in ABC Buy, Sez Jack Warner to Critics

London, Jan. 28.

Striking back at English film industry spokesmen who have been urging the "de-Americanization" of the Warner Bros. controlled Associated British Picture Corp., Jack L. Warner asserted in a luncheon speech today (28) that his company acquired its interest in ABC in 1940 "when many others had the same opportunity to come to the aid of ABC but did not share with us the faith we had in the future of Great Britain." The WB exec spoke before an assemblage of top-ranking film personages, including Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, high government officials, editors and film critics at the luncheon given in his honor by directors of the ABC.

Pointing out that WB's stock purchases in the ABC have always been approved by the British government, Warner declared that "credit should be given, rather than discredit, for what Warner Bros. have done, not only in aiding this great ABC theatre circuit with its supervision, but also in supplying it and other exhibitors in the United Kingdom with product as well."

Warner disclosed that ABC plans include production of six pictures at its Elstree studios, now under reconstruction. Although produced under banner of ABC, Warner stated that WB personnel will be in charge with the Hollywood studio making leading stars, directors and producers. In the UK, Warner said, these six pictures will constitute a part of Warners' regular program and will not be tagged on as an addition to WB's UK release schedule. ABC's share in the world receipts of these films will be payable in dollars to the corporation in London.

Warner leaves for the U. S. on the Queen Elizabeth tomorrow (29).

WB UNDER WRAPS OVER NEW NAMELESS WHODUNIT

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Hush-hush prevails at Warners where Alex Gottlieb is cooking up a mystery film in a mysterious way, with no publicity until the filming is complete.

Understood the nameless yarn is semi-documentary, along the lines of "13 Rue Madeleine" and "The House on 92nd Street."

Bigger Deal For Janney Book

Through a slight misunderstanding, author Russell Janney, who was to have received $100,000 for screen rights to his "Miracle of the Bells," will receive even more for the book than originally announced.

Under the original deal, consummated via mail between Janney and Jesse L. Lasky (who'll produce the film for RKO release), Janney was to get $100,000 plus a percentage. Janney, however, thought the percentage was to have been a cut of the gross after deduction of specific charges, whereas Lasky believed it was to have been a percentage of the net profits. Duo finally compromised on a deal upping the down payment to Janney to $125,000 and retaining the same percentage basis—but on the net.

Janney is to receive 5% of the net profit up to $4,000,000 after charges, and 10% of all over $4,000,000. Since the film is budgeted at $2,000,000, it's believed the initial distribution, exploitation, print charges, etc., will probably bring the budget up somewhat more than another million.

Under another unique provision of the deal, the initial $125,000 payment is to consist of a "rental," to be paid to Janney over a three-year period, for the use of his book. Deal does not constitute an outright purchase, but a lease of the film rights to "Miracle" for 20 years.

Warner's Medal of Merit

Washington, Jan. 28.

Award of the Medal of Merit to Jack L. Warner, vicepresident in charge of production at Warners, has been made by the War Dept. in recognition of his services from September, 1939, to September, 1943. Recruiting film writers and technicians for the armed forces, producer also supervised the production of hundreds of training films at the Warner studio.

Following Warner's return from Europe, presentation of the award will be made by Gen. Henry H. Arnold.

Jumping the Gun On Reviews Slated For Coast Thrash-Out

Charles Schlaifer, 20th-Fox pub-ad chief, and David Lipton, Universal publicity exec, were delegated by the Motion Picture Assn.'s eastern Public Information Committee last week to take up with the Coast PIC the problem of publications jumping the gun on release dates for reviews. Subject came up as a result of a newspaper review on a United Artists picture, which had UA pub-ad topper Paul Lazarus, Jr., considerably disturbed.

Schlaifer and Lipton, who were to leave New York for the Coast the following day, were instructed to huddle with the organization of studio pub-ad heads on finding a solution to pre-release of reviews when it is necessary to show a picture to other publications because of their early closing date. Lazarus' squawk was that the picture in question was not in its final form when reviewed by the tradepaper involved (not VARIETY or DAILY VARIETY).

Schlaifer was also elected to the chairmanship of the eastern PIC for a six-month term. Post rotates among pub-ad bosses. Lazarus had it during the preceding half-year. Glendon Allvine, MPA flack, was renamed exec secretary.

'Madeleine' Leads L.A. Biz With 96G In 4; 'Chase' $41,000 in 4, 'Guy' $37,000 in 5; Holdovers O.K. Too, 'Clouds' (3d) 55G

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Potent takeoff of "13 Rue Madeleine" in four houses is featuring the firstruns this week. Film looks like a smasheroo $96,000 or near on its initial frame, beating anything in other situations except holiday specials. "Chase" is also forte at $41,000 or near in the four small Music Halls. "Swell Guy" drew a fair $37,000 in five situations.

Roadshow of "Stairway to Haven" is not so bright with a $6,500 outlook for the week. Holdovers are generally good. Second frame of "Till Clouds," at three houses, looks a smart $55,000, while "Time, Place, Girl" in its second stanza is heading for a neat $47,000 at three spots. Fifth and final frame of "Wonderful Life" is sighting $28,000 in two locations. Sixth and final of "Blue Skies," also at two houses, is nearing $23,000.

"Return of Monte Cristo" is rolling up an okay $17,500 in its second and final canter. Moveover of "Razor's Edge" to two subsequent runs looks an okay $11,500. Among holdover roadshows, inauguration of downtown Palace for day-date showcasing of "Best Years," is proving socko, with first week of pic in spot sighting a great $32,000. Film adds another $14,000 for its fifth frame at the Beverly.

"Duel" is stronger in its current frame than last week in two situations, shooting for an immense $39,000. Fifth week of "Yearling" in one house points to a good $11,000.

'McGurk'-'Tracy' 12½G, Lead Mild Seattle

Seattle, Jan. 28.

The town is still going for "Jolson Story" at Liberty, currently in "fifth glorious week," as the advertisements state. At the Fifth Avenue "Strange Woman" is in second week with indications fair. Ditto for "Shocking Miss Pilgrim" at Paramount. "Razor's Edge" is holding at Blue Mouse for fifth okay stanza. "Brief Encounter" is doing second week at Music Box and so is "Dark Mirror" at Orpheum. None is at too terrific a pace, but holding steady.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (H-E) (800; 45-80)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (5th wk). Paced at swell $5,400. Last week got dandy $6,100.

Fifth Avenue (H-E) (2,349; 45-80) —"Strange Woman" (UA) (2d wk). Expected good $9,700. Got swank $14,900 last week.

Liberty (J&vH) (1,650; 45-80)—"Jolson Story" (Col) (5th wk). Nice pace. Indicative of fine $11,000. Last week, superb $11,500.

Music Box (H-E) (850; 45-80)—"Brief Encounter" (Br) and "Falcon's Adventure" (RKO) (2d wk). Anticipated fair $4,200. The pair got good $5,300 in opener.

Music Hall (H-E) (2,200; 45-80)—"Mighty McGurk" (M-G) and "Dick Tracy vs. Cueball" (RKO). Likely big $12,500. Last week, second of "Rage in Heaven" (M-G) and "Blondie Knows Best" (Col). Three days, okay $3,300.

Orpheum (H-E) (2,600; 45-80)—"Dark Mirror" (U) and "Allotment Wives" (Mono) (2d wk). Look for great $12,000. Last week this pair got big $15,400.

Palomar (Sterling) (1,350; 45-80)—"Plainsman and Lady" (Rep) and stage, headlining "Chinatown Phantasy Revue". Big $9,000.

Paramount (H-E) (3,039; 45-80)—"Miss Pilgrim" (20th) and "Strange Journey" (20th) (2d wk). Headed for good $8,400, after getting nice $13,200 in opener.

Roosevelt (Sterling) (800; 45-80)—"Time, Place and Girl" (WB) (3d wk). Indicated fair $3,500. Last week got nice $3,800.

Winter Garden (Sterling) (800; 25-50)—"3 Wise Fools" (M-G) and "Angel on Shoulder" (UA) (3d run). Expected okay $3,200. Last week, "Young Widow" (UA) and "Bowery" (20th) split with "3 Little Girls in Blue" (20th) and "Big Sleep" (WB) all 3d runs, mild $2,900.

Chicago's New Entries Look Good; 'Clouds' 35G, 'Verdict' 28G, 'Man' 60G

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Four new entries this week pushed out some holdovers which had been around since Christmas, making for pleasing results in most cases. Kingpin is "Man I Love" plus Diana Lynn on stage at Chicago which looks for around $60,000 for plump opening frame.

"Till the Clouds Roll By," at United Artists, is estimated at terrific $35,000, while Garrick's new one, "The Verdict," should do about $28,000 for nine days. Double at Palace of "Swell Guy" and "Vacation in Reno" is set at $20,000 or better.

"Best Years" and "Razor's Edge" continue best bets among the old ones here, with "Jolson Story" remaining as strong as any of them but coming in on short end due to small seater. Especially good weather toward end of week perked up what was almost a sleeper.

Estimates for Last Week

Apollo (B&K) (1,200; 65-85)—"Jolson Story" (Col) (6th wk). Long run not wearing this one out too much with solid $25,000. Last week, about same.

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 65-95)—"Man I Love" (WB) with Diana Lynn topping stage layout, good $60,000 (24) for hefty $80,000. Last week, "Blue Skies" (Par) and Burl Ives in seventh (4th wk) took $45,000.

Garrick (B&K) (900; 65-95)—"The Verdict" (WB). Opened Wednesday (22) to estimated $28,000 for nine days. Last week, "Return of Monte Cristo" (Col) (4th wk), fair $8,000 for five days.

Grand (RKO) (1,500; 65-95)—"Wonderful Life" (RKO) (5th wk). Could hold here; $15,000. Last week, passable $17,000.

Oriental (Essaness) (3,400; 65-95)—"Strange Woman" (UA) and Milt Herth Trio in stage revue (3d wk). Good $40,000. Last week, noble $49,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,500; 65-95)—"Swell Guy" (U) teamed with "Vacation in Reno" (RKO). Opened Tuesday (21) for $24,000 for 9 days. Last week, "Temptation" (U) and "Gentleman Joe Palooka" (Mono), so-so $10,000 for five days.

Rialto (Indie) (1,700; 65-95)—"Plainsman" (Par) and "Jungle Princess" (Par) (reissues) (3d wk). Fair over for second time under new policy at this house good for swell $17,-000. Last week, sweet $20,000.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 65-95)—"Time, Place, Girl" (WB) (3d wk). Hearty $20,000. Last week, about same.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,700; 65-95)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (5th wk). Still 5th week at $40,000. Last week, massive $43,000.

United Artists (B&K) (1,700; 65-95)—"Till the Clouds Roll By" (M-G). Opened Saturday (24). Should do sock $35,000. Last week, "Undercurrent" (M-G) (4th wk), sound $21,000.

Woods (Essaness) (1,200; 95-$1.20-$1.40-$1.80)—"Best Years of Lives" (RKO). Lofty $42,000, last week, fancy $45,000.

'Jolson' Set for 25G, K.C., Holdovers Doing Fine Too

Kansas City, Jan. 28.

"Jolson Story" at the Midland is the main new entry, all other first runs except the Tower holding over. Film is in without benefit of preview, however, and relying solely on radio and word-of-mouth in view of the continuing strike of the Kansas City Star-Times. Big seater is good only slightly affected by the lack of a newspaper, and "Jolson Story" is in for solid $25,000, and all holdovers. Weather which troubled exhibs so much early in the month has settled down to give the boxoffices a break for the time being.

Estimates for This Week

Esquire - Uptown - Fairway (Fox Midwest) (820, 2,043, 700; 45-65)—"Dark Mirror" (U) (2d wk), moderate $13,000. Last week $18,000 and a pleasant $18,000 for its first seven days.

Midland (Loew's) (3,500; 45-65)—"The Jolson Story" (Col) in Thursday for the first A release to hit town since the Star stilled. Opened strong and looks for $25,000, top figure and cinch holdover. Last week, "Gallant Blade" (U) and "Laugheyed Miracle" (M-G) ran up $17,000, bright.

Newman (Paramount) (1,900; 45-65)—"Blue Skies" (Par) (5th wk), $10,000, very good. Last week (4th) wind up was a strong $13,000, expected to close out after Tuesday, bringing in over $75,000 in its extended run for one of the all-time highs in this house.

Orpheum (RKO) (1,900; 45-65)—"It's a Wonderful Life" (RKO) (5th wk) $9,000, big money. Last week (4th) picture hung up $11,000. Will wind up run Tuesday, showing remarkable lasting power after a mild first week's figure.

Tower (Fox Joffee) (2,100; 45-65)—"Plainsman and the Lady" (Rep) and "Dangerous Millions" (20th) with variety bill on stage. Light $8,000. Last week, "Bringing Up Father" (Mono) and "My Dog Shep" (SG) with vaude. Average $9,000.

Kimo (Dickinson-Theatre Guild) (833; $1.20-$1.80-$2.40)—"Henry V" (UA) (3d wk). Closed its local showing Jan. 23 with $5,000 figure for third and final week. Total gross for the three weeks run hit $17,500.

Grosses Are Net

Film gross estimates, as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net, i.e., without the 20% tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U.S. amusement tax.

'Jolson' $27,000 Tops in L'ville

Louisville, Jan. 28.

Business good all over town. Head and shoulders above everything else is "Jolson Story" at the State. Picture was given outstanding exploitation, through record shops, disk programs on radio stations, and is paying off at the wicket. "Humoresque" opens at Mary Anderson Tues. (28). Strand getting fair trade with "Meet John Doe" and "Wife Wanted." H-O's are maintaining steady pace.

Estimates for This Week

Brown (4th Ave.-Loew's) (1,000; 40-60)—"Blue Skies" (Par) 2d wk as h.o. and 4th downtown week, still pulling 'em in for neat $4,000. Last week same, film managed good $5,000.

Kentucky (Switow) (1,000; 40-60)—"I've Always Loved You" (Rep) and "Two Smart People" (M-G) split with "Angel On My Shoulder" (UA) and "Two Years Before Mast" (Par), healthy $3,400. Last week, "Killers" (U) and "If I'm Lucky" (20th) split with "Martha Ivers" and "Black Beauty" (20th), good $3,300.

Mary Anderson (H-O) (1,000; 40-60)—"Humoresque" (WB) opens today Tues. (28). "Man I Love" (WB), solid $15,000 in 7 days. Last week, "Temptation" (U) and "Lady Confession" (20th) (2d wk), fair $8,000 after last week's satisfactory $11,000.

National (Standard) (2,400; 40-60) —"Temptation" (U) and "Lady Confession" (20th) (2d wk), fair $8,000 after last week's satisfactory $11,000.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,400; 40-60)—"Victorious" (Col) and "Buck" latching onto good $14,000 after last week's sock $19,000.

State (Loew's) (3,300; 40-60)—"Jolson Story" (Col), blanketing the town with sock take, likely terrific $27,000 in eight days. Last week, "Heart" (M-G) and "Blondie's Big Moment" (Col), fair $15,000.

Strand (Fourth Avenue) (1,200; 40-60)—"Meet John Doe" (FC) (reissue) and "Wife Wanted" (Mono), resident hoppers. Last week "Bride Leloer's Daughters" (UA) and "Fabulous Suzanne" (Rep), about same.

Pitt Befogged by Slump, 'Woman' 22G, 'Doll' 12G, 'Wake Up' 9G, 'Beast' 12½G

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

Bulk of this week's biz is a weekend concentration, plus a subsequent slump, and there won't be much better-than-average showings despite the fact that town has four brand new pix. Best looks for "Strange Woman" at Penn but it won't do much more than "Notorious" in second week. Stanley, also newcomer, however, Warner has the outstanding entry in "Beast With Five Fingers." Fulton is getting a "Sleep" from the horror crowd. "Wake Up and Dream" will wind up above expectations. Harris, with "Magnificent Doll" below them at the Harris.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 60-70) "Wake Up and Dream" (20th). Got a break when only one of town's three critics in a creative fit was a panning. Other two just let it slide through with polite-reader. That helped since "Wake Up" has a couple potent b.o. names. Should better $9,000, okay. Last week, 4th of "My Darling Clementine" (20th), limited to three days and a short-snorting $2,000.

Harris (Harris) (2,200; 40-70) — "Magnificent Doll" (U). Got off to fast start over weekend and then, boom, bottom fell out after reviews came out and word got around. Won't do more than $12,000, and did at least half of that in first two days of week, with Thursday (26) (payday) in, in four days around $3,000. Picture dic sock $62,000 here on 28-day run.

Penn (Loew's-UA) (3,300; 40-70)—"Strange Woman" (UA). Another (Continued on page 22)

'Skies' Top 33G, Cincy; H.O.s O.K.

Cincinnati, Jan. 28.

"Blue Skies," the only new bill currently, is racking up an Albee record, and other major stands are feasting on holdovers, continuing the chain of bullish biz for opening month of '47.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 65-75)—"Blue Skies" (Par). Soaring to $33,000, a screen record for this house in a nonholiday week. Holding for second week. Last week, "Notorious" and Cincy's largest theatre. Last week, "Man I Love" (WB), fairish $13,000.

Capitol (RKO) (2,000; 65-75)—"Humoresque" (WB) (2d wk). Okay $8,500 after sweet $13,000 teeoff.

Grand (RKO) (1,430; 55-70)—"Shooting Miss Pilgrim" (U) (2d wk). Excellent $7,500 following swell $10,000 second round.

Keith (RKO) (1,850; 55-70)—"Swell Guy" (U) (2d wk). Strong $8,000 on heels of pleasing $8,000 initial bek.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 55-70)—"Song of Scheherazade" (RKO). Sixth downtown week. Great $6,000 in wake of both $7,500 fifth stanza.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 55-70)—"Two Years Before Mast" (Par) (2d wk). Lush $16,000 trailing atomic $26,000 opening frame.

Shubert (RKO) (2,100; 55-70)—"Razor's Edge" (20th). Fourth week on front line. All right $5,000. Last week, $8,000.

'Life' Wonderful $25,000, 'Marriage' Perfect 8G, 'Secret' OK $4,000, Baltio

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

Big news here this week is "It's a Wonderful Life," opening Jacy Rappaport's Town theatre, latest addition to the downtown first-run front. Capra film grabbed hold in big style on the second day is mounting in smash style. Also in nice groove is "The Perfect Marriage" at Keith's, both of lineup mostly in h.o., very steady.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew's-UA) (3,000; 20-60)—"Secret Heart" (M-G) (2d wk). Maintaining fairish pace at $11,000 after an okay initial round $15,000.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,240; 20-75) — "Jolson Story" (Col) (4th wk) plus stage show. Still pulling up at $16,000 after a good previous round at $15,200.

Keith (Schanberger) (2,460; 20-60) — "I'll Be Yours" (U-I). Starting today (Tues.) after a nice week of "Perfect Marriage" (Par) at $8,000.

Mayfair (Hicks) (980; 25-55) — "After Isaac's Secret" (PRC). Okay response at average $4,000 tier similar action for "Brenna Kelly" (PRC) last week.

New (Mechanic) (1,800; 20-60)—"Razor's Edge" (20th) (5th wk). Holding well at $10,000 for a steady previous round to $11,300.

Stanley (WB) (3,280; 25-75) — "Blue Skies" (Par) (3d wk). Still going strong at $14,000 after a firm second round to $17,200.

Town (Rappaport) (1,500; 35-65)— "It's a Wonderful Life" (RKO). Big doings on preem of lush new house rounding to smasho $25,000 and prospects of an extended h.o.

Breezes Blow By Broadway Biz; 'Yearling' Wow 140G, 'Lady'-Beneke 93G, 'Sinbad' 54G, 'Man Love' 62G

Broadway's springlike weather during the last week would have made the California Chamber of Commerce envious, and New York's filmgoers apparently took advantage of the warm breezes and headed for the outdoors. Biz in the Street's 18 first-run houses continued spotty, with only one or two of the newcomers opening strongly, most of the holdovers tumbling. On the first week however, the grosses still reflect the fact that the boxoffice in general is holding up to last year's level.

Metro's "Yearling" was the Broadway winner of the week, racking up a socko $140,000 in its initial frame at Radio City Music Hall. Film topped the previous high for any Metro opener at the Hall, with "Till the Clouds Roll By" having set the earlier mark at the same price scale. "Sinbad the Sailor" cracked the only solid mid-week house with $54,000 for its initial frame at the Palace, and chalking up a record Saturday (25) with $10,000.

"Lady" Beneke" rolled to a strong $93,000 opening at the Capitol, and "Dead Reckoning" (Humphrey Bogart) teed off handsomely with a hefty $36,000. "Man I Love" slumped after an SRO weekend opener at Roxy, but will have to do an okay $62,000 for its initial stanza. "Swell Guy," aided by favorable reviews in the dailies, hooked headed for a hefty $35,000 opener at the Winter Garden, while "Wake Up and Dream" teamed on the vaudage side at the Victoria with a fairish $15,000.

Warner saw a new surprise as "Tower of London," a Universal revissue, rolled to a smash $14,500 opener at Rialto, topping what $10,500 grossed by the film during its first run at the same house in 1939. "13 Rue Madeleine" topped the holdovers, faltering from the sock $131,000 pace set during the first week but still earning a fine $98,000 for the second frame.

"Best Years of Our Lives" continued smash at the Astor with a 10th week total of $47,500. "California" slumped to a mildish $37,000 at the Rivoli, and "Perfect Marriage" remained sub-par at the Paramount with a fairish $60,000. "It's a Wonderful Life" continued on the downgrade at the Globe with an average $24,000 for its sixth week.

Estimates For This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; 95-$2.40) —"Best Years of Lives" (RKO) (10th wk). Solid $47,500 for week ending tomorrow (Thursday). Last week $48,000; nontheatres indefinitely.

Capitol (Loew's) (4,820; 70-$1,50) —"Lady in Lake" (M-G) plus Tex Beneke Orch, Gene Sheldon on stage (1st wk). Looks like big $93,000 for initial stanza ending tonight (Wednesday) with new show and final frame of "Secret Heart" (M-G) plus Tommy Dorsey orch on stage, mildish $80,000.

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 70-$1.20)— "Sinbad the Sailor" (RKO) (4th wk). Continuing on the downgrade with average $24,000 estimated for sixth week ending tomorrow (31); last week, mild $29,500. Holds.

Gotham (Brandt) (900; 70-$1.40)— "Her Sister's Secret" (PRC) (3d wk). Sub-par opener, with fairish $9,500 for first week ending last (Tuesday) night. Last week, "Ladies Man" (Par), pulled after four days of second frame with weak $5,500.

Golden (767; $1.20-$2.40)—"Henry V" (UA) (22d wk). Rolling along at roadshow policy with okay $9,000 checked in for 21st week ended last (Tuesday) night; 20th week good $8,000.

Hollywood (WB) (1,499; 70-$1.10) —"Humoresque" (WB) (6th wk). Fairish $24,000 for sixth week ending today (Wednesday). Last week, $28,000.

Palace (RKO) (1,700; 60-$1.20)— "Sinbad the Sailor" (RKO) (2d wk). Sock $54,000 posted smartest opening during the opening frame in this one, with resultant new house mark $93,000 for week ending last (Tuesday) night. Last week, seventh and final stanza of "Song of Scheherazade" (RKO), fancy $28,000.

Paramount (Par) (3,664; 70-$1.50) —"Perfect Marriage" (Par) plus Hilla Bros. Elliot Lawrence orch on stage (3d wk). Remains below average with fairish $60,000 for second week ending last (Tuesday) night. Last week, okay $89,000.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefeller) (5,945; 70-$2.40) — "Yearling" (M-G) plus Patricia Bowman tapping stage bill (1st wk). Another strong opene with socko $140,000 for initial frame ending tonight (Wed). Last week, seventh and final stanza of "Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G) plus stage show, solid $115,000.

Park Avenue (U) (583; $1.20-$2.40) —"Stairway to Heaven" (U) (6th wk). Holding up on house's oddest dshow policy with okay $16,000 for fifth week ending last (Tuesday) night. Last week, fair $17,000.

Rialto (Mayer) (594; 35-85) — "Tower of London" (U) (reissue) (1st wk). Looks like $14,500 likely for first week ending tomorrow (Thursday). Holds. Last week, second and final frame of "Murder in Reverse" (Indie), weak $6,800.

Rivoli (UA-Par) (2,092; 60-$1.25) —"California" (Par) (3d wk). Slumped to mildish $37,000 for second week ending Monday (27), after strong $60,000 for the opening frame. Continues.

Roxy (20th) (5,886; 80-$1.50) — "13 Rue Madeleine" (20th) plus stage bill headlined by Gracie Fields (3d wk). Another slumpsroo but still fine $98,000 for second week ending yesterday (Tuesday); opening stanza took $131,000.

State (Loew's) (3,450; 43-$1.10)— "Jolson Story" (Col) (2d run) plus Harry Cool topping stage bill (2d wk). Winds up tonight (Wednesday) with sock $39,000, after first week's smash $50,000. Last week, Mel (M-G) plus John Boles headlining new stageshow opens tomorrow (Thursday).

Strand (WB) (2,756; 75-$1.50) — "Man I Love" (WB) plus stage bill headlined by Charlie Barnet orch. (1st wk). Opened tomorrow, with nifty $62,000 expected for first week ending tomorrow (Thursday). Last week, second and final frame of "Time, Place and Girl" (WB) plus Vaughn Monroe orch on stage, fair $46,500.

Victoria (Mutrer) (720; 70-$1.20) —"Wake Up and Dream" (20th) (1st wk). Opened on average side with $15,000 likely for first week's initial frame ending tonight (Wednesday). Last week, "Beast With Five Fingers" (WB) (fourth week, solid $11,-500. "Bedella" (Eagle-Lion) opens next Friday (7).

Winter Garden (UA) (1,312; 60-$1.20) "Swell Guy" (U) (1st wk). Still early for final returns, but looks like hefty $35,000 for initial frame ending Friday (31). Last week, fifth and final session of "Wicked Lady" (U), weak $17,000.

'Rue,' 'Wolf' 40G Leads Detroit

Detroit, Jan. 28.

Biz good here, with "13 Rue Madeleine" and "Lone Wolf" leading town with stout $40,000, and "Strange Woman" and "Susie" in runnerup spot with $25,000.

Estimates for This Week

Adams (Balaban) (1,746; 70-95)—"The Jolson Story" (Col) (4th wk). Sweet $12,000. Last week, lusty $16,000.

Broadway-Capitol (United Detroit) (3,309; 70-95)—"Notorious" (RKO) and "Vacation in Reno" (5th wk). Okay $14,000. Last week, strong $16,000.

Downtown (Balaban) (2,663; 70-95)—"If I Had My Way" (Par) (reissue) and "Shadow of a Doubt" (reissue). Weak $9,000. Last week, "That Brennan Girl" (Rep) and "Plainsman and the Lady" (Rep), tepid $9,000.

Fox (Fox-Michigan) (5,100; 70-95) —"Blue Bahamas" (Mono) and "The Lone Wolf in Mexico" (Col). Stout $40,000. Last week, "Magnificent Doll" (U) and "Secret of the Whistler" (Col), a nice $24,000.

Madison (United Detroit) (1,866; 50-60) — "I Always Loved You" (Rep) and "Two Smart People" (M-G). Usual $2,300 for 3 days. Last week, "Night and Day" (WB) and "Trade Winds" (UA) (indie), fair $2,200 for three days.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,039; 70-95)—"The Strange Woman" (UA) and "Susie Runs Out" (UA) (2d wk). Powerful $25,000. Last week, terrific $42,000.

Palms-State (United Detroit) (2,-976; 70-95)—"It's a Wonderful Life" (RKO) and "The Story of Kenneth Randall, M.D." (Liberty) (4th wk). Loud $15,000. Last week, also loud $18,000.

United Artists (United Detroit) (1,941; 70-95) — "Song of the South" (RKO) and "The Falcon's Adventure" (RKO) (3d wk). Rousing $18,000. Last week, attractive $21,000.

NATIONAL MAGAZINE CAMPAIGN!

Stresses French Inability to Compete With British in Pitch for U.S. Market

Doubting that French film makers plan to join the British in an invasion of the U. S. picture market, Sacha Gordine, producer of "Jericho," who arrived in New York last Wednesday (22) aboard the Washington, declared the industry is suffering from a severe shortage of equipment and a lack of capital and is in no position financially to make a pitch for American product outlets.

Pointing out that the British penetration of the U. S. was spearheaded by J. Arthur Rank, "a very rich man," Gordine said he had no counterpart in France and added that by making pictures in the same tongue English producers find a much more ready market in America than French film companies whose U. S. exhibition is restricted to a limited number of art houses.

Despite reports that several American companies plan to take advantage of frozen French rental coin to engage in large-scale production in France, Gordine said currently only one picture, "Le Silence d'Or" ("Golden Silence") is being made by American coin. RKO is backing this Maurice Chevalier starrer with Rene Clair directing at its Pathe studio. He was skeptical that American production in France would increase to such extent that native producers would be forced out of existing facilities.

Bringing several scripts with him, including "Seven Days in Paradise" by Vladimir Pozner, author of "The Dark Mirror," Gordine revealed that he expected to produce "Paradise" upon his return to France. Planning to leave for the Coast the end of the week, producer said he'll scout the film colony for talent to appear in the pic inasmuch as the story deals with several Americans in Paris.

Darryl Zanuck has expressed interest in "Jericho," Gordine said, and there is a possibility he may confer with the 20th-Fox topper to discuss a deal whereby the studio may acquire rights to "Jericho" for a remake. Film concerns the French resistance movement during the war. Meanwhile, a dubbed version of "Jericho" is slated for an early release in England where Ealing will distribute.

Gordine, who made a film version of Dostoievsky's "Idiot" last summer, brought a print with him and while in the U. S. expects to line up a distribution deal. Andre Lelarge, who handled "Jericho," may also release "Idiot," but the deal has not been set as yet.

Also refuting claims from overseas producers that their films are getting brushoff playing time in this country, Ilya Lopert, U. S. distributor of French pictures and former Metro International exec, says that it will be at least two more years before foreign pictures gain widespread acceptance in America. Until that time comes, he points out, it's definitely to the advantage of overseas film men to have their product play in small houses rather than try to break the firstrun market.

Lopert says that since foreign films are still limited in their mass appeal, it's necessary that they operate under a low overhead. But more important, he adds, the boxoffice of a foreign film usually builds under word of mouth promotion and, by opening in a small house, a picture is better assured of the long run necessary for the word to get around.

As an example, Lopert recalls the opening of "Last Chance," a film produced in Switzerland, at Loew's Criterion, N. Y., Broadway firstrun house. Film brought in a record gross for foreign films, of $22,000, and closed after two weeks. On the other hand, "Welldigger's Daughter" opened in the small-seater Avenue Playhouse and is currently in its fifth month of profitable grosses. Lopert says that "Last Chance" died because it exhausted the normal audience for a foreign pic before it had a chance to build via word of mouth. Also, because of a relatively high nut, the film lost money.

Meanwhile, "Welldigger's Daughter" started slowly and built, all the time running on a low house overhead. "Open City," another foreign film playing at the small World Theatre, N. Y., is estimated by Lopert to have brought the house $100,000 as its share of the grosses during the past year.

'Casanova' in Chili-Bowl

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Leonard Picker's first production for Eagle-Lion, "Captain Casanova," will be filmed entirely at the Tecate studios in Mexico City.

Rome To Get 'Father'

Rome, Jan. 20.

Long awaited unveiling of "Life with Father," stymied for months by delay of co-authors Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse in releasing the Italian rights, becomes a reality the end of the month at the Quirino Theatre where the play will bow under the auspices of Compagnia Morelli-Stoppa.

Since the liberation, every Italian producer has tried at one time or another to acquire the play's translation rights, but up to now none succeeded. Compagnia Morelli-Stoppa also produced the Italian version of "Arsenic and Old Lace" last season.

Japanese Pix Houses, B.O. Mushrooming; Producers Wilting Under High Costs

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

Whereas film houses are enjoying a boxoffice bonanza, Jap producing companies are wilting financially. Main causes for this unusual situation are threefold: (1) high prices of commodities and scarcity of materials; (2) increase of cost through payroll rises, etc., and (3) loss of overseas markets. Most producers feel, however, they can avert the present crisis if the high duty on raw film is reduced drastically.

Meanwhile, Jap film goers sacrifice physical comfort to see and hear practically all films—good or bad. Admission fee at the average house is 15 yen ($1 under the present rate), and monthly raises of from 1.50 to five yen are not uncommon at the smaller spots.

Total monthly income of all film houses throughout the nation is placed roughly at 75,000,000 yen ($5,000,000). Prior to the war, there were approximately 2,000 houses in Japan, and some 800 of these, including many large ones in bigger cities, were destroyed in raids. Now, however, the number has zoomed far over 2,000 as film houses mushroom all over the nation—in small as well as large cities.

'Menagerie,' 'Girl' Slated To Tour Italian Cities

Rome, Jan. 20.

Slated to visit all major cities in Italy, Italian versions of Elsa Shelley's 'Pick-up Girl' and Tennessee Williams' "Glass Menagerie" recently preemed in Milan and Rome respectively. Produced by the Compagnia Laura Adani headed by Ruggero Ruggeri, "Girl" was well received by the critics. Producer Ruggeri, top dramatic actor of the Italian theatre, portrayed the Judge.

Alfredo Segre's adaptation of "Menagerie" starred Tatiana Pavlova, once with the Moscow Art Theatre, in the Laurette Taylor role, and has run 32 performances. Run represents a good record according to Italian standards.

Odeon's $17,000,000 Issue

London, Jan. 28.

Odeon Associated Theatres, controlled by Odeon Theatres, of which J. Arthur Rank is head, is making a new issue early next month of $17,000,000.

Underwriting has now been completed by Philip Hill & Co. of issue of $14,000,000 3¼% first mortgage debenture stock at par and 1,250,000 4¼% redeemable cumulative preference shares of $4 at $4.20 each.

Odeon Theatres will now own some 100 of Rank picture theatres, valued at around $30,000,000.

Paris Legiters Fight Tax

Paris, Jan. 28.

Legit producers are organizing to compel the state to cut the current 42% tax in half.

Managers are considering closing down as an expedient, if film exhibs cooperate.

REISMAN TO S. A.

RKO veepee over foreign sales Phil Reisman hopped off for South America last week for a quickie visit to exchanges.

Reisman will be away for three weeks during which time he'll bit offices in Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay.

Korda Names Clifford For Pix Music Director

London, Jan. 28.

Dr. Hubert Clifford, professor of composition at the Royal Academy of Music, has been named musical director of Sir Alexander Korda's London Film Productions. Dr. Clifford has conducted all principal English orchestras, and during the war was in charge of BBC's empire music service.

His film work will include collaboration with other composers on film scores, as well as general musical direction of all Korda pictures. He sailed for New York last week en route to Hollywood, where he'll o.o. current music practices in the film industry for a month.

LAUREL-HARDY SIGNED TO BRITISH VAUDE TOUR

London, Jan. 22.

Due to his success in signing big American names, such as Dante, who has scored big hit for him, Bernard Delfont has signed Laurel and Hardy to play vaudeville season in England. Team arrives here Feb. 11 and opens, probably at Saville theatre Feb. 29, where it's booked for four weeks with option.

When London season finishes, comics will go for extensive provincial tour, visiting Glasgow, Edinburgh, Manchester, Leeds and Liverpool.

Delfont is also dickering with Cynda Glenn to be featured in L. & H. bill.

French Quota Quirks Snafu U. S. Showings

Paris, Jan. 20.

American releases are suffering further difficulties here because the French won't take into account, as filling the quota requirements, French films over a year old. This places playing reissues out of the quota.

Columbia's "Cover Girl," booked at the Normandie, Champs Elysees firstrun house, has had to be postponed because the house — having played a reissue of "Grande Illusion" for five weeks—has nevertheless to book another new French film.

Mex Pix Bank Biz Cut

Mexico City, Jan. 15.

Pix industry's own bank, the Banco Cinematografico, founded by the government and the trade in 1938, ended 1946 with a sharp cut in its biz financing.

Its Dec. 31 balance sheet showed loans, credits and discounts of $17,488,524.22 (Mex.), a drop of $7,000,000 (Mex.) from previous year.

'Lives' to Bow in London

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Samuel Goldwyn and J. Arthur Rank closed a deal for the opening of "The Best Years of Our Lives" at the Leicester Square, London, March 2.

Proceeds of the preem will be turned over to a British charity headed by Mrs. Clement Attlee, wife of the Prime Minister.

French Gov't Returns Studios To Private Owners After Seizure

Paris, Jan. 20.

Paris Studio Cinema (Marc Lauer and Roger Capgras) won its suit against the Public Domain and recovered its Billancourt studios. Under German occupation, Lauer rented the studios to Continentale, the German organization in which all German picture interests here had combined.

When the Germans left, the government seized the studios and placed them under administration of the Public Domain as enemy property.

Lauer claimed that he had been forced to close the German deal under compulsion and at a price that did not represent the real value of the property, and after long auditing and a protracted law suit, the court not only gave him back the studio but sentenced the administration, as having taken over from the Germans, to pay him an amount covering the difference between the price paid by Continentale and what would have been a fair price. Studio is on the outskirts of Paris.

Lauer, several years ago, had partnered with the late John E. Otterson in a venture called Tri-National Films which imported a few pictures into the states.

Continentale Suit

The Public Domain government agency which since Liberation had taken over the assets of the Continentale, seized as enemy property, has surrendered them to private French ownership represented by the newly formed corporation, Union Generale Cinematographique.

Continentale was the organization built by the Germans to run their picture interests here during the occupation. It included the Alliance Cinematographique Europeenne, which was the UFA subsid here, meaning that when the Germans are again in a position to do business here, they will have to build a new organization from the ground up.

Jap Production Eased

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

General MacArthur last week told Jap producers that, for the first time since the war, they can begin legal arrangements for the showing in Japan of foreign copyrighted theatrical productions and music. License will be okayed to any material except that "considered detrimental to the purposes of the occupation," he added.

The regulation, tardy in arriving because of difficulties involved in contracts between the Japs and Allied nationals, also paves the way for Nip publishers to obtain translation rights of foreign copyrighted books.

French Prepping First Animated Color Feature, 'Alice,' Costing $650,000

Paris, Jan. 15.

First French animated feature, in color, is being prepped by producers Leo Bunin and Henri Aisner. Latter is a Frenchman with some Hollywood experience. They are bringing over about 20 American technicians whose salaries will be partly paid in America in dollars. Screen material will be "Alice in Wonderland." Plastic puppets photos are to be substituted for the usual sketches. This had been tried here by Jean Painleve in his "Bluebeard" short.

Film will be made in two versions, French and English, with Alice the only live character, to be played by a French actress in the French version and an English actress in the English version. Shooting will be done on an estate near Paris, and lab work by Eclair Labs, at Epinay near Paris, which has some Agfacolor equipment installed by the Germans during the occupation. Color process will be Anscocolor, which is based on Agfacolor and requires only minor alterations of the equipment.

Blueprint calls for a budget approximating $650,000 for both versions, anticipating about $250,000 for equipment and transportation, balance reportedly including 90G for executive staff, 30G for script, 60G for puppets, 60G for animation, 25G for sets, 20G for recording the music, 18G for recording dialog and sound effects, 10G for editing, and 50G for live action. This leaves a surplus for overhead and raw stock consisting of color raw stock and infra red, also some black and white for processing.

Blowoff Comes in Rank Quarrel On Prestige Pix When 2 Aides Leave

London, Jan. 28.

Long-raging battle over prestige picture policy, which divided the J. Arthur Rank organization into two warring camps and led to the resignation of a trio of Rank's top producers, is finally over. In the tussle, the recent b.o. performance of "Great Expectations," pic dramatizing the Dickens novel, was the clincher for the cohorts maintaining that British pix could merge artistry with greenback magnetism.

The curtain-dropping blowoff came last week when R. J. Minney, producer of the record-grossing "Wicked Lady," severed connections with Rank while sounding off on the purported errors of the British film outfit. Actually, Minney, along with Harold Huth, producer of "Caravan," had definitely broken with Rank when Sydney Box stepped into the shoes of Maurice Ostrer, last summer, and took over the managing directorship of Gainsborough Pictures.

Ostrer was the first to go after vainly contending that equal cash and efforts should be directed to making pix aimed to meet Hollywood on its own terms and thereby nail down the British popular market which Yank films had captured. Contention of Rank and his followers was that the Britishers should give priority to prestige pix and that popular reception of Anglo films would follow. Throughout the long tiff, the pressing need to reduce the number of dollars extracted from Britain by American film companies haunted the debates.

Box replaced Ostrer because his "Seventh Veil" supported the arguments of those favoring the prestige films. Both Minney and Huth then terminated long-range relationships with Rank but were kept on to complete films which they were then working on. In Minney's case, it was the "Magic Bow," while Huth hung on to wind up "Caravan." Both producers, reportedly, were also peeved because they were not promoted to the Ostrer spot.

Differences on the score continued to beset the Rank organization until "Expectations" opened its British run. Generally recognized as an exemplar of the prestige pictures, film was purposely slated for first-run at the same 12 houses in which "Wicked Lady" rung up record grosses. "Expectations" handily knocked off the records scored by "Lady" and thereby substantiated the contention that a pic could have b.o. appeal and artistry.

Rank, it's understood, was highly pleased at the "Expectations" performance and told associates that "the argument is settled, once and for all."

'Born' Reborn in London Under Olivier Aegis

London, Jan. 28.

"Born Yesterday," Laurence Olivier's first managerial venture which he also directed, preemed at the Garrick, Thursday (23) and was hilariously received by an audience which included Vivien Leigh, Alexander Korda and Ben Goetz.

Those who have seen the Max Gordon play in America maintain that the performance of Yolanda Donlan, who was brought from the U. S. for the Judy Holliday part, compares favorably with the original, while Hartley Power is also excellent. Miss Donlan already has had four offers from British film companies.

Also opening at the York's last Wednesay (22) was a revival of the Edwardian comedy, "Caste," which was well received.

U.S. Prepares Data On Mexican Pix Setup

Washington, Jan. 28.

Comprehensive trade list on the Mexican film industry has just been prepared by the commercial intelligence division of the Department of Commerce.

List includes 19 importers and dealers in film and motion picture apparatus; 63 distributors of American, Mexican and foreign films; one manufacturer of sound apparatus and editing machines; 82 Mexican producers; six studios; six laboratory and accessory firms, and one Mexican freelance lenser.

Commerce department offers the list for $1, with an extra $1 apiece for sales information reports on all firms mentioned.

Kilroy Found—In Japan!

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

B.o. success of its "Kilroy Was Here" four-reeler has Jiyu Film Co. mulling over possibility of a Kilroy series.

Dekao, Yokoo and Gontaro, foremost Jap comedians, were starred.

Aussie Production Set For Boost as New Firms Plan Picture Making

Sydney, Jan. 15.

Latest into film production in Australia is Fred Daniells, one time with the Denison group which brought out Charles Farrell for "The Flying Doctor" at Pagewood, later in radio via the Macquarie network, then with a Dutch camera unit during the war, and now breaking back into pix production via takeover of the old Mastercraft Studios at Figtree. Spot is just outside Sydney, onetime handled by the late F. W. Thring interests and shut through wartime restrictions.

Daniells is now seeking finance to float a major unit with Eric Porter, who recently made "A Son Is Born."

The McCredie Bros., local nabe exhibs, are also seeking finance to set up production at Commonwealth Studios. Brothers have been importing a few Russian pix for local datings, doing the dubbings out here.

Ealing will make "Eureka Stockade" and "Robbery Under Arms," latter probably in color. Harry Watt will do the chores. He leaves this week for confabs with Mick Balcon in London. Watt clicked with "Overlanders."

Korda has Moore Raymond here looking for talent for pic titled "Smiley." It's understood that most of this pic will be shot in London. Columbia is getting set for another local, and Charles Chauvel is tied with Universal-Greater Union in a big prodction deal for "Sons of Matthew."

MEXICAN EXHIBS WIN SHUTDOWN TAX STRIKE

Mexico City, Jan. 28.

Operators of the five cinemas of Torreon won the first strike against taxation exhibitors ever staged in Mexico. Cinemas reopened Jan. 21 after a three-week closing as a protest against the special municipal nick of 10% of gross for public charity enacted Jan. 1. Exhibitors said the levy, added to others, hiked their imposts to 25%, which they contended made operation unprofitable.

Strike ended when the governor of the state of Coahuila, in which Torreon is located, arranged for the temporary suspension of 5% of the municipal and 3% of the state taxes to permit the exhibitors contributing funds, via levies, to a big general hospital that is being built in Torreon. The hospital nick will end as soon as the hospital is finished, the exhibitors were assured. Meanwhile, the state and municipal governments are examining the exhibitors' books to determine just how much they can be taxed.

McLean Confirmed as Can. Film Commissioner

Montreal, Jan. 28.

Ross McLean, interim Canadian government film commissioner since the resignation of John Grierson over a year ago, has been confirmed to that job.

McLean has been with the National Film Board since its inception in 1939 and was deputy commissioner from 1943 until he took over from Grierson in an acting capacity.

Job of NFB head has always been a hot coal since it's contended that the government flicker agency is staffed by too many leftists. Grierson himself has often been accused of veering to the left and in his resignation some 15 months ago said that he was quitting due to a difference of opinion with the higher-ups as to whether the NFB should concern itself with making films of a broader international scope, or stick to home topics.

Cubans Stone Theatre Showing Spanish Short

Noticiario Nacional of Manuel Alonso, local newsreel company, sent a cameraman on the maiden airplane direct service trip from Havana to Madrid. Lensman took pictures of the trip and then the reels were edited into a short showing the beauties of Spain. When the film was shown at Fausto (Par) House on the Prado, anti-Francoites stoned the lobby, threw stinkbombs inside and bombarded the people in line at the boxoffice with vegetables, so the film was shelved.

Now Alonso has answered with an editorial in his latest newreel saying that the beauty of any country is beauty and that he is only a Cuban, and that in a democratic country people shouldn't be stoned for seeing views of Spain when the government lends the main salon of the national capitol to exhibit pictures from Soviet Russia.

European Pix Festival Rash Sets Problems

Paris, Jan. 20.

The epidemic of film festivals spreading over Europe is raising a problem. It is understood that all countries producing pictures are anxious to have them internationally reviewed as national propaganda. From a strict trade point of view, foreign producers can hardly expect to get for their entries commercial returns commensurate to the trouble incurred, while refusing to participate may be considered as snubbing the show. Also in some cases the organizers place it on a basis where the trade show appears to be a mere basis for land boom, hotel and tourist promotion.

Next world film festival will take place in Brussels from June 1-30. Business is good and the Belgians have no persons axe to grind.

Dates considered for the French and Italian festivals are conflicting. The Venice show is due to open Aug. 20 and last until Sept. 10. The French want to open the Cannes festival Sept. 1, meaning that the overlap would necessitate sending two reps and possibly two prints of the entries.

Last year's festival cost was about $160,000, of which about half was recovered through resale of installations. The Cannes city fathers are most anxious to make the show a success since it means a lot for the Riviera. Francois Andre, owner of Cannes and Deauville casinos, and also interested in real estate developments in many resorts, is expected to finance the building of a 2,500-seater on the Points de la Croisette, on a piece of land reclaimed from the sea by dumping the city refuse. Building would have to be light and expense is skedded at about $120,000. This would be close to the Palm Beach casino.

Metro Acquires Office Space, Houses in Europe

Paris, Jan. 20.

Metro is using some of its currency in Latin European countries to extend office accommodations.

In Paris it's bought a building on Rue Quentin Beauchart, between Avenue des Champs Elysees and the Avenue Georges V, next door to the Biarritz Cinema. Firm will move in all its offices currently off the beam on Rue Condorcet sometime in March. The newsreel dept. and the dubbing studio only will remain in the old building. The new office was the private mansion of the Duke of Elchingen, descendant of Napoleon's Marshal Ney.

In Italy, Metro bought ground in Rome to build an office and a dubbing studio. In Milan, firm will also build its own office. In Spain, it's acquired a piece of property in Madrid, to house offices and also a dubbing studio.

Besides offices, Metro has also invested in theatres, but in other countries. Recent buy in Antwerp, Belgium, of a 2,000-seater will open in March under the new name of "Cine Metro." Metro also won its lawsuit and recovered the Forum, in Liege. The 3,200-seater is the largest in Belgium.

French Pix Unions Welcome Sorrell Bid to Intervene in Coast Struggle

Paris, Jan. 28.

Invitation to intervene in the Hollywood labor jurisdictional tangle which was tendered recently by the Conference of Studio Unions to French film workers is furnishing welcome fuel to anti-U. S. circles here who are gloating over the spectacle of Americans knifing Americans.

In a letter to French unions dated Jan. 10, CSU prexy Herbert Sorrell accused Hollywood studios of an attempt to destroy unions in order to reduce salaries. Lowered costs, the letter said, would facilitate U. S. monopolization of pix markets abroad with eventual damage to foreign labor.

A reply by the French union chieftain, Gaston Chezeau, was full of sympathy for the CSU. Letter to the CSU stated that French workers understood U. S. attempts to monopolize foreign markets logically entails cutting workers' salaries in order to cut costs. Chezeau however declared that the French workers feel safe because they merged their unions, but since workers of the whole world face identical problems, the French pledged their cooperation to the CSU.

Practical implementation of plans to help the CSU was taken by the National Federation of Exhibition Workers of France with announcement that they were planning to halt all synchronization and dubbing work on American films, thus preventing their exhibition in this country. Further steps in support of the CSU's "legitimate struggle" will be taken, Chezeau intimated. Fear of American retaliation through cutting off of much-needed credits is apparently staying immediate action in behalf of the CSU.

Sorrell also cabled the French scenarists union, presided over by Henri Jeanson. Latter's answer also promised cooperation and requested the publication of names of antilabor Hollywood directors, players and screenwriters. Sympathetic reaction to American film workers by the French unions, reciprocates the action taken last July by the Hollywood Screen Writers Guild which passed a resolution denouncing the Blum-Byrnes trade pact as inimical to the French film industry.

Walsh Cables Chezeau

Richard F. Walsh, prez of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehand Employees, cabled Chezeau Jan. 21 saying Sorrell's letter only ventilated grievance of a discontented minority in the jurisdictional dispute and that 20,000 Hollywood AFL workers are contentedly working in studios. Cable was sent through Harold Smith, continental rep for the Motion Picture Assn.

Chezeau is currently in Rome attempting to squash Italian attempts there to boss French technical crews employed in co-productions despite the French-Italian pact. His aide, Henri Back, told VARIETY that pending American Ambassador Jefferson Caffrey's naming a date for an interview requested by the union, he is arranging to stop dubbing on American films on a moment's notice.

Other sections of Sorrell's 850-word letter to Chezeau included allegations against Hollywood studios of attempting to break independent film unions through unprecendented misuse of courts in obtaining mass arrests and injunctions. Sorrell asked help by firstly publicizing Hollywood's so-called anti-labor conspiracy; secondly, promoting a French union resolution endorsing American labor, and thirdly, organizing audience protests in theatres showing product from Columbia, Metro, Paramount, Republic, RKO, Roach, 20th-Fox, Universal and Warner and arranging for their immediate boycott.

No Godiva Here!

Mexico City, Jan. 28.

A naked woman, featuring billboard publicity in the heart of downtown for "The Kneeling Goddess," so burned Maria Felix, who is starred in film, that she forced Panamerican Films, the producer, to withdraw the advertisement.

London Legit Sets Irish Plays, Raiding Talent; Dublin Season To Suffer

Dublin, Jan. 23.

Success of Irish actors in recent J. Arthur Rank films is believed to be partly responsible for London theatre management interest in importing Irish talent. Next month three Irish plays will open in the West End.

Hilton Edwards & Michael MacLiammoir (Dublin Gate Theatre) will open a season with MacLiammoir's "Ill Met by Moonlight," currently playing revival here. Shelah Richards will produce Paul Vincent Carroll's "The White Steed," possibly with Liam Redmond who appeared in New York production in 1939. Redmond was rehearsing in this play for London when the war shuttered the theatre. Abbey players Denis O'Dea and Siobhan McKenna are skedded for this company.

Third group will present Arthur Sinclair in Walter Macken's "Galway Handicap," seen at the Abbey here as "Mungo's Mansion." Irene Henchel, wife of dramatic critic Ivor Brown, will produce. Another Carroll play, "The Wise Have Not Spoken", is also due for West End staging soon.

Drain on Irish stage of these productions — and impending film commitments of other players — will mean service headaches for Dublin managements this spring.

2 INDIA PIX TRY U. S.; YANKS AID TECHNICIANS

Harry G. Govil, Indian film company rep currently in this country to buy studio equipment, is bringing two Indian-produced films to the U. S. for distribution in the art house circuit. Films, based on classic Far Eastern legends, were turned out by India's largest production outfit, Prakash Films, and will be re-editied and subtitled in English in New York for American consumption.

Govil's own company, Amer-Indian Film Distributors, will handle sale of the features. Another Indian picture, "Shakuntala," made by the Raj Kamal Productions of Bombay, will precede Govil's two films into the American market with a premiere scheduled for late in February.

Govil stated that the chief drawback in Indian production, despite its impressive output of 300 films a year, is its primitive technique and obsolete equipment. In a move to remedy the backwardness of Indian studio methods, Govil has been commissioned to hire a crew of American technicians who will train native studio workers in Hollywood's newest production techniques.

Despite a rapidly growing interest in motion pictures by the Indian people, Govil stated that the insufficiency of theatres is putting a narrow limit on the industry's growth. India's 1,500 houses, most of them of ramshackle construction, are insufficient to meet the concentrated demand in the country's industrial centers. Govil declared that mobile 16m units are introducing films for the first time into India's rural areas which comprise 85% of the country's population.

Boff Mex Theatre Sale

Mexico City, Jan. 22.

Biggest current local theatre sale was that of the house under construction by Barbara Velez, Mexico's richest widow, who recently married Jorge Velez, pic actor for $4,000,000 (Mex.) to Emilio Azcarraga, head of the film and radio company of his name, and Simon Neguib, amusements magnate.

House has been incorporated in the Azcarraga-Neguib circuit here.

Five Film O'Haras?

Dublin, Jan. 23.

Charles and James Fitzsimons, brothers of Maureen O'Hara, are due for screentesting in London by Warner Bros. soon. They are currently appearing in all-Irish show at Abbey Theatre.

If tests are successful this will mean five members of the family in films. Since her arrival in Hollywood, Miss O'Hara has already been joined in pix by her sisters, Margot Fitzsimons and Claire Hamilton.

Grace Moore Started Trek

at a Washington concert with Giovanni Martinelli in 1918 after several years of musical education. Faced with family objections towards a singing career, the 17-year-old girl ran away to New York and became a cafe singer in Greenwich Village. After six months, she obtained a walk-on part in a road company which folded in Detroit. Back in New York, she took up the advice of George M. Cohan who, upon meeting her, suggested that she try out as an understudy to a musical comedy star.

In 1920, she was given a small role in Raymond Hitchcock's "Hitchy-Koo" and, two years later, graduated to a bigger role in "Above the Clouds." In 1923, Irving Berlin made her the lead in the "Music Box Revue" and she stayed with the show through two editions. In 1926, she started preparing for opera.

After 18-months intensive training in Europe, she returned in 1928 to make her Metropolitan debut as Mimi in "La Boheme." Her performance evoked one of the biggest ovations ever heard at the opera house where the Broadway contingent, headed by Cohan and Berlin, had come to cheer the former Broadway star.

First 2 Pix So-So

In 1930, she began her motion picture career which was to skyrocket her to world prominence. However, her first two films for Metro, "A Lady's Morals" and "New Moon" with Lawrence Tibbett, were not received well, despite the critics' praise for her singing, and she left Hollywood for another concert tour and trip abroad. While overseas, she met Valentin Parera, Spanish motion picture star, whom she married in 1931 in Cannes.

The following year, Miss Moore returned to Broadway musicals in "The Du Barry," following which she went on another round of concert tours. She wound up on the Coast where she appeared in the opera, "Pagliacci." Another film contract was offered her by Columbia and there she was starred in "One Night of Love."

The sensational artistic and b.o. success of this film ushered in a new cycle of operatic films that has lasted to the present day. In 1935, after a brief illness, she made her second picture for Columbia, "Love Me Forever." For her work in making the cinema an art "vitally affecting our national culture," she received a gold medal from the Society of Arts and Sciences. She was the second woman—preceded by Eva Le Gallienne—to win the award.

After several operatic appearances, Miss Moore was starred in a light musical comedy film, "The King Steps Out," in 1936. After several reports that she was through with Hollywood, she returned in 1937 for another Columbia picture, "I'll Take Romance," in which she did a scat number with Cab Calloway. It was her last film.

During the war, she toured Europe under the auspices of the USO-Camp Shows and shortly before her death, had given several concerts in Germany for British and American occupation troops. Miss Moore was expected back in this country late this year when she planned to rejoin the Metropolitan.

Metro-DOS

claims that no longer counts if the yarn is in public domain.

"T. I." was previously made by Metro in 1934, MPA rules thus giving it exclusive rights to the title as long as copyright protection on it continues anywhere in the world and for four years if it's in public domain. Stevenson story had prior to that been filmed by Fox in 1918 and Paramount in 1920.

Metro doesn't want to picturize "T. I.," again, but has waived its rights in favor of Walt Disney who, in turn, is releasing "Robinson Crusoe" to M-G, which will use the Daniel Defoe classic for Spencer Tracy's next picture. "Crusoe," incidentally, was recently made by the Russians as their initial film in a new tri-dimensional color process.

Stevenson never copyrighted his classic in the U. S. It was copyrighted in his native Britain, however, the copyright expiring in 1944. It was also copyrighted in France in 1885 and, under the Berne convention and French laws providing for recriprocal terms for foreign copyrights, it would also have expired in that country in 1944. However, during the first World War, President Poincare extended copyright protection for five or six years (exact time is in dispute, too). Thus, Metro claims, the French copyright on "T. I." goes into 1950. And since MPA rules are that a company which once made a picture retains exclusive rights to the title as long as there's copyright protection on it anywhere in the world, M-G feels that clinches its case.

Selznick lawyers don't agree on the French copyright extension or on the MPA rules covering the matter. Latter code, drawn up by the association in 1936, is said to lack sufficient detail to adequately provide the answer to this and many other questions, and thus has come the determination to revise it. However, in the 10 years since the establishment of the title registration bureau, there have been only about 275 protests and only five of them went to arbitration. Rest were settled amicably in discussions between the partics be the use of screens equally adaptable to tele or pix. Finally, projection of video images by light rather than phosphorescence would complete the evolution.

Theatre Tele

SMPE is now experimenting with special optical and camera work to perfect films used in tele transmission, Ryder said. The organization's board has widened the scope of its activities to include all pictorial rendition of action whether it be from films, electronics or other devices. Morover, according to Ryder, the SMPE will seek setting of international standards in tele similar to those now extant for films. Present situation is such that there is no assurance that a tele signal from a Yank transmitter could be received in other countries, since the electronic systems vary widely.

Film industry will ask the Federal Communications Commission at the Feb. 4 hearing to retain the frequency spectrum allocated for theatre tele, Ryder said. SMPE through Paul J. Larsen will rep for the industry and battle the attempt of commercial companies to slice into the frequency band. Ryder said his organization had conferred with Eric Johnston and Byron Price of the Motion Picture Assn., Donald Nelson of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and Y. Frank Freeman of the industry research bureau, and all were in agreement that it was essential for the frequency channels to be retained.

Exhibs Sit Out

tion said, and "its general effect could not be other than to rivet the stereotypes on the minds of the audiences who would see it."

Views on the film were written by Richard E. Gutstadt, League director. Pointing out the possibility of differences of opinion on "Abie," Gutstadt noted that the National Jewish Monthly had cited the film "among other evidences of goodwill demonstrations of our time" and declared the Monthly was "probably sincere" in its observations.

"Nevertheless," he continued, competent authorities, motion picture trade journals among others, immediately denounced the film." Recalling that the League and other organizations had protested about the film to producer Bing Crosby and Crosby had deleted "some of the most objectionable sequences in the hope that the film may be more acceptable and adverse effects be mitigated," Gutstadt continued:

"We are, of course, appreciative of the friendliness which impels these changes. However, we have forthrightly stated our view that the elimination of an objectionable sequence here or there cannot redeem the production, the stereotyped characters of which run throughout the entire portrayal." Gutstadt concluded that "under no circumstances do we believe that this is either good entertainment or good American doctrine."

Double Take

Trailer on Warners' "Nora Prentiss," currently running at the Strand, N. Y., is drawing plenty of yocks from the audiences—and for obvious reasons.

Trailer follows the Strand's current feature, Warners' "Man I Love." Both Robert Alda and Bruce Bennett, featured in "Man," are seen in almost the same type roles in the "Prentiss" trailer, and Alda, in fact, even seems to be wearing the same clothing in both pictures. It's a case of double-takes for most of the audience.

Sell 'Years' Ballyhoo Books on Test Basis

Fancy, plastic-covered books put out by Goldwyn Productions as promotion pieces for "Best Years of Our Lives" are now being sold in theatre lobbies on an experimental basis. Idea grew out of the large demand on the Goldwyn office for copies of the book, which is labeled "How a Picture Is Made" and goes into detail, with many stills, of the work behind "Years," as well as synopsis and cast.

Books are now being experimentally sold at the Astor, N. Y., and Woods, Chicago, for 25c. each, although they actually cost 40c. to print. If it is demonstrated that audience demand is great enough, large reprint orders will be placed, on basis of which cost of the volumes can be brought down to 13½c.

Similar books plugging the respective pictures are being sold at "Henry V" showings and at some theatres playing "Song of the South." They were likewise a big item when "Gone. With the Wind" made its initial round. In each of these cases they have been handled by concessionaires, rather than the producer's publicity department, as with "Years."

Press Point in Appeal Of Jackson Park Case

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Charging the injunction obtained by the Jackson Park theatre against nine film companies and two circuits was awarded unjustly, attorneys for defendants last week filed in Federal court a statement listing point on which they will rely in appealing the case in U. S. Circuit Court.

Defense claims decree, which virtually abolished the "Chicago system of release," was brought about without proper presentation of evidence to the jury.

In a multi-page brief, the attorneys point out what they feel to be certain discrepencies in the evidence. One claim in the statement is that evidence was not brought out that would indicate the exhibitor defendants used coercive buying powers to obtain first-run product, even though the court maintains such was the case.

Pitt Exhib Acquitted Of Negro Discrimination

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

After deliberating half an hour, a jury returned a verdict of not guilty in an alleged discrimination case in which John S. Stahl, who owns the Homestead theatre, was accused of refusing admission to two Negro women last April.

Plaintiffs stated that they had asked for first floor seats when they purchased tickets but were handed pasteboards for the balcony instead. Veteran exhibitor testified that there had been a misunderstanding and then the women had become so objectionable he refused to let them in the theatre at all, although Stahl was acquitted, jury assessed the costs on him.

PRC Can't Do This

Chicago.

Editor, VARIETY:

Top boner honors of 1946 should probably go to PRC's "Down Missouri Way." Oater features a rather unusual female mule named Shirley, who, after performing a retinue of tricks in the film, takes time out to have a baby.

Ironically, this miracle occurs in the very heart of the mule country, under the noses of four erudite professors of a Missouri college of agriculture, and nobody bats an eye. But they just can't do this—not even in Hollywood—for the mule is a hybrid; a sterile critter incapable of reproducing itself.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Tax expert Morris Cohn, in the forthcoming February edition of Screen Writer, Screen Writers Guild mag, foresees the possibility of income taxes being pro-rated over a three-year period. Cohn recalls the "carryback" provisions once suggested as an integral part of tax legislation, permitting the individual to carry losses suffered during one year either back or forward to more profitable years, thus more accurately reflecting an average income over a long period of time.

Cohn points out the current method of annual computation of taxes is an "accountant's fiction," which works an especial hardship on those whose income is apt to fluctuate from year to year, people in point being writers. He says that if a man earns $25,000 one year, and loses the same amount during the following year, his net income for the period is zero. Nevertheless, under existing income tax laws, he is obliged to pay a large tax during his better year, and gets no refund for the period when he lost money. Tax expert says there is much agitation at present to have income taxes levied on average incomes over a period of three years or more.

In pointing out writers as particularly hurt by the inequity, Cohn says they are "among those most seriously affected by the disparity between the astronomical regularity of the tax collector and the dramatic irregularity of income."

Charlie Chaplin will play a unique character, for him, in his next picture, "Mons. Verdoux, a Comedy of Murders," appearing as a man who marries gullible women and then kills them for their money in order to provide for his own family. Interviewed by the N. Y. Times' Thomas F. Brady in last Sunday's (26) paper, the comedian disclosed he'll retain no trace of his conventional tramp costume and makeup in the picture, which will probably be released through United Artists.

Chaplin, according to Brady, bought the idea for the picture, which was suggested by the career of the French criminal Landru, from Orson Welles in 1941. He started screening it last June and wound up lensing in 12 weeks, directing the film himself. Pic is budgeted at $2,000,000.

Despite the polygamy and murder inherent in the plot, Chaplin claimed there could be no question of censorship since "none of the women reached me emotionally but my real wife, who is played by Mady Correll." Picture, in fact, has moral value, he said, since Verdoux "feels that murder is the logical extension of business," and so expresses the "feeling of the times we live in—out of catastrophe come people like him."

Warner Bros.' announcement from the Coast over the weekend that it was dropping plans to produce a film version of Charles Jackson's novel, "The Fall of Valor," wasn't taken too seriously in New York by Jerry Wald, who was to have produced the picture. Wald, who worked out the treatment for the screenplay, remarked that similar discouraging pronouncements had been made prior to his gaining final approval for "Mildred Pierce" and "Humoresque." He figured he might be able to reverse the decision when he got back to the studio.

Apparent reason for the WB announcement was that the Production Code Administration had nixed the treatment, from which Wald had removed all reference to the homosexuality, which is a major part of the Jackson novel. Another reason for the decision, it is thought, might be protestations of a number of Hollywood biggies to the brothers Warner. Wald trains from New York for the Coast today (Wednesday).

The Boris Kaplan listed in VARIETY last week as having been named to the directorate of the New York Screen Directors Guild is not the Boris Kaplan who heads Paramount's eastern talent department, as stated. SDG's Boris Kaplan is a nephew of the Par Boris Kaplan and is editorial director of Pathescope Productions, N. Y., commercial picture outfit.

Universal is apparently launching into a campaign to interest outside investors in the stock of the company. Along with the release of its lavish annual report in Technicolor, U has placed ads in metropolitan dailies reprinting parts of the report and outlining the favorable factors for investing in the film industry.

'Too Many Reissues'

ering storm of public reaction. According to one operator of a number of second and third-run situations in New Jersey:

"The reissues are driving people away from the theatres, and the quantity of them we are forced to play shows shortsightedness by the companies. Principal thing people seem to be annoyed about is that they don't recall whether they've seen a picture before or not, and only find out after they've paid their money. A lot of them come out to the boxoffice and get refunds. A lot don't, however, and I wish they would, because they sit through the picture and get very disgruntled, with resultantly poor reaction when it comes time to think of going to the movies again. Instead, they decide to stay home ad listen to the radio."

"Does Better With Reissues"

This exhib admits that he does better with reissues than with a lot of new product that is available to him from the minor companies—and inasmuch as his patrons get annoyed with the pictures either way, he might as well play the reissues, which seem to annoy the ticketbuyers less and pay off better at the b.o.

While exhibitor organizations from Maine to California have passed resolutions and made loud cries against the product shortage and resultant necessity of playing reissues, there's actually nothing, they admit, they can do about it. Their wrath just leads to galloping frustration.

Some exhibs have taken steps to alleviate patron ill-feeling by refusing "to bill Alan Ladd on the marquee when he's in one of the oldies so short a time that if you sneeze you miss him." This billing of current-day stars who have walk-throughs in reissues has been one of the causes of squawks. Likewise, inadequate publicizing in ads and posters of the fact a pic is a reissue. Metro on its reissues now, for instance, merely uses the billing, "M-G-M Re-Presents," which exhibs claim patrons are almost sure not to notice.

Screenwriters' beef on reissues is aired in the forthcoming (February) issue of the Screen Writers' Guild monthly. Editorial asks that actors and directors guilds join with the writers in "solving the problem posed by reissuing old films and the impact of this practice on motion picture employment."

Mag points out that Metro has announced 22 reissue releases, and states that "when this is multiplied by the modest average of four, it means 88 writers are deprived of jobs.

"Of course, we are not proposing a ban on reissues," the SWG declaration states. "Fine plays are revived, fine books are republished and fine pictures certainly should be reissued. The difference is that the fine plays and books pay royalties each time they appear; the fine pictures pay only the studios."

Govt. Okays Six Theatre Construction Setups

Washington, Jan. 28.

Six theatre improvement and construction jobs were among the non-housing construction projects approved by the Office of Temporary Controls during the week ending Controls during week ending Jan. 9. Included were the following: $7,000 in work on the Pitkinson theatre, N.Y.C.; $8,000 work on a theatre of F. A. Bowling at Hopewell, Va.; $1,000 on outdoor theatre of Guy W. Meek at San Jose, Cal.; $3,050 on drive-in-theatre, of Ralph E. Ray, Columbia, S. C.; $10,300 for N. C. Theatres, Charlotte, and $9,500 for a theatre of Sid Mack and Sons, Morrisville, N. C.

In December, the government halted work on 1,152 projects, including a dance hall, bowling alley, skating rink and several duplex beach houses.

competitive areas, indicates even the court's surprise. For instance:

Wright: "Now, the prohibition here is not in terms of a prohibition against acquisition, but one against expansion; so I should suppose without any court proceeding whatsoever these defendants are free to replace such existing facilities as they lose or abandon. Now, I had assumed that one purpose . . ."

Judge Augustus Hand (obviously startled): "Repeat that last thing! (Court stenographer reads back Wright's statement.)

Big Five's stance was set forth, among others, by Paramount's lawyer, Whitney North Seymour, who said: "UN is about to build a magnificent part of the city on the East river. It seems probable that part of that will be a theatre section. No one can say now whether it will draw a substantial patronage from the Times Square area, and, as congestion and transportation in New York city gets worse, it probably will. Now, Paramount owns a fine theatre in the Times Square area. Surely, if there should be a substantial migration of theatre patronage to that new section of New York, Paramount ought to be free to come to your honors and ask leave to acquire a theatre there to protect its investment."

Judge Hand's response to this, and the only expression of the court on the question, was: "Now, Mr. Seymour, we, in drawing up this decree —and it was in the opinion—reserved jurisdiction. That is at once a benefit and a danger to anybody connected with the business, of course. In other words, if it doesn't work, you are at liberty to divest on further hearings, and if this arrangement bears too hard on any theatres in any given situation, you can still come to court and ask to modify where the specific right to modify in this respect was not reserved."

The minutes also set forth succinctly the defendants', Government's and court's stance on the plea to delay competitive bidding.

Wright: "For our purposes there are many situations of people who have been in communication with us which are contrary to the representations which have been made by many of these (exhib) organizations here; they thought their particular situations would be helped when and if competitive bidding went into effect. They, of course, have been advised that the effective date of the provisions will be July 1. In view of that fact, our inclination, I think, is to see that the provision is at least given an actual trial in operation; that you cannot determine whether all of these dire consequences will ensue or what its actual effects will be without actual experience under it."

U's '46 Record

duced rights are evaluated at $1,-044,125.

Current liabilities of the company are set at $7,034,135, compared with $5,182,316 in '45. Long-term liabilities amount to $6,843,000, while total liabilities are computed at $15,289,-942. In a further breakdown, report shows domestic sales expenses at $9,071,026 and foreign at $4,473,203. General and administrative nut was $1,808,355 domestically and $1,030,231 in the foreign dept.

U's 10-Year Advance

U, incidentally, has scored a steady advance, within and outside the U. S. borders, in the 10-year period since the company was purchased from Carl Laemmle in April, 1936. Gross from operations had then dwindled to $17,415,636, one-third of its present sum, and the year's deficit had reached $1,985,860.

Net working capital then was a meagre $6,072,570, against a current high of $29,278,995, and inventory amounted to $6,593,773, compared with the present $21,665,043. Domestic accounts were at a low of 7,500, while sales staffers now deal with 12,000.

Dramatizing U's continued climb since 1939, company's elaborate report graphs a $9,000,000 foreign gross culled then, which mounted to $10,-100,000 in '40; $11,300,000 in '41; $14,-100,000 in '42, $17,400,000 in '43, $19,-200,000 in '44, $22,300,000 in '45 and $23,100,000 in '46.

Also charted from '39 are the company's domestic rentals, which showed the same steady progressions. In 1939, U garnered $17,760,000; in the U. S.; in '40, $14,470,000; in '41, $18,-890,000; in '42, $24,940,000; in '43, $29,-080,000; in '44, $32,360,000; in '45, $28,-750,000 and in '46, $30,830,000.

SELZNICK EXPANDS IN LATIN-AM. FOR 'DUEL'

New Selznick Releasing Organization will expand its operations to Latin America in order to handle all distribution of "Duel in the Sun." Film is slated to preem in Mexico City in May and will probably open in Buenos Aires in June and other South American cities soon afterwards.

Manny Reiner, SRO's general sales manager for Latin America, is currently huddling with David O. Selznick and other studio execs on the Coast. He's scheduled to leave for Mexico City next Wednesday (5) to set up the Mexican sales organization and will go from there to Buenos Aires and several other Latin American cities. On the trip, Reiner will coordinate tentative publicity and distribution plans for Selznick product that he worked out during a six months' tour of Latin America last summer and fall.

Special pre-release bally campaign on "Duel" will be given each opening in Latin America, with SRO field men handling the key city openings at no charge to exhibitors. Exhibs will have their choice of either a dubbed or titled version of the film, since customers in the key cities prefer titled versions, while the dubbed versions go best in the stix. "Duel," as well as other Selznick films, will each be sold on their individual merit, according to Reiner.

straight "four-walls" deal or a percentage setup. Goldwyn is offering to pay an exhib 30% of the gross if the exhib chooses to "operate" the house for him.

'Four Walls'

Distinction lies in that "four-walls," as the term is generally defined in the trade, means that the owner is given a set weekly sum for use of his house, with the producer paying for all the help and other upkeep, as well as for all advertising and exploitation. In the percentage arrangement, as offered by Goldwyn, the house owner pays all operating expenses out of his 30% and, in addition, pays 30% of the cost of advertising.

Goldwyn is now employing both plans. Esquire, Boston, for instance, is on a straight four-walls basis, while Fulton, Pittsburgh, is a 30% deal. Idea has worked out so well that Goldwyn, Monday (27) announced he is setting up a new company, Samuel Goldwyn Pictures, Inc., to act as lessee of the houses. This is merely a legalistic move, of course.

Exhibition policy has proved highly successful in rentals garnered by Goldwyn, although that also reflects, of course, the top biz "Years" is doing. At the Esquire, Boston, for instance, which is a regular roadshow engagement, almost $50,000 has been grossed in four weeks in the 941-seater, as against $105,000 grossed in the same period by "Kid from Brooklyn," Goldwyn's last pic, at the 2,900-seat Keith's. However, "Kid" only got a total of four weeks, while "Years" did better the fourth week than the first ($12,700 as against $12,200) and is expected to get some 30 weeks at an average of about $10,000 a week. That will make for a total gross of $300,000, of which Goldwyn will get $180,000 after taking out expenses. His share of the $105,000 Keith's gross was just slightly over $35,000.

"Years," incidentally, is also greatly outgrossing "Kid" at the Astor, N. Y., although its length means it is giving only six performances daily against "Kid's" nine. At the end of first nine weeks of "Years" it has $441,000 in the till, while "Kid" had $381,000 for the same period. Admish scale, tilted to $2.40 Saturdays and Sundays, is accounting for part of the difference. Tap of $1.80 during the week is same as for "Kid."

Rep Trio in Feb.

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Republic will send three features before the lenses next month, starting Feb. 5 with the Janet Martin starrer, "The Finger Woman," William J. Sullivan producing and George Blair directing.

Second starter will be "Song of the Golden West," starring Roy Rogers, and third will be "After Sundown," Gene Autry's last chore on the Republic lot, pending a decision by the California Supreme Court on his Rep. contract.

world, just as soon as the initial job of shucking off some of the causes of ill-will are accomplished.

This effort to have U.S. films better received abroad is behind the appointment last week of Frank McCarthy, former Assistant Secretary of State and military secretary to General George Marshall, to the post of MPA manager for France. That's a two-way move, since McCarthy's prestige is expected to aid Hollywood's standing in Europe, while Harold L. Smith, whom he replaces, is being transferred to the IIC on the Coast to serve as adviser to the studios on the acceptability of their product on the Continent.

Others To Be Named

McCarthy's appointment will be followed by the naming to similar posts throughout the world of other young, high-powered salesmen for the American industry. MPA prexy Eric Johnston, in announcing McCarthy's appointment, tipped off this part of the broad plan. "The Association," he said, "is endeavoring to send the highest type of men abroad as its representatives. We feel that these men should combine a knowledge and understanding of international relations with a knowledge of the motion picture industry."

McCarthy has been serving for the past year as assistant to Byron Price, v.p. of the MPA in charge of its Hollywood office.

Smith, Durland Team

Smith has been employed by the MPA, since 1928 in dealing with film affairs in Europe, living in Paris most of that time. He will work in the IIC with Addison Durland, who will specialize on the Latin-American countries. Durland was recently named to the MPA Coast staff, with the exact nature of his job not revealed at the time. He formerly worked for the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and during his tenure enjoyed the distinction of never allowing anything to get into a film that brought a squawk from a south-of-the-border nation.

Experts on other parts of the world will be named to the IIC within the next few weeks, with the possibility that a big-name overall chief will likewise be appointed. The setup will function as part of Joe Breen's Production Code Administration. It will be broader than the PCA, however, because of its function of needling favorable material for particular countries abroad into films, as well as making sure that nothing unfavorable gets in.

Although the label of International Information Centre might lead to the idea that the new setup also will be a publicity or propaganda outfit to plug Hollywood abroad, it will have no such function. It will be entirely a service organization to producers.

All the lots already have an international expert who has functioned for the past five or six years to keep them out of trouble abroad, but the MPA hopes to have a core of highly-experienced personnel with great sources of information, who can continuously feed individual studio experts and producers with the latest dope and give them well-grounded advice. Aim will be to work on scripts so that no expensive mistakes are made that have to be eradicated by reshooting.

IIC idea grew out of huddles on the Coast during the past few weeks of Johnston and Gerald Mayer, MPA foreign chief, with studio toppers. All the companies expressed themselves as for it in light of drubbing Hollywood has been taking not only from such persons as Sir Stafford Cripps, head of the British Board of Trade, but William Benton, assistant U. S. Secretary of State for Cultural Affairs. Benton charged that foreign leaders feared Hollywood's "cultural imperialism."

Major's Eyesore

most certain to be tossed in the judicial wastepaper basket, are treated warily, with a number of them recently settled before trial.

Two suits filed in Chicago last week seeking a $2,650,000 payoff were fathered by the New York and Jackson Park decisions. Brought by the Middle States Corp. of Delaware, Minneapolis operator, and the Riverside Operating Co., former owner of the Riverside in Milwaukee, the complaints cite both rulings to back their claims. In each instance the plaintiffs shuttered their houses in '41 sans product.

And there's no dearth of exhibitors nursing their peeves and eyeing the courts.

Switch in Stance

Switch in stance isn't entirely consistent, though, since it's understood that the majors could have settled the Momand action for some $75,000. Legalites in that action were confident that it could be squelched by a dozen interposed defenses including a strong one—that of the statute of limitations—since the cause of action refers to a condition that existed many years ago. The court brushed all aside in awarding Momand $287,000 multiplied by three because of its anti-trust nature.

What's more, majors fear the possibility of exhib lawyers, growing increasingly adept at administering the triple wallop, will ride the circuit as experts in handling the plaintiff's side of the action. George Ryan, for instance, a Boston legal man, who repped for Momand, is heading north to take over the case of a Vermont exhib currently engaged in suing the majors.

UA-Stromberg

be released as their contracts come up for renewal.

New-found independence of UA as a result of the plethora of product on its slate is also reflected in the upped terms Stromberg will have to pay for distribution under the new contract. UA's charge will be 25% for domestic and varying fees, up to 50%, for different territories abroad. Contract is for three years, with Stromberg committed to deliver not less than one and not more than three films each year.

Producer's old pact, under which he will have delivered six pictures, expires this spring. It was for five years and likewise called for minimum of one and maximum of three a year. However, terms were UA's "most favored," that is, 25% up to $800,000 and 10% after that.

Stromberg delivered three films prior to "Strange Woman," only one of which was an important moneymaker. That was the first, "Lady of Burlesque," which turned in $2,-000,000 in domestic rentals. "Guest in the House," which followed, got $1,450,000 and showed a small profit, while the third film, "Young Widow," just about broke even at $1,500,000 in domestic rentals. "Guest," incidentally, is no longer owned by Stromberg. He sold out the residual in it to a New York financing company some months ago.

excellent relations. "These reports," Fielding griped, "have been appearing periodically in the New York press, and individuals who inspire them are adroitly implying that amendments to existing laws are necessary to curtail the powers and activities of the Department of Licenses."

The commish was apparently inveighing against both the proposed local law introduced by Councilman Eugene P. Connolly, which would clip his wings, and a recent meet of legit reps which announced opposition to his activities. In his statement, he declared that under existing statutes a conviction must be obtained before a theatre license could be revoked. While he didn't state as much, commish still holds to his original interpretation that the statute does not apply to films and, consequently, exhibs can face license-lifting without a previous jury trial.

Bill Aimed at Loophole

Bill was introduced into the legislature by Senator William F. Condon and Assemblyman Malcolm Wilson, Westchester republicans. It aims to plug the loophole in section 1090 by striking out the word "similar" from the proviso, which permits license cancellation for obscenity in any "banner, poster or other similar advertising." It also adds the clause "or any poster, banner or advertising" to section 1089, which provides for prompt licensing except where a film is indecent or immoral.

AMERICAN BROTHERHOOD WEEK—FEBRUARY 16-23

Missouri Circuit of 8 Houses Sold For 500G; Other Exchange Briefs

St. Louis, Jan. 28.

One of the biggest motion picture deals in many years here was closed last week when George H. Karsch, prez of the Lead Belt Amusement Co., and the Farmington, Mo., Entertainment Co., sold eight houses in Missouri towns to the recently-formed Harris Theatre Co. for a reported price of $500,000. Karsch, who is reputed to have amassed a huge fortune from his exhibition activities, is retiring from those endeavors to devote his entire time to his extensive real estate and farming holdings.

Owners of the new company are J. Harold Harris, for many years gen. mgr. for the H. J. Griffith's circuit of 34 houses in Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas, and Tom Harris, who has been operating the Ozark, a 350-seater in Eldon, Mo. Tom Harris' son, currently a student at the Univ. of Missouri, will succeed his father as operator of the Ozark to enable the elder Harris to concentrate on the new deal.

Houses involved in the deal are the Odeon, Bonne Terre; Regal, Elvins; Roseland, Flat River; State, Ironton; Ozark, Bismarck; Grand, Desloge; Ritz, Farmington, and Roxy, Leadwood.

Warners H.O. Confab

Zone advertising men for Warner Bros. theatre circuit held a two-day confab Monday and Tuesday (27-28) at the homeoffice with Harry Goldberg, circuit ad-publicity director, outlining special campaigns for forthcoming Warner releases. Mort Blumenstock, ad-publicity chief, discussed policies for production on the spring schedule which include "Nora Prentiss," "Pursued," "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" and others. Harry M. Kalmine, Warner theatre general manager, also addressed the sessions.

Zone men present included J. Knox Strachen, Cleveland; Dan Finn, New Haven; George Kelly, Newark; Charles A. Smakwitz, Albany; Everett C. Callow, Philadelphia; James Totman, Pittsburgh; Frank LaFalce, Washington and Harry MacDonald, Milwaukee.

Kansas Battle Looms

Kansas City.

Battle to bring first-run product to Kansas City, Kans., is shaping up with the appointment of a committee of the chamber of commerce to work on the project. Committee is headed by Jack Truitt, operator of the Electric theatre, and includes R. R. Biechele, John Meyn, W. E. Fulton and Woody Woodward.

Kansas side firstruns, Electric and Granada (Fox Midwest), play 28 days after close of Missouri side firstruns and present clearance regulations which have been in effect for over a decade. Kansas subsequents then follow the Kansas firstruns at two-week intervals.

Committee claims the situation is a source of grievance since surrounding smaller towns in the territory, such as Leavenworth and Lawrence, Kans., and Independence, Mo., play pictures ahead of the Kansas City, Kans., theatres. A contributing factor to this also is extended runs of films in Missouri runs which set the Kansas houses back even farther.

Committee will seek to level off these factors.

Gordon Heads Bijou

Battle Creek, Mich.

Lawrence E. Gordon, trustee and former secretary of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise Co., is the new president of that firm. He succeeds E. C. Beatty, who died in his office in Detroit (21). Beatty was also president of the W. S. Butterfield Theatres, the operating company which owned the Bijou.

The election of Gordon followed a reorganization of the Bijou board, first step toward selecting a new president of Butterfield. The operating company involves the Butterfield Michigan Theaters and 12 subsidiary companies in Michigan, operating 118 houses in 33 Michigan cities.

Other officers elected included William A. Ruble, Lansing, Mich., vice-president; Olive M. Cox, Detroit, secretary, and George S. Burger, Detroit, treasurer. Members of the Bijou board are Howard Michelson, Lansing; Mrs. Maxwell A. Goodwin, Chicago, and Mrs. Caroline Allen, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dickinson's New House

Kansas City.

Dickinson Operating Co., Mission, Kan., opened its newest theatre, Overland, at Overland Park, Kan., a K. C. suburb. House is a 500-seater of modern design. It will operate on a policy of three changes per week, showing double features subsequent to K. C. runs. Admission has been set at 20c and 50c. Willard Louwmaster is the manager.

Dickinson circuit also operates the Glen, Kimo and Tampico theatres in K. C., and 25 others in nearby suburbs and towns.

Hunter Heads Talbot

Tulsa.

J. C. Hunter, former general manager of Ralph Talbot Theatres, who started with the firm in 1926 as a house manager, was named prexy of the company. Ralph Drewry, recently out of Navy, becomes Hunter's assistant. Ralph Talbot continues as secretary-treasurer.

Company operates the Ritz, Orpheum, Majestic and Rialto.

Lippert Adds Drive-In

Medford, Ore.

Construction of a new Drive-In theatre on the outskirts of this town was ordered by Robert L. Lippert, head of the circuit.

New house, with a capacity of 400 automobiles, will be the 35th in the Lippert chain.

Planas to Puerto Rico

Frank G. Planas, with Warners past 17 years, has joined National Pictures Corp. in Puerto Rico as general manager, prexy Ramos Cobian announced last week.

Firm is Puerto Rico distrib of Goldwyn reissues, Korda reissues, PRC pictures and Mexican films.

World To Do Own Booking

Minneapolis.

New owners of World, loop first-run and moveover house, have terminated arrangement whereby Minnesota Amus. Co. (Paramount circuit) booked house for past six years at reported fee of 10% of weekly gross. Ted Mann, one of group that bought this theatre and Alvin from the estate of the late W. A. Steffes for $200,000, will book the house himself.

Mann says he plans to use some art pictures, such as "Open City," not yet seen here, along with first-runs and moveovers, as hitherto. Steffes himself made the booking deal when product for the small house was difficult to obtain. The termination was by mutual agreement, according to announcement.

Schiller Upped at Rep.

Albert E. Schiller was upped to head Republic's branch operations replacing Walter L. Titus, Jr., now southern division sales manager. A. E. Fox moves into Schiller's old spot as assistant in branch operations.

William Howard, RKO Theatres assistant gen al manager, is currently on inspection tour of the circuit's midwest houses, accompanied by James Roth of the operation dept. Pair will visit Cincinnati, Dayton, Cleveland and Columbus.

Harris Retains Senator

Pittsburgh.

Harris Amus. Co. has been assured of its downtown moveover and minor firstrun house, the Senator, for at least another year. Building housing the theatre was purchased last year for $350,000 by the government as a site for new Federal Reserve annex, but construction, which was supposed to start early in 1947, has been postponed until 1948. Senator is the old Aldine, longtime Loew property where Louis K. Sidney first got his reputation as a presentation producer 25 years ago.

House plays secondary product from 20th, U-I, Columbia and UA and also moveover pix from Harris circuit's downtown showplace, the J. P. Harris.

$90,000 Ohio Drive-In Mansfield, O.

Central Drive-In theatre, of Cleveland, has announced plans to construct a $90,000 drive-in theatre along U. S. Route 42, six miles north of Mansfield.

New Sask-House

Regina, Sask.

North Battleford, Sask., Community Services Co-op will build a $50,000, 650-seat theatre this spring, to be financed by sale of 5,000 membership shares at $10 each.

$60,000 Negro House

Raleigh.

Construction of a new $60,000 theatre for Negroes will begin at Rock Hill as soon as materials are available, according to Ben L. Strozier, prez of Rock Hill Theatre. The new house will be known as the Lincoln theatre and will seat 450.

Rock Hill Theatres now operates two other houses in Rock Hill.

PRC's Goldman to Cleve.

Pittsburgh.

Mark Goldman, PRC manager here, transferred to Cleveland in a similar capacity. He'll be succeeded locally by John Zomnier, formerly with Metro in Pittsburgh.

Nellie Reinstein, office manager for Film Classics, has pulled stakes from Film Row and goes into business in nearby Ambridge, Pa., as half owner of a store.

Ken Woodward, former exhib and manager in Uniontown and Huntingdon, appointed general manager of four Ames Theatre Corp. houses in Ames, Iowa.

Frank J. (Bud) Thomas has resumed shipping duties at Republic. He was in exchange's service department before going into armed forces.

Frederick M. Miller announced plans to build a theatre in Conneaut Lake, Pa., summer resort.

Beaumont Building

Beaumont, Texas.

The new $50,000 Peoples theatre being built by the Jefferson Amusement Co., is nearing completion. Another house, to cost $250,000, will be built here, according to Julius Gordon, prez of the circuit.

'Deception' 11G, Indpls., 'Swell Guy' Poor $9,000

Indianapolis, Jan. 28.

With two holdovers in key spots, film biz here is generally okay but under last week's average. Both "Notorious" at the Indiana and "Secret Heart" at Loew's are holding up nicely in second stanzas. "Deception" is fair at Circle, "Swell Guy" slow at Keith's.

Estimates for This Week

Circle (Katz-Dolle) (2,800; 40-60)—"Deception" (WB). Modest $11,000. Last week, "White Tie and Tails" (U) with Alvino Rey Orch, Hal Leroy and other acts on stage. Okay $19,000.

Indiana (Katz-Dolle) (3,300; 40-60)—"Notorious" (RKO). Nice $12,000 on holdover after hefty $18,000 opening stanza.

Keith's (Indie) (1,300; 40-60) — "Swell Guy" (U). Tepid $9,000. Last week, "Temptation" (U) (2d wk). Thin $4,500.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,450; 40-60) — "Secret Heart" (M-G) (2d wk). Sturdy $10,000, on top of fine $15,000 first week.

Lyric (Katz-Dolle) (1,600; 40-60)—"Cat Creeps" (U) and "She-Wolf of London" (U). Okay $7,500. Last week, "Blue Skies" (Par) (m.o.). Nifty $7,000 third week first run. Total take about $48,000.

Picture Grosses

PITTSBURGH

fast-starter and slow-finisher. Did smasheroo trade at getaway but petering out to around $22,000. May stick at that, however. Last week, 3d of "Blue Skies" (Par), big at $17,500.

Ritz (WB) (800; 40-70) — "Blue Skies" (Par) (m.o.). Crosby-Astaire musical hasn't run out its string by any means, as pleasant $4,500 at this small-seater indicates. Last week, "Time, Place and Girl" (WB), on a moveover after two weeks at Stanley, did all right at $3,000.

Senator (Harris) (1,750, 40-70) — "Razor's Edge" (20th) (m.o.). This one's got plenty of stuff left yet, too. Weekend biz points to sock $5,500, and maybe more. Last week, "Notorious Gentleman" (Rank) did better than $7,000 in 10 days.

Stanley (WB) (3,800; 40-70) — "Notorious" (RKO) (2d wk). Bergman-Grant starrer holding up nicely in second session and should do around $21,000, on top of better than $32,000 last week. Will probably stay for a third.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 40-70) — "Beast With Five Fingers" (WB). This one's just the sort of thing the horror crowd goes for and it has an intriguing title for them to boot. Crix didn't care for it but that doesn't make any difference to this specialized clientele. Should get $12,500, very big. Last week, "Mighty McGurk" (M-G) down to weak $6,000.

'BACHELOR'S' 35G, BUFF; 'SOUTH,' 'PALOOKA' 18G

Buffalo, Jan. 28.

Biz good, with "Bachelor's Daughters" and Vaughn Monroe on stage, setting terrific pace in town with $35,000.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (Shea) (3,500; 40-70)—"Bachelor's Daughters" (Par) and Vaughn Monroe and Orch on stage. Colossal $35,000. Last week, "Man I Love" (WB) and "Fabulous Suzanne" (WB), $14,000.

Great Lakes (Shea) (3,000; 40-70)—"Time, Place and Girl" (WB) (2d wk). Over $15,000. Last week, $20,000.

Hipp (Shea) (2,100; 40-70)—"Wicked Lady" (U) and "Spook Busters" (Mono), $11,000. Last week, "Cross My Heart" (Par) (m.o.), and "Missing Lady" (Par). Almost $7,000.

Teck (Shea) (1,400; 40-70)—"Till Clouds Roll By" (M-G) (4th wk). $5,500. Last week, about $6,000.

Lafayette (Basil) (3,300; 40-70)—"Temptation" (U) and "Blondie's Big Moment" (Col). $13,500. Last week, "Her Sister's Secret" (PRC) and "Gas House Kids" (PRC), $15,000.

20th Century (20th Cent., Inc.) (3,000; 40-70)—"Song of South" (RKO) and "Gentleman Joe Palooka" (Mono). Topping $18,000. Last week, "Wonderful Life" (RKO) (4th wk). $10,000.

'Doll' So-So 16G in D.C., 'Skies' 23G, 'Razor' 19G

Washington, Jan. 28.

Biz on the downbeat this week, with holdovers predominating along main stem. "Two Smart People" at Capitol going strong thanks to pull of tabloid "Star and Garter" on stage. Other new entry, "Magnificent Doll" at Keith's, not so hot.

Estimates for This Week

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 44-80) — "Two Smart People" (M-G), with "Star and Garter" on stage. Tab edition of the Broadway revue showing returns to tune of $28,000, despite weak pix. Last week, "Mighty McGurk" (M-G) fair $24,000.

Columbia (Loew's) (1,263; 44-70) —"Clouds Roll By" (2d wk) (2d run). Good $7,500 for 5th downtown week. Last week, fine $9,000.

Earle (WB) (2,154; 44-85)—"Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk). Okay $23,000 after sock $31,000 last week.

Keith's (RKO) (1,838; 44-80) — "Magnificent Doll" (U). So-so $16,000. Last week, "Song of the South" (RKO) (4th wk), strong $18,000.

Little (Miller) (285; $1.20-$2.40) —"Henry V" (UA) (12th wk). Holding at $6,000, with matinees slipping but nights still SRO. Last week, $6,300.

Metropolitan (WB) (1,513; 44-70) —"Time, Place and Girl" (WB) (2d run). Average $8,000. Last week, "Thief of Bagdad" (reissue), nice $9,000.

Palace (Loew's) (2,370; 44-70) — "Razor's Edge" (20th) (3d wk). Dropped to $19,000 after sturdy $25,000 for second stanza.

'Clouds' $24,000 in Mpls., 'McGurk' Pulls $11,000

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

There's a minimum of major newcomers again, the lone important entries being "Till the Clouds Roll By" and "The Mighty McGurk." The Jerome Kern picture, however, is shooting off more boxoffice dynamite than a full quota of newcomers ordinarily explode. It's the fifth downtown week for "It's a Wonderful Life," the fourth for "Blue Skies" and the second for "Song of the South" and "Perfect Marriage," all of them hefty grossers.

Veloz and Yolanda, sans films, and at $3 top, did smash $16,000 for two nights and matinee at Radio City, Thu.-Fri.

Estimates for This Week

Aster (Par) (900; 30-44)—"Strange Holiday" (PRC) and "Man From Rainbow Valley" (Rep), dual firstruns. Okay $2,100 in five days. "Rolling Home" (S.G.) and "Wanted for Murder" (20th), also dual firstruns, opened yesterday (28). Last week, "Jungle Princess" (Par) and "Flight to Nowhere" (S.G.), reissues and duals, neat $2,300 in five days.

Century (Par) (1,600; 50-70)—"Blue Skies" (Par) (2d wk). Fourth canto downtown for this boxoffice champ. Big $6,500 in prospect after virile $7,500 last week.

Gopher (Par) (1,000; 44)—"Bringing Up Father" (Mono). Heavily advertised and terrif $5,000 indicated. Last week, "Plainsman and Lady" (Rep), modest $3,500.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 50-70)—"Perfect Marriage" (Par) (m.o.). Here after profitable initial session at Radio City. Satisfactory $5,000 sighted. Last week, "Time, Place and Girl" (20th) (4th wk), good enough $4,500, giving it big $35,000 for loop run.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,800; 50-70)—"Song of South" (RKO). Has delivered well at boxoffice. Stretching for fine $11,000 after boff $15,000 first week.

Radio City (Par) (4,000; 50-70)—"Till the Clouds Roll By" (M-G). Raves for this one and all-star cast helping to keep turnstiles fully greased. Opening delayed until Saturday because of two-day non-film engagement of Veloz & Yolanda show. Skyrocketing to huge $24,000. Last week, "Perfect Marriage" (Par), good $15,500.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (1,600; 50-70)—"It's a Wonderful Life" (RKO) (2d wk). Fifth stanza downtown for this high-grosser. Will bow out to good $8,000. Last week, okay $8,000.

State (Par) (2,300; 50-70)—"Mighty McGurk" (M-G). Well-liked picture plus Beery's draw spells busy ticket-sellers. Big $13,000 in prospect. Last week, "Show-Off" (M-G), good $14,000.

Uptown (Par) 1,000; 50-55)—"No Leave, No Love" (M-G). First neighborhood showing. Big $15,000 sighted. Last week, "Undercurrent" (M-G), good $4,000.

World (Mann) (350; 50-99)—"One Romantic Night" (Aster) (reissue). No names that mean much, but title and type of picture well-suited for house and climbing to good $2,000. Last week, "Notorious Gentleman" (U-I) (2d wk), moderate $1,800 after good $2,400 first week at RKO-Pan.

Wages Only, With 18½% Chi Formula As Pattern, Talked by Nets, Petrillo

The anticipated James C. Petrillo-network fireworks are off—at least for this year.

When the AFM boss sat down last Thursday and Friday with representatives of the four networks in New York to open up discussions on negotiating a new contract for musicians, it was anything but the knock-down-drag-out fight many were expecting. Compared with the AFRA negotiations, sweetness and light prevailed. And it resolved itself down to this:

A new contract will be negotiated, but only on wages. It will be for one year only. (The Chicago 18½% boost is expected to set the pattern for the coast-to-coast negotiations.) Everything else will be carried over until next year. That's because practically all other matters are affected by the Lea Act, on which Petrillo is awaiting a Supreme Court review of a preliminary victory in the Chicago courts. Wage scales, of course, will be determined by the individual AFM locals.

'Not This Time'

Something of a precedent was set at the Petrillo-network meetings in New York last week, when for the first time station advisory board members from NBC and CBS sat in on the talks. CBS and NBC weren't taking any chances on a repetition of the AFRA fiasco, when stations reversed the networks on the contention that they were left out in the cold on negotiations.

Frank Stanton, CBS prexy, prevailed on Petrillo to let Ken Brown, of KOMA, Oklahoma City, set in as the CBS station advisory board rep, with Niles Trammell, NBC prexy, in turn designated John Jillin, Jr., of WGW, as NBC rep.

Originally Petrillo proposed that negotiations embracing the various AFM demands be held in abeyance pending a decision on the Lea Act review, but that the agreements be retroactive to Feb. 1. The networks chimed in with nix, contending that they may have to wait another six months, and since decisions on pay hikes would also affect contracts with advertisers, etc., any such retroactive deal would complicate the whole network commercial operation. Petrillo yielded.

Wage negotiations got under way in N. Y. yesterday (Tuesday).

ILGWU in St. Loo Gets FM Permit

St. Louis, Jan. 28.

The local branch of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union last week obtained a permit from the FCC to own and operate a FM station in St. Louis and there is a strong likelihood that the station will be in operation by the end of the year. Meyer Perlstein, International v.p. and St. Louis regional director of the union said the new station will be operated on a commercial basis, presenting a balanced program of music, entertainment and speakers, with emphasis on programs of social significance, benefiting the community as a whole and organized labor in particular.

Architects are now drawing plans for the station, which is expected to be located in midtown and which will include a 600-seat theatre. Because of the scarcity of FM receiving sets the union is preparing to buy them in wholesale lots and sell them to union members on a non-profit basis. License to operate was issued to the Unity Broadcasting Co. of Missouri a corporation formed by union members. Other officers besides Perlstein are Frank Rother, v.p.; Ben Gilbert, treas.; and Frederick F. Umhey] sec.

SINGISER BACK TO WGY

Schenectady, Jan. 28.

Frank Singiser, who started in radio at WGY in 1928, returns to the station Feb. 2, in a 15-minute Sunday afternoon roundup sponsored by Wultex Clothes.

Singiser, son of a one-time Troy minister, has purchased two farms, adjoining the one he long has owned near Brandon, Vt. He will commute weekly to Schenectady.

What Comes Naturally

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Digger O'Dell, the undertaker on NBC's "Life of Riley" show, was guest speaker last week at commencement exercises in Los Angeles.

He spoke at Mortician's Academy.

Petrillo's Act Of 'Brotherly Love'

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

The big noise in broadcasting circles here this week is the fast "Brotherly Love" act pulled by James C. Petrillo's AFM local here in what is regarded as a making-labor-history deal pacted by the three network affiliates, WIP (Mutual), WCAU (CBS) and KYW (NBC).

Instead of the anticipated get-tough policy which was expected to emanate from the Petrillo corner, the three network stations concluded a deal with the musicians' local which continues the same wages, hours, etc., working conditions that existed under the expiring contract. The only concession differing from the old contract is that musicians on the three stations will henceforth be guaranteed 26 weeks of employment.

Under the expiring pact, the guarantee was nine weeks.

Pay Hike For Chi Indies

Chicago, Jan. 28.

New contract signed between local indie stations and Local 10, American Federation of Musicians, calls for 15½% wage increases plus two-week paid vacations yearly.

Agreement, which affects platter turners more so than musicians due to small station setup, takes effect Feb. 15 and is for three years. Despite denials of terms and actual contract signing by Edward Bencert, union recording secretary, both WIND and WJJD indicated the pacts were definitely inked.

Coast To Ask For 30%

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Coast chiefs of the four networks will meet with reps of Musicians Local 47 tomorrow (Wed.) to negotiate a new contract.

After refusing to greenlight negotiations for eight months, James C. Petrillo gave an okay over the weekend. Though undisclosed, it's likely the union will seek an approximate 30% pay increase.

Drew Pearson Gets Off Benny Limb in Switch To Ex-Hires ABC Spot

Getting away from the Jack Benny opposition in an effort to snag higher Hoopers, Drew Pearson is switching into the 6-6:15 p. m. time on ABC beginning Feb. 9, instead of present 7-7:15 slot.

Pearson has been running a consistent Hooperating of above 9, and his sponsors, Lee Hats, as well as Weintraub agency handling account feel the gabber could climb higher if taken away from the Benny threat.

Only real opposition Pearson will face on the earlier time will be Ozzie & Harriet on CBS.

With the Pearson move, which will involve a Coast repeat, ABC also moves "Monday Morning Headlines" back an hour, keeping the same half-hour parlay in which "Headlines" has followed Pearson. "Headlines" is sponsored by Air-Wick (Seeman Bros.) but agency is same as that handling Pearson.

Ed Kirby's WVOL Okayed

Ed Kirby will double from his public relations operation in management of a new Nashville station, WVOL, Nashville, with FCC okay coming through Monday (26). Kirby will operate 18 hours a day.

WEVD, N. Y. Labor Station, Off Air In Walkout Quickie

WEVD, N.Y., named after the late Socialist leader Eugene V. Debs and owned by the Debs Memorial Radio Fund, Inc., had its own run in with the workers last Saturday (25). When negotiations broke down between the station management and Local 1212, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL), the engineers at the outlet went on strike. Station went off the air, refusing to try to operate with strike-breakers.

Strike lasted all day Saturday. By 4 p.m., however, station manager Henry Greenfield had settled the walkout, and a half-hour later WEVD was on the air again. Aside from the fact that the labor squabble involved an outlet which is out-and-out labor-controlled, interest centered on the fact that this is the first time a New York station actually went off the air because of a strike.

According to Greenfield, the union had asked for a $20 cross-the-board increase, while the station offered $15. Station, however, was willing to make contract effective for two years, while union wanted right to renegotiate after one year. Settlement was made at the $15 hike price, with pact for two years.

Curious angle is that station's shutdown affected one of the most popular, and longest-lived labor shows in the area, the "Voice of Labor," a full-hour show in Italian which is aired Saturdays at 10 a.m., with Luigi Antonini, veepee of International Ladies Garment Workers Union, as emcee; guestars, and full orchestra. Program has been on the air continuously since 1933, and is piped from WEVD weekly to WHAT, Philadelphia, and WNHC, New Haven.

Producers of the show found out about the strike only an hour before airtime, and immediately cancelled.

Station employs eight engineers, all members of IBEW. New minimum scales, under the pay hike, now runs from a low of $80 per week to a high of $130.

ABC's Quartet Of 'Reverse Trenders'

At a time when radio is seguing into a strictly commercial era and clients are primarily concerned with a "sell goods" payoff, ABC network's wrapup of four public service shows under commercial auspices has occasioned no little surprise in the trade.

The "reverse trend" involves the sale of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the John Hancock Life Insurance Co., which slants its commercials into institutional-educational channels; Goodyear Rubber's sponsorship of the new Sunday evening Biblical series, sans commercials; the sale of the Detroit Symphony on Sunday nights to plug Musical Digest mag; and the co-op sale of "American Town Meeting" forum program, carried commercially by 33 stations.

Brushoff by the Sea

Atlantic City, Jan. 28.

The American Statistical Assn. in session here Saturday (25) devoted one of its clinics to radio research. It was a farmed-out session, presided over by Frank Stanton, CBS prexy. The whole question of audience research, Broadcast Measurement Bureau technique, ratings, etc., got a healthy kicking around, yet it was significant—and deplorable in the eyes of both industry and non-industry statisticians—that in the overflow audience there was not a single representative there from either the BMB or the established rating services.

To many statisticians in attendance it was indicative that there exists too little concern on the technical advancements of research with too much emphasis on promotion.

Stanton's talk highlighted the session. He pulled no punches, scoring an industry that puts too much research emphasis on counting noses but pays too little attention to the qualitative aspects.

'Call for Strike Vote If Necessary,' RWG Is Empowered in N.Y., Chi, L.A.

The membership of the Radio Writers Guild, at three separate meetings held in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, has voted unanimously to empower the Guild's national strategy committee "to call for a strike vote when it shall be deemed necessary."

Every top commercial show currently on the coast-to-coast networks was represented by one or more of its writers at the various meetings, and it was emphasized that in each of the three separate meetings, the strike vote was unanimous.

Guild officials made it clear that the strike vote was "permissive, rather than mandatory." The move was seen clearly as one giving the strategy committee wide latitude while it proceeds to put into effect a couple-threat program of negotiations.

Two phases of the negotiations have already begun. These are the talks for staff writers employed by networks; and for freelancers on sustaining shows. The third step—admittedly the toughest—will involve writers on commercial shows.

So far, there is only one Guild contract with an ad agency handling a commercial show, program being "We, The People," and agency being Young & Rubicam.

But now that the vote has been taken, a demand for Guild negotiations for the commercial writers will go out this week or next to the networks, major agencies, and transcription companies.

Strategy Worked Out

National strategy committee plays were worked out by a group including members from the three principal centers, headed by Bob Newman of N. Y. A firm contract—rather than the kind of "recommended agreement" previously envisioned by the Guild negotiations with the American Assn. of Advertising Agencies—will be sought in the new talks.

Under the proposed pact, writers will lease, rather than sell, their material; they will be protected by arbitration machinery; minimum scales will be fixed; and the "yellow dog" release form will be abolished for one more acceptable to scripters.

An effort will be made also to enforce the "Guild shop." Emphasis

Button, Button

One demand that Radio Writers Guild is always punching home is the matter of writer's "rights" to re-use of his material. And Bob Newman, chairman of the RWG's national strategy committee, has himself illustrated how proper protection of "rights" can pay off.

Back in 1936, Newman sold his first radio script, a short whodunit titled "The Button." It was done on the Rudy Vallee show that year, rebroadcast in 1937, and again in 1938. Newman got full price for each rebroadcast. After inclusion in various anthologies, teaching courses, etc.—with Newman again collecting every time script was used publicly or published—"Button" has been resurrected by Vallee once more. Latter used it on his show last night. And again, Newman was paid full price.

'Once Upon a Tune' Hits Casting Snag

Carl Beier, who is directing the "Once Upon a Tune" series which goes under the Columbia Workshop banner on Feb. 2, has been encountering difficulties in lining up the right kind of singing actors to handle the combination line-and-lyric readings for the musical whimsies. In consequence Beier is handling separate auditions at CBS headquarters in Manhattan to build up a backlog of talent possibilities of this description. This is independent of the regular CBS casting division auditions, which are managed by Martha Morrow, and the singing auditions which Lucille Singleton usually handles. Both Miss Morrow and Miss Singleton will work with Beier in his auditioning for actors who can sing or singers who can act, the comparative scarcity of this particular species being recognized.

While more than the initial four presentations on Sunday afternoon, it was possible to recruit talent from Broadway musicomedies. But with the show going into Saturday afternoon Workshop time, it automatically nullifies the "doubling into radio" from matinee performances.

In the radio trade it's acknowledged that demands of the sort "Once Upon a Tune" makes are sufficiently rare to bring up an acute casting problem. "Tune" is the work of two Toronto broadcasters—Ray Darby and Morris Surdin—brought to New York by CBS. After a four-Sunday break-in, the series goes to the Workshop for a cycle of 13 or more weeks.

GABBER-SPONSOR TIFF SHUTTERS KPO STANZA

San Francisco, Jan. 28.

Paul Speegle, San Francisco Chronicle radio columnist, went off the air following his broadcast of Jan. 10, in a mess which resulted from poor co-ordination between the radio scribe, the advertising agency and the sponsor, "G B Beer", at the time the deal for the Sunday turn was set over KPO.

Speegle, who was booked for the 15-minute palaver under the title of "Strictly Speegle," followed through with a routine he had established on KGW, but the sponsor asked for a format similar to that vacated by Herb Caen who had done the GB assignment previously.

Edit. Kickaround Gets NAB Airing

Washington, Jan. 28.

Rights of radio licensees to editorialize will highlight discussions of NAB's small market stations' executive committee which meets here tomorrow (Wed.) through Friday, under aegis of NAB's J. Allen Brown.

The reps of the 900 small market stations in NAB (serving towns of 50,000 population or under) are expected to play an important role in the broadcasting industry support of prexy Justin Miller's drive to outlaw the FCC's Mayflower decision and to permit stations to editorialize. Both Miller and veepee A. D. ("Jess") Willard will discuss with the small markets men their plans for new legislation to provide for quick judicial review of FCC opinions of the Mayflower variety.

The NAB 14th district, at its meet in Salt Lake City, this month, led the way for all-out industry support of Miller's position by unanimous approval of a resolution empowering NAB directors to "establish the rights of broadcasters to present views under their own sponsorship."

SWITCH REPS TO MAINTAIN REP

Unhealthy Rumors

Recently there's been a good deal of buzzing in and out of the trade concerning the dropping of so-called "liberal" news commentators. That impression has been created that "conservative" commentators have been undisturbed and that only those on the opposite side have lost out. Too many nuances are involved in this area for snap judgment, but probably it's worth remarking that the implications of all the rumors are bad—very bad—for radio as an industry which bases its case for non-intervention by Government on its own capacity for intelligent and fair self-regulation. The stories as widely reported—and credited—do not suggest a high order of brain-power. This is precisely the kind of allegation which broadcasters cannot afford. It stores up future disbelief in their good intentions.

Whether the former counsel (since dismissed) of the Un-American Activities Committee of the House of Representatives stirred up the situation, or whether a shift in intellectual climate has followed the war is a moot question. Different people favor different explanations. Some blame advertisers. Some blame local stations. Some think a revulsion has set in against "liberals" because of the jockeying between the western powers and Russia. None of it sounds healthy for radio if a long-pull view is adopted. It doesn't make a pretty picture—this charge of a purge of liberals. And the least pretty part is that two or three of those "smeared" (and their livelihoods jeopardized) are in no sense leftist.

It would appear that radio was misguided in the first place to ever have allowed "left" and "right" designations to develop. It's not ideal for radio's reputation to have had these labels (a) first accepted; and then (b) that the survivors are reputedly all on the other side.

Bulova Deal for Sale of WOV To Henschel May Put FCC on Spot

Washington, Jan. 28.

Whether watch king Arde Bulova may get around the FCC's multiple-ownership rule in New York City by selling WOV to his brother-in-law, Harry Henschel, while still holding on to his second indie, WNEW, is something the commission may have to decide shortly.

Although it is supposed to be hush-hush, fact is that Bulova has contracted to sell his 80% of WOV to brother-in-law Henschel for approximately $500,000 plus $100,000 which represents cash on hand at the station. And Henschel, who has gone to his brother and a third party for financing, is reported already hard at work at WOV, doubling from his office as a veepee in the Bulova operation.

Just how this family arrangement may stack up at FCC is not known since formal sales application has not yet been filed. And one big reason it has not been filed is that Bulova has to give 60-day notice of sale and the right of first refusal to buy WOV to his long-time enemy and 20% stockholder, Richard O'Dea.

Thus far innumerable deals for sale of WOV have been stymied by O'Dea, minority stockholder in WOV. O'Dea, it's known, is opposed to Henschel's acquisition of the station, on the basis that there's a family tie-in, as well as the fact that he questions Henschel's knowledge on station operation. Rather, O'Dea favors a deal currently in the works for the purchase of WOV by an outside interest (name is being carefully guarded), whereby O'Dea would relinquish all his holdings in WNEW to Bulova (thus severing any ties between the two stations) but he would retain a financial interest in the WOV operation.

Bulova and his lawyer, James Lawrence Fly, reportedly travelled to Washington recently to discuss the entire deal with FCC Chairman,

ABC Folds Pitt. Office

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

ABC is closing its Pittsburgh office, and Kent Patterson, who has managed branch for last year, is being transferred to network headquarters in New York for reassignment. Patterson came here last winter to replace Bob Post, who has since become local freelance radio producer, with Dan Murray show on WWSW and Sho-Biz-Quiz on WJAS.

Virginia Casti, who came from old Blue web in New York as secretary in ABC setup here, is switching to public relations department of U. S. Steel in Pittsburgh.

Do Right by Ar-Nall

CBS is hoping its Dixie stations won't secede from the network.

It's all because ex-Gov. Arnall of Georgia does a guest shot on the web's "Information Please" show tonight (Wed.). There've been some pre-show jitters among the net's brass in anticipation of some ad lib intros to Arnall as a "great defender of democracy," or some other crack that won't rest well with Georgia affiliates.

H'wood Would Lower Guest Fee Ceiling to $4,000

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

There's a sub rosa movement afoot in ad agencies to impose a lower ceiling for guest fees to stars from the cinema. Most are in tacit agreement that $4,000 should be tops while some are holding out for $3,500. Top film stars, such as Clark Gable, rate better than the former high of $5,000 while it takes up to $7,500 to fetch Bing Crosby or Bob Hope.

High price of visiting talent has been under fire for some time on the assumption that they're not worth it—in the ratings, at least. One agency head kept tabs on the Hooper when top paid stars were in the guest corner and the results were anything but heartening.

Years ago when the late Danny Danker ruled the roost at the Thompson agency he set a top figure of $5,000 for Lux—and stuck to it as did most of the others. But the competition became so brisk that one or two others lifted the ceiling and then came the war and loose spending of tax coin. Now that everyone's levelling with the clients' coin and the order has gone out to cut corners, the talk of whacking guestar fees has gotten big and serious.

Should the big agencies form a secret pact to hold the ceiling to $5,000 there would be nothing to prevent the stars from forming a similar block and reprise in kind. Then it would become a matter of who breaks the stalemate.

ERA OF JITTERS FOR B'CASTERS

By GEORGE ROSEN

Comeuppance during the past year of a number of non-NBC-CBS affiliate stations, including independents, that have made definite dents in the community and have contributed toward changing listening patterns and habits in their cities, is causing considerable anxiety among many a bigtime operator.

The result is that the well-heeled station owner and manager who has enjoyed plush times over a period of years is becoming increasingly cognizant of the fact that times are changing and that, unless he readapts himself to the new era in broadcasting, he's due for a jolt.

All of which, in turn, is expected to cue in coming months a wholesale reshuffle in the station rep situation. The recent KOIL, Omaha, divorcement from the Petry station rep outfit and new identification with Free & Peters, is seen as only the first in a series of such moves among the old standbys in radio who see the need for a change in pace and technique, business and otherwise, and believe that a switchover to other representation will invite new ideas and patterns.

Although an increasing number of the bigtime operators are aware that something may be wrong, it's a peculiar situation (and it's something the industry itself will acknowledge) that the last ones they will deign to blame are themselves. If they feel their operation is beginning to border somewhat on the shaky side, it's likely as not they'll take it out on their station rep and attribute whatever shortcomings exist to the fact that they are not being properly serviced.

New and Old

The new feeling among the old standbys actually stems from several causes. To begin with, he has more competition today, what with more and more stations coming into the picture. Hence his audience gets divided.

Second, a number of smaller stations have been coming up fast and on the outside, plunking down lots of coin for promotion (typical example is WITH in Baltimore) and have been creating such a fuss as to actually make a change in community listening habits.

Third, the broadcaster has been hearing a lot of talk lately about a pending recession. He's been burdened with mounting labor costs. And he thinks the time is ripe for a general tightening up.

Fourth, the broadcaster today has become super-research conscious. He's got diary - study on his mind. Hooper, Neilsen, Bob Saulk's Audience Surveys, the multiple operations of the universities — the intense drive to make the station manager buy a diary has had the effect of opening up his mind and making him disgusted. And the station operator will reflect on whether he's getting proper results from his station rep.

The full effect hasn't made itself felt yet — but it's fairly apparent that the coming months will see plenty of switchover activity.

Mutual Drops AP Service; Too Costly as Sustainer

Abe Schechter, Mutual news and special events vcepee, has dropped use of Associated Press service in the newsroom. Deal with AP was on a straight payment basis rather than a share-the-profits percentage from commercial accounts using AP service.

Decision of Mutual not to renew is based on fact that network, currently without any commercial accounts, figured it a costly item, since it's used strictly on a sustaining basis.

Vallee Definitely Goes Off

Rudy Vallee definitely bows off Philip Morris show March 4. He's likely to be replaced by Milton Berle, though there is talk Blow may do some time switching as "Pays to Be Ignorant" is also pink-slipped.

CBS Fiddles as 'Liberals' Burn; Network Dissolves 'One World' Into Schism of Faith, Hope and McCarthy

Corwin-Hope Boxscore

Hooper poll of listeners for the premiere performance of the new Norman Corwin "One World Flight" series made especially for CBS shows that Corwin grabbed himself a 8.6 rating.

Bob Hope, in the NBC opposition corner, tallied a 30.6 rating.

The question of whether it makes more sense to wind up "behind the Hope ball" or play stooge to Charlie McCarthy is one of the posers being tackled by Norman Corwin.

KNX, the powerful CBS station on the Coast, yanked the new Corwin "One World Flight" series out of the Tuesday night (opposite Hope on NBC) time, on which it's heard elsewhere coast-to-coast. KNX is taking it off the line, recording the show, and broadcasting it Sunday afternoon at 5—at the same time the rival NBC station, KFI, is airing the Charlie McCarthy show.

The fact that CBS has been subjected to criticism from a number of sources for giving the Corwin series the opposite-Hope treatment apparently hasn't been resting too well with network executives in Manhattan. To them it's been a considerable annoyance over what is regarded as over-glib "liberal" mind-finding. CBS execs resent criticism of this arrangement.

"We gave Corwin carte blanche, invested lavishly in time, staff and preparation expenses. We broke our own policy against recordings in order to facilitate a good show. All this adds up to a considerable outlay and a first-class gesture to socially-conscious broadcasting. Yet the liberals pipe up that we ought to cancel 13 half-hours of commercials, too. This is downright ungrateful." That's the way one CBS exec characterized it.

That Limited Audience

To which some critics of the Tuesday-at-10 segment have argued back: "Why not go out on limb, policy-wise, and go to all that expense, when it's a foregorie conclusion that you're only guaranteeing a strictly limited audience?"

CBS can argue that the Tuesday night spot opposite Hope is prime time and no slougheroo for Corwin. One comment was along these lines: "We're criticized Sometimes because stations are scheduled on marginal time; but when we assign a cream period, then it's no good because there's a strong show on another network at the same time." Slant here, it's pointed out, is that no show, sustaining or commercial, can be guaranteed a major share of audience once it's pitted against competition. Feeling is also expressed that liberals should have shown more appreciation that such a series was scheduled and CBS was willing to pay the piper.

The "One World" issue is seen in some quarters as the prelude to a major controversy which ties in a growing impression that the networks are veering closer and closer to the right. It's the contention of some of the so-called "liberals" that CBS, after years of "showcasing" Corwin as its top concession to liberalism, now finds itself stuck with him—and wishes it wasn't.

Kate Smith's 5G Wkly. Co-op Deal Set for Mutual

Deal has been set for Kate Smith to move her noontime show over to the Mutual network on a co-op basis, starting June 23. Under terms of negotiations completed Monday (27) Miss Smith is reportedly guaranteed $5,000 a week for the daytime commentary stint, which means the web would be required to do plenty of sales hustling to meet the $250,000 annual tab.

General Foods is dropping both the daytime and Sunday night Kate Smith shows June 20, after an association extending over a decade. Originally it was the intention of Ted Collins, Miss Smith's manager and announcer on her shows, to offer the two programs strictly as a package deal. But the Mutual deal makes no provisions for the night-time show. It's understood that the half-hour nighttime musical package might be abandoned for a while, unless a satisfactory client deal is arranged.

Emergence of Miss Smith into the co-op field points up anew the comeuppance in the past year of co-ops as a "big-business" facet of industry operation, as reflected in the pacting of Fiorello LaGuardia by Mutual; the conversion of "American Town Meeting" on ABC into a co-op venture, etc.

GF Shops For CBS Noon Show

Although General Foods is parting company in June with the noontime Kate Smith show on CBS, the client has served notice that it will hold fast to its valuable franchise of the 12-12:15 time segment.

Meanwhile GF has extended bids to Foote, Cone & Belding as well as to Young & Rubicam, both of which handle accounts in the sponsor company's cereal division, to make program presentations.

GF is also retaining the Sunday evening CBS segment which Miss Smith vacates, and thus far BC-C agency is eyeing a Mickey Rooney package as a possible successor.

JOLSON'S 15G SHOW FOR COMPACT OUTFIT

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

MCA's Hal Hackett trapped "sleeper" for Al Jolson sale to Elgin American Co., maker of compacts. He's now in Miami to close deal.

Price is said to be $15,000.

Elgin-American is no kin to watchmaker, now on air with spot-booked musical discs.

Waring to Exit If Not Sold in 13 Wks.

Unless NBC succeeds in selling Fred Waring's morning show on a cross-the-board basis, the network, it's understood, will drop him at the end of 13 weeks. He's currently sponsored two days a week by American Meat Institute, with the network picking up the tab the other three days. Current deal, negotiated at the first of the year, is for 26 weeks, but cancellable after 13 weeks, with the Meat Institute pact attranged to coincide with NBC's own contract with Waring. Meanwhile, the sales dept. is still pitching, with a couple of hot prospects on the fire.

Waring show is one of the most costly in daytime radio, involving a $10,000 weekly talent nut, while the 11 to 11:30 a.m. period adds up to another $500,000 in billings on a yearly basis.

Van Curler Insists on WOKO Axe; FCC Has Killed Only Five in 14 Yrs.

Washington, Jan. 28.

If FCC follows through on its threat to take WOKO, Albany, off the air, it will be only the sixth time in 14 years the commission has resorted to such drastic action. A check of the records shows that although the Government has proposed to deny license renewals to approximately 20 stations since 1934, it has gotten around to actually deleting no more than five.

Historically, the commission has waved a big stick and won its point. Bulk of the offenders have managed to skin through with new licenses by promises to reform their programming or to switch management. And several broadcasters who now hold licenses were on the mat for offenses allegedly greater than WOKO's concealment of a 24% stock-ownership over a 12-year period.

In view of this, the Van Curler Broadcasting Corp., which put in a bid for WOKO's channel last January, moved last week to bulwark its claims and slap down a WOKO plea to FCC to remain on the air "under new management." (WOKO has bought out ex-CBS vice prez Sam Pickard who held the concealed stock, and proposes to convert to "non-voting" status the shares of station manager Harold Smith, who connived with Pickard).

Anticipating FCC's reluctance to actually void licenses, Van Curler last week hired additional legal counsel, Arnold & Fortas. Thurman Arnold, former Asst. Attorney General, was a onetime boss of FCC Chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr., and Fortas was well-known for his legal feats as Asst. Secretary of the Interior. (The company had already hired the firm of Fisher & Wayland).

'Reward Evil'

Concurrently, Van Curler filed a strongly-worded petition reminding FCC that, to continue WOKO's license would be "to reward evildoers...expose the commission to a charge of insincerity in its previous prosecution of the case, subvert the commission's procedures, and penalize an innocent person" (Van Curler) who has spent time and many thousands of dollars relying on the good faith of FCC's earlier statements on WOKO.

Van Curler hit hardest at WOKO's decision to retain Harold Smith as station manager and to publicly praise his work with the station. "Only the most naive would believe the mere making of Smith's stock 'non-voting' would have the effect of silencing his voice," the petition said.

Meanwhile, FCC has the backing of the Supreme Court in its decision to yank the Albany license. The court opinion, however, termed the case a "hard" one and reminded FCC it had not taken as harsh a line with other broadcasters who were found guilty of similar "lack of candor." Both the District Court and WOKO made much of the station's "excellent program service over an 18-year period" as an added reason why it should remain on the air.

FCC has not actually silenced a transmitter since 1941. In that year WARD and WLTH, both of Brooklyn, went off the air, though proceedings had been started against them several years earlier. WARD lost out on several counts: Failure to maintain control of the station and its programming, not programming in the public interest, defective equipment, financial irresponsibility, etc. WLTH was cited for specific programming counts and failure to assume responsibility for its programming.

Another programming failure resulted in deletion of KGBZ, York, Neb., in 1936. There, the station was claiming cure-all powers for Texas Crystals and herb teas concocted by the licensee. The applicant was also found financially incapable of programming in the public interest.

In 1940, two licenses were actually revoked by FCC. KUMA, Yuma, Ariz., lost its franchise because control and operation of the station was found lodged in a person other than the licensee. In the same year, FCC revoked the license of Frank M. Stearns to operate WSAL, Salisbury, Md., because of falsehoods on his financing arrangements.

Church Buys WKBW

Buffalo, Jan. 28.

The Churchill Tabernacle is closing a deal with WKBW, buying the latter station (if FCC approves) for a price of between $300,000 and $400,000. Price tag, however, includes consideration of various contracts between the church group and the station, some of the pacts ranging over a period of 80 years hence.

The transfer, if approved, will put the present owner of the WKBW license—Buffalo Broadcasting Corp.—entirely out of the radio biz.

Hearst Demands: Bleach the Book

Washington, Jan. 28.

In a last-ditch effort to head off a competitive hearing Feb. 24 and win a license renewal for William Randolph Hearst's WBAL, Hearst counsel last Friday (24) called on the FCC to correct Blue Book references to the station which have caused it "irreparable damage" and resulted in Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen's decision to file for the WBAL frequency.

Littlepage & Littlepage and Dempsey & Koplovitz, Hearst lawyers, said that since Pearson and Allen have not answered their assertion that the Blue Book deliberately maligned WBAL's operation, the fact has apparently been conceded. Once the Blue Book is corrected, the Hearst counsel concluded, the reason for Pearson & Allen continuing in the fight will have disappeared.

At the same time, the Hearst petition questioned the financial showing made by Pearson & Allen's Public Service Radio Corp. Their corporate balance sheet shows $250,000 in existing capital with an additional $100,000 upcoming from a Baltimore bank.

More detailed program plans from Pearson & Allen were also demanded in the Hearst petition, which claims its own program proposals are fully recorded for FCC consideration.

Big Freeze Brings Hot Coverage as WTAH Cooks Quick Community Dish

Cleveland, Jan. 28.

Alert radio newscasting scored a major triumph in this city's cold wave that struck last Tuesday (21). The unexpected cold blast roared in with dailies and most stations sticking close to the usual weather reports.

However, Edward R. Wallace, WTAM news director, sensing that cold wave would, as it had in the past, play havoc on gas pressures to home and industry, began a citywide roundup of conditions both in home and plant.

By 6:15 p. m. news show time, the station had a complete summary, telling of plants laying off workers because of gas curtailment; of homes finding their heating units reduced to a trickle. At the same time, the Sohio Reporter was able to tell the East Ohio Gas Co. view.

The completeness of the roundup paid dividends as all persons involved, plants, homes, and gas company, turned to the station for both future developments and an overall picture of current events.

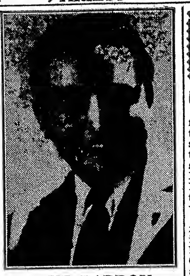
The following day the papers picked up the banner yarn, as did opposition stations.

WCPO'S NEW MBS PACT

Cincinnati, Jan. 28.

Renewal by WCPO of affiliation with Mutual for two years, effective Feb. 1, was announced Thursday (23) by Mortimer C. Watters, general manager of the station and a veepee of Scripps-Howard Radio.

WCPO became a Mutual outlet in 1945 after WSAI, which had been sold by the Crosley organization to Marshal Field, linked with ABC. Crosley's clear channel WLW, tied in with NBC, also carries some Mutual programs.



BLUE BARRON

Fresh from a successful jaunt over the southern leg of Lang-Worth's 400 station platter net, "Little Boy Blue" Barron has been taking bows at Frank Daly's Meadowbrook.

Tonight (Jan. 29th) his New York City fans will welcome him back for his seventh season in Hotel Edison's "Blue Room."

MBS Lifts Repeat Tabu For Series on Radio, Pix Influence on Moppets

Lifting the tabu against repeating programs that have clicked on earlier airings, the Mutual network is going to repeat a series of three shows next month, airing the series from platters made when the programs were on the air last April.

Series, involving discussion by experts of the influence upon children of radio, films and newspapers comics, was aired last April 5, 12 and 26. New dates are Feb. 1, 8 and 15, Saturdays, 11:30 a. m. to noon.

The series had been kudosed by various organizations, and copies of the discussions, taken from the air, had been put into a brochure which has been sold over the country by the New York State Committee on Mental Hygiene.

Moderator of the shows is Austin MacCormick, executive director of the Osborne Assn. and former N. Y. C. Commissioner of Correction. On the radio panel, opening the series, are Miss Josette Frank, radio consultant for the Child Study Assn. of America; radio scripter Raphael Hayes; psychologist William F. Soskin, psychiatrist S. Harcourt Peppard, and Judge Jacob Panken, of the Children's Court of N. Y.

Discussing films are Dr. Alice Keliher, prof. of education at New York Univ.; Paul S. Heard, executive secretary of the Protestant Film Commission; Eileen Creelman, of the N. Y. Sun; and Edwin J. Lukas, executive director of the Society for the Prevention of Crime.

The comics panel includes Dr. Ernest Osborne, professor of education at Teachers College, Columbia Univ.; Mrs. Frances Clarke Sayers, superintendent of work with children at the New York Public Library; Dr. Lauretta Bender, associate professor of psychiatry at NYU Medical School; and Dr. William Ward Ayer, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in New York.

WHK, CLEVE., PREPS 25TH ANNI FIESTA

Cleveland, Jan. 28.

To mark its 25th anniversary on March 5, WHK, Mutual's outlet here, is planning a gala series of events.

Opening anniversary event for "Cleveland's Pioneer Radio Station" will be a luncheon, March 5, at Hotel Hollenden, with 500 leading northern Ohio citizens being invited. They will hear, through recordings, highlights of history which radio now is keeping alive for posterity.

At the same time, WHK has prepared a two-hour show of staff talent, to tour this area. Upon request, the entourage, with program director Pinky Hunter as emcee, will make personal appearances. Incorporated in the show will be the recordings of radio's role in historical events of the past 25 years.

WHK's trademark, "The Covered Wagon" has made much progress in its past 25 years. From a modest beginning as a shortwave station, the company has branched out to become one of the key Mutual outlets, and is continuing to experiment with the latest in radio engineering.

DURR HITS PAPERS' RADIO TIES

Saga of 'Georgia's Other Governor' A Field Day for Atlanta Stations

Atlanta, Jan. 28.

Georgia radio stations have given listeners first-hand information on activities of the state's 1947 General Assembly since its opening in the capitol Jan. 13. Newsmen and engineers of the Atlanta stations have been active and on the alert since the hottest session in the history of Georgia's politics began two weeks ago.

Present for the opening events of the sessions during the initial week were newsmen from Atlanta's four stations, WAGA, WATL, WGST and WSB, and Macon's WMAZ. The five have continuously been on the alert for any developments of interest to the public, and have aired all major events. WRGA of Rome was up for one day.

Walter Paschall has been doing on the spot broadcast for WSB. General Manager John Fulton headed his full announcing staff with Francis Harden, Percy Hearle, John Gray and Ken Wilson. CBS assignments were handled over WGST by Fulton, Hearle and Wilson. WMAZ news director Ben Chatfield and production chief Frank Hyobs made special broadcasts to their Macon station through facilities of WGST. Engineers Ben Ackerman and Ivan Miles did first class engineering jobs over WGST programs, and the WMAZ specials.

Reporting for WATL, Atlanta's Mutual outlet, were Jim Hardin, Stan Raymond, Ray McKay and Zera Sears.

Friday, Jan. 24, Herman Talmadge, one of the claimants to the governorship of Georgia, bought radio time with personal funds to attack former Gov. Ellis Arnall and the Atlanta Journal. He paid $1,600 for a 30-minute statewide hookup, during which he urged the public to put the pressure on legislators during their weekend recess from the Assembly.

Early Friday, Talmadge wired the FCC that he had been refused time by WSB. Later in the day he was granted 15 minutes free time to answer criticism by an associate editor of the Atlanta Journal.

Saturday, Talmadge said that he had received contributions toward the statewide hook-up costs, amounting to between $600 and $700.

Lone Wolf—With Sound

One lone sound-effects man in the NBC recording division is "stuck" with membership in the American Federation of Radio Artists, although 19 fellow soundmen working on live shows at NBC pulled out four months ago. The latter went to National Assn. of Broadcast Engineers and Technicians (NABET, Independent). According to George Heller, national exec sec'y of AFRA, they made the move before the current contract negotiations "because they considered AFRA demands on their half as too high." (CBS soundmen, incidentally, have switched, from AFRA to IBEW).

In the case of the lone NBC wolf, he couldn't pull out of AFRA. Last week, he petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for a labor election on his contention that he would like to leave AFRA and join NABET. The NLRB ruled that this one man is not "a suitable bargaining unit."

Down With—

Macon, Jan. 28.

WMAZ, Macon, Ga., received a letter last week signed by Middle Georgia College students protesting the station's carrying of Herman Talmadge's address to a joint session of the Georgia General Assembly. Overlooking the fact that the station carried "Aunt Bunie and the Dental Snuff Varieties" earlier in the day in order to carry the public service feature, the students wrote the following letter:

"We resent the fact that you interrupted our favorite program, "Aunt Bunie and the Dental Snuff Varieties," to bring us a broadcast from a bigger kick than she. We realize that he is an important man, but we are not in the least bit interested in listening to propaganda. We had much rather listen to some one who has our support."

It's Now Official, AFRA, Webs Sign

The national commercial contract between the four major networks and the American Federation of Radio Artists will officially signatured today (Wed.) by both sides, and the transcription code has been signed by two of the largest waxeries. Thus ends a four-month series of negotiations for new AFRA codes to replace those that expired last Oct. 31.

Fred W. Ziv and World Broadcasting Co. signed the transcription codes Monday (27), this starting the parade which will, without a doubt, include all other transcribers and eliminating any possible conflict on that end of the negotiations.

Actual signaturing of the net commercial code was held up until this morning pending settlement of the KFI holdout on the Coast, but that's been settled amicably by the interception of ad agencies.

Earle C. Anthony, of KFI, never had signed an AFRA contract, having always insisted that he would not put his name to a union document. However, he has always in the past given his verbal assurance that he would live up to the current AFRA codes, and AFRA people both here on the Coast concede that Anthony never broke his promise.

In the case of the current contract, he has refused to accept a clause providing that L.A. stations pay commercial fees to announcers when they work on local commercial programs. In order to get the dispute over with, ad agencies have agreed they will meet the cost in the case of KFI. On that basis, the argument was settled.

ROGER BAKER ALSO VAMPS CROSLEY SETUP

Cincinnati, Jan. 28.

Roger M. Baker, account executive of WLW, announced his resignation from the Crosley Broadcasting Corp. last week after four years' upper bracket men in the organization did likewise. In each instance the date of severance is indefinite.

Baker joined the Crosley staff in 1943 as baseball announcer on WSAI, succeeding Red Barber, who changed to WOR to start his strings of the Brooklyn Dodgers' games. Previously Baker was a baseballcaster in Buffalo for WGR and WKBW. He continued in sports with WSAI until the close of the 1944 season, when WCPO became Cincy's exclusive baseball station, and then transferred to the Crosley sales department, attaching to WLW after the sale of WSAI to Marshal Field.

LaGuardia to WNEW If WOR Doesn't Sell Him

Former New York Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia will air his Mutual network co-op Saturday night gabfest locally in N. Y. over the indie WNEW unless the web's flagship, WOR, sells him very soon.

Former mayor insists on having a New York outlet, and it was definite that he would not wait too long if WOR fails to find a bankroller.

Meanwhile, LaGuardia has no Chicago sponsor as yet, either, and WGN, Mutual outlet in Chi, is not carrying him sustaining.

ASKS LOOK AT CHAINS' HOLD

Washington, Jan. 28.

A motion that FCC look comment from the industr, and other interested parties on a proposed rule barring newspapers from owning more than one AM, FM and television station has been laid before the FCC by Commissioner Clifford J. Durr, it was learned today.

The revolutionary proposal failed to win consideration by the five other FCC members, but it is on the books and the Alabama commissioner can be expected to remind FCC from time to time of what he considers "the serious problem" of chain newspapers controlling equally strong radio holdings.

Durr said he has not made up his own mind that such a limitation is desirable but he would like to have the FCC open its doors to full discussion of the pro's right or wrong with the proposal. As he sees it: "The problem of growing concentration of control in the media of communication is serious enough for us to go in and try to get such advice as we could from outside sources."

The commissioner said he was entirely sympathetic to a newspaper getting a radio station in its home town as a form of technological improvement in disseminating the news. His question strikes at the multiple radio holdings of several powerful newspaper groups.

Durr said he has not thought much about the ramifications of such a rule as the radio holdings of outfits like Scripps-Howard, Hearst, the James Cox radio-newspaper empire, Knight Newspapers, Gannett Publishing Co., the Chesbrough's New York Post, and other papers with a string of radio affiliates. Newspapers' right to several facsimile operations is something else that would have to be considered in such a rule.

Third of AM

Commissioner Durr's recommendation is the sign of revived FCC interest in the penetration of newspapers into radio since dismissal of the newspaper-radio investigation in Jan., 1941. FCC statistics show that publishing interests are the largest single group in standard broadcasting, accounting for well over a third of the AM licensees. Aside from AMers they are the largest overall group entering FM, and comprise over one-third of the newcomers to FM radio. In television, again aside from standard licenses, publishers are the largest single group of bidders and permittees. And, naturally, they are responsible for the bulk of present-day experimentation in facsimile.

Durr's motion was made last Thursday (23) as the commission approved the transfer of stations

WHOM Nixes Fund Raising By Religious Groups; Paid Obits, Weddings Also Out

Three religious organizations that have been soliciting funds on their shows over WHOM, N. Y., have been notified by the station that as soon as their current cycles are up—by the end of this month—they'll no longer be allowed to ask for coin.

Station has also ordered paid obituaries and wedding announcements dropped from its Polish programs.

On the fund-raising end, the station has decided, under the new format plan, that commercialism is one thing while the organizations involved are thoroughly reputable—the practice of using the air for money solicitations does not make for good radio.

In regard to the Polish programs, listeners have assured the station management, through a special Pulse survey, that they welcome news of deaths, engagements, marriages, etc. —even though the latter are paid for by the families concerned. However, the station decided to drop them in the interest of uniform programming, since such sales are not allowed on other lingo programs on the station.

Commission Half-Supported, Part Slapped Down in Decision on WKBW

Washington, Jan. 28.

The U. S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia yesterday (Mon.) told the FCC it was 50% right and 50% wrong in its decision to revoke the license of Buffalo Broadcasting Corp.'s WKBW, Buffalo, unless it cancelled contracts it had held since 1931 with the Churchill Tabernacle of Buffalo.

As expected, the court unanimously upheld the commission's right to abrogate contracts with reserve radio time for persons other than the licensee over long periods, and provide for a reverter of license in case of sale. (In this case, the Churchill Tabernacle had the option of using 17½ hours a week on the station through the year 2027 A.D., and would have the first right to the WKBW license if the station were sold).

On the other hand, the court criticized the FCC for failure to specify a reasonable broadcast time, within the terms of the lease periods, which the church might use for religious broadcasts and for invalidating those parts of the contract which insured the church payments of $150 a week and reversion of the physical property (not the license) of the station. (FCC General Counsel Benedict Cottone told the court FCC was not voiding any agreements which the church had with WBKW other than those on use of time and reverter of license).

The court, however, ruled: "We think the case should be remanded to the commission to determine whether a contract, modified as to the length of its existence but allowing a reservation for a reasonable broadcast time, would be contrary to the public interest. We find nothing in the present rules or practice of the commission to forbid some such arrangement on these lines."

The court concluded: "Its (the church's) objective was and is the reasonable use of the facilities of its formerly owned radio station and the propagation of its religious doctrine. To deprive it of that is to destroy the bone and marrow of its being . . . It would seem to us the facts justify—if not require—the commission, in reconsideration of those rights, to offer the church the opportunity to substitute for the objectionable provisions modifications that would not be contrary to the public interest . . ."

James Lawrence Fly argued the case for the church, which has reported it's ready to close a deal to re-buy WKBW.

The right of a station to maintain control over its own time was recently upheld by a Denver court in the case of KVOD, Albuquerque. Similar contracts are the subject of FCC scrutiny at WAIT, Chicago, and WJOL, Joliet.

Is AM 'Standard'? Nay, Nay, Sez FMA

Washington, Jan. 28.

First official act of the newly-formed FM Assn. was a request last week (23) that FCC rewrite its rules to wipe out what was described as an unfair description of the type of broadcast service delivered by FM.

FMA prexy Roy Hofeinz asked FCC chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr., to delete all references in commission forms and regulations to "standard" broadcast stations and to substitute the phrase "amplitude modulation" or AM.

Hofheinz said: "It is generally recognized in the industry and by the commission that frequency modulation offers an improved quality of broadcast service and it is, therefore, quite misleading to the public generally to have any reference to an inferior service as a standard service."

FCC officials admitted they had no wish to keep AM as the "standard" radio service of the future, but pointed out it would require a new radio treaty before the offending terminology could be wiped off the books. The North American Regional Broadcasting Agreement and other treaties now in effect refer to the 550-1,600kc band as the "standard broadcast" band.

Commission men added that the language appears so many times in so many places in FCC literature that it could not be changed immediately, in any event, without a lot more money than FCC has or is likely to have at its disposal.

'Sell Michigan' Drive Ready for WJR Preem, Backed by Governor

Detroit, Jan. 28.

Gov. Kim Sigler of Michigan will inaugurate a new program, "Know Your Michigan," over WJR (CBS) on Feb. 9. The new Sunday afternoon show will feature the Wayne Univ. band and will incorporate a five-minute talk on Michigan. The governor has endorsed the program as one that will sell Michigan to the people of the state.

Also in line with the governor's appeal to Michigan stations to "sell Michigan and keep Michigan abreast of the political picture" the station has a series of "Your Congress" programs during which Michigan Congressmen will report direct from Washington. The first broadcast (26) featured Rep. Howard A. Coffin. This program will shift to 7-7:17 p.m., Saturdays on Feb. 8.

Gov. Sigler soon after his inauguration launched a bi-monthly broadcast over WJR, directly from his executive office, during which he reports to the people.

Sigler recently told radio executives they are destined to play an ever increasing part in politics, especially in bringing to the people the behind-the-scenes movements. "Radio can do more to clean up politics than any other medium," he said.

Cleveland—Reg Merridew, WGAR chief announcer, named production manager.

Sterling Drug's 'Zeke' Buy on ABC Cues Ayem Opening Time Revamp

A 52-week contract for a cross-the-board 15-minute morning show, to be sponsored by Sterling Drug, has brought about a change in the ABC's net opening time, moving the coast-to-coast hook-up time forward by a half-hour to 7:30 a.m. beginning Monday (3). Net has been opening its lines until now at 8 a.m.

Drug outfit, which already sponsors "Bride & Groom" on the net for a half hour, Monday-Friday, at 2:30 p.m., has bought the "Zeke Manners and His" combo five times daily. Sponsor has been bankrolling the show on the ABC's Pacific web for a year.

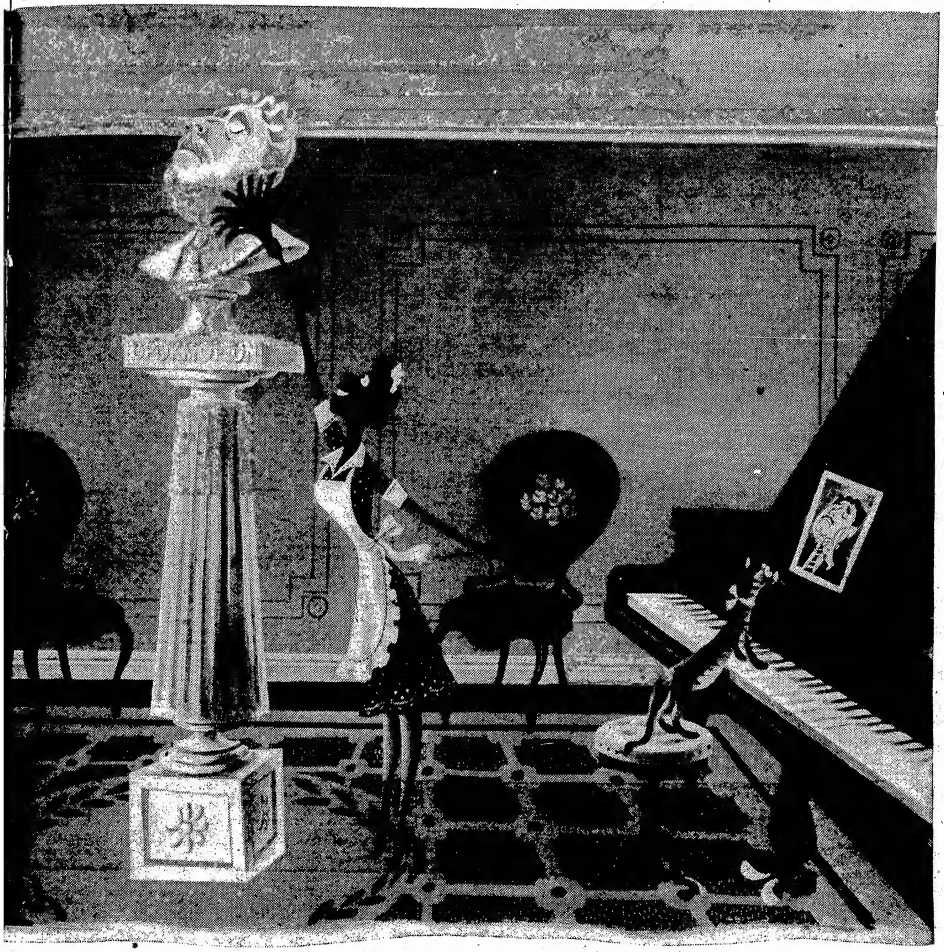
Under the new arrangement, "Zeke" will be heard live in the east, through Hollywood origination, 7:30-7:45 a.m., Mondays through Fridays. Show will be repeated five and a half later for the Central Division, and will get live repeats for other areas in accordance with each zone's time schedule.

Network will open its lines at 7:30 a.m. for "Zeke," and close down again between 7:45 and 8 a.m., leaving that time to the affiliates for their own programming.

STORY OF THE GREAT MAN HIMSELF ★ The Great Gildersleeve is still a bachelor because his listeners won't permit him to marry. Back in 1943 the writers of the show introduced a romance for Uncle Mort. Listeners approved. But when the script writers took the bold step of having Gildersleeve become seriously interested in the red-haired widow Ransome, the reaction was immediate. Letters showered in stating that Gildy should remain single and devote his time to raising his niece Marjorie and nephew Leroy.

In their concern, listeners proved that the character of Throckmorton P. Gildersleeve had become as real as life to them. For Gildy is the eternal bachelor. He is continually attracted to marriageable ladies—but only to a point just short of the altar. In shrinking from the responsibilities of wedlock he expresses the immaturity of his nature. That inane laugh and absurd pomposity are a reflection of his arrested development. The Great Gildersleeve is caught between the day before yesterday and the day after tomorrow—a ludicrous but lovable figure of adult adolescence.

Harold Peary first played the role of Throckmorton



P. Gildersleeve in 1935 on the Fibber McGee and Molly show. In 1941 he emerged with his own full-time show which, under the sponsorship of the Kraft Foods Company, has risen to a position among radio's fifteen top-rated programs. Every Wednesday night finds him surrounded by a cast as distinctive as his own colorful personality. Virtually the entire cast—Leroy, Marjorie, Judge Hooker, Mr. Peavy, Floyd the barber and Eve Goodwin have only one dramatic purpose—to build up and then deflate the Great Man's ego. Only Birdie, the colored maid, is no heckler. But even into her good intentions Gildersleeve manages to read cause for worry and mistrust.

How to make a Great Man? Endow him with a full share of human failings, lovable and recognizable to millions. Entrust the role to an actor of long experience and intuitive understanding. Bring to life his voice and character in the millions of homes served by the powerful facilities of the NBC Network. Put him in the company of other great personalities heard on NBC. The result: a life-size creation in sound as three-dimensional as your next door neighbor.

THE GREATEST STORY EVER TOLD
With Sydney Smith, Rod Hendrickson, John Sylvester, Henry Neely, Roland Winters, Eleanor Sherman, Karl Weber, Ben Cooper, Joe de Santos, Alan Hewitt, Karl Swenson, Jack Hartley, Ray Morgan
Producer: Fulton Oursler
Director: Marx Loeb

WJZ-ABC, N. Y.
(Kudner)

ABC network's new Sunday evening show, "The Greatest Story Ever Told," with its religioso format, for which Goodyear Tire and Rubber is picking up the tab without benefit of a single commercial save for a front and back identification as sponsor, rates accolades as one of the truly sock public service programs of the year. The web had been touting the Biblical-inspired series weeks in advance, and on the basis of last Sunday's (26) premiere performance, there was justification for its pride.

Whether the intent of the program is to dramatize episodes from the Bible in such a manner that its precepts gain a wide audience via ABC's coast-to-coast facilities, or whether it is to use Biblical incidents as an analogy for the presentation of present day evils, on both counts "Greatest Story" merits acclaim.

The first in the series, "The Good Samaritan," scripted by Henry Denker, was as forceful an indictment of intolerance and its henchmen, prejudice and bigotry, as any 20th-Century characterization could project. Using the parable of the Good Samaritan, the fundamental Commandment of Love Thy Neighbor was unfolded in such a manner as to instill an awareness that living in accordance with the Biblical and the human adage would outlaw most of the hatred and selfishness in the world today. As such the dramatization could stand as an emblem for ushering in universal brotherhood.

Revived by modern verbiage, the adaptation of the Bible tale was made meaningful. Similarly, the production itself struck the same tempo of timeliness with the clear diction of the cast, the bypassing of pompousness and unction, and the utter simplicity that permitted the tale of the Good Samaritan to speak for itself.

The orchestral-vocal bridges and songs that punctuated the program were in keeping with the ecclesiastic overtones of the stanza. Rose.

QUIZPARTNERS, INC.
With Gil Hodges, emcee
Producer-Director: Henry Felix
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 3:30 p.m.
Participating
WTAG, Worcester
(Paul H. Raymer)

This is a routine afternoon quiz-show that doesn't tax the advertisers' bankroll or the dialers' mentality. Show is built along elementary lines set by the average and participation program. A group of studio visitors are paired off as members of a "corporation" and each pair must answer a series of eight questions in order to win a prize. Prizes are inexpensive giveaways, and because of this, not much excitement is generated as the "corporations" edge up to the eighth question.

Gil Hodges handles the emcee chore brightly and pushes the show along at a nice clip. When a quizee falters over a question, he supplies the usual "hints" that make a wrong answer a practical impossibility. In addition, the questions are on the order of: what color hair has Veronica Lake? Plugs for participating advertisers are spotted not too frequently and are brief.

THOSE SENSATIONAL YEARS
With Quin Ryan, Harry Elders, Fern Persons, Cliff Norton; Lee Walters, announcer; Rex Maupin Orch
Writers: Roy Windsor, H. Y. Bingham
Producer-Director: Fred Kilian
30 Mins.; Thurs., 8:30 p.m. (CST)
Sustaining
WENR-ABC, Chicago

Absent from radio for the past two years, Quin Ryan, former Chicago Tribune reporter and pioneer ex-manager of WGN, returned to the air last week with weekly dramatizations of news stories that hit the nation's headlines during his career, going back to 1925 for preem (23) airer. Nostalgic news cavalcade has the essence of being welcomed by listeners looking for a taste of yesterday.

Placing time of occurrence vividly, Ryan builds up to story by recalling gimmicks of yesteryear, while orch makes with bits of music of the era in an effort to spot a certain time in the past for the dial twister.

Episode of Kentucky farmer Floyd Collins' death in an underground disaster, was probably the toughest workout a local sound effects man has had in many a month. Scripting was top quality and presented adequate portrayal. Ryan's observing narration throughout was well timed, though a few muffs found their way into his commentary probably because of some rust accumulated during the absence.

Harry Elders, in role of Collins, was easily topnotch, with supporters adding enough realism.

Twenty-five-piece Rex Maupin orch ran close with sound man in effort put forth as bridge music maintained a constant flow with nifty results.

HIT PARADE
With Dinah Shore, Andy Russell, Mark Warnow, F. E. Boone, Speed Riggs, others Producer: Lee Strahorn
Writer: Glen Wheaton
45 Mins.; Sat., 9 p.m.
AMERICAN TOBACCO CO.
WCBS-CBS, N. Y.
(Foote, Cone & Belding)

The decade-old Lucky Strike "Hit Parade" has apparently only recently become aware of the fact that radio does change to some degree. Pet program of the late George Washington Hill, this Saturday evening standard has long hewn to a line established by the late tycoon and has long been saddled by the idiosyncracies of the magnate to the point where it resisted any encroachments of modernity in presentation.

Only recently has there been a few minor changes in the setup, which to many indicates that this session is FC&B's problem child and number one project. Program moved to the Coast a few months ago, although commercials were still delivered from the east. Then Joan Edwards, for several years the femme chirper, was let out in favor of a series of guests, first of whom, Dinah Shore, premiered for a four-week stint on Saturday (26). Male singers are also skedded as guests, cueing speculation as to whether Andy Russell is to be retained when his option period expires.

Now that the program has been fully divorced from the east and commercials are no longer piped in, there's apparently an easier feeling in the session. The chatter between Miss Shore and Andy Russell was affable, Mark Warnow has noticeably tailored his arrangements so that there's counterpoint, and orchestral arrangements have achieved a degree of softness. Program's specialty is still selection of the week's top tunes.

But the trip-hammer commercial still goes on. This vestige of GWH theory is still in effect, and any mood created by the smoothness of the new layout is lost once the LSMFT spiel is on. Jose.

SKIP FARRELL SHOW
With Skip Farrell, George Barnes Trio, Honeydreamers Quintet; announcer, Jack Lester
Producer-Director: Phil Patton
15 Mins.; Mon., Tues., Wed., 7:15 p.m.
Sustaining
WENR-ABC, Chicago

This show on the ABC net makes it difficult to believe that really big time radio is forever gone from these parts. The names may not be big, but it's a cinch the quality is there, with Skip Farrell a definite cross between Bing Crosby and Perry Como.

Spot goes along in much the same manner as the Chesterfield Supper Club, and the between-song banter of crooner Farrell and announcer Jack Lester make you think the next thing coming will be a ciggie plug.

Although a large orch is absent, it isn't missed much, with the George Barnes trio doing a nifty rounding out job. Combo consists of Barnes and guitar, Mel Henke with 88, and Harold "Stompy" Siegel pounding bass. Trio offers one spot of original Barnes jive per show.

Show is dominated by Farrell's songs along with background of Honeydreamers' velvety vocalizing. Group of three boys and two gals is made up of Dick Lawson, Ardys Benson, Keith Texter, Sylvia Mikelson and Paul Montan, who come to ABC from music classes at St. Olaf College, Minneapolis. Definitely of high caliber among the groupers.

Farrell's easy-going manner, both in song and emceeing, go far in making this a worthwhile evening touch of lush interpretations of hit paraders.

SALVATION NELL
With Helen Hayes, Craig McDonnell, Bill Griffis, Florence Hallop, Grace Valentine, Ralph Bell, Stuart McIntosh, Kermit Murdock; announcer, Bob Sherry
Adapter: Jack Wilson
Producer-Director: Clay Daniels
30 Mins.; Sun. (26), 12 noon
Sustaining
WNBC, N. Y.

As a kickoff to the Salvation Army's 1947 maintenance fund drive, WNBC gave the SA its Sunday noon time this week (26) for a dramatization of the late Edward Sheldon's old-time legiter, "Salvation Nell." With Helen Hayes as star of the performance, it was difficult to go wrong on this one. And the expected payoff came through, making for an excellent pitch for the beneficiary organization through radio's best format.

The play is one which, without extreme care, could become a burlesque. All the elements for such treatment are in the original Sheldon piece, and it has often been played in just that broad manner—femmes banging tambourines, drunks badgering Hallelujah-shouting do-gooders, and a couple of sinful sisters in the offing adding to the general hilarity. But to do this oldie straight and make it come off—that takes not only seriousness of purpose but also artistry of a high degree. Fortunately, the stuff was there on this one-shot.

From D. L. Provost's planning of the play, to Jack Wilson's scripting, and Clay Daniels' sensible production plus sympathetic direction—"Nell" was in the bag. Miss Hayes' acting was tops. But the rest of the cast was so good, down to the bits, that the whole shaped up as a genuine tribute to all concerned—the Salvation Army's work, Sheldon, and the station itself. Cars.

Ruth and Rudy

Ruth Etting came off a Colorado farm to resume, after six years, her professional career. That was last week (21) as guest on the Rudy Vallee show. She still sings a good song.

Miss Etting sang two numbers, an old one and a new one, and the paradox was that she sang the new one better than the old one. The tunes were "For Sentimental Reasons" and "Harvest Moon."

Consuming almost the entire second half of the program the reason it took her 15 minutes to unwind a pair of pops was that there was too much talk with Vallee about life on the farm. This was sandwiched between ditties and the time would have been better spent if Miss Etting had tossed in "Ten Cents a Dance" or "I've Got a Right to Sing the Blues" as a third entry. She sings the bejabbers out of these, too.

That "Harvest Moon" didn't stand up as it should was Miss Etting's fault. Her original recording of this song ranks among the finest pop vocals ever waxed. So what did she do? She left that arrangement flat for a newer musical background which did nothing for her. But it was fair enough and so for those who don't remember it probably made little difference. It just seemed a wasted opportunity and a chance for Miss Etting to have killed all the people.

On the other hand, her "Sentimental Reasons" was plenty good. It was enough to establish that Miss Etting can about go where she wants to go, do what she wants to do regarding radio—if she wants to do it badly enough. If she has also retained her appearance, and no doubt she has, that makes theatres certain as well. Her voice was strong and smooth on "Reasons," her diction fine and it got her away to a nice start.

As for Vallee, that talent digging genius (jg), it continues apparent that he knows the answers. And while the kidding about his voice rides for what it's worth, it remains a fact the guy delivers a tune. Those orchestrations behind him are seldom wrong. Vallee is no chump.

ABC's Showcasing Of Ideologies Puts CIO In Showmanship Lead

Again this year, the ABC net has skedded its battle-of-the-ideologies parlay—two 15-minute shows, back-to-back—one by the CIO and the other by the National Assn. of Manufacturers, on the accustomed Sat. evening time, 6:45-7:15 p.m. Shows bowed first Saturday night in January (4), and those cased for review (25) were fourth in the parade. Showmanwise, so far, CIO is still ahead, but NAM is fast catching up.

"Labor: USA," which opens the proceedings at 6:45 p.m., may owe its edge to fact that somehow it seems closer to the people for whom it speaks—i.e., the organized trade unionists in the country, particularly those who belong to CIO. Pete Lyon's scripting keeps the material down to earth. A remote hooked, this time, to Milwaukee, put on a Mr. & Mrs. pair who were mccoy. No actors these, but a CIOer who earns $58 a week and has to support a wife and eight kids on that sum. When he talked about take-home pay, it was credible. And when his wife conceded she may find bigger bargains in food-stuffs but can't traipse about town what with her progeny to look after—that, too, was anything but play-acting. And with Tom Glazer's balladeering on "I'm An American Workingman" rounding out the quarter-hour, the show was surefire.

NAM's theme song, done by Crane Calder, had a more stuffy quality, lacking warmth. The NAM scripter, Larry Witte, did well with a documentary showing the plight of school teachers who are underpaid, in an effort to drive home the feeling that the manufacturers are just as friendly to little people as any union-ist could be. But somehow the piece, though competently acted by pros, didn't come off. It was not a slice of life but a vignette written for actors.

Fact, though, that NAM is doing this kind of thing—rather than straight propaganda like the CIO punches home—shows that the money boys have learned how to speak softly, making in their case for much better radio than their efforts of last year.

On the whole, the two stanzas make an interesting half hour. Neither show refers to the other. Net simply lays them end-to-end, and lets it go at that. It's up to the listener to judge, and both parts are undoubtedly attracting listeners. Cars.

SCOTLAND YARD
With Basil Rathbone, Anne Burr, Les Tremaine, Robert Dryden, William Podmore, Philip Clarke, Cathleen Cordell, Mary Orr, John Stanley, Alfred Shirley; announcer, Phil Tompkins; music, Sylvan Levin
Writer: Peter Barry
Producer-Director: Carlo DeAngelo
30 Mins.; Tues., 8 p.m.
Sustaining
WOR-MBS, N. Y.

Building a new whodunit parlay as back-to-back companion piece to its 8:30 p.m. "Adventures of the Falcon," Mutual has uncovered a new murder mystery piece, titled "Scotland Yard," which now fills the half-hour preceding the bird's entry into the blood-and-thunder arena. This one, spotted at 8 p.m. Tuesdays, is tabbed "Scotland Yard." Judging by the preem (21) it should snag both sponsor and the batch of listeners who seem to like their drama blood-drenched.

Smart casting put Basil Rathbone into this show as lead. Rathbone had done Sherlock Holmes on the air to sufficient kudos, and is familiar with the role he takes now, as "Inspector Burke," who outsmarts the crook.

By actual count, the opener contained four murders, not to mention a knifing that didn't prove fatal. But the action was fast, credulity was not strained too much, and a competent cast backed the "Inspector" thoroughly as he treaded his nonchalant way through the gore.

Show is supposed to contain a love angle, with the "Inspector" having a dame in the offing who hopes he could move a couple of corpses off his chest long enough to visit with her. But Anne Burr, in the role of the gal, was largely wasted on the opener, being given only enough lines to show that the "Inspector" too can be human. Like the rest of the cast, however, she carried her chore competently. Cars.

FOR PARENTS ONLY
With Frank Luther, Dean Dixon, Sidonie M. Gruenberg; George Brooks, moderator; Allen Strong, announcer
Director: Jack Grogan
Producer: Ted Cott
30 Mins., Tues., 9 p.m.
Sustaining
WNEW, N. Y.

Although this series admittedly is aimed primarily at parents, it's of sufficient general interest for the average listener. It also happens to be a better-grade half-hour, judged by the opener Tues. (21) subtitled "Your Child and Music," program turned out to be—largely, due to the type of people chosen for the board—a lively discussion of a pertinent subject by intelligent, informed persons concerned with what goes on about them. Discussion was lively though serious, and down to earth instead of pedantic.

Format has three experts discussing a problem (subsequent topics will include a child's relation to radio, books, school, films, discipline, prejudice, etc.). Board argues or agrees constantly with one another. Last eight minutes, studio audience is rung in with question. Premiere was handled very well by moderator George Brooks, while production details went smoothly due to Ted Cott's and Jack Grogan's efforts. But success of opener was due primarily to the trio who formed the board, and who kept ideas and arguments moving fast and vividly.

Mrs. Sidonie M. Gruenberg, of the Child Study Assn., set the theme. Music is in the child; it's a parent's job to keep it there and to make it grow. Frank Luther, moppet song expert, discussed the best way to introduce music to a child, the types of music to use, maintaining that what a child absorbed in his early months, in his babyhood, counted later in his cultural life.

Dean Dixon, orchestra conductor, went further. We must get rid of the idea of using music as a show-piece, he said. It's musical experience, not performing experience, a child should be guided towards.

There was more good stuff like this, on when to start kids practising, when to take them to their first classical concert, questions of censoring a child's taste in pop or longhair, etc. Bron.

RHYME WITHOUT REASON
With Bob Elliot, Gordon Ayres, Don Berkshire
Producer-Director: Bob Elliot
15 Mins.; Sun., 4:15 p.m.
Sustaining
WLIB, N. Y.

This musical session flashes some clever and original touches but these are buried in an indiscriminate welter of corny gags that are strictly smalltime. On last Sunday's show (26), Bob Elliot and Gordon Ayres showed their best side in a brief fantasy piece concerning a song-writer who has the whole world singing his nonsense tune. But this amusing satire was framed in such sample gags as: I was so shocked when I was born I was speechless for a year.

Program also features a song title-guessing contest and some nicely rendered vocals by Don Berkshire. Judging from the reviewed session, Elliot and Ayres could develop a neat little show out of their free-wheeling style—but only if they throw away their gag file. Herm.

THE OHIO STORY
With Robert Waldrop, narrator; Gloria Brown, Harry Ridgely, George Roberts, Tom Field, announcer
Writer: Frank Seidel
Producer: Stuart Buchanan
Music: Walberg Brown
15 Mins.; Mon.-Wed.-Fri., 6:30 p.m.
OHIO BELL TELEPHONE CO.
WTAM, Cleveland
(McCann-Erickson)

This show need not take a back seat to any network program based on a narration format. Expertly done, warm in presentation, colorfully written, the "Ohio Story" is one of the neatest means of institutional advertising to hit the Buckeye air—local or network—in many years.

True, McCann-Erickson dipped into New York's talent pool for Robert Waldrop as narrator and Frank Buchanan as producer. But without the deft and warm writing of Frank Seidel, the show would lack its distinctive sparkle. It's Seidel's tingling description of past events of Ohio's history that gives Waldrop a true medium to employ his outstanding ability to narrate—an ability that brought him fame during the storytelling phases of the "Treasury Salute" series.

A native Ohioan, producer Buchanan has chalked up a signal achievement with this program that is fed to six Ohio stations. Although the use of music as a tie-in for scenes is not novel, Buchanan has availed himself of all niceties of that medium to denote passing of time. In that respect WTAM's Music Director Walberg Brown has turned a neat trick in arranging proper scores for the three-piece musicale background of Ben Silverberg, violin; Nell Stack, harpist; Crandall Hendershott, electrical organ.

Blending those scores into the overall show makes the program a fast-moving vehicle that keeps audience interest high and furnishes the proper breaks between narration to avoid any dullness.

The actors who flit across the scene to highlight spots in the event being described do satisfactory jobs. George Roberts, former Play House member, takes honors in this respect. Announcer Tom Field, one of the best in the midwest, is at top quality in the series.

The show is good. If it will tackle, objectively, the economic and social forces that make Ohio a great state, and if those responsible for the actual production continue to have a free rein, then WTAM will chalk up a truly outstanding achievement in radio entertainment. Mark.

MUSICAL CARAVAN
With Eve Schoenholtz
Producer: Frank Rosa
30 Mins.; Tues., 8:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WNYC, N. Y.

One of this station's infrequent excursions into the pop music field, "Musical Caravan" is a disk jockey type program with a femme emcee up. Airer, which includes a weekly three or four-minute pitch for some charitable or public service organization, has a slightly overstrained catch-all flavor that jars with the station's general tone. Eve Schoenholtz, emcee, who calls herself Eve, is also inclined to be cute.

There's too much bobbysox gushing in her intros to numbers by Perry Como, Bing Crosby, et al. And as if platters by Spike Jones' City Slickers don't hash up the music enough, the gal spieler has the technique of interrupting the records to interject her comments. Last week's show (21) included a brief talk in behalf of the American Women's Voluntary Service fund drive. Herm.

Follow-up Comment

Fiorello LaGuardia's return to the ether via Mutual is more of the same that the ex-mayor had been purveying on ABC—that is, giving the "Dutch Uncle" routine to his listeners. In his characteristic high-piping voice, LaG got all excited over the housing situation, sugar rationing, living with one's mother-in-law, among other topics. Characterizing himself as the "unauthorized spokesman for unorganized Americans," he reminds one of the common scold who warns the malefactors that little Fiorello will get them if they don't watch out. It's different from the usual smooth, know-it-all flow of language of the garden variety of commentator. And still good listening.

"Here's to Ya" is the new title for the Hires' Sunday Party, transferred to CBS from ABC this week (26) without losing its format in the process. Louise Carlyle, Phil Hanna and the Phil Davis band dish out a pleasant enough show, which on this airing distinguished itself with a medley of tunes popularized by the late Glenn Miller. Tune collection was delivered very much in the style of the bandleader lost during the war to give the preem show a memorable closing. Miss Carlyle's rendition of "Rainy Night in Rio" and entire cast's takeoff on William Tell overture provided the other highlights.

Justice Dept. Raps Chi Judge's Nixing of Lea Act As 'Arbitrary'

Washington, Jan. 28.

The ruling of Federal Judge Walter LaBuy in Chicago that the Lea Act is unconstitutional "represents an arbitrary denial of equal protection of the law to employers of radio stations," the Justice Department told the Supreme Court yesterday (27).

In appeal filed with the high court, George T. Washington, acting Solicitor General, urged the court to reverse LaBuy's ruling. The District court had found the Lea Act illegal on three counts—violation of the First, Fifth and 13th Constitutional Amendments.

The Justice Depart. argued that the Chicago court "misconstrued the 13th Amendment as guaranteeing an absolute right to strike." While LaBuy held that the right to picket is contained in the First Amendment. The Justice Dept. replied that the Lea Act "does not prevent picketing but only coercion by any means, including picketing."

The petition added: "Picketing is no more entitled to constitutional protection than are other forms of speech," and, when it clearly and immediately is designed to achieve an end which Congress has legitimately made unlawful, it may be prohibited."

"The radio industry," the Justice Dept. brief said, "is sufficently unique to be subject to special regulation in many of its aspects . . .The very fact that the decision here (the district court's) nullifies an act which Congress deemed necessary for the welfare of the nation, in itself establishes the substantiality of the question involved."

The acting solicitor went on to say: "The statute represents the deliberate judgment of Congress as to the existence of an evil affecting the broadcast system of the nation and as to the best method of remedying such evil."

Gun Moll Accommodates KRNT in Bank Stickup, But Station Is on Job

Des Moines, Jan. 28.

Lucky "on the spot" reporting enabled KRNT to score a scoop Jan. 22 when a woman bandit held up the Des Moines Bank & Trust Co. With a KRNT foursome lunching across the street from the bank during the holdup, they had a ringside seat for the excitement, and had the Cowles station on the air with the story in exactly 10 minutes after the robbery, complete with interviews from witnesses and police officials.

The "spot" boys were Tex Taylor, promotion manager, and Joe Hudgens and Bill Hippee of the promotion dept., plus Tom Dyer, continuity writer. A half-hour later, KRNT got another scoop with a flash on the "Ladies Be Seated" program that the woman bandit had been captured. Rejoining the ABC network for the "Ladies Be Seated" show, emcee John Olsen blasted "she got it!"

Being the first time a dame has attempted a solo bank holdup in Iowa, the story was plenty hot, and the station got a lucky break through quick manipulation on the part of the promotion boys to get a wire recorder and two special events men on the scene in less than 10 minutes. What helped the radiotes was the fact that Des Moines police were able to get the woman in 80 minutes' time.

Seattle—Facilities for FM, television and facsimile will be permitted in first and second-class residential districts here if the recommendation of the City Planning Commission is approved by the City Council.

In Defense of Chi

Editor, VARIETY:

I see by VARIETY's edition of Jan. 22, that Chicago radio hits its lowest ebb. Half-way down the article, attention is called to "only one network origination—NBC's Grand Marquee."

I am well aware of the fact that Chicago radio is not what it used to be, but I feel that it's high time that someone started talking about the shows that are remaining in Chicago and consistently doing a good job. I am referring, of course, to our "Curtain Time" show, which has been a Chicago origination to the network since July, 1945, and without benefit of name talent the rating is now 10.1. This only goes to prove that shows can still be produced in Chicago. I think it is also interesting to note that we have a program called "Judy and Jane," a 15-minute transcribed five-a-week show on 26 stations which celebrates its 15th anniversary this coming Feb. 2. Also, it has been sponsored by the same client all of that time, which speaks volumes for a job well done. Chicago talent has been used exclusively. I am sure that you also know about our "Dr. I. Q." program—full NBC network, the entire operation of which is handled out of this Chicago office.

"How's about a little horn tooting for the Chicago shows, and the record shows many network originations, all giving many actors and musicians work, which are staying on the air here and doing a big job.

Harry Holcombe,
Radio Director, Grant Adv. Agency.

Inside Stuff—Radio

One of the biggest talent agencies in the country dealing in radio packages will hereafter exclude the producer in the wrap-up. It's taken as a neat trick of buck-passing since it's the producer who gets whacked over the skull when anything goes wrong with the show. Direction of the program would pass to the ad agency which holds the account, thereby relieving the 10% or of a responsibility that has proven a migraine "and not worth it." Agents would rather wrap it up, sell it and turn it over to the admen as their baby. The commission, they hold, is too negligible for all the trouble it entails. And big-brother like, they pass it off as giving something for the admen to do to lessen their guilt in collecting the 15% commission.

The recently closed Don Lee hearing in Los Angeles for alleged violation of FCC regulations brought out the existence of an intense rivalry between Lee and ABC network for affiliates. The Lee chain takes the stand that it educated the trade to the desirability of the long-ignored "light built" and "coffee pot" stations, while the other three nets picked and chose their outlets. It was Lee that first stepped in and stepped up the value of the outlanders, they claimed. But now Johnny-come-lately ABC is in there pitching, and the race is on, and not altogether in Lee's favor either.

One of the best guidebooks on the use of the air for community programming, that should be of help not only to the chairman of a local ladies' auxiliary or the exec of a bigtime social welfare agency, but to local station people as well, has just been published under the title "Radio, When and Why to Use It." Done by Mrs. Beatrice K. Tollefis, chief consultant to the National Publicity Council for Health and Welfare Services, Inc., the 48-page booklet goes into every phase of public service programming in such a way as to make it possible for the harassed station chief, facing more and more demands for free time, to say to his local applicants: "Here, read this first, and then tell me whether I should give you time." And they've used it they may bow out, but if they don't, they will at least know the rudiments of the station's needs for sensible radio that goes beyond the format of presenting the chairman of the fund drive for a half-hour of dull chatter.

Thirteen more weeks of star-studded platters on the "Here's to Veterans" series will be ready for distribution to 900 stations starting about Feb. 1, Charles E. Dillon, Veterans Administration Radio Chief announced last week. Dillon said this series has more big-name talent than any other offered by a Government agency since the close of the war.

Don Ameche, Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Eddie Cantor, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Fibber McGee and Molly, Henry Morgan, Dinah Shore, Ginny Simms, and Red Skelton have been committed for 11 of the 13 shows. Negotiations are now in progress with Amos 'n Andy and the Prudential Family Hour to complete the 13-week package. One spot in each 15-minute show will stress the importance to vets of holding on to their National Service Life Insurance or to reigstate policies which have been allowed to lapse.

Frank Kingdon's audience pull on his local show on WOR (N.Y.) Sunday mornings, despite his recent dismissal from the same station's cross-the-board evening strip, was demonstrated last week when, in three days, 7,526 pieces of mail came in response to a request that the audience tell whether it likes him or not.

Idea, thought up by Joseph Wallace, prexy of Inkograph Pens, Kingdon's Sunday ayem sponsor, and by Sid Rubin, veepee of Emil Mogul agency handling the pen account, was to test the gabber's popularity with his audience. The mail showed 98% of those who wrote favoring Kingdon's type of spiel.

As soon as the first three days' batch of mail came in, the sponsor renewed Kingdon's contract for another 26 weeks.

While Peoples Radio Foundation, Inc., keeps rehearsing its talent in the hopes of getting an FM license in New York, outfit is becoming a source of radio scouting. Jerry Reed, whom outfit preemed at its first "Adventure Radio" over a month ago, has been taken on by WJIB. Some agency execs interested in new documentary material have let it be known they'll attend PRF's second "Adventure Radio" program, next Friday night (3). Piece de resistance that night will be a Franklin D. Roosevelt memorial show, written by Milton Robertson, with Gordon Heath in lead.

FCC Doors To Stay Put By Freeze Unless Late Bidders Tell Full Tale

Washington, Jan. 28.

Bidders for new standard broadcast stations who are rushing to get their requests on file before Feb. 3, when FCC's freeze goes into effect, were warned last week that, if their applications are not complete, particularly on engineering details, they can expect them back by return mail.

The FCC explained that it had every intention of standing by its promise to process by May 1 all AM bids received up to Feb. 3. Commission said, however, its whole freeze policy might be a flop if it were forced to go through hundreds of incomplete applications.

Accordingly, incomplete bids will not be allowed to hold back consideration of complete ones, FCC said, but following "established practice" will be returned to their owners.

Fundamental Issues Unresolved As Both Sides Jockey on Color; Bendix Set Breakdown No CBS Aid

As the second round of color and monochrome television demonstrations drew to a close before the FCC yesterday (Tuesday) at the Federal Courthouse, N. Y., it became apparent that both sides in video's color controversy were maintaining a strategic silence on most of the fundamental issues at stake, evidently reserving their strongest arguments for the final, decisive week of hearings starting in Washington, Feb. 10. Final demonstration, that of RCA's simultaneous color transmission,' is scheduled for today (Wednesday) at Princeton, N. J.

As in Monday's (27) hearing, the brunt of CBS' defense against objections raised by monochrome proponents of RCA and DuMont was borne by Dr. Peter C. Goldmark, chief engineer for the color applicants. While most of the comment centered about results of simultaneous black-and-white transmission by both DuMont and CBS, monochrome's strongest arguments came in a short statement by Dr. Allen B. DuMont which preceded the telecasts.

Dr. DuMont stated that he "feels the standards as proposed by Columbia are inadequate." He added that the present six-by-eight inch screen employed in the color sets represents the limit in size which the sequential system can use without enlarging the scanning disk to a point too large for any ordinary cabinet to hold.

Dr. DuMont averred that it wasn't the present small size that disturbed him, so much as the fact that CBS

GE Ready to Spring Telesets Come March

Albany, Jan. 28.

Nation-wide distribution of television receivers will be started early next month by the General Electric Co., which will send the first sets to distributors in areas where stations are now operating. This was the word that Philip Caldwell, sales manager for the GE transmission division, in Syracuse, brought to a meeting of Albany area appliance and radio dealers. WRGB, which has been operating in Schenectady on a continuous weekly schedule, for six years, is the GE video outlet for this section.

The first GE model will be a console of the three-view type. It produces a six-by-eight inch picture. The set also has the standard broadcast band for radio reception.

'Share-Skill' Trial Moves Borden Account In Tele Agency Shift

Kenyon & Eckhardt agency is slated to take over the Borden television account from Young & Rubicam sometime in March, under a unique arrangement between the two agencies, giving both a certain length of time to experiment with commercial techniques while tele is still in its developmental stage. Borden's and exec will then decide which techniques are better and settle on either one agency or continue to split the account, as it's split in radio.

Y.&R. has been producing shows during the last year for Borden's, which has a franchise on the Sunday night 9 to 9:30 slot on WNBT (NBC, N.Y.). Under the supervision of Wes McKee, the agency has staged several variety shows on that time, and has also produced the "I Love to Eat" shows, a regular Friday night series on the same station.

K. & E. staff is reportedly still kicking around ideas for shows, with a video version of radio's "County Fair," which was favored several months ago, having lost interest in favor of something more novel. K. & E. execs stressed the deal was a matter of cooperation, not competition, between the two agencies, and the fact that Borden is in tele to stay.

BRITAIN SET BUILDING UP TO NOV. 1,725

London, Jan. 20.

Asst. Postmaster General Burke told Parliament that production of television sets in England rose from 375 last June, when the service was restarted, to 1,725 in November.

He also informed members that Alexandra Palace is now inadequate for video, with other premises not yet available. Same applies to BBC's other tele spot, in Birmingham.

SMPE Looks at Tele

Society of Motion Picture Engineers, believing theatre television will become an actuality before the end of 1947, has decided to make a pitch for the allocation of proper frequency channels for theatre video at the next FCC frequency hearings, scheduled for next Tuesday (4) in Washington.

"Theatre television is the most complex and the most difficult of the modern scientific arts," according to SMPE spokesmen. "It may therefore be slower in accomplishment. The plea of the motion picture engineers is that science be given a chance and the time to develop theatre television as an instrument of entertainment, and the FCC retain frequency bands for this service." Paul J. Larsen has been named to represent the SMPE at the hearings.

Small-City Tele Remote As NBC Stalls in Cleve.

Washington, Jan. 28.

Reason behind an NBC request for a 16-month extension of time in which to build its Cleveland television station is currently the subject of speculation at FCC offices here.

Speculation centers on the question of whether RCA-NBC cannot meet its construction schedule or is not over-anxious to get on the air in Cleveland.

Ordinarily the FCC gives a permit specifying that construction must start within 60 days. Another six months is allowed in which to complete a station, though in the case of television many additional reprieves are given. In effect, what NBC has done is to seek twice the normal construction time before it has even broken ground on its Cleveland operation.

The questions being asked are: "Does this mean RCA-NBC itself cannot promise television service in Cleveland—and presumably other similar markets—for at least another two to three years? Or is it NBC's plan to concentrate its energies on pushing black-and-white station construction in a few big markets like New York, Washington and Los Angeles, where several stations are in prospect?"

Other observers point out that if NBC wanted only a reprieve until FCC decided the color question, it was bad strategy to ask for so long a stay on construction. They question the company's campaign to "push television now" when the RCA-NBC combination itself cannot put a station on the air in the country's ninth largest market before mid-1948.

NBC spokesmen said they did not know the reasons advanced in the FCC request, but pointed to difficulties with the Civilian Production Administration and inability to get building materials.

Another reason for the slowdown in Cleveland, advanced by Government observers, struck at the ceiling of 350,000 television receivers predicted for 1947. With such small production and RCA-NBC frankly admitting a bottleneck in set output, the manufacturing company may naturally be concentrating on feeding sets to New York, Philly, Washington, Chi, and the Coast cities of Frisco and L. A. where several stations will be programming. In this event, there is no use pushing station construction in the hinterland cities since there won't be enough sets to go around.

Result of the speculation has observers here predicting that television is still a long way off for the smaller markets, with or without color.

With barely enough sets in prospect to keep up with demand in the big markets where better programs can be expected, the conclusion is that holders of video station permits in towns like Johnstown, Pa. (population: 151,781); Albuquerque, New Mexico (77,492), and Stockton, Calif. (79,337) may run through the life of several FCC permits before they get into operation with black-and-white stations or have sufficient receivers in their respective communities to put on a decent program service.

Par's First Commercial Tele Show Lays Egg All Over Coast Video

By JOHN HURLEY

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Television got a setback on Jan. 22 when it went commercial here for the first time over Television Productions, Inc.'s (Paramount) KTLA. And in addition to being an extremely poor telecast in every sense for the 500-odd receivers hereabout it fell flat on its face before a picked house of trade and press representatives, the majority of whom thought they were back in their high school auditorium.

Tupman Motors, local Lincoln-Mercury outlet, sponsored the debacle, anteing some $4,000 for the privilege of being the local pioneer —and, in this instance, a virtual martyr. But Tupman was not alone in being hurt; it hurt everyone and everything. Television in general got a slap. Paramount suffered, J. Walter Thompson agency, which produced it, lost prestige, and all concerned with it handled lost face.

If nothing else the show served as a severe object lesson to all who ignore television, or who hope to lump on the bandwagon when it's rolling. There is a crying need right now for production and direction brains and know-how. Too long has video resided in the laps of conscientious engineers here, and this was the death rattle of such a situation. It was also the S.O.S. for showmen; for it came off badly in comparison with its show business brethren due to uninspired production, technical failures, very lightweight and flimsier direction and low grade camera work. From take to transmission it was amateurish, if not an unintentional travesty, due to oversight, omission, accident and ignorance of shows and showmanship.

The opening of the 45-minute clambake was given over to dreary inaugural talks by civic leaders, et al. Cecil B. De Mille came off best with a lively address and manner of delivery, thanks to his own showstuteness. The show proper which followed developed into a very poorly timed, confused and generally scared type of variety show that was a deplorable waste of name talent. Employed were such primitive measures as a pattered deepe on a pulley, meaningless and cheap backdrops, against which and through which performers fumblingly worked, with Keith Hetherington announcing, and Bob Hope, mc'ing in a slipshod manner, though toting a script.

Nothing Right

Unprofessional runoff of talent, cold entrances, stage waits, etc., put a positive chill on what was already intrinsically drab. Mel Shavelson's writing, except for a few mild laugh lines, was sad. The efforts of director Klaus Landesberg, local head of Telepro, were equally lacking, as was overall production job of Leon Benson, of Thompson agency, which permitted two singing acts in succession. Lineup included in the order of appearance: Rhythmaires, mixed quintet; De Castro Sisters, girl trio; William Demarest and Eddie Bracken, in a pantomime checker game bit of an exasperated player and a kibitzer; Bill Bendix, burlesquing a commercial announcement; Bracken again in another pantomime; a frustrated

Let's stop short-changing radio!

Case #28

—one of a series to show the men who build programs, and who buy and sell time, how sound radio research is revealing new values of the medium—and new opportunities in its use.

—the story of "a great wrong" done "a great medium."

Nobody's exactly to blame—but read on—

"The Odd Tale of the Missing Multiplier"

Let's take a look at certain facts of life—and radio

Radio reaches people. This one basic fact makes it an advertising medium. But how many people does radio reach? That's the question. And right along it gets an odd answer. Men who sell time, and men who build programs, almost always fail to include all the listeners that radio really reaches. Thus they not only short-change themselves, and the medium, but fail to report to advertisers the true and total impact of radio.

Here's how this happens.

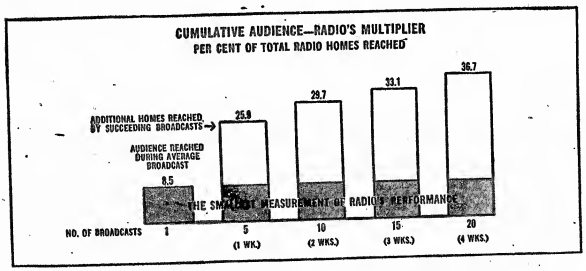
The power of radio comes from two main factors:

(1) the pull of the program during each individual broadcast

(2) the power of a series of broadcasts to spread radio impacts over a large percentage of the total market for a product.

Unfortunately, habit and custom have fastened upon radio the measurement of radio's power in terms of single broadcasts only. This single-broadcast measurement, even though repeated week after week, fails to reveal the force of the cumulative factor—which creates the true, much larger coverage of the total market for the product. To leave out this cumulative measurement of the total audience, gained over a series of broadcasts, is unfair to the medium, and can prove costly.

Take a look at the chart.



It diagrams the impact of radio as it actually happens, and as you use it. It supplies the "missing multiplier" and evaluates the build-up of audience by each succeeding broadcast. When this is done, as indicated, we move from radio's smallest measurement (a rating of 8.5% per broadcast) over a period of time to 5 broadcasts, then 10, then 15, and, finally to the 20 broadcasts that (combined) have reached 36.7% of radio families in an interval of 4 weeks.

If confined to a series of single-broadcast ratings, the seller of radio is handicapped in making comparisons with other media; the work of the radio producer stands in an unfavorable light; and the buyer of radio underestimates the true value of his purchase—and remains wholly in the dark regarding the percentage of his market that is adequately covered, and the part which, not being covered, is wide open for unopposed invasion by competitors.

Only by the research service of Nielsen Radio Index can this total cumulative force of radio ("market coverage") be measured—on a continuous basis; over selected periods of time.

This is still another example of the unduplicated service of NRI, disclosing the true values of radio as a medium — for those who sell — to those who buy.

Our experienced service executives are ready to describe many such examples to you. We will welcome your inquiry.

High Court Takes Up Radio Plea, Vinson Asks for Details of Bans

Washington, Jan. 28.

Placing of radio mikes in court press rooms will be discussed by the Supreme Court justices and by the Conference of Senior Circuit Judges which meets here in the spring, as a result of a parley between the Radio Correspondents Assn. and Chief Justice Fred Vinson last week.

Rex Goad, chairman of the Assn. and Washington chief of Transradio Press, said Mr. Vinson invited the radiomen to draw up a petition requesting placement of mikes in the Supreme Court building itself which he would take up with the full court. A second petition detailing the discriminations exercised by courts against radio correspondents in contrast to newspaper reporters was asked for submission to the Senior Circuit Judges. Goad emphasized the correspondents were not seeking to invade the courtrooms themselves, but merely wanted adequate provision made for radio coverage of court trials.

Justice Vinson is Chairman of the Conference of Senior Circuit Judges which will consider the petition.

The radio men who met with Mr. Vinson in addition to Goad, were: Albert Warner of WOL-Mutual; Bill McAndrew, WRC-NBC; Bill Neal, WMAL-ABC; Eric Sevareid, WTOP-CBS, and Pete Tully, representing the indies. The correspondents decided to go to Mr. Vinson when they were denied access to mikes in covering both the District and Supreme Court arguments on John L. Lewis.

Washington — Arthur Casey, assistant to Merle Jones, manager of the Cowles-Mutual station WOL, is seriously ill in the Georgetown Hospital here following an internal hemorrnage last week. Casey was taken sick following an address before a meeting of the Women's Broadcasters Association.

Mugg Clipped by Furrier

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

Sharp retrenchment by Jerome Wolk & Bro., Pittsburgh furriers, as a result of uncertain conditions in that business is costing Harold V. Cohen, Post-Gazette drama editor and VARIETY mugg in Smoky City, his weekly WJAS commercial, "Cohening the Town," after nearly three years. Show, a regular quarter-hour Saturday evening feature since July, 1944, fades at the end of this month.

Short notice of cancellation caught station unprepared to make another pitch for "Cohening the Town" and local CBS outlet has asked Cohen to hang onto the time for few more weeks on a sustaining basis until it can work on other prospective sponsors. Columnist-critic, however, was undecided about that over weekend.

Suit No Joke, Delmar Characterization Goes To Guild Arbitration

Suit against Kenny Delmar, alleging that he "stole" his "Senator Claghorn" character, was postponed last week by New York supreme court Justice Benedict Dineen, pending arbitration by a board of members of the Dramatists Guild, action was entered by playwright Dayton Allen, who said that the "Claghorn" character came out of a play that he and Delmar wrote in 1943, called "It's a Gift."

Allen's suit claimed that the two had a writing agreement for "Gift" in which 55% of the proceeds were to go to Delmar and the remaining 45% to Allen. Latter asked an accounting and share of the money Delmar has made from use of "Claghorn." Judge Dineen stayed the suit on petition of Delmar's attorney, Jacob Gerstein, who pointed out that the alleged agreement was made under Dramatists Guild writers contract, which calls for all suits to go to Guild arbitration before court decision.

Guild board is expected to sit on the case within the next few weeks. Suit contradicts the existing impression that "Claghorn" was a creation of Fred Allen, who merely used Delmar to give the "unreconstructed secessionist" a voice.

Philadelphia — Armand Hunter, chairman of the department of radio, speech and theatre at Temple University, has been named educational consultant for WFIL and WFIL-FM.

'Cycle-Less' Policy On ABC Programs

"Cycle-less" scheduling of public service shows—a system under which a subject is given the kind of time treatment it's deemed to deserve, without regard to strict cycles—has been developed by the ABC network.

Latest illustration of this new policy—developed by public service chief Robert Saudek, with the backing of exec veepee Bob Kintner—is a series of three shows skedded for the middle of next month, titled "School Bachelor." Opener will be on Sunday night, Feb. 16, at 7:30 o'clock. Following night (Feb. 17), No. 2 of the series will go on at 9 p. m., and third at 9:30. But though back-to-back, second and third stanzas will be distinct shows, each done by a different scripter, produced by a different producer, with different casts, etc.

This group of three, however, is actually the sixth in the "cycle-less" sked attempted by the net, with only one of the programs taking on a weekly cycle character. The others were given just as much time as the net felt they should get.

The plan teed off last spring with a series on juvenile delinquency, called "We, The Guilty." Subject was deemed interesting for six sessions, and was given just that number. Then came a one-shot on world government by Terry Monich, backed by Americans United for World Government, Inc. The John Hersey "Hiroshima" readings, on four consecutive nights, came next. On election day eve, there was a one-shot, "The Shame of the People," trying to hypo registered voters to get to the polls the next day. Then came the "World Security Workshop," being given a full 13-week cycle, again with the backing of Americans United. The teacher series is next, and there are others in the offing, Saudek said.

"The idea is," he said, "to figure out, with the advice of experts on the various subjects, just how much radio there is in the particular topic. Then we give it what it's worth—no more, no less."

tion was made that, under the "Guild shop," non-members of the Guild will be acceptable in Guild-contracted situations, but such writers will have to join the Guild within a specified period. Practice will parallel the similar clause enforced by Drama ists Guild.

Meanwhile, the RWG was pushing its demand upon the nets to negotiate a contract for sustaining freelancers. After waiting until yesterday (Tuesday) for the nets to recognize the RWG as a competent bargaining unit for sustaining freelancers, the Guild filed action with the National Labor Relations Board. Guild is citing the Hearst case in which newsboys were permitted, after the case had been fought up to the Supreme Court, to bargain collectively on behalf of "independent contractors."

Both Sides Jockey On Color

engineers have evidently been unable to increase the area of the viewing screen in seven years of experiment, since the system was first demonstrated by them in 1939. He also enlarged on the previous monochrome testimony that the loss of 90% of the light, through filters, made color viewing in an ordinarily lighted room impractical and no method had been found to correct the high light requirements of color. In his answers, Dr. Goldmark omitted mention of the picture size.

The CBS color receivers, one of them made by Bendix, came up with canopies in the second demonstration, yesterday, to prevent specular reflection from overhead lights. When questioned by FCC chairman Charles R. Denny, Jr., on the present cost of one of the machines, a Bendix engineer answered that there are 50 of them, all hand made, which will sell now at $1,820. During the simultaneous transmissions, the three DuMont models received from the NBC studios a Paramount film short of fairly recent vintage, while CBS' ubiquitous Patti Painter moved around in color.

When questioned by Denny on exactly when CBS would be ready to go into fulltime commercial color transmission if the petition were granted, Dr. Goldmark answered "from a purely technical standpoint, eight weeks, if all goes well." Denny also asked exact information on the extent of outside live pickup tests with the color Image Orthicon camera. Goldmark replied that CBS had "pointed the camera out of the window, focused on Madison avenue" one entire afternoon. FCC chairman wanted to know who had been present, and Dr. Goldmark said that it hadn't been a demonstration, only a test for the laboratory.

When pursued on the fact that color transmission requires six times as much light as monochrome, and might not be able to pick up late afternoon portions of sporting events, Dr Goldmark stated, "If late afternoon proves too dark for color transmission of remote pickups, we would switch to black and white."

CBS pitch during the first day's hearings on Monday (27) resulted in hardly more than a pitched battle of innuendos, as the web gave a repeat performance of its live and film telecast and spokesmen for both RCA and DuMont tried to break down its testimony. Opening session was marked by the periodic breakdown of a color receiver built to CBS specifications by Bendix, and a display of more color breakup and fringing than had been seen in any previous CBS demonstration.

Bendix breakdown, according to Dr. Goldmark, resulted from the heavy load put on the power outlet by the installation of two DuMont black and white receivers on the same voltage. CBS engineers straightened out the set during the noon recess, but it went beserk again during the afternoon session, with the color disks giving the semblance of vari-colored windshield wipers sweeping across the screen.

Apparently pulling all stops for its showdown demonstration of live color, CBS presented the most ornately-produced program to date. Images were transmitted from the CBS laboratory via coaxial cable to its Chrysler Tower transmitter and then sent out over the air to the Court House receivers. Pictures were also cut in periodically to the coax link between N. Y. and Washington, with only a slightly duller tone visible on the link setup. Dr. Goldmark turned down the request of RCA's research director Robert Shelby that a demonstration utilizing Image Orthicons also be put on the record, claiming the I. O. equipment had been taken apart and would require too much time to reassemble.

Bulova Deal

Charles R. Denny, prior to filing a formal sales application.

FCC acquiescence to the Bulova deal might well land the Commission on another hot seat on Capitol Hill, where Rep. Richard Wigglesworth (R. Mass.) keeps a sharp eye out for anything that looks like concentration of control in radio. Wigglesworth has already indicated he may seek an FCC investigation. He could be expected to be particularly inflammable on Bulova's participation in the WOV deal judging by the way he took out after the watch king during the hearings of the Select Committee to Investigate the FCC in 1943-'44. Wigglesworth went after Bulova then on his dealings with the Paulist fathers over WNEW and the affiliation of his partners, Harold LaFount and Sanford Cohen, in running WORL, Boston to FCC's satisfaction.

On the other hand, Bulova may be relying heavily on precedent to win FCC approval of his contract. For, a couple of years ago the FCC resolved the joint ownership of radio stations WGES and WAIT, Chicago, by the Dyer family by letting Gene Dyer take control of WAIT, the English-language station, and his brother Dr. John Dyer become principal in WGES, a foreign-language watter. At that time, however, the AVCO rules were not in effect and no outsiders were encouraged to bid on either of the stations.

Cosmo Records Into Receivership; New Policy Outlined to Salvage Firm

Cosmo Records' new regime has begun plans to reorganize the company by going into receivership under Chapter 10 of the Bankruptcy Act (77B). Move was made to protect creditors of the firm, which for months has been tottering on the brink of oblivion due to the mess of its financial operation, and also to protect the company itself from the few creditors who had refused to go along with reorganization plans, which meant waiting for their coin. It's claimed 80% of them were in favor, 20% against.

In the papers filed in the reorganization move, Cosmo is cited as owing some $642,000. On March 7, the company's new operators, headed by president Les Roberts, who was assigned that position under the papers, will submit a plan to the court for the liquidation of the debt over a period of years. So far, over $1,000,000 has been sunk into Cosmo, $435,000 of it by Rubin Uslander and Harry Weiner, $75,000 by Henry Reichhold, Detroit business man. etc. No receiver was named, incidentally. Roberts is in full charge.

Coincident with the attempt to salvage something out of the financial wreck of what at one time was termed a most promising indie record manufacturer, the current regime has outlined a policy completely divergent from the company's recent course. None of Cosmo's artists is left; it will institute instead a plan to market certain albums left over from the old operation ("Tubby the Tuba," "Cluny the Clown," "Song of South," by Tony Pastor, et al.) develop non-pop song ideas and press recordings for other manufacturers at its Massapequa, N. Y. plant.

BMI's Offers For E. B. Marks Deal

Broadcast Music Inc. has been the recipient of some unusual offers in regard to the option it has until the end of next year for the purchase for $1,000,000 of the E. B. Marks catalog. There have been all sorts of one-sided offers exemplified by one that suggested BMI pick up the option, pay the required coin, turn the catalog over to the suggestor at a minimum down payment. In turn the latter would lease the catalog's performance rights to BMI and, presumably, pay the remainder of their obligation from the income from such a deal.

That's only one of many. And BMI isn't biting.

Joan Edwards will record four new sides for Vogue Records on the Coast this week.

20th Disks Expand

20th Century Records, Philadelphia plattery is now turning out disks on 10 presses with eight releases per month scheduled. Firm has inked Mac Ceppos as recording director while Albert Black will handle talent and flacking.

Newly pacted by the company are the Jesters, formerly with Decca. Other newcomers are Dick Todd, Larry Vincent and Vin Roddie.

Tex Beneke to Preem Glen Island Casino's Summer Season May 15

Shep Fields, new operator of the Glen Island Casino, New Rochelle, N. Y., has signed Tex Beneke's orchestra to open the spot's first full-week summer season. Beneke opens May 15 for two weeks and is to be followed for a like period my other top names. Beneke is drawing an undisclosed guarantee and percentage.

In buying Beneke to open, at a fairly stiff price, Fields aimed at two things, (1) to buy the best possible name available at that time and (2) for the value of the Glenn Miller name, which is still prominent in the band's billing. Miller gathered the momentum that eventually made him one of the hottest orchestral properties the band business has ever seen, at Glen Island back before the war.

In buying top bands for two weeks at a time, although others may be set for three- and four-week periods, Fields is following a policy that departs radically from the booking practices of the suburban spot's former management. It was their aim each summer to buy a new band at the cheapest quotation possible with a view toward the band improving its reputation as it went along and, incidentally, improving business.

Last spring, Glen Island was for a while barred from doing business with bookers due to coin deals for talent that the American Federation of Musicians didn't countenance.

Burton Back to School

Bob Burton, attorney for Broadcast Music Inc., goes back to teaching at City College of New York next month, the school having deemed his experimental fall course in "Copyright in Business Practices of the Entertainment Field" valuable to the curriculum.

Registration for the new semester occurs Feb. 4-6 at CCNY's downtown (23d street) building and classes, held in the evening, begin Feb. 13.

Calif. Disk Jocks Unite to Combat Maestro Trend

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

When is a musician not a musician? When he becomes a disk jockey.

That's the opinion generally expressed by the top platter pilots here who have openly rebelled against the intrusion of name bandsmen into their ranks. It was brought about by the perhaps temporary step for Woody Herman, bandsman into jockey, as Saturday substitute for disk jock vet Al Jarvis, on KLAC here.

Situation has galvanized the jocks into forming an organization for the first time. So, when Herman started his new chore in radio Jan. 18, at AFRA scale, incidentally, on the indie station, he also started what may develop into a trend. To circumvent it, the jockeys are forming a united front, and meet again tonight (Tuesday) to assess the latest developments.

Herman kickoff apparently prodded the boys into a little self-assessment as well. They are housecleaning. All suggestive lyrics are out, and wholesale rechecking of libraries is now in progress to eliminate all disks of the color school. They also plan "regulated" use of guests to prevent press agent abuses, many of which have crept in over the past year as jockey biz soared.

Peter Potter was first chairman of the Disk Jockey Assn. of Southern California, which will reach out for national coverage and protection. Bill Anson will be second chairman in rotating officership. Bob McLaughlin will be treasurer and Carl Bailey secretary. Latter two are permanent for six months.

Lyman Adds Voice to Palladium Buyers

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Latest in the long line of bidders for the Palladium is Abe Lyman. Within past week the ex-batoneer has had three huddles with Maury Cohen, interpalace op. Lyman wants to buy lease on site, as many others in past have wanted.

Palladium site is owned by Los Angeles Times, with Cohen and associates paying yearly rental of $65,000 and maintenance costs on a 14-year lease, which still has five years to run.

Musician Files $25,000 Suit Vs. Oriental, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 28.

With a scar on his forehead to show for injuries sustained when a reflector mirror fell 25 feet, landing on his head as he sat on the Oriental's stage tooting sax for Woody Herman's band, Stanford DeSair, of Albany, N. Y., last week filed suit for $25,000 against Iroquois Management Co., theatre operator.

Ben W. Gleason, attorney for DeSair, said the mishap, which occurred last April 16, necessitated hospital treatment for the musician. Gleason also charges the mirror was unscreened.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By George Frazier

"Open the Door, Richard" is one of those confounding ditties—nonsensical upon close investigation, but somehow a reverberating phrase to which the public is and will take to with a frenzy.

In certain quarters, "Richard" is even being viewed with considerable alarm. Fred Robbins, for example, has banned the Dusty Fletcher two-side National pressing from his 1280 Club (WOV, N.Y.), on the grounds that it is flagrantly Uncle Tom. This decision provoked a heated reply from Frank Conniff, the N.Y. Journal-American columnist. As it happened, this did nothing to clarify the situation, but, instead, added new aspects to the controversy. Conniff, who, only a week or so before, had blasted "Finian's Rainbow" for what he regarded as slams at the Irish, insisted that Robbins frequently plays "I'll Be Glad When You're Dead, You Rascal, You," a disk which he, Conniff, considers extremely offensive to the Negroes.

Result of this bickering is that "Richard" is receiving an added sales stimulus. As matters stand, it would appear that the controversy has even warmed up. Tune's authorship, for one things, seems as involved as that of "Rum and Coca Cola."

Apparently, Jack McVea waxed the number for Black-and-White some time ago, but we have yet to hear his version (except on Crosby's show last week.) At any rate, it has yet to cut any great swath on Eastern juke boxes. Fletcher's National of the number came out last week and its sales potentialities are enormous. It has great humor, but we are inclined to agree with Robbins. Fletcher fractures colored audiences with the material and there seems no reason why he won't continue to do so via the race location Wurlitzers.

First release of "Richard" which will receive good distribution is Count Basie's for Victor. His first cutting under his new RCA contract, this may turn out to be the best-selling platter the Count ever made. It is a superb job—and its taste is above reproach.

Vocal is by Harry Edison, Basie's great trumpet man, and Bill Johnson —and handled, by the way, very competently. Basie's extraordinary piano is heard throughout the proceedings and is extremely effective. If you must have "Open the Door, What's-His-Name," Basie's is the version to get. We do not consider it deep crystal-gazing to predict it will be a terrific seller. For one thing, it is virtually without competition. It is coupled with "Me and the Blues," which has a vocal by Ann Moore. Side is a nice job, but it doesn't appear as if many people will get a chance to hear it on the nickelodeons.

Now we'd like to put in a word or two about Joe Alexander. Working at the Pecos, Los Angeles, this young Negro baritone, makes his shellac debut with a Capitol bracketing of "At Your Command" and "I Keep Telling Myself." Alexander, who has power and enunciation, evidences great promise. If he has a flagrant shortcoming, it is his lack of ease (an understandable fault in anyone's first recording.) His chanting of "Command," an old warhorse of Crosby's, is impressive, although scarcely up to the standard set by The Master on his Brunswick face. Flip-over is less exciting. But in any event, here is a singer who may possibly develop into the most accomplished Negro retailer of pops since Harlan Lattimore used to give out with the old Don Redman band.

Among the other releases of the week, these are outstanding: Frank Carle's "We Could Make Such Beautiful Music" (vocal by Marjorie Hughes and Greg Lawrence) and "Too Many Times" (Hughes vocal). Both are strong juke possibilities, with the Hughes-Lawrence chirping giving a slight edge to "Music." Johnny Desmond, a young man who, with the Miller band overseas, came to be known as the G.I. Sinatra, is out on Victor with "Guilty" and "I'll Close My Eyes." He sings nicely and the Page Cavanaugh Trio provides a highly effective background. (A trio, as proved by this and Bob Eberle's Decca with the Frank Froeba threesome, can be more enriching than a full band.) "Guilty" should be big on the machines as well as getting a big play from the pancake turners.

Buddy Clark (whose "Linda" with Ray Noble looks like a tremendous smash) is out on Columbia with a coupling from "Finian's Rainbow"—"How Are Things In Gloccamora?" and "If This Isn't Love." They are far and away the most proficient versions of these tunes on the market. Clark is a very, very talented warbler.

"I Want to Thank Your Folks" is being lacquered by just about everyone and his sister, but one of the three wow versions (the others are Perry Como's Victor and King Cole's Capitol) would seem to be Eddy Howard's Majestic. It (and, to a lesser extent, its backside, "Too Many Times") will receive gratitude from every coin box in the land... Bobby Doyle, who manifests a little of Sinatra and a little of Haymes (which ain't bad at all) has a signature of "Love Is a Random Thing" (the Wandering Irish's battle song) and "That's the Beginning of the End." He does them very pleasantly and, provided Signature can get the disk around, you'll hear them on the machines. Doyle and Monica Lewis team up on another Signature in "By the Light of the Silv'ry Moon," which has considerable appeal. Miss Lewis may not be the best distaff thrush around, but her voice has S. A. plus. Backing has her soloing "Makin' Whoopee," an old Eddie Cantor specialty which it's high time they arrived...If you have the slightest interest in fine blues singing, you'll want Joe Turner's National of "I'm Sharp. When I Hit the Coast" and "Miss Brown Blues"...They're just about as exciting blues as you'll ever hear. Sale, however, is clearly limited to hot fans and race nickelodeons... Sibelius might not relish what Gene Krupa does to his "Valse Triste" (Columbia), but we feel otherwise. The "Valse" is one of those things like "The 1812 Overture," which is a real problem to sit through. It's a good thing to have Krupa invest it with some vitality. The backside is "Opus No. 1," which the superb Anita O'Day sings.

Best Bets

Local 47 Pays 1G War Death Benefits to 22

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Musicians' Local 47 is giving $1,000 death benefits to beneficiaries of each of the 22 members who lost their lives in service in World War II. Along with their dues, all members pay in on an automatic insurance policy, but the standard form used never has had a war clause in it.

For past four years execs of 47 have tried to get as many as 300 members to a monthly meeting, thus constituting a quorum which could legislate the matter of death-in-uniform. After being unable to promote a quorum in all these years, board of directors apparently decided the try was hopeless, so now have acted on their own. No squawks are anticipated.

TRANSCRIPTIONS FACE TEST SUIT

Easy Lesson in Success

Jack Robbins, who recently resumed as a music publisher when he set up J. J. Robbins & Son, launched a fast one in New York last week that has the entire music industry discussing and eyeing him. He devised an idea to cash in on the popularity of the "Anniversary Song," from Columbia Pictures' "The Jolson Story," and withdrew his idea only after considerable pressure was brought to bear on him by Columbia execs in Hollywood, et al.

Music to the "Anniversary" tune is in the public domain. Version used in the "Jolson Story" has a lyric by Saul Chaplin and is published by Shapiro-Bernstein. At the moment, it is making a bid for the No. 1 slot in sheet sales. Robbins took the music, had his own lyric written and subsequently wired music jobbers to the effect that "this is the tune from the Columbia picture." His wire was true, it was the tune, since the melody is p.d., but it was not the S-B best-seller, Columbia and Shapiro blew up. Robbins finally decided to withdraw.

T. Dorsey, Burned Anew at MCA, Appeals to AFM to Break Pact

Tommy Dorsey went to the American Federation of Musicians during the past week in an effort to enlist their help to pry him loose from his contract with Music Corp. of America, which still has four years to run. His move came at a time when he was on the verge of alleviating his difficulties with the agency and was caused, it's said, by a move made by MCA execs against him from another quarter.

Burned anew by the agency effort, Dorsey appealed to the union and is said to have offered hard cash to get loose from MCA. To top off the situation, what occurred prevented Dorsey's almost immediate return to the band business. He had been laying plans to reorganize his orchestra in six weeks or following a Florida vacation and had tentatively set an opening date on a location job. He dropped his ideas when he went to the union. What the latter told him, incidentally, is undisclosed.

Ross Sues Barton; Sez Pact Breached

Charles Ross, who recently left Barton Music and shifted to World and Republic Music firms as general professional manager, has begun suit against Barton in New York supreme court for alleged breach of contract. Ross, who occupied a similar position with Barton as he does in his current post, asks $37,500 on the basis of Barton's reported failure to live up to the terms of a two-year contract, which expired just prior to the first of the year.

This agreement, claims Ross, gave him a copy deal and a percentage of the firm's gross for the first year and a percentage deal only during the second, in addition to salary and expenses. He claims he has received only about $4,000 of the money due him.

Ross left Barton because of his inability to get a "piece" of the firm, as he was promised, the plaintiff further charges. This was due to a muddle between Ben Barton, Hank Sanicola and Frank Sinatra, each one-third partners.

Astor Roof May Stay Open Summer Despite Metro Deal for Hotel

There is still a possibility that the N. Y. Hotel Astor Roof may be open to the public and name band bookings this summer despite the deal being negotiated for the property by Metro films, which would tear it down to make room for a new theatre, etc. Metro deal for the hotel with Viscount Astor, here from England to dispose of the property, is being held up. Meanwhile, Carmen Cavallaro and Sammy Kaye have contracts to play the Roof.

While the worries of name band bookers over the possibility that the Astor will pass out of existence are inconsequential in view of the deal for the property, it's felt that the circumstances, coming at a time when biz is n.s.g. and other rooms contemplate closing, will be another major setback for the band industry.

Warock Music on Block

Warock Music, set up and owned by Johnny O'Connor and Fred Waring, is for sale. O'Connor almost completed a deal for the catalog's disposal last week to Santly-Joy.

He's asking $50,000 for the firm, tax free, which would bring its price up to around $75,000.

Merger of Apollo, Musicraft Labels Seen Possibility

There have been consistent rumors around New York and the Coast for the past two weeks of a deal which would amalgamate Musicraft Records and Apollo Records, via arrangements made by investors in both, namely Atlas Corp. for Musicraft and Garwood Industries for Apollo. It was known that Garwood, which is said to represent Lehman Bros. in its interest in Apollo, has been investigating the Musicraft setup, but any deal or merger plans are flatly denied by John Bergen, chairman of the board of Garwood.

However, people from both Apollo and Musicraft have been guardedly predicting an ultimate alignment of the two groups. They feel it is a natural since Musicraft could use (1) a lot more coin beyond the amount Atlas has invested, and (2) the race and hillbilly catalog in which Apollo mainly was interested prior to its recent attempts to secure popular artists. Apollo, in the event a deal came about, probably would be submerged into the Musicraft organization, losing label identity, etc.

Milton Diamond, former attorney and member of the board of Decca Records, is prominent in the talks of a deal between the two organizations.

If and when Atlas and Garwood get together on affiliating their respective recording interests, the move will mark the first such arrangement the music industry expects will be duplicated many times by indie firms in the near future. These outfits are in trouble in many ways. Already dozens of the more obscure outfits have folded, but the more prominent figure to stave off the process of dissolution by joining hands.

COL. RECORDS BUYS NEW YORK BUILDING

Columbia Records has purchased the building housing its New York headquarters at 799 Seventh avenue. Price for the seven-story corner construction is undisclosed.

Columbia has occupied the space for years. It originally had only two floors in the building, but during the past couple of years spread out to three, one exclusively devoted to recording studios and the others to executive offices and production. Company has a small plant for plating, etc., on part of one floor, but does no pressing.

2C THEORY VS. COPYRIGHT ACT

A suit has been filed in U. S. District Court, New York, by Longine-Wittnauer against music publisher T. B. Harms which the music industry regards as one of the most important cases put up for adjudication in some time. If it goes to a finish, the case will finally decide the position of radio transcriptions in relation to Section 1E of the 1909 copyright law and the right of publishers to quote their own terms for the use of their copyrighted songs in the production of such disks.

Section 1E of the 1909 act, which the music business has for years regarded as outmoded, sets a fee of 2c per recording for phonograph records and piano rolls, but makes no mention of transcriptions, synchronization rights, and other modern uses unknown when the bill was written. For some time music publishers have been collecting fees on the cases on the points not covered by the act. Last year, the flim angle was decided up to a point during the "Rosie O'Grady" suit decreed by 20th-Fox. Now the transcription angle is due.

Test Kern Tune

Longine-Wittnauer's suit asks the court for a declaratory judgment which will force T. B. Harms, publisher of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," to accept a "notice of user" license for the performance of the Jerome Kern tune on a royalty basis of 2c per transcription in its "World's Most Honored Music" series, presented on over 200 stations of the Mutual network. Longine's began the action by recording the tune on 200 transcriptions and sending T. B. Harms a check for $4 along with a normal request for a license. Publishers returned the check and the suit was instituted.

Music publishers have been for years charging transcription makers

Connee Boswell In Decca Roster Exit

Connee Boswell asked for and drew a release last week from a Decca Record contract that still had some time to run. Cause of her self-requested exit from the company's roster are obscure although it's known that she and Decca executives have not gotten along for some time.

Miss Boswell is currently on a theatre tour. She has no ideas at the moment about records. Currently at the Adams theatre, Newark, she'll duo at the Chicago, Chicago, for three weeks and perhaps four, opening Feb. 21.

Signature Showcasing Talent at Cuffo School Shows in Teen-Age Bid

Signature Records is employing an unique method of showcasing talent it has under contract. Company inaugurated last week a plan of packaging its artists and staging stage shows in high school auditoriums around New York, presumably with the idea of quickening interest in its product among the age-group known to be heavy disk buyers.

Initial show, put on last Thursday (23) afternoon at the Scarsdale High School, consisted of Monica Lewis, vocalist wife of Bob Thiele, head of Signature; Bobby Doyle, and a six-piece group of musicians from Johnny Bothwell's orchestra. Other dates are being set up.

ADDY SWITCHES TO MOOD

Mickey Addy, on the Campbell-Porgie publishing staff in New York for eight years, shifted Monday (27) to the new Mood Music as professional manager. Mood is owned by Columbia Pictures, Decca Records and Shapiro-Bernstein, who operates the company.

Addy was at one time on S-B's staff.

Producers of 'Finian' to Get Decca Royalty for Use of Music, Cast

Decca Records is for the first time paying a royalty to the producer of a Broadway show in return for the privilege of marketing a score in album form. Show involved is "Finian's Rainbow," produced by Lee Sabinson and Lee Katzell, who flatly refused to allow the use of the music and cast of "Finian" for the cutting of an album until assured of some revenue from its sale.

Not only did Sabinson and Katzell draw a royalty deal, said to call for approximately nine cents per album, but Lynn Murray, who wrote the vocal orchestrations (Russell Bennett arranged the music) is also participating. This is on the theory that the arrangements are uniquely necessary to Decca's plans since such albums are sold on the premise that they are exact duplications of the performance of them in the show. N. Y. Vipa Harburg and Fred Saidy apparently have no say in a deal for their rights other than their normal income from mechanical rights and sheet sales through the publishers of the score, Chappell music company. Latter, incidentally, refuses to make any comment at all on the Sabinson deal, stating it's none of its business.

Sabinson and Katzell's demand for a piece of Decca's income from the sale of the "Finian" albums came close to killing the deal. Recording of the tunes was held up while Decca wrestled against the producers' demands, but finally gave in. Decca's usual procedure in such cases is to give royalty deals to prominent stars in the casts of the shows the music of which they record, but if there are none, or minor ones, flat payments are arranged. Unimportant people in the casts are paid scale.

La Conga, N.Y. Cafe, Sued On Song Infringements

Four music publishing firms last week filed injunction and damage suits in New York Federal court against La Conga, nitery claiming unauthorized use of their tunes. Firms are seeking damages of not less than $250 for each performance claiming that on Nov. 15, the cafe gave public performances of tunes for which it had no performing license.

Firms filing the suit are Harms, Inc., for "Begin the Beguine"; Mills for "Between the Devil and Deep Blue Sea"; Irving Berlin for "You Keep Coming Back Like a Song," and Witmark for "South America, Take It Away."

Monte Gardner, La Conga boniface, has been operating without an ASCAP license for some time.

Leeds' Reverse Technique On 'Richard' Claims

Leeds Music last week slammed the widening legal doors in the dispute over the origin and ownership of the fast-spreading novelty tune, "Open the Door Richard." Leeds instead opened other doors wide to take into participation in its version of the tune every claimant who so far has reared his voice over the tune. In this way, the publishers figured to kill off all legal disputes and keep the way clear to whatever sales success the tune might achieve. And it is perhaps the fastest rising novelty to come along since "Music Goes 'Round."

Leeds was in the middle in the fight over the tune. Dusty Fletcher, who recorded it for National Records, claimed to be the originator by virtue of his use of the title phrase in a vaude skit; John Mason, another vaude comic, asserted he used it first and Fletcher got it from him. Then there was Jack McVea and Ben Howell, whose version Leeds bought back in November. Leeds believed it could have beaten any claims on its copyright by Fletcher, since the McVea version was based on his original music and it was this arrangement that started interest in the song."

At any rate, Leeds settled all disputes by giving both Fletcher and Mason equity in the song and placing their names, as writers of the lyrics, on all sheet music hereafter printed. McVea and Dan Howell will be listed as music composers. National Records, which claimed ownership of Fletcher's version, is out of the picture unless it is in on Fletcher's piece.

Incidentally, the Black & White label record by McVea, which started the tune on the Coast, is being shipped east in 20,000 copy lots on chartered air freight planes to get a toe-hold in the east before the major record companies glut the market with their versions. So far, around 60,000 McVea disks have gotten to New York.

GEORGIE AULD TO OPEN RECORD SHOP IN L.A.

Georgie Auld, who sometime ago broke up his orchestra, next month is opening a retail record shop in Hollywood. Thus he joins company of maestri Freddy Martin and Sonny Burke, as well as the Pied Pipers and Andrews Sisters, all of whom are competing against each other in the Greater Los Angeles area with retail disk dispensaries.

Slim Gaillard for a period last year operated such a shop, but creditors closed him out.

Leslie Elected To ASCAP Bd.

Edgar Leslie, Double-A writer member of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, was elected to the Society's board of directors last week, replacing Richard Rodgers, resigned. Leslie assertedly was not anxious to take the position, but was pressed into service by the writer faction of the board, who decide on and nominate their man, exclusive of interference from the publisher faction, when one of their number is to be replaced.

Unusual angle of Leslie's election is that he was originally a member of the board, but resigned about four years ago in protest against the society's bypassing of his plan, developed with associate Fred Ahlert, for distribution of income to writer members. At that time Rodgers replaced him; now he again replaced Rodgers. Leslie will hold his position until the annual April elections, when he must compete for the spot with other nominees.

N.O. Group Plans To Construct $1,000,000 Ballroom on Main Stem

New Orleans, Jan. 28.

A huge ballroom, with restaurant and lounge, will be built here at a cost of $1,000,000. William Gruber, attorney and state senator, revealed Skyliner, Inc., a group of local business men headed by himself, will let the construction contract in 190 days. Project will be locally financed, he added.

Ballroom will hold 5,000 persons and will be the largest in the South, Gruber said. It will feature "name bands" and will try to broadcast on a national hookup. Building will be of two stories with mezzanine, fronting 115 feet on Canal street, the main stem, by 256 feet in depth.

Completion is expected in 1948.

Gruber also heads group which operates the swank Pre-Vue Vodvil lounge in the business area.

Lithographers in Strike Vote, But Defer Action

Members of the Amalgamated Lithographers Union, Local 1 in New York, voted to strike last week (24) in meeting, but withheld application of their decision for further talks over their salary demands. Following the strike vote, union delegates, shop stewards, et al, prevailed upon the men not to go out pending another meeting schedule for last night (Tuesday).

In the event the strike is called, music publishers will be vitally effected. Their material is printed mostly by a lithographic process.

Palladium in New Name Suit on Coast

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Maury Cohen, operator of Palladium ballroom, has sought a restraining order in Seattle Superior Court to enjoin a terpalace in North Seattle from using the name. The upcoast site, operated by Howard Crow and Byron H. Scobey, has been tagging itself "Palladium" for over a year in what plaintiff terms "unfair competition" with hoofing hall here which has borne name since 1940.

Last spring Cohen sought injunction in N. Y. Superior Court to prevent a Manhattan dancery from using the tag, but lost the case, with court ruling that name meanders far back into history. Especially cited was existence of the London Palladium.

$50,000 Judgment Asked

Seattle, Jan. 28.

Injunction to restrain a Seattle company from using the name Palladium for a dancery here is being sought in Superior Court.

Judgment for $50,000 is also asked in the complaint, filed by Southern California Enterprises, Inc., operators of the Palladium, Hollywood, against Byron H. Scobey and Howard R. Crow, co-partners of the Palladium Amusement Co. here.

Radio, BMI, Films Back ASCAP In Bid for Coin Machine Revenue

American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers will have the support of radio broadcasters, Broadcast Music, Inc., its rival performance rights society, and possibly the film business in its forthcoming attempt to wrest revenue from the performance of its music in coin machines. This assurance is claimed to have been given ASCAP within recent weeks and the Society is banking on it in laying plans for the introduction of legislation to the current Congress for a law permitting it to collect for coin machine performance of its catalog.

There are several reasons for the support of radio, films, et al. Primary one, however, is that if ASCAP is able to push through the required legislation it will benefit to the tune of $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 at least, depending in what sort of a fee is demanded annually per machine. This coin, added to ASCAP's current revenue, will make the Society less tough to deal with in regard to its income from radio and films.

That the coin machine men are already laying plans to combat ASCAP's attempt to collect revenue from their industry, is evident in a offer recently given BMI. Latter was told that if it would help the coin machine industry fight ASCAP that all recordings of ASCAP melodies would be barred from machines and BMI's used exclusively. This offer was rejected.

Fred Waring Setting Up New Pub Firm at Shawnee

Stroudsburg, Pa., Jan. 28.

Fred Waring will establish a music publishing firm at Shawnee-on-Delaware, where he owns a good deal of real estate. Charter for the new corporation is being sought under the name of Shawnee Press.

New outfit plans to publish educational music for schools, colleges, along with material for choral groups, churches, et al. Ed Lee, Waring's manager is v.p. of firm, with Waring president. Headquarters will be at Shawnee-on-Delaware, where offices and shipping center will be located.

Waring owns Shawnee Inn and about 30 acres of mainland along the Delaware River and the 160-acre Manwalamink Island in the river.

Christensen, Facchine, Whittemore, Thayer Mull Alliance; No Decision

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Howard Christensen, Russ Facchine, Jack Whittemore and Lyle Thayer were here all last week, huddling over the details of a possible alliance of their band business talents. Group hid out at the Eastgate hotel to wrestle their problem to a fall and assertedly broke up at the end of the week without accomplishing anything. Spokesman for the quartet stated that nothing had been decided one way or another and isn't likely to be within a couple weeks.

Thayer and Facchine remained in Chicago following the confab, while Christensen and Whittemore returned to New York. Former two, and Whittemore, all ex-Music Corp. of America executives, have been contemplating the setting up of a management agency partnership.

Jack Whittemore, on his way back from Chicago and the above huddle, was aboard the Pennsylvania Railroad train that cracked into a freight near Pittsburgh Sunday (26) morning. He was unhurt in the crash, in which the passenger train's engineer was killed.

Bob Harvey band, a fixture at the south end nitery, The China Pheasant, Seattle, for several years, goes into Olympic hotel's Bowl and Georgian Room on Feb. 11.

It's Only Started

Phrase around which the new novelty tune, "Open the Door Richard," is built, is exerting such influence on people that an increasing number of comical situations are being set up. Let an actor in a film playing Broadway houses knock on a door and some wag in the balcony will howl the title line.

Same applies to stage shows, etc. where an opportunity presents itself. And it's already riding the top comedy shows on the air.

Bands Heartened By 1-Nighter Lift

Band agency executives are breathing a little easier currently in view of a noticeable pickup of b.o. returns by bands on the various one-nighter trails and on many location jobs. They claim to have indication, too, of better theatre b.o. reaction to musical talent.

This stirring in the band business coincides with a jump of approximately 20% in overall music sales by jobbers and a claimed spurt in the sale of records beginning the middle of last week and extending over the past weekend.

Sammy Kaye Hot In South

On its current southern p. a. one-nighters tour, Sammy Kaye's orchestra has broken three house records in Lynchburg, Va., Asheville, N. C., and Knoxville.

Working on a percentage against a $2,500 guarantee, Kaye took down $3,033 in Kingsport, Va.; $2,924 in Asheville; $3,994 in Knoxville, and $2,894 in Lynchburg. Kaye ends his one-nighter junket tomorrow (23) when he heads for Miami to play the Fox theatre there for one week. He'll vacation in Miami from Jan. 23 to Feb. 10 and originate both "Sunday Serenade" and "So You Want to Lead a Band" from there.

Mercury Cuts Off Flow Of Tony Martin Wax In Retaliation Move

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Mercury Records summarily has ceased pressing or distributing Tony Martin platters, in retaliation for singer signing RCA-Victor contract, effective when present one-year pact with Mercury expires end of April. In making this move the odd-label is stopping circulation on its top seller.

However, Mercury is girding to flood the retail stalls with an avalanche of Martin sides as soon as Victor begins releasing. Stowed away on the indie's shelves are 15 Martin renditions of standards and he is still bound by contract to slash five more sides. Angle lurking behind delayed disking is that Mercury wants to pick five likely new tunes on eve of Martin's move to RCA, thus scratching them from possible Victor consideration, as his Mercury pact precludes him re-doing a tune for five years.

In withholding its Martin vocals until Victor is able to release in May, Mercury figures it will get a free whirl on the nationwide ballyhoo program RCA is readying to coincide with singer's appearance on its label.

Martin Buys Into Simon, Inc.

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Tony Martin has bought into the music pub firm of George Simon, Inc., thus joining host of other name vocalists who own chunks of pubs. Company is relatively new, having been started by Simon last summer when he left E. H. (Buddy) Morris' combine.

Recently signed for spotting in two forthcoming Walter Wanger films, Martin will bring the ditties he introduces in the productions into the Simon setup for publication.

Harry Fox's N. Y. to L. A.

Harry Fox, agent and trustee for music publishers on mechanical and synchronization rights, leaves for the Coast Feb. 10. Trip is one of his periodic visits west lately made more important by the vast number of indie recording companies in that area on whom he checks for royalties due publishers.

Fox will be west three to four weeks.

AVODON BEEFS TO NO. 47 OVER SCALE

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Avodon ballroom over weekend filed a squawk with Musicians' Local 47, complaining that scale union has in force is excessive. Terpalace minimum currently is $82 per man, plus the 10% tax per musik on traveling bands.

Beef is based on scale at Aragon and Casino Gardens, rival spots out at Santa Monica, where Local 47 scale is but $70 per windjammer, plus tax, although both beachfront halls have far larger floor capacity than does Avodon.

QUIZ

Question:—Watcha working on?

Answer:—Where have you been? "Carnival in Costa Rica" of course.

Q:—And what, pray, is that?

A:—A 20th Century-Fox Technicolor Production.

Q:—Don't be so formal. Whose music?

A:—Ernesto Lecuona, the leading composer of all—

Q:—Latin-America. Yes, I know, and a very gifted gent, I must say. What was it he wrote again?

A:—Oh just about 500 magnifico songs and piano pieces, including "Malaguena" (the biggest of all those big Marks standards you hear so much about) "Andalucia" (which you, being no long-hair, may know better as "The Breeze and I") "Say Si Si," "Jungle Drums," "La Comparsa" (watch it, watch it) and a little ditty called "Siboney."

Q:—Which you don't publish.

A:—Don't rub it in!

Q:—Sounds very impressive but why be so verbose? Who wrote the lyrics for the score?

A:—Harry Ruby, veteran wordsmith (to coin a phrase) and ballplayer extraordinaire. A mighty fine job too!

Q:—What's the No. 1 plug song?

A:—I was afraid you'd ask that. Everybody does and we tell 'em the whole score is No. 1.

Q:—Don't evade the question. Give!!

A:—(hesitatingly) Okay, if you insist. "Another Night Like This" is the baby we've started working on. It should be the first to reach the Hit Parade Sweepstakes.

Q:—For once I agree with you, optimist, but don't mix your metaphors, especially in Variety. Who's recorded it?

A:—About 14 lovely people and the other record companies can't get too sore if I mention only Dick Haymes on Decca, because he's the star of the picture.

Q:—And why hasn't it been at the top of all those most-played, most-broadcast, most-overdone lists yet, friend?

A:—Because it takes time to get it up there, for the love of Peatman. Stop being so impatient.

Q:—All right, all right. How's about the second No. 1 song?

A:—It's called "Mi Vida," it's an American style fox-trot ballad despite the Latin title and it's recorded by 13 lovely people including the aforementioned Dick Haymes on the aforementioned Decca label.

Q:—Who else is in "Carnival in Costa Rica?"

A:—Oh, Vera-Ellen and Celeste Holm and Caesar Romero and—but wait a minute—you'll hear all about that from Fox—Marks is paying for this ad. Stick to the score.

Q:—Are there any real typical Lecuona Cuban tunes?

A:—Terrifeec! "Rumba-Bomba" and "Maracas," just to name two. You'll be hearing them both soon on Majestic Records by the Lecuona Cuban Boys and on Victor by its new sensation Jose Curbelo.

Q:—How about novelties?

A:—A great fast song named "Costa Rica" that ought to open every single commercial show, and an indescribably wonderful and unpronounceable tongue-twister—"Gui-Pi-Pia." And by the way there's still another ballad, "I'll Know It's Love," which—

Q:—Just a minute. You're taking just one page, not a double spread. Easy on the copy. One thing I'd like to know though: when does the film open?

A:—I'd like to know exactly when myself. Nobody's sure yet but they figure April 1st at the Roxy. With a big flourish too a la "The Razor's Edge." Don't forget "Carnival's" a top-budget musical and cost millions.

Q:—And this ad is costing you quite a few hundred and you're just a music publisher. Do you think it's a good ad, by the way?

A:—That depends entirely whether people read down this far and how soon "Another Night Like This" starts selling Lucky Strikes.

Q:—That isn't too far distant, DESPITE this ad. Here's to your Lecuona score anyway. Long may it prosper.

A:—Amen, Amen!!!

Abe Olman to Coast

Abe Olman, general manager of Metro's "Big 3" music group, leaves for California Friday (31) on a periodic visit to Metro studios on music problems. There are two scores to be gone over, from the forthcoming "Summer Holiday," tunes from which will be marketed by the new Harry Warren Music Co., and two tunes from "This Time for Keeps" to be adjudged.

Olman will be west for two to three weeks.

Sonora's Royalty Rate Cues Beefs

There's quite a to-do at the moment in the music publishing and recording industries over the request to pare by Sonora Records for a low royalty rate for its new 39c Black Label series. Sonora has been seeking a quotation of 1¾c per side rate for the low-priced line and the major disc manufacturers, notably Decca, are squawking out loud.

Majors, who have been having their own troubles with publishers lately due to the increase-in retail price of disks by all companies excepting Columbia, and resultant higher royalty rates, don't want to see Sonora's low-priced line get a break. They apparently feel that if the company's price makes any serious inroad, they in turn will be forced to reduce prices. And under present conditions, which yield only a fraction of profit from the sale of individual disks, a price reduction is impossible. They don't want any break given the cheaper line, and if it's given, they feel they should get commensurate consideration.

So far, only one or two publishers have agreed to the 1¾c rate and they are endeavoring to renege. Others have whirled comment in the face of major company beefs and aren't likely to accede to Sonora's bid.

Edwards' Shenanigans Into Mercury Disk Album

Ralph Edwards, conductor of "Truth or Consequences" airshow, has prepped new idea for a record album, which Mercury shortly will release. On wax, Edwards conducts parlor games designed to help guests amuse themselves at private soirees, or for family use in homes.

Album, which will be titled "Let's Have a Party" will be given to Sears Roebuck exclusively for first 30 days following its release.

Sully Mason Cuts to 5

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Latest of orchestra leaders to cut size of their bands in order to meet operators' decreasing budgets is Sully Mason, Mason, alumnus of Kay Kyser, has been playing the southern territory and will move into the midwest with five piece combo.

Another bandleader who will front a five-piece group is Pinky Tomlin, who has also been playing the South and will come into the midwest to pick up bookings.

a minimum of 25c per tune per record with no disk to be used more than once without duplicate payment. Establishment of the 2c per disk theory contended by Longine's attorneys under the 1909 act would therefore mean a tremendous reduction in their transcription income if the point were to be sustained. Now that a test suit has been begun, major pubs are looking forward to its completion to establish once and for all the legality of their course on a subject not covered by the outmoded copyright law.

It's felt by some publishers, however, that even if the Longine point is won they still have recourse to added revenue via the licensing of "arrangements" of songs. While publishers do not interfere with or attempt to collect for special arrangements of tunes they publish they can legally demand payment for any performance of a tune other than the way it is written as published.

Inside Stuff—Orchestras-Music

Big four waxeries, Columbia, Capitol, Decca and RCA-Victor, joined arms last week in Hollywood and tossed a giant show to entertain 800 delegates to a regional meeting of members of National Assn. of Music Merchants. Platteries promoted host of their top performers, who happened to be on Coast, to entertain. Bob Hope emceed the lineup, which included Jerry Colonna, Jose Iturbi, Dinah Shore, Johnny Mercer, Pied Pipers, Allan Jones, Hoagy Carmichael, Jane Harvey, Paul Weston's orch. Occasion marked first time that the rival recorders' reps in Hollywood ever worked together in such a manner. Behind the effort was a plan to trot out such an array of talent that the association will want to hold one of its future national conventions in Los Angeles. The regional meet was the first gathering of any sort of members in the west and the platteries were out to impress the assn.'s toppers. Next June national convention will gather in Chicago, but L. A. is aiming for 1948 conclave.

Capitol Records is doing a perfect job of keeping the financial details of its recent deal with Benny Goodman a secret. There has not been one whisper about the coin involved, which in the band business is unusual. Such a grip on the terms is vital to Capitol since it is in a peculiar position; it has never before made a deal with a prominent artist from another company. All of its personnel grew up with the war-born Capitol label, struggled with it, etc., and Capitol would be in for a heap of trouble if it ever came out that B. G. was drawing a better advance, production guarantees or any terms better than those now on the label are getting. Incidentally, B. G.'s deal with Cap is for three years, not the five the company originally claimed.

Fox theatre, Atlanta, a 5,000-seat house, is in a peculiar position with stage shows. Willing to play only the very best names, the house rarely schedules them for the reason that rarely do any of those it wants travel in that direction. As a result, Sammy Kaye's orchestra has the place to itself. Each year he heads south and each year the house plays him. He's there currently and his is the first stage show to play the house since he was there last year. He set a gross record of approximately $28,000 last time around (taking out almost $14,000 for himself) and may improve on that this week. He's expected to do $30,000.

Carol Bruce christened the pleasure cruiser bought last week by Tommy Dorsey. Naming of the water jalopy took place at a New York shipyard where the boat is being fitted out. It's to be called the "Sentimentalist." Dorsey will take off in it, as soon as it's ready, for a trip to Florida down the inland waterway, after which it will be stowed on deck of a freighter and toted to California. Dorsey has thought better of bucking the Gulf waters and the Pacific in a 40-footer (he originally intended sailing it around, through the Panama Canal).

Ad copy on Barry Wood, in the Jan. 22 issue of VARIETY, erroneously read that the Elgin Watch Co. is Wood's radio sponsor; the sponsor is the Elgin American Co. Also, copy stated that it was a Monday-through-Friday show on the NBC network, coast-to-coast; actually it's a local WNBC, N. Y., 7:30-7:45 program, Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Council of the Music Publishers Contact Employees, in meeting Monday (27) decided to hold over until future confabs any discussion of a "czar" for the music business and conversation pertaining to payolas, etc. Reason for the delay was the absence of three board members, two of whom, Rocco Vocco and Charles Lang, are out of town.

Norman Granz, producer of the "Jazz At the Philharmonic" package, inserts unusual clauses in his contracts for auditoriums in which to show his group. He demands that there be clear clauses prohibiting any attempts at segregation, either among his performers or among audiences.

Wallerstein, Manie Sacks To Coast for Col. O.O.

Ted Wallerstein and Manie Sacks, president and v.p. of Columbia Records respectively, leave New York for the Coast Feb. 21. They will attend the breaking of ground for the new Columbia pressing plant to be put up in Beverly Hills and otherwise look over the Coast situation.

Wallerstein is currently on vacation in Bermuda, along with Paul Southern, another Columbia exec.

Cap Chiefs Easting

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Glenn Wallichs, Capitol Records' exec veepee, and plattery's national sales manager Floyd Bittaker trained for N. Y. on Sunday (26), where they will huddle with eastern regional sales chiefs. Talks will revolve around product and promotion planned by waxery during next six months.

During their fortnight fling in the east, the two execs also will check on current production pace of Cap's pressing plant at Scranton, Pa.

Jack Benny Slated for Vaude Dates In May on Guarantee, Percentage Deals

Jack Benny is being submitted for his first theatre date in many years by Music Corp. of America. Deal if consumated will be around the end of May, with comic likely to play Chicago, Boston and New York.

While no deal has yet been set for any house, it's seen that there will be considerable difficulties in setting up the dates.

Benny is reported unwilling to play more than two weeks in each house. Picture companies, so far, have refused to okay that type deal, inasmuch as they would like to hold Benny if grosses warrant. A Roxy theatre spokesman declared that house toppers once turned down a two week stint, but are now attempting to revive the negotiations. Benny subsequently has been offered to the Capitol and Paramount, but no deal has yet been made. All negotiations are on a guarantee and percentage basis. In Boston, deal is likely to be a straight 50%.

Benny, previously, was submitted to RKO for a date at the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, but deal had to be dropped because of difficulties. Problem of squeezing in the Benny, Phil Harris and Dennis Day shows between appearances couldn't be worked out.

It's likely that such problems will arise when and if Benny makes his personal appearance tour inasmuch as show generally starts its summer layoff around that time.

Negotiations will be resumed when Johnny Dugan, of MCA's theatre dept., returns from a Florida vacation.

Pitt Nitery Adds Acts

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

While most niteries are crying the blues and cutting down, at least one is going in opposite direction. Marie Dolan's Green Acres, which previously has gone in for dancing only with four-piece outfits, currently Billy Calizone's, is also putting in floor shows now.

New Owners Take Over Downbeat, Onyx, N. Y.

Two 52d street, N. Y., spots changed hands last week. The Downbeat has been sold to a corporation headed by Bill Levine, owner of the Dubonnet, Newark; Tony Collucci and Ralph White. Colucci some years ago owned a slice of this bistro, but sold out only to repurchase an interest last week.

The old Onyx club, which lately has been operating as a straight eatery, has been bought by Ralph Watkins.

Puleo Vamps Rascals Again in Florida But Ordered Back by AGVA

Johnny Puleo, lower-case comic of Borrah Minevitch Harmonica Rascals, last week repeated his disappearing act. Pint-size comedian vamped the unit a few days after winding up at the Colonial Inn, Hallendale, Fla., and rest of the troupe had to go on without him to play an Alabama theatre.

Puleo was subsequently located by a representative of the American Guild of Variety Artists, and pleaded illness. AGVA, as a result, ordered Puleo to state the amount of rest needed and rejoin the outfit.

Puleo pulled his first disappearing routine when he wound up an engagement at the Diamond Horseshoe, N. Y., several months ago. Comic was reported dissatisfied with the terms of his contract with Minevitch, and wanted to leave the outfit. Minevitch subsequently agreed to from the Coast and asked AGVA to clarify the situation. Union then ruled Puleo's contract with Minevitch to be valid.

Rudy Vallee Asking 10G For Roxy, N.Y., Vaude Date

Rudy Vallee may go into the Roxy theatre, N.Y., in April or May. He has been submitted at $10,000 by Charlie Yates of the Associated Booking Corp. Sole kink in the deal is the fact that Vallee has been set for April at the Copacabana, Chicago, and may not be through at the cafe in time for the proposed Roxy date.

'Vanities,' 'Star and Garter' Units Fold In Red; Lack of Consec. Dates Cited

Lack of consecutive theatre time throughout the country has caused the foldo of two vaude units within the week. Earl Carroll's "Vanities" closed in Philadelphia at the conclusion of its date at the Earle theatre, and Harry Howard's "Star and Garter" is due to bow out at the windup of its Capitol theatre, Washington, stint, tonight (Wednesday).

Sole large unit continuing vauders is Paul Small's "Showtime."

Both units lost plenty during their runs. Bobby Vernon, who leased the "Vanities" name from Carroll, declared that unit has dropped upwards of $40,000 during the 14 weeks show traveled, while Howard is reported to have lost $9,500. Small, because of the fact that he was able to get most major dates within a comparatively short time, said that he'll come out ahead on the venture.

Vernon attributed the fold basically to the fact that bookers are still afraid to take chances with unit shows. What's needed, he said, is sure dates before a unit is even assembled.

Vernon is said to have taken out the unit under too great financial handicaps. Carroll is reported to have received $1,250 weekly for use of his name, and retained the right to okay all dates. Consequently, when Vernon wanted to book the show into cafes, Carroll nixed the deal, although Vernon was able to squeeze two weeks into the 400 club, St. Louis. Unit was slated to go into Adams, Newark, Friday, but Vernon decided operation took enough losses.

AGVA Pays Off

When show folded in Philly, Vernon paid off some performers out of the bond he posted with the American Guild of Variety Artists, and paid fares to California for some of the chorus girls. Other fares were paid to Ohio and some to New York. Ben Yost singers and the Mercer Bros. were given promissory notes in lieu of salaries.

Howard's "Star and Garter" layout was similarly saddled with heavy expenses. In addition to leas-

Miami Beach, Jan. 25.

Danny Kaye, Paul Haakon, Mavis Mims, Ralph Young, Blentones (4), June Taylor Girls (7), Dave Tyler Orch (14), Noro Morales Orch (12). Production staged by Benny Davis, choreography by June Taylor: $5-$7.50 min.

It's been tough sledding for most spots this seas.n, with this swank room struggling for biz along with the others, but this time operators Murray Weinger and Ben Slutsky seem to have struck boxoffice pay-dirt in Danny Kaye, despite that $20,000 salary plus the high production and operating expenses. New seating arrangement, which, allows for packing in 500 diners, plus the heavy beverage minimums for dinner and supper has gauged the room to in-the-black proportions. First five days saw sellouts for every session, but it's the second week that's going to tell the story, what with Kaye earning himself mixed reaction from first nighters and subsequent attendees.

It took Kaye several minutes to get over his opening show jitters. That nervousness may have led him into teeing off with his weakest number "Ball Boogie." Pacing, too, was off, with biz of conducting band a laugh maker at first, but later on repetition slowing up stint.

That he was anxious to please is evidenced in the hour-long sesh which included some 14 numbers, most of them clicking. Brought on wife Sylvia Fine in middle and picked up pace, though there was still too much of that cute biz. They wanted to hear him sing, and the lulls were becoming too evident. With proper pruning of the interim biz between numbers and the reacquiring of the feel of a cafe aud, the guy should again be the sock nitery performer he was when he first clicked at La Martinique. In his current stint he turns in a satisfying performance for his fans—though how long they'll keep coming back at those heavy tariffs is a moot question. It's a one shot affair with most, and there's plenty of competish around to siphon off the repeaters.

Overall, the sesh adds up as highly satisfying class cafe entertainment. He sings all his film hits, plus some from his stage successes. Topper and new is his lullaby to daughter Dinah, which sends him off to palm-whacky reaction. Tightening in his second show was evident, and probably by now Kaye is the top cafe performer he should have been at the debut.

Rest of show builds nicely, with the Blentones handling production numbers in neat fashion, the June Taylor line impressing with imaginative routines and Mavis Mims sock in her brief tap turn. Ralph Young shows definite improvement in the song department and by season's end should be ready for the northern class spots. Paul Haakon surveys a new sesh of his class ballet type-terping with a Russian theme that earns him a begoff reception. Dave Tyler and his unit play the proceedings in top style. Noro Morales and his ace group of rhumbaddicts get them flocking on the floor in heavy numbers for the dance sessions. Larry.

Latin Quarter, N. Y.
(FOLLOWUP)

Headliner change in the current Latin Quarter lineup is of more than usual interest to the trade. The big item is the first Broadway date of Myron Cohen, whose fame as a raconteur caused him to abandon his former calling as a silk-salesman in favor of pro theatrical engagements. For more than a year he's been shuttling between bistros and clubdate appearances, and by now has established himself to a four-figure weekly earning capacity.

Cohen's LQ preem comes at a time when a controversy on dialectitians is raging. Center of the argument is the degree to which dialect material can go before it offends racial minorities.

In his Latin Quarter appearance, Cohen's material much of it in dialect, is clean and, according to his exit hand, the stuff is very much in demand by the audience. He drew two encores with his cloak-and-suiter stories. Having worked among the garment-cutters for many years, he's gotten the knack of telling yarns about them very much in the manner of one telling a story on himself.

However, Cohen, on previous guest night and casual date appearances, has been guilty of offensive material, but long as he sticks to the type yarn he did on his first LQ show, he's okay.

Other new acts on the current Quarter session comprise Chandra-Kaly and his dancers, Marina and Leslie Caddocks (3), Francis and Grey, and Moro and Yaconelli.

Chandra-Kaly dancers provide the artistic touch with their East Indian and South American terps. Costuming and routines are above par, and they collect a big hand for four numbers.

The Craddocks, a recent French importation, are an energetic trio of knockabouts whose work is an admixture of Three Stooges and the Ritz Bros. Their audience acceptance is okay, but they have a tendency to become wearing. Sterner editing of their material should improve their act considerably.

Moro and Yaconelli, Mex comics, are a bit too elementary for Broadway audiences. Their humor is mainly musical. Francis and Grey are veterans in this cafe. Their smoke dance goes over with usual effectiveness. New house singer is Martin Kent, who does the production job competently. Vincent Travers, longtime maestro at the nearby Diamond Horseshoe, handles the show music neatly. Jose.

El Morocco, Mont'l
(FOLLOWUP)

Montreal, Jan. 24.

Though Bea Kalmus has been vocalizing her way around the nitery circuit for quite a while, it's the first time she's ever played this town and according to current reception, she can come back often.

Her delivery of the old time pops, "Sunny Side of the Street," "April Showers," etc., is done with plenty schmaltz and commerciability. Gal looks okay in nifty gowns, and she belts out the choruses with a set of pipes that gets attention even with noisy audiences. Special material also helps 'em for solid response.

Archie Robbins is held over from previous layout as are Dino & Rosita, ballroomologists.

New line (6), featuring acro dance by Dorothy Douglas, makes nice impresh. Al Grant's orch (11) cuts show neatly. Biz okay. Laza.

ing the name from producer Mike Todd, Howard, like Vernon, had to pay chorus girl salaries, when troupe laid off, and frequently had to make long unprofitable jumps to fill dates.

It's also contended that the high price of acts makes it impossible for the units to play the small houses. There are towns that would like to get these shows, but are unable to shell out $8,500 weekly guarantees, and shows can not afford to play straight percentage dates in the smaller communities.

However, closings of these units won't put the kiss of death on this type entertainment. Howard is mulling another show, "Diamond Horseshoe" with title leased from Billy Rose, and may start work on that layout shortly.

Lou Cohan has resigned from the Al Borde office in Chicago, to go on his own.

O&J Gross Nifty 49½G In 1st Wk. at Carnival, N.Y.

First week of the Olsen and Johnson show at the Carnival resulted in a higher opening week figure than any layout to play that spot. O&J show pulled $49,500.

Olsen and Johnson were originally for the Carnival at a straight $10,000 weekly, but deal was revised when the comics started hiring some stooges on the show. Nicky Blair, the Carnival's operator, subsequently objected. Consequently, contract was revised which provided the cost of extras be shared between the comedians and Blair. New pact is believed to call for $8,500 plus percentages over $47,000 gross.

Lecuona, Ed Sullivan Set For N. Y. Roxy March 5

Ernesto Lecuna, famed Cuban composer, and Ed Sullivan, N. Y. Daily News columnist, have signed for the Roxy theatre, N. Y., starting March 5 on bill with Sid Caesar. Date will be Lecuona's first theatre appearance. He clefted, among others, "Malaguena" and "Andalucia" which are in the repertoires of nearly all concert orchs.

Sullivan, between his appearances at Loew's State, N. Y., with the Harvest Moon Ball winners, usually played one date annually at the State at $2,500 weekly. This will be Sullivan's first date at the Roxy in about 10 years.

Mardi Gras, N.Y., Drops Airer in Bond Row

Mardi Gras, N. Y., which last week started a series of broadcasts and recorded programs from the spot aired over WINS, was forced to suspend the shows Monday (27) because of the Mardi Gras' failure to post a $350 bond with the American Guild of Variety Artists. Bond was to cover the salary of Jack Eigen, who emceed the airer.

This type of broadcast show superseded the musical talent at the Mardi Gras. Harry Finkelstein, spot's operator, paid for time charges as well as Eigen because broadcasts were used as advertising stunt.

Jack Lynch, former operator of the Walton roof, Philadelphia, is dickering for the defunct Coronet club there, and may reopen spot shortly. Lynch has been away from Philly nitery operations since building inspectors condemned the Walton hotel, which housed the cafe, last year.

Lynch at various times had been dickering for a Philly suburban site as well as a center-city property. Both these deals failed to jell.

Retention of 20% Nitery Tax Prompts Reduced Budgets, Foldos in Midwest

Chicago, Jan. 28.

With the announcement by the Republican majority in Congress that it intends to retain the 20% nitery tax, club owners here are on the verge of abandoning entertainment unless the tax is reduced to the pre-war 5%. Bistro ops claim that the extra tab is the main reason for keeping cafe customers away.

Act budgets have been feeling the slash here with top rooms such as the Empire Room dropping lines and other acts and bringing in singles and a band. In this way, owner Connie Hilton expects to cut several thousand dollars off his amusement nut every week. Sister room of the Empire, Boulevard, Stevens hotel, cut its budget this week, replacing a name band with a 12-piece outfit and eliminating name acts for lower-priced performers. Panther Room of the Sherman hotel is changing to ice shows for a three-month test period, and if that doesn't do the trick room may abandon entertainment for the first time in 44 years.

Only three other hotels use acts, although many have cocktail lounges and use combos; Edgewater Beach with low cost bands and revues; Bismarck, which uses medium price acts with semi-name bands, and Blackstone, which has been doing poorly for the last several months. While most of these rooms are off, they are not as hard hit as other spots. Places like Colisimo's, Band Box and numerous swing spots have cut their name shows and swing bands to cheap package deals. Lounges along Randolph street and on the northern boundary of the city, which used two or three rotating bands now have a piano sans acts and dancing, as customers just won't pay the tax.

Milton P. Raynor, attorney for the Chi Cafe Owners Association, said that cutback in the entertainment budget of cafe owners in Chi area amounted to almost a third, and that if relief was not forthcoming, further cuts would follow. The group is banding together with other bistro ops across the country in an effort to kick out the 20%.

Unemployment of Acts

On the entertainers' side things look dark, with many acts out of work in the last few months. In the midwest area, Jack Irving, regional director of American Guild of Variety Artists, said that over $200,000 in bond money was being returned to owners, and that the union's welfare fund was beginning to be tapped by performers out of work. Although no bistros have closed in Chi, area in the midwest report closing of key spots. Top spots have folded in Peoria and Milwaukee, with many lounge spots also shuttering. One spot just reopened cut its talent budget from $4,000 to $500 a week.

While Chicago has been better off than the rest of the country, largely due to huge convention biz, most of the continued good trade is reflected in not more than a dozen spots, while the rest of the niteries and lounges are taking a beating. However, for a few money-making spots like the Chez Paree and Latin Quarter, there are many other places desperately trying to make a go of things.

GEORGE JESSEL DRAFTED AS NEW PREXY OF NVA

George Jessel has consented to take over the presidency of National Variety Artists, succeeding Lou Handin, who has held that post for the past 10 years. Post is honorary and he'll officially take over on Feb. 16 when annual election of other officers takes place. Nominating committee is now working on the remainder of the slate.

Recent change in by-laws of the organization will have all officers on honorary basis, with exception of treasurer and executive secretary. Handin has been nominated for latter post without opposition and will receive the same remuneration he had been getting as president, $50 per week.

A board of governors, numbering 10, will also be chosen.

Despite his activities as 20th-Fox producer on the Coast, Jessel is figured to give considerable time and attention to affairs of the NVA.

Sid Harris of the Chicago office of the William Morris agency, has resigned to go in business for himself. Harris has been with the Morris office for nearly seven years.

Spot will be assumed by George Deber, who formerly booked the USO-Camp Shows domestic circuit. Prior to that he was with the Arthur Fisher office.

400 Club, N. Y., Files Bankruptcy Citing Debts of Over $300,000

The 400 Club, New York, up until a few weeks ago one of the highest paying users of name bands, is expected to file petition in bankruptcy in New York today (Wednesday) citing debts of over $300,000. While that action has been taken on the operation under Nat Moss and his partners, the spot continues in business under the management of Louis Salzman, lessee of the cocktail bar and room the 400 occupies. He took over from Moss.

Listed among the creditors of the defunct operation is the U. S. Government for $80,000 in taxes; Stanley Cohen, an investor friend of Moss, $22,000; Bob Merint advertising agency, $12,000 et al. One bandleader listed as a creditor is Tex Beneke, who's owed $5,300.

The 400 went into business late in 1944 as a cafe, using acts and non-name music. Following year, Tommy Dorsey inaugurated a name band policy on a high scale of pay which never was completely successful. Dorsey was the only one to ever do really good business at the spot, which is out of the way at 43d street and 5th Ave. Since reopening for the current season last September the club has been the wonder of the band business in that it could continue to pay its nut and still operate with such poor biz.

Several weeks back, the 400 ceased the use of name bands and now has Billy Maxted's orchestra, a 12-piece group.

ence, meanwhile, is winding up plans for the Brotherhood Week campaign at its New York headquarters. Staff has lined up a number of network shows that will devote special mention to the campaign and has waxed an all-star transcription that will go out to every station in the country for spot announcements. NCCJ decided against a combined net show this year, believing it would not pack as much wallop as a series of spaced announcements.

Motion picture division of the campaign, chairmanned by 20th-Fox prexy Spyros Skouras, will plug for nationwide distribution of the special trailer produced for the Week by David O. Selznick. David Weinstock, prexy of Raybond Theatres, has been named chairman of the industry's financial campaign, which will attempt to raise $100,000 during the drive among film personnel.

Sablon's Frisco Date

Jean Sablon, singer current at the Versailles, N. Y., has been signed for the Palace hotel, San Francisco, starting March 20. Chanteur will get a guarantee and percentage of the couverts.

Sablon will continue his Richard Hudnut broadcasts while playing the Palace engagement.

New Acts

4 RAVENS
Songs
15 Mins.
Apollo, N. Y.

With vocal quartets pretty much a glut on the market, it's a surprise when a new one appears on the vaude horizon and shows individuality. Nevertheless, the Ravens have it in no small measure, and could probably have stayed onstage all night at their Friday (24) opener.

Foursome opens with "My Sugar Is So Refined," driven largely by a mellow, chanty-calling bass. Usual high tenor follows with "For Sentimental Reasons." Bass returns in "Ole Man River" rhythm riff and payees love it. Encores are "September Song" and "Bye Baby Blues." Spotting that syrupy bass in choruses while relegating the higher-ups to beat is unusual and good. Outfit would do well in any spot and looks like a good bet for records.

COLES & ATKINS
Dance
6 Mins.
Strand, N. Y.

Far better than average, the sepian dance team of Coles and Atkins looks like one of the best acts of its kind. Boys' smooth terping is marked by effortless precision and their short song and patter routine is just enough to prove interesting. They're equipped now for the best vaude or nitery dates.

Duo open with a slow beat, featuring well-executed slides, and segue into the patter stint. Precision terping is also done to a slow beat but they wind up with some fast tapping that's solid.

Stal.

BOB & AL
Dance
6 Mins.
Apollo, N. Y.

This was probably a last minute booking and it's a bad break for these two guys. With more rehearsal, routining and polishing they'd probably be a workmanlike tap team. As it is, they have trouble staying together and the discrepancy between abilities of the two is marked.

In their solo stints, one shows as a pretty good dancer while the other has little but flash twirls. The final jump and splits stanza could be omitted entirely. More practice needed here.

OBITUARIES

GRACE MOORE

Grace Moore, 45, American opera and film star, was killed in an airplane crash near Copenhagen, Denmark, Jan. 26. Four members of the singer's staff, including her pianist, Jean Loup Peltier, and her impresario, Roland Fernand Malbec, were also killed, along with 17 others including Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden.

MARCUS A. BENN

Marcus A. Benn, 80, retired indie theatre operator, died Jan. 23 at his home in Philadelphia. In 1909, Benn opened the Belmont theatre, now the Benson, and continued actively as an exhibitor until his retirement last year. He operated a small chain of theatres which was absorbed by Warners.

HERBERT CORTHELL

Herbert Corthell, 69, stage comedian for half a century, died Jan. 23 at his home in Hollywood after a year's illness. His last public appearance was in "Arsenic and Old Lace" in Los Angeles.

For 40 years he was a familiar figure on Broadway, and was a featured comedian back in 1907, when he appeared with Lillian Russell in "Wildfire." In addition to stock and repertory productions he worked in such plays as "The Balkan Princess," "Strongheart," "The Vagabond King," "Seven Days" and several Winter Garden revues. On the screen he appeared in "Louis Pasteur," "Bombay Mail," "This Is the Navy" and others.

Corthell was a life member of the Lambs Club and belonged to the Players, the Actors' Order of Friendship and the old Green Room Club. Surviving are his widow, Marion, and a son, Edmund.

ALBERT C. CAMPBELL

Albert C. Campbell, 74, ballad singer, reputed to have made recordings in the experimental days of Thomas Edison on phonograph records, died at his home in Flushing, N. Y., Jan. 25.

Campbell as a member of the old Peerless Quartet, which had been a fave harmony group at the turn of the century, is said to have participated in the making of thousands of records. He had started out as a glasscutter, but when 20 years old met up with Henry Burr, who, with two other singers, organized the Peerless Quartet.

After making recordings for a number of years, in 1918 the quartet signed with Victor, and for the next decade Campbell and seven other singers appeared in concerts throughout the country, billing themselves as the "Eight Victor Artists." He later appeared with the Memory Lane Trio, organized during the past war, which entertained at service camps and hospitals.

Survived by widow, daughter and sister.

TOM REYNOLDS

Tom Reynolds, 67, veteran British producer and stage director, died in London Jan. 25. For many years he was associated with the late George Erwardes in production at the latter's Gaiety and Daly's theatres, London.

He later became connected with the Palace theatre, London, where he staged several revues, including "The Passing Show," "Bric-a-Brac" and "Vanity Fair." Subsequently he staged non-musicals at the Duke of York's and had also been associated with Walter Hackett in productions at the Whitehall theatre.

Among other London productions he staged were "By Jingo," "Follow the Crowd," "Thunder in the Air," "The Bachelor Father," "Take a Chance" and "The Woman in Room 13."

LULU SUTTON BELMONT

Lulu Sutton Belmont, retired legit actress, died Dec. 22 in Hollywood.

As a child player she appeared with Fred Stone and in later years trouped with Lady Diana Manners, and spent several seasons in vaudeville. Her last appearance was at the Orpheum theatre, Los Angeles, in 1929.

Mrs. Belmont was the daughter of Richard Sutton, early day theatre owner.

BARNETT WELANSKY

Barnett Welansky, 50, former operator of the Cocoanut Grove, Boston, died Jan. 27, in Boston. Welansky was pardoned from a 12-15 year sentence, two months ago, when it was evident that he would not live more than nine months because of a serious illness.

Welansky operated Cocoanut Grove at the time of its disastrous fire in 1942 in which 492 persons lost their lives. It was subsequently proved at the investigation that supposedly fireproofed materials were inflammable. Buck Jones, cowboy star, was among those who perished.

LARRY GINSBERG

Larry Ginsberg, 31, publicist, died Jan. 28 at Cedars of Lebanon hospital, Hollywood, from a virus infection. He had been ill for about a week.

Ginsberg went to the Coast about 10 years ago and became office boy for Harry Brand at 20th-Fox, ultimately being promoted to publicist handling trade papers. He left 20th about two years ago to enter independent publicity business with Jack Mulcahy.

Survived by mother and several uncles, including Henry Ginsberg, Paramount studio head.

ARTHUR L. BERNSTEIN

Arthur L. Bernstein, 62, Jackie Coogan's stepfather and executive for the Mike Lyman restaurants, died Jan. 21 in Hollywood, following a heart attack.

Coogan sued his mother and Bernstein in 1938 for an accounting of the $4,000,000 he claimed to have earned as a child actor. The case was settled by splitting $250,000, the remnants of "The Kid's fortune. As a result of this suit, Superior Court ruled that a percentage of the salary of a film moppet must be placed in a trust fund until the thesp reaches voting age.

LYSTER CHAMBERS

Lyster Chamber, 71, vet legit actor, died in New York Jan. 27. He made his last appearance in "Signature" at the Forrest theatre in February, 1945.

Chambers had been a leading man with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Bertha Kalisch and Mme. Simone.

Survived by widow and sister.

MORITZ HILDER

Moritz Hilder, 81, former exec vice-president of Goldwyn Pictures Corp., died in Lenox Hill hospital, N. Y., Jan. 25. He was also a retired importer and manufacturer.

In 1917 Hilder helped organize the Goldwyn company with Samuel Goldwyn, and remained with the firm until his retirement from active business in 1924.

Survived by widow, son, daughter and brother.

OTTO KLIVES

Otto Klives, 80, veteran Toledo theatreman, first manager of the Valentine, Toledo, when it opened in 1895, died Jan. 21 in Brooklyn, N. Y. He also opened the old Casino theatre, giving Toledo its first legit house built over water. He also had been with the Auditorium, former legit house.

His widow and two sisters survive.

LOIS ARNOLD

Mrs. Lois Arnold, 84, retired actress died at the Edward Forrest Home in Philadelphia, Jan. 26. She had been an actress for more than 60 years.

She had been seen in New York in "It Is to Laugh," "Quicksand," "Conflict" and, lastly, "Overture," in 1930.

Mrs. Dora Freeman, mother of Isadore Freeman, Metro publicist, died Jan. 13 at her home in Hollywood.

Father, 83, of Roger C. Clement, Paramount International's secretary and counsel, died in New York, Jan. 23.

Mrs. J. H. Anderson, retired actress and mother of Hoot Gibson, died Jan. 22 at her home in Hollywood after a long illness.

Sonja Henie Scores Again in Dazzling Ice Revue at Madison Sq. Garden, N.Y.

By JACK PULASKI

Sonja Henie and her "Hollywood Ice Revue" always was rated the classiest attraction offered in Madison Square Garden and that goes for the present engagement, her 10th annual ice appearance, which opened last Thursday (23). Again it's a $6 top show, the ticket price hardly a factor judging from opening night, when the audience virtually filled the arena's lower levels, but the top shelf was strangely bare.

The Chicago combo of Arthur M. Wirtz, the presenter, William H. Burke, the production director, and Catherine Littlefield, the stager, has topped previous showings in production splurge, the nut being quoted around $400,000. It required seven 70-foot baggage cars to bring the settings, costumes and props from the 7th Stadium. There are scene changes for every number on the revolving stage at the west end of the Garden, it requiring 18 deckhands to handle the scenic end, while the crew also has 20 spotlight operator: up among the girders.

The costumes are dazzling but Miss Henie doesn't count just on the duds design ed by Kathryn Kuhn of New York. She is on the ice as often as ever before, dominating seven production numbers. She billed the nonpareil of skaters, and that is conceded to be so, from the time the little, blonde Norsky champ came over and became a professional. Since she gave impetus to the ice show field there have been a number of crack rink stars developed, but none is on a par with dainty Miss Henie.

It has been said that there's little change in the art of exhibition skating but Miss Henie has added something new in several numbers and it's a thrill to watch such a faultless performer even though there aren't such dulcious trappings as the show and the outfit. Miss Henie is doing plenty of solo work but is in action with three male partners, two appearances, as a rule, they being Geary Steffen, Harrison Thompson and Gene Theslof. Production number billed as "Primitive Ritual" has most of the adagio which the star started several seasons ago, but elaborated one of the strongest skaters, does the lifting.

In "Sleeping Beauty" she has Thompson as the prince and in the "Happy Holidays" there's Steffen as consort. A novelty production number called the "Bon Bon Song," is a standout with the principal men dancers participating, but Miss Henie finishes the number only the length of the rink on her toes, or rather the front tip of her skates. The concluding number, "Circus Days," is reminiscent of the Barnum, Bailey, Ringling show, the biggest number of props being the Star's hula number is her bell-ringer, however, and has been since she started it. New bit is the star simulating a tight wire artist in the circus number.

Freddie Trenkler on lend-lease from "Icetime," the theatre skating show in Radio City, which Miss Henie and Wirtz also present, is again the favorite clown. He is using one trick from that show, grasping a wire and swinging over the audience. First appearance is in the "Borden Family," a comic trio as walking cows, with Trenkler the smallest, partners being John Farrell and James Carter. Trenkler's policeman and fireman numbers brought him back for curtain calls on opening night although the first nighters seemed to be a cold audience there were a number of encores, such as those by Fritz Dieti (stilt and pair skating), Carter, Rudy Richards a former line skater discovered by Burke, Gretle and Robert Uxsila.

There are half a dozen rhythm numbers, eight and a dozen specialties working in some and the entire ensemble appearing in others. Costumes don't touch the ice except to lure to several ensemble evolutions but the pinwheel number with all the girls and lads in action is about the clicker as it previously was. This season there are 24 male line skaters, more than during the war, the bunch that walked out in Detroit evidently being easily replaced.

Musically the show is also excellent both in the vocal and orchestral departments, latter having Jack Pfeiffer soloing. Miss Henie's event is a fast, dazzling pedformance, the number one steel runner diversion.

Tower, K. C.

Kansas City, Jan. 24.

Tom O'Neil & Jewel Joyce, Al Dexit & Beverly Hill, The Martells & Mignon, Tower Orch (9) with Ann Parks and Kenny Field; "Plainsman and the Lady" (Rep) and "Dangerous Millions" (20th).

Pace is only moderate on this show, and for entertainment value it stacks up similarly.

Medley of Gershwin tunes is the lead-off with specialties by Jack Parks, trumpet, Ted Greer, piano and Kenny Field, vocals, of the regular Tower crew. Tom O'Neal doubles in the m.c. spot.

Beverly Hill contribs boogie-acrobatic terp in follow-up spot. Her work is interrupted by Al Dault staggering on stage as a drunk who wants to climb on tables. He's appeased with four tables which he pyramids to put him in the files as he balances atop two chairs and quartet of bottles. Climax of the act is okay, but couple could get that faster for increased audience approval.

Jewel Joyce offers a couple of songs, "He's Funny That Way" and "Donkey Serenade," giving way to O'Neal's own turn at chatter in comedy vein. Has a fresh line of comedy chatter and embellishes with harmonica playing and travesty on the dancing.

Martells & Mignon offer novelty acrobatic act, with three burly gents tossing the petite gal around the stage. Routine is worked up into sequences during which Mignon is tossed and twirled between the trio without ever alighting to the stage. Act wins nice response. Quin.

State, N. Y.

Bonnie Baker, Johnny Downs, Lionel Kaye with Kathleen Ireland, Crosby Sisters, Meribeth Old; "The Jolson Story" (Col).

Despite the generally good calibre of the individual acts, State's bill fails to jell into a well-playing layout. One of the faults is the long-running film, "The Jolson Story," which necessitates the minimum limit of time for each act. Ordinarily, this would be an asset, but in this case, several turns just about wear up when they've got on.

As a result of inclusion of six acts when the house had to go into timesaving maneuvers, Barry Gray is just doing a straight emcee job. The WOR disk-jock, is, as expected, not the most polished emcee-ing prospect, but since he hasn't the time to make any kind of impression on the audience, it would have been better for him as well as the theatre if he were shifted to a bill where the time factor wouldn't be so acute. As it is he's getting $1,750 for doing next to nothing.

Signals of the bill has its moments. Meribeth Old, a comely contortionist, does supple backbends and cartwheels to send the bill off to a good start. Continuing in the fast vein are the Crosby sisters (2) with broad hoke comedies but material is so extremely boring or get across handsomely. At show caught, team affected the latter result.

The headline lure is in Bonnie Baker, who "some years ago started singing the same blues on the strength of her vocaling "Oh, Johnnie" with Orrin Tucker's band. Her slight, high-pitch voice isn't in evident today, but she still pleases an audience. Her three numbers comprise only her inevitable theme, makes for a hearty exit.

Johnny Downs, similarly has a chance to show his enfectionate potentialities in his song and dance work, but doesn't get a chance to display them as his tenure as emcee of the time element. Gets more than passable returns, nonetheless.

Lionel Kaye's auctioneering stint, with merchandise and cash giveaways, is still surefire audience fodder. He has no trouble getting patrons to the stage for the opulent gifts. Assisted by Kathleen Ireland, he's able to accomplish a lot during his stint, via his fast chatter and bribes.

Louis Basil's orch is onstage this week, and it doesn't show up as effectively as in the pit. Jose.

Olympia, Miami

Miami, Jan. 24.

Gil Lamb, Vivian Fay, Lucille Barton, The Herzogs, Don Henry Trio, Les Rhode House Orch; "Sister Kenny" (RKO).

Layout this week adds to solid effect most of the way to make the regulars happy.

Gil Lamb toplines in good style with his comedy dances and patter. Works in engaging manner to get them from entrance and tops stint with his nursery songs ala Cole Porter, Vincent Lopez and Shostakovich.

Ballerina Vivian Fay comes in from her Latin Quarter engagement to score nicely with her toe terps. Garnered heaviest response with her bullfight number.

The Herzogs, four femmes, garner gasps with their trapeze work, with femme contortionist doing her stuff out over stage. Added comedy sequence aids in rating the group heavy palm-whacking.

Lucille Barton got by with her song versions, which seem more suited to intime clubs, rather than in a large house such as this one. The Don Henry Trio round out the layout with their better than fair mouth-organing. Les Rhode and house orch handle the show neatly. Biz good when caught. Lary.

Music Hall, N. Y.

Patricia Bowman and Charles Laskey, Robert Marshall, Gil Maison, Ted & Flo Vollett, Rockettes (36), Ballet (28), Choral Ensemble, Symphony Orch conducted by Charles Previn; "The Yearling" (M-G), reviewed in VARIETY, Nov. 27, '46.

Russell Markert's current Music Hall production, labeled "Carnival," is generously spiced with socko turns, but poor routining and selection of numbers gives the overall impression of draginess and bad pacing. The layout is overheavy on ballet and vocalization. Distributing on the credit side, however, are three of the acts supplementing the M. H. regulars. They are Gil Maison and his assortment of animals, singer Robert Marshall and baton-spinners Ted and Flo Vallett.

Ballet tees off the proceedings with a pleasant routine info which solo terpers Patricia Bowman and Charles Laskey are spotted. It's all up to top standard, but the interest level starts to give it that draggy feeling.

Instead of a change-of-pace which should follow it, Markert brings on his choral ensemble and featured singer in Shepherdette costumes. Go through some semi-classics and occasionally break into life with a Negro spiritual, but the overall impression of dreariness and bad pacing. The layout is overheavy on ballet and vocalization. Instead of a change-of-pace which should follow it, Markert brings on his choral ensemble and featured singer in Shepherdette costumes. Go through some semi-classics and occasionally break into life with a Negro spiritual, but the overall impression of dreariness and bad pacing is excellent, incidentally, with a gondola theme and a realistic water illusion. It's here that warbler Robert Marshall is introed and makes considerably impression, although pretty much buried under the set, costumes and choral group. He's a young baritone whose good looks equal his vocal ability.

Gil Maison's laugh turn, which could have been a standout, is spotted here, between the Neapolitans and a New Orleans Mardi Gras with the Rockettes. Maison's act is a standard, is always a topper, with his monkey enraged by the bird's antics. Deserves better assignment of big and little dogs. He's added a neat new gimmick, too, a trained seagull which is used in the routine with a ventrilo dummy at the getaway.

Ted and Flo the Rockettes' finale are Ted and Flo Vallett, who can do things with batons that will give American baton twirlers nightmares for weeks. "It's a fast and spectacular turn. Rockettes, in new Music Hall costumes highlighted their smash precision work against the New Orleans set with the choral group backing them in attractive fluorescent costumes. Herb.

RKO, Boston

Boston, Jan. 24.

Kathryn Grayson, Johnnie Johnson, Dot & Dick Remy, Jan Murray, Lee & Cook, Hindu Hosein Orch; "Boston Blackie and the Law" (Col).

A little out of the RKO's slot, soprano Kathryn Grayson proves good drawing card of routine enthusiasm among the raucous juveniles as well as with the more adult customers of later shows, and thus is ace in a profitable layout.

Screen star, one of few to come on, is with a well-planned routine, does the operatic aria, "Sempre Libera" to click on the heavier side. Follows over to Sudan Maid's Heart Sings" and other pops for a beg-off. Later returns for duet with Johnnie Johnson, tenor, with "Down by the Ocean" and "The Song Is You," to wind up the stage show in socko style.

Johnston, baritone with a nice stage presence and a lot of ease, does yeoman job of well-planned routine, does "I Could Have Told You," "Did Last Summer" and a Kern medley, catching a big return from the audience. Latter is emcee of show, Jan Murray, whose comedy chatter is distinctly okay. Other act are Dot and Dick Remy, standard acro dancers, who keep the act in the air with cross talk, and the Four Skating Lees, who do fancy skates, who pull fast and skillful stunts in a small rink. Show moves fast, the people look good and the scenic background by the house orch is okay. A nice variety layout and doing biz. Bilk.

Chicago, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 24.

Diana Lynn, Bill Johnson, Lane Bros. (2), Bob Eberly, Les Brent Orch (18); "The Man I Love" (WB).

Although current show is better than its predecessor, acts have a tendency to milk, which slows up pace. This probably was remedied after initial showing.

Diana Lynn, Paramount starlet, in making her first stage appearance here, is much more than the average Hollywood player has to offer on stage dates. Gal knows how to play and sing, but she's no just that. Starts out with "Lover" then swings into 'Clair de Lune" and ends with Gershwin ducking as she is newly dressed in a blue satin hoop gown and makes nifty appearance. Gets solid response.

Another refreshing change on the bill is a singer that dispenses with the mike. Bill Johnson, recruit from light opera and revues, does only one pop number, "Things We Did Last Summer," and the rest are show tunes ending with "Old Man River." Hefty reception follows, even from the bobbysoxers. Follow-up is Bob Evans, ventro, with his stooge, Jerry. Evans scores heavily with the dummy doing several songs but could build better with bits instead of fast quips, which throws much of his material away.

Lane brothers, tumblers, are standard and one of the best in the biz with their unusual acros and zany comedy, and does a medley of the tunes of '46 and features the maestro, Lou Breese, on fine trumpet solo of "To Each His Own." Loop.

Strand, N. Y.

Most satisfying aspect of the new Strand bill is the fine music of Charlie Barnet's orch. Maestro brought only six of his original combo back with him from the Coast, augmenting the group with 10 musicians from New York Local 802, but the fact that the new men have never played before with Barnet is nowhere discernable. Band, although a little on the brassy side, sounds as good as ever. Barnet's bill is an okay conglomeration of songs, dancing and comedy, making for a well-rounded 50 minutes of entertainment.

Band has eight brass, five reeds and three rhythm, tees off with a hot jump tune featuring solos by Barnet, his alto sax and Rex Stewart's cornet. Singer Billy Usher follows with "Everything" in the "Only Have Eyes for You" in ordinary style. Lad has a smooth baritone but tries too hard to imitate Crosby mannerisms. A display of seeming nervousness marked by bad breathing technique. Stewart comes next with a novelty cornet demonstration, drawing hefty applause via smooth work in the upper register and simulated talk on the horn.

Songstress Dorothy Claire, an attractive blonde, comes back in the bill after a successful Coast tour, perks up the proceedings with her boisterous rendition of "Caldonia." Gal still has a tendency to overdo the bantering asides to the audience in between musical numbers, a habit of novelty tunes, including "Kansas City," "Coffee Song" and "Say Si." She's also in excellent voice during her ing job on "I Calh't Say No" from "Oklahoma!" and begs off.

Coles & Atkins get the required yocks with his standard routine of prattfalls and hoked-up impersonations although his gag about yellowing at the seams. Acro-dance windup, though, is good. Coles and Atkins, pair of top septet terpsters (New Acts), complete the bill. Barnet orch backs the show well and does its own specialty bit with the band's faves, including "Cherokee," "Pompton Turnpike," "Smiles," etc., with Barnet in the groups on his alto and tenor saxes and clarinet. Stal.

Capitol, Wash.

Washington, Jan. 24.

"Star and Garter Revue" with Chez Paree Line, Sparky Kaye, Vince Pellegrini, Helaine Jarrow, John Barry, Vanderbilt Boys (2), Bobby Wyse, Ross Wyse, Jr., Peggy Womack, Frank Brooks, Line (16); "Two Smart People" (M-G).

This is off the beaten path for the Capitol, and is first gander many of its regular patrons have ever gotten at a relatively big-time burlesque show. Parts of show seem a little on the rough side for family trade (the regular farmers, but customer approval is unanimous throughout, with cash register ringing up hefty returns.

Tabloid edition of the show Broadway saw a few seasons back stacks up well with original. Great deal trimming and tightening has improved pace, and effect is good. Show is weak on comedy, strong on razzle dazzle, comedy, and specialty numbers. Girls are only so-so with the dance and singing, but impress with looks and the original costumes, which still look okay. They do four production numbers, with "Girl on the Police Gazette," the finale, a standout. John Barry does the emceeing for parade numbers, registering okay.

In the specialty slots, Vanderbilt boys stand out with precision terping and then surprise with some fancy hand balancing stunts, all for good returns. Frank Brooks follows, in combo with chorus and tenor John Barry, in a fast shuffle routine, which clicks well.

The Sparky Kaye-Vince Pellegrini fight scene proves roof raising, with both principals getting socked right out ex-Golden Gloves champ Pellegrini, after plenty of funstering. Kaye and Chaz Chase get most mitt action. Chase does his usual eating stunts, swallowing everything in sight but his clicks best in his take-off of Gypsy Rose Lee, and a gagged-up Russian dance.

Bobby Wyse registers in a deadpan, comedy juggling act which impresses as being an improvement over many of the mill juggling routine. Ross Wyse, Jr., assisted by Peggy Womack, do an adagio dance that is strictly for laughs, with the horseplay a bit overdone. Helaine Jarrow does okay in her acro-dancing.

Show, which leaves a general well-worth-the-money feeling, closes after its week here. Lowe.

Capitol, N. Y.

Tex Beneke Orch (31) with Gary Stephens, Ginny O'Connor and Meadowlarks (3); Fontaines (3), Gene Sheldon; "Lady in the Lake" (MG), reviewed in VARIETY, Nov. 27, 1946.

Tex Beneke and the Glenn Miller orchestra is one of those things that the band business has been endeavoring to figure out since it came into existence. Never before has a band connected with an absent leader's name been able to make a go of it. Beneke, at the helm of the late Major Miller's combo, has not only made a go of it but has turned out to be one of the few leaders consistently scoring big, on one-nighters, locations, theatres—and apparently still building. Beneke gets a record reception here similar to the old days, with kids yelping for old Miller faves. That is now a rarity in a Broadway house.

At the Cap for the second time since reorganizing, Beneke's grouping of four saxes, four trombones, six saxes (with leader's), one French horn, four rhythm and 12 strings (two violins and a cello) certainly though it follows the prescribed "rules" of stage deportment for name bands, manages to keep it from being stiff. Tex's backed up with two equally entertaining vocalists in the Fontaines and Gene Sheldon.

Opening with an arrangement of "Tuxedo Junction," band comes on a fast pace and doesn't relinquish it, a Beneke vocal of Jerome Kern's "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" is another Beneke's status, and is tailed by Ginny O'Connor and the Meadowlarks in a medley of three of items recorded by them for RCA-Victor. Happily, "Uncle Remus" and "Gal from Calico" both are good stage material.

This maintains right down the line to a fine finish with the reprise of Jerry Gray's arrangement of "Russian Patrol," here called by its original name, "Moscow Parade," it's a fine bit of writing by Gray, and the band, an excellent combo which includes Ray Wetzel on the glockenspiel, lingly missing in postwar bands, does an admirable job. "Something Old, Something New, Something Blue" completes the band's chore. It consists of "18th Century" Drawing Room," "Blue Night," which sounds like a new hit; "Don't Be That Way" and "Serenade in Blue." Ginny Stephens, who has replaced Artie Malvin on vocals, works between the Fontaines and Sheldon. Miss Stephens has a pleasing style, but at this showing seemed a bit scared and as a result his stuff made little or no first impression. He lacks personality; as a matter of fact, Beneke himself is no personality kid. Gene Sheldon, who's labeled self with a great deal more poise and assurance than he did last time around. Still has a strong turn.

Fontaines put on a crack acro exhibition. Two boys and girl, smartly attired, do some worked-out unusual handstands, etc., often using the girl as the understander. She's also featured in a solo which she's always able to maintain the femme aura while making with the muscles. Act is a standout and contributes plenty to the overall success of the act.

Sheldon, around for years with the same old goss over radio, has his comedy routine with the banjo still gets plenty laughs. His pants work is still a standout and the femme helper (outfitted in repulsive black), all capped by his familiar finger-sewing bit, add up to a strong turn. Wood.

Adams, Newark

Newark, Jan. 23.

Connee Boswell, Shep Fields, conducting the house orchestra (14), Jack Carter, Martye & Delite, "Search for Talent" contest; "Street Scene" (UA).

If the Philharmonic can have guest conductors, why not house bands? Shep Fields, former "Rippling Rhythm" maestro and name band impresario, having a crack at it here without bands but in firm possession of a known name and a library of accompaniments, is handling it with aplomb. The pit band has been put on the stage in tasteful uniforms, its rank augmented to 14 men, presence of traveling combos. What's more, this one seems to play just as well as the highly touted touring jobs.

Fields is in good company on this bill, with the top spot going to Connee Boswell, a songbird whose charm and song projection improve with time. For the first time in emcee, pace-chair gal, pushed to the mike on a dolly, essays such familiar bits as "Jack Carter Has a Message for Me," "Five Minutes More" and "South American Take It Away." Off to socko returns.

Fields ripples through "Thanks for the Memory" for most ambitious turn. Expanded to

Closer Ties Today Exist Between Pro and University Theatre

By REV. GILBERT V. HARTKE
(Head of Catholic University Theatre)

Washington, Jan. 28.

There was a time—not very long ago, either—when the relationship between the professional stage and the university theatre was far from friendly—something, indeed, like the situation between the Capulets and the Montagues, the Hatfields and the McCoys . . . or Fred Allen and vice presidents. The professional tended to regard the non-professional (or amateur, as titles went) as nothing more than a bungling dilettante. Workers in the ivy-clad theatres, on the other hand, very often looked with disdain on the professional and wadded their scorn into the word "commercial" which they threw hard and often. Another point of contention, fiercely argued on both sides, was the respective artistic merit of each stage's accomplishment, with the university too often adopting the late 19th century myth that the artist is an ivory-tower specialist. The exchange of such sentiments was not likely to promote diplomatic amity. Underlying this antagonism (sometimes mutual, sometimes not) is a respectable historical tradition.

Today this antagonism lessened considerably. The university theatre has assumed an integral part in the theatre of America and is more and more recognized as a legitimate branch of theatrical accomplishment. And for several reasons: many professionals are men and women who received their initial training in colleges and universities; established stars have made guest appearances in university theatre productions; plays originating in university classrooms have become Broadway hits; many professionals devote some of their off-season time to teaching. Each group has come to recognize the value of the other and to respect its achievement. It is probably safe to say that a mutual respect has replaced to some extent the old opposition.

Certainly this is a healthy thing for the American theatre. With stock companies largely defunct and summer theatres limited to a brief yearly period of existence, the lifeblood of the theatre of the future has got to be pumped from somewhere, even if this future continues to restrict its orbit to New York City. If the American theatre ever gets around, as it surely should, to entertaining a larger percentage of our 140 million population, then the need for experienced and expert theatre people will be greater than ever and training-ground for that talent even more in demand. The recent repertory companies (for which, by the way, both the public and the theatre itself should be grateful) provides another possible source for young talent, but the need for university training continues.

Catholic U's Program

At Catholic University, we conceive our duty to the student to include both practical training in theatre art and a background of thorough study. In our productions, we consider that this responsibility extends to our audience (one which now fills our theatre for three weeks) and consists in performing shows that they could not otherwise see. This responsibility derives from our position as a university and implies that we should preserve the heritage of the past at the same time that we experiment for the future. Thus, we confine our productions to revivals of the classics, original scripts and experiments in production techniques—all three attempts at which are attended with the most hazardous circumstances among commercial managements. This provides our students with varied training, gives our audience theatre fare unobtainable elsewhere, and draws the line of demarcation between our work and the work of the professional stage. Our schedule for the current school year includes one revival of a classic, one experiment in production, and three original plays.

From this point of view, the university theatre supplements and complements the work of the New York stage, filling its own niche in the theatrical world.

The future is likely to see an even firmer reciprocal recognition by the professional stage and the university stage as to their respective places in the contemporary theatrical picture. Since they occupy mutually distinctive positions in American entertainment, the continued growth of each promises only good for audiences on all levels and benefits to the theatre, for they are as two workers laboring in different parts of the vineyard, both striving to enrich and advance the American theatre.

Reichhold's 50G Offer Fails to Help U.S. Opera As AGMA Trips the Deal

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Last minute decision of American Guild of Musical Artists that would have a new backer undertake previous obligation of the United States Opera Co., blackened the outlook for the 25 European opera stars, even though an angel was all set to come up with the needed 50G which would raise the hectic up-again-down-again curtain of Chicago's Civic Opera House.

Harry Reichhold, Detroit Symphony backer, agreed to put up $50,000 which would stake the group for one week of rehearsals, stage hands, musicians, rent, etc. But Reichhold would not undertake a previous five-week commitment made to AGMA by Edgar Bagarozy, New York manufacturer. Bagarozy had to back out of the deal after sinking $60,000 as one of the original backers.

Even though the Musicians Union was on verge of agreeing to a day-to-day basis for its men, and all other details were seemingly set, AGMA demanded that two weeks' talent costs be put in escrow, and a five-week run guaranteed, in accordance with the old obligation. This would be impossible even with the money, as the Opera House is set for "Blossom Time" opening Feb. 16.

Reichhold was anxious to give the 25 top flight artists a chance to bring their talents before U.S. audiences for the first time. Success was practically assured impresario Ottavio Scotto's group after three weeks of publicity and thousands of phone inquiries as to the opening. Situation Tuesday (28) had it pretty certain that Chicago opera goers would not attend a performance of Puccini's "Turandot" which was slated for next Monday unless AGMA backed down.

Booking Jam

of the booking terms demanded, a split of 60-40 of the gross being asked as against a $4,000 guarantee. Usual sharing terms for straight plays are 65-35 up to $10,000, with 70-30 then applying, the larger percentage going to the attraction.

Playhouse is operated by Ben Marden, former night club proprietor, who purchased the property last season when plans to enlarge the theatre were announced but never eventuated. House has had half a dozen shows so far this season, all flops. Understood that Marden bought an interest in one of two attractions in his house and regardless of guarantees, his season so far is in the red. Next attraction there is a revival of "Craig's Wife." Playhouse went dark Saturday (25) when "Temper the Wind" was withdrawn. Aided by some critical plaudits business for that drama improved too, but not to the extent of profitable operation.

"John Loves Mary" has booked the Booth, where it opens next week, although a larger capacity spot was unsuccessfully sought. Booth became available when "The Big Two" was taken off Saturday (25). That production sponsored by Elliott Nugent and Robert Montgomery, attracted promising grosses but the business was not satisfactory to the actor-managers. Shakespearean repertory from England (Donald Wolfit) is advertised to open at the Century Feb. 18 but "Toplitzky of Notre Dame," the musical current there, is not yet announced for another house. "Little A" is closing at the Miller this week, unable to book elsewhere, but its starting grosses were weak. "The Story of Mary Surratt" replaced next week, jumping directly from the Coast where it was produced by Lewis and Young, associates of Homer Curran.

Experimental Theatre Runs Into Early Snarl Regarding Actor Status

"The Wanhope Building" and "O'Daniel," to be presented respectively by Theatre, Inc. and the Theatre Guild for the Experimental Theatre at the Princess, N. Y., are in rehearsal—but was a temporary hitch in the progress of "Building" last week when it was discerned that several players were not Equityites.

Theatre, Inc. was promptly informed that unless they were replaced, rehearsals would be suspended. Under the agreement between Equity and the Dramatists Guild it is stipulated that all players used must be members of the legit actors group. When the disaffected members of the cast were dropped, there were protests from those actors, one claiming to have been a member of the Screen Actors Guild.

First play, authored by John Finch, will be presented for five performances starting Feb. 9. It is to be followed later next month by "O'Daniel", written by John Savacool and Glendon Swarthout who won the Guild's Armed Service Award last year with scripts individually written. The awards are for the purpose of encouraging promising playwrights. Three additional plays are to be done for ET, other production firms to make presentations being the Playwrights Co. and American Repertory Theatre.

7TH 'LOST COLONY' TO GET NEW STAGING

Raleigh, Jan. 28.

Plans for the seventh season of "The Lost Colony," the Paul Green symphonic drama presented each July and August in the Waterside theatre at Fort Raleigh, Manteo, were made at the winter meeting of the directors of the Roanoke Island Historical Assn. here last week. The meeting was called by former Gov. J. Melville Broughton, chairman.

Among those attending were Green, who has definite plans for improving both the drama and the stage of the Waterside. The executive committee submitted plans for expansion of the organization, the theatre and the production, which next season will observe its 10th anniversary.

"The Lost Colony" opened July 4, 1937, as a local celebration of the 350th anniversary of the two events whose story it tells: Sir Walter Raleigh's attempt to establish a colony (the Lost Colony) on Roanoke Island at the site of the theatre, and the birth of Virginia Dare, the first English child born in the New World. However, the play proved so popular that year that it was continued as a permanent production each July and August through 1941, when the war caused its suspension. It was revived last summer, when it was witnessed by over 52,000 persons.

'Pygmalion' Tees Off U.S. Stock in Mexico Feb. 4

Mexico City, Jan. 28.

Opening of the 11-weeks season of American stock in English at the Teatro Iris here, first venture of the kind in Mexico, is definitely set for Feb. 4, with "Pygmalion" as the opener. Gertrude Lawrence and Dennis King head the cast.

Dame May Whitty plays the lead in "Night Must Fall" which will follow. Theatre has been organized by Melvin Parks, Sam Pearce and Martin S. Holman. Other plays listed include Henry Fonda in "Our Town," Boris Karloff in "On Borrowed Time" and Margo in "The World We Make."

AGMA Cites Impresario

William Reuterman and his New York Civic Opera Co. have been placed on the unfair list by the American Guild of Musical Artists. AGMA action came as result of Reuterman taking an opera troupe out on tour last fall, without signing a basic agreement with the union.

Reuterman, according to AGMA, has been on its unfair list before.

JONES TO DETROIT

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Allan Jones, who recently wound up an engagement at the Florentine Gardens here, was signed by the Detroit Light Opera Co. to star in "The Firefly."

Singer planed east Sunday to rehearse for the operetta.

Inside Stuff—Legit

In an unusual instance, Olin Downes, music critic of the N. Y. Times, devoted his Sunday (26) column entirely to "Street Scene," column being headed "Opera On Broadway." Calling the musical "the most important step toward significantly American opera" he's ever encountered in the theatre, Downes said it fulfilled his longtime belief that American opera would come from our popular theatre. Downes had only praise for cast, music, libretto and production, calling the play "idiomatic, American, direct and unacademic" in its operatic approach. Also discussing composer Kurt Weill, Downes wondered "whether it is not the very artist coming here from a European social and cultural life who will be quickest to perceive in its full significance an aspect of American life; feel it as those who always have been in its vicinity might not, and in communicating it, take a historical step in the direction of genuine American music-drama."

Brooks Atkinson devoted his Sunday Times drama column to praises of "Beggar's Holiday" and "Finian's Rainbow" (though also mentioning "Street Scene") and ended column with: "If anything derogatory has ever been written about Broadway in this column, it is hereby withdrawn, expunged and extirpated."

From Toronto, Donald Wolfit, due on Broadway soon with his British repertory troupe, states that while the outfit played London it was not in competition with other rep groups, nor should it be so compared in the U. S. Shakespearean lead particularly had in mind Old Vic, which came over last summer from the West End with special productions. Wolfit said: "We on the other hand hold ourselves as no more than a touring company . . . with the necessary scenic limitations which this imposes." Attraction was slated to play Canada, with no idea of appearing in New York, but accepted an offer for a limited date on Broadway after arrival.

Wolfit is head of production for Advance Players Assn. founded over there in 1937 for the "presentation of the works of Shakespeare and plays of a classical and educational nature." The company, which gave more than 2,500 performances of Shakespeare during the past 10 years, appeared throughout the British Isles.

"All My Sons," opening tonight at the Coronet, N. Y., was first known as "The Sign of the Archer." It was produced by a new legit threesome—Harold Clurman, Elia Kazan and Walter Fried—but Herbert H. Harris is named as their managerial associate probably because he invested $30,000 in the drama. Harris is head of the Charbet perfumery and his participation probably represents others in that enterprise including William Gaxton.

Other limited partners are Antonia Rossi, $20,000; Leonard Field, $3,000; Henry Schumer and Dorothy Willard, $1,800 each; Louis A. Lotito and Victor Elmaleh, $1,200 each, and Ed Begley, $600, latter being in the cast. Total financing approximates $60,000, but indications are the production cost did not reach that figure.

Assn. of Theatrical Agents and Managers fined Dick Weaver, a member of the pressagents chapter, the sum of $200 for violating a regulation in the revised basic pact with the producing managers. He agented "The Red Mill" most of the time it was on Broadway and went in advance when the revival recently started on tour. Rules require that when a N. Y. agent leaves town on such a mission he must be replaced for the final week. Weaver failed to put another agent on the job and so was called on the ATAM carpet.

Amount of the fine is approximately that which the management would have paid the replacement or Weaver had he remained in town with the show. Union originally sought to have an agent on the payroll for the last two weeks of a Broadway engagement but a compromise was made early in the season.

Most unusual financial stipulation accompanies bookings of road attractions for the Reynolds Auditorium at Winston Salem, N. C., one reason why few shows play the stand. Attraction is required to post $5,000 with the house to guarantee the show's appearance as scheduled. Cash is returnable at intermission but in the event the show cancels the money is forfeited, patrons being reimbursed for the amount paid for tickets, the balance being liquidated damages for expenses incurred, according to the contract.

Auditorium is a gift to the city by the Reynolds family, which owns Camel cigarettes, and is operated by municipal officials. New York's City Center is also municipally owned but is under lease to a coterie who operated it when the property was acquired for unpaid taxes when Fiorello La Guardia was mayor. It's a non-profit setup.

New John Wexley play, "Carrot and Club," which bows this week in New Haven, is developing into pretty much of a Carnegie Tech drama school (Pittsburgh) alumni association. Producer is William Herz, Jr., ex-Army officer who graduated from Tech 10 years ago, and was associated with Orson Welles' Mercury Theatre before going into service. One of first members signed for cast was Polly Rowles, who was in same class at Tech with Herz. She did a two-year stretch in films for U on Coast and until last September worked on Pittsburgh radio stations. Last-minute addition to company was Thomas Hume, another Tech alumnus who was known as Thomas Koehler as an undergraduate.

Sardi's, N. Y. restaurant will be remodeled and a men's grill installed on the second floor. Present tiny bar facing 44th street will be scratched in favor of a larger thirst-quenching area inside. In order to provide space for that revenue-raising department the present dining room will be pushed back, the kitchen probably being moved to the second floor. Stairway leading to that level, now in the small lobby, is also slated to be moved inside. Plans for the changes which call for quite an expenditure were ordered by Vincent Sardi, Jr., who took over the management of the legit rendezvous from his father last summer.

"John Loves Mary," the new Norman Krasna comedy which Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II are presenting in association with Joshua Logan, was favorably received in New Haven and Boston. Broadwayites who saw the tryout were surprised to see Pamela Gordon in the cast, she having replaced Rita Lupino. Miss Gordon is the daughter of Gertrude Lawrence, who didn't plan a stage career for the girl. Miss Gordon is playing a character part, but the resemblance to the star's voice, build and mannerisms is said to be unmistakable. Her's is a cockney part in the play, which arrives on Broadway next week at the Booth.

Charles Strakosch, who has been company manager of "Harvey" since it opened out of town last season with Joe E. Brown starred, has resigned. He had trouble with his eyes last summer when the comedy laid off and further treatment is required, Strakosch also feeling that he needs a rest. Understood that he is well off financially and is known to have been an active trader in Wall Street. Recently an uncle died and Strakosch is said to be a beneficiary in the will. Joe Cohne is the new man back with "Harvey," which has been playing Chicago for six months and is due to stick through the season. Joe Shea is agenting.

Brooks Costume Co. is again the subject of a magazine article, this time in the February issue of Coronet, yarn being "Costumers to The Nation" by Lawrence Lader. Stated that 180 trunks full of costumes are sent throughout the country weekly and "are an indispensable part of the American theatre." Writer tells of the Brooks plant and mentions its activities in the professional field but emphasizes the service to the "thousands of amateur productions throughout the country, for they are the theatre of the people."

ART, With Bankroll Badly Dented, Switching Policy; Seeks Showbiz Bid

American Repertory Theatre, which started with a fanfare and critical encouragement in the fall, isn't broken but with most of its $300,000 bankroll used, the outfit has been forced to revise its performance schedule and is asking the support of playgoers and those in show business. Performing three or four plays weekly has proved unworkable because of the operating expense and the unions, particularly the stagehands, are blamed for ART being unable to break even.

Change in schedule calls for one play to be presented for a set period, new plan starting four weeks in "Yellow Jacket" (now in rehearsal) starting Feb. 27. Later "Alice in Wonderland" will follow for a similar period, after which one or more of the first four revivals produced will go on for a week or more. Revised plan will provide a more effective system of selling tickets in advance, which advantage ART only partially had and should be beneficial in selling by mail to out-of-town patrons.

Originally the budget called for successful operation or an even break with a weekly gross of $16,000. At that level, which has been approximated recently, the venture at the International, N. Y., has been losing money and it also was in the red last week when takings bettered $17,000. In addition to expenses, the location of the theatre at Columbus Circle is a handicap.

Stagehand Problems

There are 28 actors and 27 stagehands. Claimed that the backstage cost exceeded the budget because the union insists that the size of the crew must remain the same as the repertory of the ART type, whether the men are needed or not. Figured that under the changed schedule only the necessary number of stagehands will be hired and a weekly saving will enable ART to turn an operating profit. Musicians union's requirements as applied recently will also be revised and expectation is that a saving in operating will approximate $3,000 weekly.

Cast will remain as is and while not all the actors will be used in all plays, they are under contract for two years, ART to tour next season. Understood the players are getting comparatively modest salaries and the highest on the payroll is $500, weekly total for the cast being $4,500. That is regarded as a moderate sum considering the eight name leads who are starred. Under the new schedule it's expected that the time-and-one-half required by the union for department heads (three on the house payroll and three with the attractions) will be dispensed with.

Cost of producing the first four shows was $165,000, although there was a decreasing cost as more shows went on, and "Androcles and the Lion," which has proved the best draw, cost but $20,000. Lighting equipment was purchased instead of being rented but next season that item will probably be augmented on the road. The operating loss during the tryouts in Philadelphia and Boston was $30,000, mostly sustained in the latter stand and the same will be in N. Y. is about as much. There is around $17,500 in pay guarantees or bonds on deposit with the unions involved, mostly, and all but approximately $50,000 on hand. Some of it will be required for "Yellow Jacket" which is not a costly show.

ART raised its 300G fund by selling stock to no less than 293 investors, many being in show business on Broadway and the Coast. Units were in denominations of $500 each but some investors went in for flocks of shares, largest in the backing contingent being Joseph Verner Reed, a former socialite producer. Most of the stock was disposed of through Wall Street which too invested in ART.

Old Vic Situation

When the Old Vic repertory company visited Broadway last summer and played to enormous grosses, it earned a comparatively small profit. Operating expense for the London repertory was excessive but in addition there was an abnormal expense in bringing the troupe from England and return transportation after a six weeks engagement. Donald Wolfit with Shakespearean rep comes to Broadway (Century) next month and faces the same backstage expense as at least three different plays will be presented weekly. John Gielgud also comes to town with a repertory of comedy

Fine $s $50 Each For Beating Up an Actor

Hartford, Jan. 28.

Raymond E. Harris and his sister Mrs. Harris Fink, arrested last August in connection with the beating of an Ivoryton theatre actor, have been fined $50 each and given suspended jail sentences after pleading no contest before Judge Earnest A. Inglis in superior court in Middletown.

The pair was originally charged with assault with a deadly weapon after Robert Stewart, 35, a New York actor, was found outside an Ivoryton inn in a badly battered condition late last August 19. He required several months of hospitalization at a New London hospital.

Pickets Push Anti-Jimcrow On Two Fronts

Picketing of two legit theatres, one in Washington and the other in St. Louis highlighted the anti-segregation situation last week. At the National, D. C., where "Blossom Time" opened a two-week date, President Truman reportedly went through the picket line unwittingly, it being said that secret service men scattered all persons on the pavement before the chief executive arrived. At the American, St. Louis, a picket line which included Paul Robeson asked patrons not to enter, attraction being "The Apple of His Eye."

Robeson, who appeared in St. Louis for a concert appearance at the Auditorium, where Negroes are allowed in any portion of the house, intends to quit the stage and platform for two years, so that he could talk "up and down the nation against prejudice." At the American the rule is that colored patrons may sit in the balcony but not on the lower floor nor the boxes. Like Washington, St. Louis is a border stand where the color line is drawn in most theatres.

In New York at a meeting of the Negro Actors Guild held in the Grand Street Boys clubhouse, Robert E. Sherwood made a protest on segregation Sunday (26) night. He is quoted saying that unless "fundamental principles of Americanism are worked into the very fabric of our lives" the United States will not survive as a nation.

Trumans Sit In Orchestra

Washington, Jan. 28.

Although pickets protesting the National theatre's "all white" policy paraded in front of the house Wednesday night (22), the President, Mrs. Truman, their daughter Margaret, and three friends went into the theatre to attend a performance of "Blossom Time."

The Trumans occupied eighth row orchestra seats, it reportedly being the first time since the days of Woodrow Wilson that a President had sat in the orchestra.

R&H Sets Up Permanent Coast Office; Brill Tops

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Rodgers and Hammerstein firm is taking a five-year lease on its office building on the Strip, Leighton Brill, who leased it for R&H, originally started here a year ago. Structure includes a little theatre and a dance studio for talent auditions.

Total of 32 players was signed by the Hollywood office last year and sent east for R&H productions.

METOP TO NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, Jan. 28.

The old city behind the Mississippi's levees will have its first season of Metropolitan Opera performances in more than five years, Benedict Grunewald, prez of the New Orleans Grand Opera Assn., announced.

He said the season would begin soon after the New York closing.

Roadshows 'Monopoly' Via UBO Is Attacked By Minnesota U. Daily

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

Downtown newspapers here picked up and put large headlines on story from the Univ. of Minnesota Daily, a student paper, attacking an alleged "monopoly" that, it charged, keeps traveling Broadway shows out of the college's auditorium.

Suggesting that the Department of Justice look into the "monopoly," the Daily declared the University itself would like to sponsor such attractions which he now plays in the downtown municipal Auditorium. He was turned down by the board of regents which informed him the university "cannot enter into any joint sponsorship of any project or program that is to result in profit or private gain for the cooperating group or groups."

"Actually," said the Daily, "the university would like to present suitable musicals like 'Oklahoma' and 'Song of Norway' under its sponsorship. The department of concerts and lectures has a setup equipped to do this very thing and has made efforts in the past to bring such productions here.

"Broadway musicals can't be had because most of them are booked exclusively through the United Booking Office which, in turn, grants exclusive showings in the principal cities of the country," the Daily said. "Twin City licenses are held by the Lyceum in Minneapolis and the municipal auditorium in St. Paul."

Morning Tribune, picking up yarn, said that "a department of concerts and lectures confirmed the statement that university attempts have been made to book Broadway shows in the Northrop Auditorium" and "it was pointed out that Northrop's size would rule out all but the large 'spectacular' type of show."

Leo R. Murray, Lyceum manager, acknowledged that roadshows are booked into the Lyceum through an agreement with the United Booking Office, the Tribune stated. "It has been done that way in Minneapolis for 50 years," Murray told the Tribune. "United Booking Office has the legal entitlement to do business with. They can't just hop from one place to the other."

SEPIA SERVICE CHOIR BOOKED FOR 54 DATES

Unusual event booked for next season's concert circuit is the De Paur Infantry Chorus, a group of 36 Negro vets originally organized by Capt. Leonard De Paur for Army morale purposes. Group, together for four years in service, was stationed in the Far East, and gave 2,500 concerts in that theatre. Finally mustering out, group went overseas to Europe for USO-Camp Shows, returning to N. Y. Thursday (23). It will spend spring and summer resting and rehearsing.

Group, selling for $1,250 a date at present, has been booked by Columbia Concerts, under personal supervision of veepee Fred Schang, for 54 concerts, on major subscription series in large cities as well as on the Community Concert series. Schang claims unit is the first major attraction to come out of World War II. De Paur, who trained the chorus, is former assistant to Hall Johnson, and organized and led the mixed chorus for the Moss Hart Air Force legiter "Winged Victory."

ANT Sets 2nd Play

American Negro Theatre will present Walter Carroll's "Tin Top Valley" at its Harlem, N. Y., playhouse end of February, as its second production of the season.

Play, about mill folk in rural North Carolina, will have mixed cast of 20, and be staged by Abram Hill.

QUALEN GOES TO B'WAY

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

John Qualen will desert the films temporarily to play a legit comedy, "Black John," based on the Alaskan gold rush.

Burton McLane will produce the play in New York, starting in April.

Recent Realty Maneuvers Stir Waters In B'way's Muddled Theatre Picture

Reputed sale of the Astor hotel to film interests, which was not confirmed, coupled with a report that theatres westward of it on 44th and 45th streets were ripe to change ownership and be razed, have given legit showmen something to ponder over during the past week. However, while the really deals may materialize, expectations are that the present legit map will not change for the next few years.

With an eye to the future, producers, authors and actors are due to huddle for the purpose of seeking ways and means whereby capital would be attracted to finance the building of new legiters. If one of the first items probably on the agenda will be a revision of the building code so that it would be possible to erect theatres designed for stage shows in conjunction with buildings on the same site or part of it that would also be revenue-earning.

Idea of changing the code has cropped up every so often but in the light of eventual changes in the topography of Times Square, the matter looms more importantly than heretofore. Most theatres with a legit policy have flourished, the attraction being the factor, where there hasn't been a legiter built for so long, that with a number of such houses diverted to films and radio, there is a seasonal house shortage.

No Building Expected

New theatre building at this time is not anticipated, not alone because of the paucity of materials but the cost of construction. One exceptional legiter was built at an outlay of $1,000,000 some 23 years ago but the estimated cost for putting up a house like it now is $1,600,000, which figure coming from construction experts. It's expected therefore that before any considerable amount of new building is started in the theatre zone, costs will have been lowered materially.

New construction on 44th, 45th and 46th streets west of Broadway probably will initially involve, if not eliminate, 13 theatres, 10 of which are devoted to legit. Houses on those thoroughfares constitute the heart of show business, with the 42nd street once was. The theatre has been constricted too much for too long a time even in the face of prognostications that legit was washing up.

Possibilities are that show business will move more towards Columbus Circle but new construction will be a must if stage performances are to survive the eventual razing of the theatres in the mid-forties. Shuberts who have always been heavy investors, may have anticipated the shift north in the acquisition of the Adelphi at 54th street and the Century near 59th street) a recent transaction. That firm controls seven of the houses on 44th and 45th streets mentioned in the recent reports. They also have strings on other theatres in both and pictures which may return to legit, such as the Winter Garden, Longacre, Ritz and Ambassador.

Fact that legit houses are used for performances and nothing else for between only 24 to 28 hours weekly, is another reason why the building code should be brought up to date, so far as show business is concerned.

Rice-Dorfman Mag Suit Settled by $500 Fee Pay

Long-pending suit by playwright Elmer Rice against Nat M. Dorfman, press-agent and publisher of Stage Pictorial, was decided last week as attorneys for both sides consented to a final judgment by Federal Judge Simon H. Rifkind. Rice sued Dorfman for infringement of copyright among other things, when lat er used Rice's byline in a published condensation of his play, "Dream Girl."

In the declaratory judgment, Judge Rifkind set aside payment of damages upon permission from Rice's attorneys. He ruled that Dorfman had infringed upon Rice's copyright, had invaded his right of privacy according to the Civil Rights Act of New York State, and had engaged in unfair trade practices. On the mandatory side, he permanently enjoined Dorfman from further infringement or disposal of any more copies using Rice's name. He also ordered Dorfman to pay Rice's attorney fees of $500.

Todd Return To Legit Uncertain Despite 2 Shows

Mike Todd has "Up In Central Park" and Maurice Evans in "Hamlet" on tour, his N. Y. office being used as headquarters for the attractions, but it's questionable when or whether he will return to legit production. He permitted the rights to lapse on two plays early in the fall and since then vague plans for importing a ballet were mentioned. Stated that Todd is considering offers to sell the east side building, used for offices, which he reportedly bought last year and on the Coast it was recently announced that he will produce four pictures for Universal.

Todd has $50,000 on deposit with Equity to guarantee salaries, it being in cash and listed as a blanked bond, a type of actor assurance which will be discontinued. Equity prefers to have separate deposits for each production that the reason is not clear. Billy Rose also has a $50,000 blanket bond in the form of treasury bonds. His only show this season was "Carmen Jones" which was brought back from the road recently, but as the bond is still extant, it's indicated that he again intends to resume activity as a producer. There are a number of managers with guarantee deposits which are undisturbed although they are not active currently.

ANTA Group Starts Tour For National Theatre

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

A dozen Broadway personalities are due here Friday (31) on their first stop in a nationwide tour to win public support for a national theatre. The group will be headed by Vinton Freedley, president of the American National Theatre and Academy.

Group includes Margaret Webster, Sam Jaffe, Edward G. Robinson, Cheryl Crawford, Blanche Yurka, Emil Friedauer, Francesca Lederer, Peggy Wood, Rosamond Gilder, George Freedley and Colonel C. Lawton Campbell, chairman of the board of the ANTA.

Mrs. Carroll T. Mitchell, chairman of the Art Alliance drama committee, will introduce the stars and producers at a meeting at the Alliance.

'Rooms' Set for Anzacs

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Mozelle Britton and Joseph Carole closed a deal with J. C. Williamson Theatres, Melbourne, for the production of "Separate Rooms" on the circuit down under.

Negotiations are also under way for Miss Britton to resume her original role in the play. "Rooms" was authored by her late husband, actor Alan Dinehart.

'Moon' In Out-of-Town Preem, Columbus Feb. 20

Columbus, Jan. 28.

Theatre Guild will hold the world premiere of Eugene O'Neill's new play, "A Moon for the Misbegotten," at the Hartman, Columbus, Feb. 20. Play will stay for three days. This marks the first time in 14 years that the opening of an O'Neill play has been planned anywhere except in New York.

During the 1933-34 season, O'Neill permitted two plays, "Ah, Wilderness!" and "Days Without End," to tour prior to the Broadway presentations.

Kelk Signed for 'Tenting'

Jackie Kelk, of the "Aldrich Family" radio show, has been signed for the new Judith Abbott-Mary Mason comedy production, "Tenting Tonight."

Kelk, first of the featured players to be signed, will probably have second comedy lead. Rehearsals begin in March

Two novelties for the American stage are the latest choice for the distinguished continental actress, Elisabeth Bergner. "Miss Julie," by the Swedish playwright, August Strindberg, dates back to 1888, and "The Proposal" (which has had a variety of titles) was first done in 1898. Outside of amateurs and two special matinee performances in New York back in 1913 with Mary Shaw directing, neither piece has ever been seen in this country.

Only the sheer artistry of Miss Berger herself makes this double-bill at all palatable and one cannot help but wonder why a topshelf artiste like her would choose to revive these so-called "classic" but definitely dated plays. The same went for her recent revival of "The Duchess of Malfi."

That's taking not a jot away from Miss Bergner's own personal ability. Right now she's in a class with the best of our footlight headliners, including the Misses Hayes, Cornell, Fontanne, Bergman and Bankhead. Conceded, too, is the fact that she has played both these pieces in Berlin, Vienna and Paris. Especially is Strindberg's "Miss Julie" right up her alley, but the piece itself is terrifically dated and archaic. For reading—okay; for students of the classical European drama—another okay, but as current Broadway fare—definitely thumbs down.

"Miss Julie" (action taking place on a Scandinavian country estate around the turn of the century) has to do with a spontaneous one-night's romance (affair might be the better word) with her father's very personable valet. The tone is definitely tragic and in the hands of a less capable actress the story would probably elicit laughter from audiences definitely not as "class-conscious" as those of a half century ago.

Thanks, however, to Miss Bergner's glowing performance and the indisputably poetic fire and fluency of Strindberg's prose, "Miss Julie" does still possess an enthralling power even though it cannot be classed, by any stretch of the imagination, as boxoffice. Raymond Burr, just back from Hollywood, gives a capital performance as the handsome servant who seduces (if you want to call it that!) his attractive employer. Joan Field gives a neat supporting performance.

After this curtain-raising bit of unadulterated tragedy, Miss Bergner turns to light (almost frivolous) comedy. Most Americans acquainted with Chekhov plays may be surprised but the Russian notable (1860-1904) can really deal with facts in a humorous vein if he so desires. So can Miss Bergner, who is generally associated, over here anyway, with classical or tragic roles.

If this double-bill is going to have any chance at all, it would very likely be on the strength of the mildly amusing laughs in "The Proposal," which doesn't pretend to set a moral or teach a lesson. It's a farce, which our own Avery Hopwood might have written, about a hypochondriac gentleman whose quite-innocent call on a susceptible spinster is entirely misunderstood by the lady. Here again, it's all Bergner, although Harrison Dowd and Jerome Tyler give neat performances.

Credit Theodore Komisarjevski for two capital jobs of directing and for excellent productions. These, plus Miss Bergner's artistry and skill, add up to artisticaly-rewarding footlight moments, but that doesn't mean that they spell what it takes to make a Broadway success. Waters.

Apartment 17-B (It Takes Two)

Boston, Jan. 20.

George Abbott, Richard Aldrich production of play in three acts by Virginia Faulkner and Dana Suesse. Directed by Abbott; set by John Root. Stars Martha Scott. At the Wilbur, Boston, Jan. 20, '47; $3.60 top.

Not too much to recommend in this bedroo n omedy except its fast dialog and its engaging acting and direction, yet it seems to have a fairly good chance of getting by the crix and doin~ biz.

First act is chief hazard, since it is devoted to setting up a situation that leaves the customers wondering whether there's any point in hanging around to see what happens since it is as plain as the well-known nose. But Virginia Faulkner and Dana Suesse manage to lace the brew with some well-turned gags from then on, and it proves in the end to be amusing enough, even if it doesn't get anywhere.

Farce starts when an ex-GI and his wife, after four years of living around in suitcases from one army post to another, finally get an apartment in New York. First evening in the apartment, wife discovers her husband has been offered an engineering job in Louisiana back-country. He has turned it down, but she figures he did so only in consideration for her and that she is standing in the way of his real career.

Discovery leads to an argument and separation, but apartment situation makes real separation impossible, so they agree to remain apart together in sam: apartment. First curtain goes down on this arbitrary and not too convincing situation, so the rest leaves little curiosity beyond idle speculation as to how many gags the writers can contrive.

Fact is, they contrive plenty before husband and wife occupy same bedroom, some of them fairly funny. But most enjoyable aspect of the farce is the acting and the direction. Martha Scott, playing a role that could make plenty in the audience feel like going up and giving her a whack, gets away with it superbly and, before she's finished, makes it seem she did hav a point after all.

Hugh Marlowe, as the harassed and bewildered husband, brings a fine air of naturalness and unstudied charm to the role, and is largely responsible for keeping anyone in the theater to see the second act. Anthony Ross, as a quivering gangling, lends considerable amusement to the affair, and Vivian Vance, with some of the sharper lines in the show, does fine. Bits by Temple Texas and John Forsythe are also good.

George Abbott's inventive direction shows up in this one to better advantage than it has in a long time, getting plenty of laughs on its own. He gives it a nice pace and emphasizes the realistic home behavior of the principals to good advantage. Set is okay, too. Main problem is to give the basic situation a little more credibility to keep the customers seated for the second and third act jokes. Looks like they might do it. Play opens on B'way as "It Takes Two." Elie.

The Importance of Being Earnest

Montreal, Jan. 28.

Theatre Guild and John C. Wilson (in assn. with H. M. Tennent) production of comedy revival in three acts by Oscar Wilde. Directed by John Gielgud. Music by Leslie Bridgewater. Sets by Morley. Opened at His Majesty's, Montreal, Jan. 27, '47; $3.32 top.

For the near-capacity crowd that came to see John Gielgud in Oscar Wilde's "Importance of Being Earnest," the noted thesp could obviously do no wrong—not that there was anything really to find fault with. The opening night (27) crowd laughed their heads off (and in the right places, too), saw the type of acting that is seen all too rarely nowadays, and went away feeling that the fluffy drawing room comedy, when in the right hands, is still pretty good competition to some of the stuff being written.

It's taking a pretty big b.o. chance in doing the Wilde opus, which was written way back in 1895. Obviously, many of the things are dated and could easily be laughed off the stage. Under the skilled hands of Gielgud, however, "Earnest" becomes a laughable hit, with the lines still sounding as brittle as when they were first written. Gielgud overcomes the age danger nicely by having his players project their characterizations on an even keel, avoiding the common fault of overplaying.

There's no doubt that "Earnest" can stack up very nicely for Broadway consumption if for no other reason than by dint of Gielgud's b.o. potential alone. There'll be many Gielgud followers who remember him better for his Shakespearean roles, and for them this fluffy piece may be a disappointment. Basically, however, this vehicle can be counted on to garner some nice coin for the backers.

From a straight production viewpoint, "Earnest" is a handsome piece of work. The three settings are outstanding and the general lighting, costuming, etc., all point up to much work being put into making this a hit show.

The mistaken-identity motif which Wilde used in "Earnest" is nothing new, but it still stands up very nicely under present-day view. Here again it's obviously Gielgud, whose directorial treatment of the play was a lack of straining for effect that gives it the socko quality. In other words, there's no belting the audience over the heads with punchlines; the comedy is taken care of by Wilde's own witty pen.

The thesping measures up to the same high quality of the production. As pointed out before, there'll be many people who will claim that Gielgud has no business in this play, that his talent somehow doesn't tie in with the airy Wilde piece. But these opinions will be obviously voiced simply on a basis of comparison with some of the heavier things Gielgud has done. Standing on his own feet, however, Gielgud points up in his "Earnest" performance that he is versatile, that he is still as much as expert in comedy as he is a tragedian. He paints the John Worthing character in bold, yet skillful strokes, leaving nothing lacking. His movement and subtle playing is delicate yet forceful, and he makes every movement and gesture count.

Robert Flemyng as Moncrieffe is also worth noting for the sense of comic underplaying which the English thesps seem to master so well. Also rating a very firm nod are Pamela Brown, Margaret Rutherford and Jane Baxter. The others all do the roles in top fashion, their clear diction being especially worthy of mention. Laza.

Washington Square

New Haven, Jan. 23.

Oscar Serlin production of drama in three acts (six scenes) by Ruth Goodman and Augustus Goetz. Features John Halliday. Directed by Jack Minster; setting and costumes by Donald Oenslager. Opened at Shubert, New Haven, Jan. 23, '47; $3.60 top.

"Washington Square" doesn't join "Park Avenue" on the New York City map but it probably will shortly in Cain's. It's a costume play, set in a decorative period of Americana, and that just about sums up its qualifications—decorative, period.

In presenting this one, if it were Oscar Serlin's hope to enter the inner chambers of playgoing popularity through the doorway of nostalgia, he is apt to find the knocking done, not by opportunity, but by the professional aisle-sitters. While the production has its merits, they are not sufficient to tip the scales into the favorable classification.

Lack of zest seems to stem from choice of subject rather than its presentation. It is difficult to engender much enthusiasm over this somewhat static unfolding of a story laid in the 1947 era of leisurely dignity. Even those portions intended as the play's tensest moments fail to stir more than a modified degree of suspense.

Script concerns itself with the conflict between a father, whose loss of a beautiful and charming wife has left him bitter, and the dull, unattractive daughter who lacks all the attributes her mother possessed. When a suitor presents himself, the father temporarily breaks up the affair, declaring that the young man is simply after the girl's money.

Subsequently, the pair plans to elope but when the youth learns that it will mean disinheritance of the girl by her father, he jilts her and disappears. Two years later he returns, following the father's death, and attempts to pick up the broken romantic thread. This time it is the girl who arranges to retaliate by jilting him.

John Halliday is featured as the physician-father. He has caught the spirit of the role but an unstable enactment of it leaves something to be desired. Memory lapse is no doubt traceable to the fact that actor has been absent for some time from this type of thesping. [Since premiere, Halliday has withdrawn from the play, his role being handled temporarily by understudy Richard Barbee who took over satisfactorily at short notice.]

Barbara Leeds plays the daughter in capital fashion. It's a dull, colorless character, and she gives considerable talent to the task. Opposite her, Peter Cookson lends a pleasing personality as the fortune-hunter. Registering with good performances are Louise Prussing, as the doctor's sister-housekeeper; Ivy Troutman, another sister; Betty Linley, a widow; Fiona O'Shiel, family maid, and Joy Page and William Corrigan, youthful couple.

Scripting of this opus, in the transition from the Henry James novel, is well done within limitations. Dialog is smooth, and general writing reflects the austerity of background. Similar comment applies to staging.

Setting of an 1847 Washington Square front parlor and staircase is ace workmanship. Costumes rate mention for their color and aid in appearance. Bone.

ART B.R. Dented

classics but will not have the same problem, scheduling the first play ("The Importance of Being Earnest") for eight weeks.

The N. Y. Herald Tribune editorially regretted the failure of ART last Friday (24). Stated that Vic is theoretically backed by the British government but has been supporting itself since inception. ART is headed by Eva Le Gallienne, Margaret Webster and Cheryl Crawford and they will continue to be associated in the project. Miss Crawford however is producing "Brigadoon," a musical as a solo venture.

Le Gallienne Pleads for Aid

After the performance of "John Gabriel Borkman" Wednesday (22), Eva Le Gallienne made a plea in behalf of the American Repertory Theatre. She admitted that the ART was in financial difficulty and asked the audience to translate their applause into positive word-of-mouth comment. Actress pointed out that the ART was a unique, non-profit artistic venture which made possible the production of such rare plays as "Borkman" and "Henry VIII." The U. S., she said, was the only civilized country in the world without an established repertory theatre which could stage the great classics.

Meanwhile, a group of topranking Broadway actors is organized into a committee to aid the ART through fund-raising and publicity drives. Committee is headed by Helen Hayes, Elliott Nugent, Jose Ferrer, Mady Christians, Aline MacMahon, Sam Jaffe, Philip Loeb and Raymond Massey.

Yesterday (Tues.) Equity took unprecedented step of contributing $5,000 to help the ART, giving sum through ANTA.

'Inn' Set for Ireland

Dublin, Jan. 23.

First rights for out-of-London production of Joan Temple's "No Room At The Inn" have been secured by Illsley-McCabe Productions who will stage it in Cork next month with Nina Harvey and J. H. Edwin in the lead. Dublin production will follow in March.

"Grand National Night" and Frank Carney's Abbey record-breaker, "The Righteous Are Bold," are also on Illsley-McCabe Cork season schedule.

Ellerbe Megs 'Yours'

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Harry Ellerbe draws the director chore on Jimmy Elliott's forthcoming legit production, "Accidentally Yours." His last directing job was on "The Hasty Heart" for Lewis and Young.

Play will co-star Billie Burke and Grant Mitchell, with rehearsals starting Feb. 17.

POLONSKY PEDDLES PLAY

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Abraham Polonsky, currently working on the "Body and Soul" script at Enterprise, sold his new legit play, "Piece de Resistance," to Harold Clurman.

Piece is slated for early production on Broadway, with Clurman directing.

British Rep. Tours Italy

Rome, Jan. 20.

Sponsored by the British Council, and guest of the Italian government, the British Arts Theatre Co. headed by Alec Clunes and Fay Compton is currently touring key Italian cities with a repertoire including 'Hamlet,' 'Othello' and "Candida."

Academic interpretation given by the English company favorably impressed Italian critics. Troupe received an enthusiastic welcome and drew strong business when it opened at the Teatro Quirino here.

Play on Broadway

Sweethearts

Paula Stone and Michael Sloane production of Victor Herbert operetta in two acts. Stars Bobby Clark; features June Knight, Marjorie Gateson, Gloria Story, Mark Dawson, Robert Shackleton, Paul Best, Anthony Kemble-Cooper. Original book by Harry S. Smith and Fred DeGresac, with book revisions by John Cecil Holm. Lyrics by Robert B. Smith. Staged by John Kennedy; ensembles by Catherine Littlefield; choreography by Theodore Adolphus. It looks like the Paula Stone-Victor Herbert collaboration is going to pay off in boxoffice dividends again. With "The Red Mill" closing Saturday night (25) after a long and lucrative Broadway semester, Miss Stone, this time in association with husband Michael Sloane, has now turned to a revival of "Sweethearts," and the way Bobby Clark cavorts, prances and gambols over the stage of the Shubert theatre, is enough to make one forget that "Sweethearts," taken as a straight dose, is one of the tougher chestnuts of the old operetta school.

Thanks, however, to Clark and the liberties John Cecil Holm has taken with the original book by Harry B. Smith and Fred De Gresac, "Sweethearts" in its 1947 version is for the greater part of the evening good fun. That's because Clark, running the gamut in wardobe creations and romping through one of his fattest roles in a long career as one of America's ace comedians, is on stage most of the time, kidding the pants off the traditional operetta format. And when Clark's on stage, nothing else matters, for in "Sweethearts" he's at his peak.

Such refreshing entertainment items as the strictly modern Catherine Littlefield dance ensemble that's as far removed from the original "Sweethearts" conception as "Oklahoma"; Theodore Adolphus' choreography; June Knight's engaging qualities when she's not hemmed in by a too-close adherence to the original book; the assorted Holm hypoes and above all the madcap Clarkisms—these are the things that make one wish that the producers had kicked the whole "Sweethearts" idea out of the window and started from scratch. At least for more than half of the show, when the stilted Zilinia saga is subjected to delightful travesty, they did give it the heave-ho, with the woefully boring romantic episodes serving merely as a springboard.

And it's what Clark does to the "Pilgrims of Love" sextet, his zany contrib to "Jeanette and Her Little Wooden Shoes," or his comic rendition of "Pretty As a Picture" that makes one forget that the Herbert score, bereft of the satirical overtones, would also be pretty tough to take.

For the most part, the rest of the cast, weighed down by the Graustarkian dress uniforms and whiskered-bedecked business that's strictly a hangover from another generation, go through the motions of carrying the thing along until the next Clark entrance.

If there's any evidence needed that Clark belongs with the master comics of his age, here is the clincher. Rose.

Chicago Biz Holds to Steady Gait; 'Lute' 13G in 5, 'Yankee' 17G, 'Pyg' 22G

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Balmy weather and plenty of conventioneers kept the seats pretty well filled here last week. Biz seems to be rolling along at gait even though the SRO signs may be gathering a little dust.

"Pygmalion" broke out in capacity most of last week here, while "Magnificent Yankee," in the initial frame, didn't fare as well. Return of "Lute Song" looks like a good bet with first week's tickets at a premium. "Springtime for Henry" followed "Pygmalion" into the Selwyn Sunday (26).

Estimates for Last Week

"Harvey," Harris (25th week) (1,000; $3.60.) Remains as steady as any of them; $20,000.

"Lute Song," Studebaker (1,246; $4.20). Opened Wednesday (22). Crix overboard; five performances yielded $13,000.

"Magnificent Yankee," Erlanger (1,334; $3.60). Opened Monday (20). Could do better than the $17,000 grossed.

"Pygmalion," Selwyn (8th wk) (1,000; $4.20). Last week the best with $23,000. Closed Saturday (25).

"Song of Norway," Shubert (8th week) (2,100; $4.80). Everything looks good; $36,000.

"Student Prince," Blackstone (2d week) (1,358; $4.20). Doing a lot of school biz; $23,000.

'SURRATT' 12G IN L.A., 'BLACKOUTS' HITS 17G

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Business has been split this past week with two houses doing good business and two taking it slightly on the chin. Ken Murray's "Blackouts of 1947" romped through the 240th week at El Capitan with $17,000 in the take. "The Story of Mary Surratt" bowed into the Biltmore as a Theatre Guild subscription play and got split notices along with a poor $12,000.

"She Dood It In Dixie" collected slightly over $10,000 for the fourth frame at the Belasco. El Patio's second and final week of "The Mikado" did a bad $5,000. "Shared Wife" silently died at the Musart at the end of its third week with about $7,000 for the stand.

'Henry' $4,700 in 4, Toledo; 'Menagerie' $4,500 in Four

Toledo, Jan. 28.

Pauline Lord in "Glass Menagerie" at Town Hall, Toledo, for four performances, Jan. 20-22, grossed a pleasing $4,500, while Edward Everett Horton, Jan. 23-25, in "Springtime for Henry," four shows, brought in $4,700, for a very good week at this legit house.

"Dear Ruth," which opened the house, formerly a burlesque stand, in fall of 1945, will return for four days, Feb. 9-12.

'Eagle' Big 21G, Balto

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

Tallulah Bankhead in "The Eagle Has Two Heads" mopped up at Ford's here this week, mounting a big $21,000.

In currently is "The Red Mill" with plenty of advance action indicating a rosy figure.

'MILL' 42G, HARTFORD

Hartford, Jan. 28.

Hefty $42,000 was grossed by the "Red Mill" at the Bushnell Memorial in a six-day (eight performance) stand here last week.

Odette Myrtil, out with a throat condition, has returned to cast. Had been replaced by Martha Errolle.

'VOICE' 15G, BUFFALO

Buffalo, Jan. 28.

In its second Buffalo showing, "Voice of the Turtle" at the Erlanger chalked up a sizable marker of nearly $15,000 for a six-day stanza last week.

Top was $3.

"Washington Square" — Colonial, Bost. (27-1).

'Wash. Sq.' 6G in N. H.

New Haven, Jan. 28.

Breakin of "Washington Square" at Shubert last weekend (23-25) fared only so-so from both critical and b.o. angles. At $3.60 top, four shows brought an approximate $6,000.

Current week has another tryout, with "Carrot and Club" doing a last half (30-1). Next week gets preem of "Brigadoon" (6-8).

Wolfit $15,800 at $2.50 Top in 1st Toronto Week

Toronto, Jan. 28.

Donald Wolfit and his London Shakespearean company, first British troupe to visit Canada since 1939, scored a fine $15,800 at the Royal Alexandra (1,525). Scaled at a light $2.50 top, company repertoried in "Hamlet," "King Lear," "As You Like it" and "The Merchant of Venice," with mostly sellouts. "Hamlet" dented week's business because of number of previous interpretations, last being Maurice Evans' in this play.

Wolfit has had a tremendous press and his two nights' performance of "Volpone"—Monday and Tuesday—will be sellouts for this first professional performance of the Ben Jonson comedy in Canada. He repeats his four Shakespearean plays this week, with both Saturday performances already sold out.

'John' $11,000, 'Apt. 17-B' 10G, 'Sons' 7G, Hub

Boston, Jan. 28.

Two openers last week, both good b.o. stuff, and both looking like profitable entries. Neither got universal acclaim on basis of being overly light fare, but seem capable of holding own. "All My Sons," second and final at the Colonial, didn't catch on as expected, but "Call Me Mister" remained big at the Shubert. San Carlo, in for a week at the Opera House, did fine.

"All My Sons" caught a stiff blast from Hearst paper columnist as a "communistic" piece of work along the lines of the Group Theatre and Federal Theatre projects, which the columnist labelled as "horrors." Show points a finger at irresponsible manufacturers who turned out inferior war materials, but it took Hearst to figure out this was a "red" party line. Play got rave notices here, but unrelieved seriousness of theme and closeness to war figured cutting in on its biz.

"Washington Square" opened last night (27) at the Colonial, and Jooss Ballet at the Copley same night. "Miss Julie" follows at the Plymouth Feb. 3 with "Darling, Darling, Darling" at the Wilbur and "Up in Central Park" at the Opera House same night.

Estimates for Last Week

"All My Sons," Colonial (1,500; $3.60). Second and final week failed to gain over offish first week despite crix enthusiasm; war theme mostly blamed. Resulting estimated $7,000, nsh.

"Apartment 17-B" Wilbur (1,200; $3.60). Seven performances resulted in fair estimated $10,000. Show, touched here and there by censors, got reasonably cordial notices from crix, who figured it pretty light but funny. Title now "It Takes Two."

"Call Me Mister," Shubert (1,590; $4.80). Sixth week still plenty good estimated $32,000, terrif for so long a stand.

"John Loves Mary," Plymouth (1,200; $3.60). Fair draw here following hefty boost from crix and word-of-mouth, with estimated $11,000 on eight performances.

San Carlo Opera, Opera House (3,200; $3.60). Eight performances went to estimated $30,000, which is real biz for this regular visitor.

'Hamlet' $28,000, Frisco; 'Anna Lucasta' $16,000

San Francisco, Jan. 28.

"Hamlet," starring Maurice Evans, concluded the third and final week of its run at the 1,776-seat Curran with a great $28,000. Mae West opens for a twelve-day run in "Come On Up" today (Tues.).

"Anna Lucasta," which opened at the Geary last Tuesday (21) to rave reviews, chalked up an exciting first six times gross of $16,000.

'Apple' Rosy 22G, St. Loo

St. Louis, Jan. 28.

With blessings from the crix, "Apple of His Eye," with Walter Huston in the top role, closed a profitable one-week stand at the American Saturday (25). The 1,700-seater house was scaled to $3.66 and eight performances grossed an estimated $22,000.

"Born Yesterday" opened a two-week stand last night (Monday), also scaled to $3.66.

'Blossom Time' 19G, D.C.

Washington, Jan. 28.

"Blossom Time" hurdled booking troubles and boycotts resulting from hot race controversy, and rang up a neat $19,000 at the National. Holds for second stanza, with b.o. prospects bright.

"Glass Menagerie," under ATS sponsorship, moves in Feb. 3.

Good Biz Continues Along Broadway; 'Rainbow' 42G, 'Street' 41½G Runners-Up to 'Annie'; 'Sweethearts' 25½G, 7

Excellent business continues along Broadway, with indications that the better attractions will register sturdy grosses through the winter. Some that have been largely supported by theatre parties, however, appear doubtful of sticking into spring. Weather was much better last week and after one frigid day, temperatures moderated and a mild weekend helped. Sunday business for most shows playing then was exceptionally strong.

Only one entrant into the list last week when a revival of "Sweethearts" bowed in to mixed notices but the reviewers went to town for Bobby Clark, the Victor Herbert musical's star. "Lovely Me" was an added casualty last Saturday and closing notice for "Little A" went up Monday (27).

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), M (Musical), O (Operetta).

"All My Sons," Coronet (D-1,095; $4.80). Presented by Clurman, Kazan and Fried in association with Herbert H. Harris; written by Arthur Miller; drama well regarded out of town; opens tonight (29).

"Annie Get Your Gun," Imperial (37th week) (M-1,427; $6.60). One musical less likely than any other to be affected by new tuners; close to $45,500 right along.

"Another Part of the Forest," Fulton (10th week) (D-968; $4.80). Substantial winner that should play into warm weather; drama approximated $20,500 last week.

"Beggar's Holiday," Broadway (5th week) (M-1,900; $4.80). Has been doing well and expected to climb; estimated around $33,000; among three of newer musicals to get attention.

"Born Yesterday," Lyceum (52d week) (C-993; $4.80). With year's run registered there's no sign that capacity pace will not continue through season; $21,000.

"Call Me Mister," National (41st week) (R-1,104; $6). Most successful revue in years with GI nature of performance a factor and takings nearly $33,000.

"Carousel," Majestic (93d week) (M-1,667; $6). Long-stayer still flourishing in big house and while advance sale is not large the gross is plenty okay; nearly $32,500.

"Christopher Blake," Music Box (8th week) (D-979; $4.80). Costly drama has been faring very well but eased to $17,500 last week.

"Finian's Rainbow," 46th Street (3d week) (M-1,319; $6). New sock musical around $42,000; is runner-up to "Annie Get Your Gun," which is leading grosser.

"Happy Birthday," Broadhurst (13th week) (CD-1,160; $4.80). One of the most popular of season's straight attractions and runner-up to "Joan of Lorraine" in that division; nearly $30,500.

"Harvey," 48th St. (117th week) (C-920; $4.20). Popularity of this stayer among visitors is indicated by the virtual capacity business week after week; over $18,500.

"Iceman," Center (32d week) (R-2,994; $2.40). Gets its share of business regardless of occasional opposition; rated around $30,000 again last week.

"Joan of Lorraine," Alvin (10th week) (D-1,331; $4.80). Heads the dramas without question, with the limit of standees always present; over $32,500.

"Life With Father," Bijou (373d week) (C-613; $3.60). Slightly better at $8,500; run leader is aimed into another summer.

"Little A," Miller (D-940; $4.20). Final and third week, although management sought another theatre; rated around $5,500; "The Story of Mary Surratt" due to follow Friday (7) of next week.

"Lovely Me," Coronet. Forced to close because of previous booking ("All My Sons"); business improved to $12,000.

"O Mistress Mine," Empire (CD-1,082; $4.80). Ruth Draper now playing nights and two matinees as stopgap while "Mistress" is suspended; latter due to relight Feb. 10; played 42 weeks until Alfred Lunt was taken ill.

"Oklahoma!" St. James (205th week) (M-1,509; $4.80). Longest-run musical is still getting highly profitable business, with takings last week up, to $27,000.

"Present Laughter," Plymouth (13th week) (M-1,063; $4.80). One of the shows that benefited from flock of theatre parties; none last week but okay $16,000.

"State of the Union," Hudson (63d week) (CD-1,057; $4.80). Back to capacity attendance, although not much affected at any time; $24,500 quoted.

"Street Scene," Adelphi (3d week) (M-1,434; $6). Musical surprise of the season; after discouraging showing out of town was hailed here, virtual capacity takings going to $41,000.

"The Fatal Weakness," Royale (10th week) (CD-1,025; $4.80). Another show that had theatre party support and continues to register big grosses; around $18,500 last week.

"The Iceman Cometh," Beck (16th week) (D-1,213; $5.40). Now has fairly good advance sale but attendance has eased off somewhat, with last week estimated at $18,000.

"The Voice of the Turtle," Morosco (147th week) (C-939; $3.60). Picked up to some degree last week when the gross approximated $9,500.

"Toplitzky of Notre Dame," Century (5th week) (M-1,712; $4.80). With Donald Wolfit in Shakespeare repertory slated here, musical plans moving to smaller house; fairly good at $22,500.

"Years Ago," Mansfield (8th week) (C-1,001; $4.80). Excellent grosses weekly since opening and takings recently spurted; around $25,000.

REVIVALS

"Bloomer Girl," City Center (3d week) (M-2,693; $2.40). Repeat date for musical that scored strongly on Broadway originally and on road; $24,000 estimated.

"Burlesque," Belasco (5th week) (C-1,077; $4.80). Again registered takings around $20,000; very big in this house and should play through season.

"Henry VIII," "What Every Woman Knows," "John Gabriel Borkman," and "Androcles and the Lion," International (12th week) (1,172; $4.20). Picked up to around $17,000 with four performances of "Androcles" but hardly an even break because of operating nut.

"Lady Windermere's Fan," Cort (15th week) (C-1,064; $4.20). Aimed into warm weather; Coast-made revival commands excellent business; close to $21,000.

"Cyrano de Bergerac," Barrymore (16th week) (CD-1,096; $4.80). Making goodly stay for revival and takings are substantial; around $17,500.

"Sweethearts," Shubert (1st week) (M-1,382; $4.80). Drew divided notices but expected to fare very well; it got $25,500 in first seven times.

'Park' 30G, Philly, 'Lucasta' $18,000, Bergner $9,000

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.

Philly's legit biz was spotty last week, varying all the way from the smash variety to the complete floppo. Former was represented by "Up in Central Park," which started off a two weeks' return engagement in the city with a potent $30,500 for the first session at the Shubert. The big musical seemed to start where it left off during its tryout two seasons ago.

Last week's other neat figure was turned in by "Anna Lucasta" in its fifth week at the Locust, with $18,000 gross. "Lucasta" is now certain to complete 10 weeks here whereas six had been the original estimate.

Elisabeth Bergner's double-bill of European classics, August Strindberg's "Miss Julie" and Anton Chekhov's "The Proposal" got some trade on the strength of the star's name but the notices weren't glowing and when local playgoers found out nature of offerings, sale dropped to next-to-nothing. Management claimed about $9,000 on seven performances and that may be a generous estimate.

Week's fourth and last show did a dismal $3,300. That was the comedy tryout, "Best of Spirits," which opened Tuesday night at the Walnut and closed there Saturday instead of completing a second week. Notices didn't help although second-stringers (Bergner got the regulars) weren't too unkind. Odd feature was that audiences such as they were during last half of week generally raved about show.

This week's only opening is "A Flag Is Born" which bows tonight (28) instead of last night as first skedded. Propaganda play is at the Erlanger for two weeks. Sale is fair.

'Born' Boff 24G, Pitt

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

"Born Yesterday" wound up smash engagement last week at Nixon with nearly $24,000 doing better by over a grand on closing session than it did during first. Run resulted in close to $45,000, very big for show which doesn't have too much of a nut. Top for local engagement was $3.

Nixon currently has "Eagle Has Two Heads." Tallulah Bankhead show opening to big advance sale, and then gets "Voice of the Turtle" for a fortnight.

Canada Likes B'way Columns

New high mark of interest in Broadway figures by Canadian newspaper readers is pointed up in the splurge of N. Y. columnists now hitting Canadian sheets.

Since the beginning of the year, eight newspapers have signed up with The Bell Syndicate to run Billy Rose's "Pitching Horseshoes" column, and more are planning to come into the fold once they see how readers on the other sheets take to it.

Rose's column is planted in papers right across the country. Cost for the bigger sheets using it, like the Montreal Gazette and Toronto Glove and Mail runs to about $35 weekly, for five columns per week.

Former U. S. columnists hitting the Canadian papers were restricted to Washington and political commentators like Marquis Childs, Drew Pearson and Walter Lippman and Hollywood writers, like Sheilah Graham and Erskine Johnson. Now Canadian interest in U. S. seems to include heavy interest in the N. Y. scene with columnists Earl Wilson and Leonard Lyons also being syndicated in Canada.

"Forever" Hub-Bub

Hub judge, hearing censorship case on "Forever Amber," forever banned from the sacred precinct of Boston, took under advisement this week a motion by Attorney General Barnes to bring Kathleen Winsor to Boston for a personal questioning by the court.

Asst. Attorney General George Rowell, representing Barnes at the hearing, said his purpose was to determine whether the author thought her book had any claims to literary merit, culture or historical background. The court held that, since Miss Winsor is not a party to the equity proceedings, she couldn't be called, but Rowell said he thought she could be compelled to testify under New York law.

Harold Williams, special counsel for Macmillan, publishers of the book, said it was okay with him, but he couldn't see what the author could add to the situation.

Philly Strike Stalemated

No progress toward a settlement of the strike of the Philadelphia Record and the Camden Courier-Post newspapers was made at a negotiation meeting Friday (24) in the offices of the United States Conciliation Service. However, another meeting was scheduled for Feb. 5.

Publisher J. David Stern said in a statement, "We are not going to negotiate a new contract on the basis of any contract we have had before." Gilbert J. Krause, general counsel for the Stern papers, told the striking members of the American Newspaper Guild, "We are not prepared to give you a better offer."

Among those at the meeting were Concilliator G. Harry Young, Arthur Pierce, the Guild's president-elect, and David Stern III, publisher of the Camden papers.

Metrophobia Fatal

Music critic on a Los Angeles daily is now at leisure, following a burst of vocal criticism aimed at the powers behind the Metropolitan Opera move to play in California. The scribe protested long and snootily against the importation of eastern songbirds, not knowing that her own publisher was one of the prime movers in the move.

During the interview, a N. Y. Times man lent an interested ear and wired the tidings to his home paper, which naturally landed in Los Angeles on the first bounce. The publisher is looking for a new opera critic, preferably one without Metropobia.

Salute's ex-GI Salute

In preparation for its first anniversary issue, to be dated April, Salute mag has circularized 250 people to help pick the ex-GI "who has best upheld the principles for which the war was fought." Winner was to be picked from among seven named by the mag, these being: Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Rep. Melvin Price, Harold Russell, Melvyn Douglas, Robert S. Allen, James Stewart, and John Kennedy.

Prophet Without Honor

Kurt von Schuschnigg's book on the last days of the first Republic of Austria, "Austrian Requiem," is technically banned in Austria. Schuschnigg, who was the last chancellor of Austria, wrote this book in exile. He's now living in Switzerland. Though there exists no censorship, it was possible to prevent the sale of it in Austria by refusing importers the necessary Swiss franc currency for the purchase of the books.

Bitter complaints are being made by various sides, claiming that the purchase of other books of much less importance has been allowed and that the import of Schuschnigg's book would not ruin the Austrian schilling, which is not worth much anyway.

AWA Elects Rupert Hughes

Rupert Hughes is the new president of the American Writers Assn., replacing Dr. John Erskine who resigned and was elected honorary president by the AWA's board of directors. Outfit was organized last July by a committee of authors opposed to the adoption of the American Authors Authority plan proposed by James M. Cain and the Screen Writers Guild in Hollywood.

CHATTER

Bob Becker, Chicago Tribune's outdoor editor, vacationing in Hollywood.

Felix Jager, Look's promotion manager, in Hollywood for the mag's award show, Feb. 4.

Art Carter was elected prexy of the Society of Motion Picture Press Photographers in Hollywood.

Jack Gossin checked out of Metro's flackery to write drama tidings for the Valley Times, in San Fernando Valley.

Special motion picture edition of the Nordhoff-Hall novel, "High Barbaree," will be published by Grosset & Dunlap.

Jack Berger, former city editor of the Los Angeles Herald-Express, moved to the Valley Times, San Fernando, as managing editor.

Another daily paper hit Tokyo streets when the Shin-Hochi, staffed mainly by former editors of the Hochi Shimbun, rolled off its first issue.

Arthur Reef, former managing editor Parade, resigned to join U. S. Military Govt. in Korea. He's slated to leave for the Far East early next month.

Ernest Borneman, head of foreign distribution for the National Film Board of Canada, has a series of articles in Harper's magazine under the title "The Jazz Cult." Series starts in the February issue.

June Truesdell's new book, "Be Still, My Love," purchased for filming by Hal Wallis, will be placed on the stands in September, with a condenser version in the June issue of Today's Woman mag.

Michael Blankfort, now with Walter Wanger studios working on a new Ingrid Bergman scenario from a story by Ernest Hemingway, has written a biography of Gen. Evans Carlson, "The Big Yankee," to be published by Little, Brown, March 3.

Jessyca Russell, former N. Y. editor of Magazine Digest, has resigned to form a new outfit, Promotion Gimmix Unlimited, promotion idea service for industrial firms. Miss Russell is also publishing a four-page semi-monthly information bulletin for authors, Writers Newsletter, which will come out March 1.

WPAR, Parkersburg, and WBLK, Clarksburg, W. Va., to the News Publishing Co., which publishes 13 of the 20 dailies in West Virginia. To avert a situation where the town's only paper would control the only radio station, FCC the very same day okayed a second station in Parkersburg to the Parkersburg Broadcasting Corp. (1230kc, 250 watts). In Clarksburg, the Ogden chain has no newspaper, and there are several other radio outlets. Durr did not dissent to the Parkersburg sale, but went on record in favor of an omnibus study of the effects of chain newspapers spreading their wings in radio.

In recent grants, FCC has shown growing disposition to be friendly to newspaper applicants and, in the absence of any ruling against it, has had to award newspapers in several southern towns the only radio station being asked for. In only two cases has FCC approved a sale which would give a newspaper control over the only radio facility, and both transfers were subject to the AVCO rules of competitive bidding.

In one case FCC okayed purchase of the only station in Bloomington, Ind., by the Daily Pantagraph, and an out-of-town owner sold a local station in Escanaba, Mich., to the publishers of the Escanaba newspaper. To satisfy FCC's concern over concentration of control in information media there, the majority stockholder in the Escanaba station agreed to resign from the newspaper and run the station independently.

These cases were distinguished from an earlier FCC approval of the purchase of WSRR, the only station in Stamford, Conn., by the local publisher, to which Durr dissented. The Stamford sale did not go through AVCO, and Durr argued that other parties were denied right to bid on the station.

Other newspaper permittees who went through FCC's mills with flying colors are Martin Andersen, publisher of the Orlando Daily News, who won out over a non-newspaper bidder in Orlando, which, FCC was happy to point out, has several other stations on the air. More recently, Jonathan Daniels' Raleigh News and Observer won a permit over a non-publisher.

FCC's policy in these cases is geared to the language of its opinion dismissing the newspaper-radio investigation in 1944. At that time, the commission said it "does not feel it should deny a license merely because the applicant is engaged or interested in a particular type of business." However, it does not intend, in granting licenses in the public interest, to permit concentration of control in the hands of the few to the exclusion of the many who may be equally qualified to render such public service."

It is the last sentence which Commissioner Durr believes obligates FCC from time to time to take stock of its licensing policies.

Adams, Newark

sound. His jokes come almost too fast, but are boff for results.

Other standard turn is Martez and Delita, boy-and-girl team who go through a handstand routine to Cuban jump tunes.

"Search for Talent," engineered by Ben Griefer, manager of the Adams, includes as stage turns 200 acts (six per performance) chosen from 3,000 applicants. Those caught at opening seemed to be fairly low-grade—an accordion band from a high school, a coloratura, a rural lad doing Spike Jones to offstage recording and the like. Bran.

Earle, Philly

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.

Katherine Dunham & Co. (10), Artie Dann, Jay Jostyn, the Del Martins; "That Brennan Girl" (Rep).

More interesting than entertaining is the current bill at the Earle. Layout headlines Jay Jostyn, radio's "Mr. District Attorney," and Katherine Dunham's dance troupe.

Jostyn does his brief turn against a backdrop symbolizing a big city and the scarlet characters who inhabit same. His offstage announcement over the mike is effective—the same patter buildup used on his air show. His personal appearance, however, satisfies customers curious to see what the radio D.A. looks like, but leaves a lot to be desired from an entertainment standpoint.

Jostyn's tour de force is a monolog. He holds a revolver in one hand and gives a high-sounding sermon to the effect that unless GI Joe gets a break in the postwar world, he'll take to crime, and "the fingerprints of all of us will be on the gun."

Miss Dunham likewise misses the entertainment bus, although her production numbers please the eye, being colorful and interesting. But her dancers contrib too much highfalutin' business for vaude audiences. After all, the Earle isn't the Academy of Music.

Her ensemble presents four numbers. These are "Raratonga," which might be South Seas or West Indies stuff; "Rhumba Jive," featuring two men and a gal dancer; Miss Dunham and a male partner in "The Blue," and the windup number, "The Lady With a Cigar."

A bright spot is Artie Dann, comic with a nose like Durante, and who, naturally, does an imitation of the Big Beak. Dann is a clever storyteller, particularly when he pokes fun at his probocsis.

The Del Martins, two men and a dark-haired gal looker in ballroom attire, please with balancing feats. Shal.

Apollo, N. Y.

Sy Oliver Orch (16) with Billy Kyles, Prince Nyoka, Lamar Ragan; Jackie Mabley, Ravens (4), Spider Bruce & Hannah Taylor, Bob & Al; "Jealousy" (Rep).

Apollo took a gamble on a couple of "one-to-fill" acts for this week's Sy Oliver bill and, for a change, came out winner. Booked into the Harlem vaude house were two virtually unknown stanzas, the Ravens vocal quartet and Bob and Al, a dance team. Former proved one of the surprise hits in recent months, while latter were less than sensational. Both reviewed in New Acts.

Oliver's new aggregaion shows more finesse than this house usually sees in its band bookings. Results showed that it's not necessary to blow the roof off the Apollo to get over, since the well-arranged and relatively light tunes brought great returns. Band opens with a tricky "Deep River," spotting a tenor solo in the ride slot. Next is called "Four to Go," with the rhythm section of guitar, piano, bass and drums.

Bob and Al bridge between another band number, latter being a medley of oldies. Tram section does a chorus of "All Alone" over reed backing segueing into "See You in My Dreams" with a quintet from the various sections chirping. Sock closer has entire band in glee club arrangement of "My Buddy" for plenty of mitting. This outfit is good anywhere. Blackout follows with Spider Bruce and Hannah Taylor. Band does a fair boogie piece.

Ravens are next to closing, preceeding Jackie Mabley. Latter is well beyond middle age and her act isn't new, but has the subtle humor of voice intonation that hits the funnybone in this house. Her lazy chatter and special ditties, plus the old rag costume get hefty laughs, and the tap closer in a pair of old bedroom slippers fill out the bill plenty satisfactory. Tomm.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Dough Re Me, Cal., Jan. 26.

When saloon reporters begin holding press conferences I suppose you could say the atomic era is well under way. Earl Wilson just held such a conference at the Marquis (nee Falaise) in Hollywood. The barroom Boswell sent out embossed invitations with "R.S.V.P." as a sign-off. It stood for "Resident Soaks Vacating Premises." Some old geezer, who was selling hair tonic instead of soutiens gorges, grabbed l'addition from M. Wilson.

Everybody was there, and considering the snugness of the brasserie, even the town's nobodies would have made the party seem SRO. Sid Skolsky was reporting in for Louis Sobol, who had neglected to wear a toupee and didn't want to show up merely in his horn-rimmed glasses.

As for M. Wilson, I had never met the gent, as distinguished from his journalism, until he cut himself, in a businesslike way (and a businesslike blue serge suit) into the picture version of "Copacabana," after a New York nightclub of the same name.

Wilson was standing in front of a dressing room at the Goldwyn studios, where "Copacabana" is being shot. On a step to the dressing room stood little Louis Sobol and below him (but still above him, if you get what I mean) stood six beautiful feet of Chili Williams.

On the door of the dressing room the names of Abel Green and Earl Wilson stood out in bold relief, Sobol's in very small type. On the other hand, Miss Williams' attentions were expected to raise his crushed ego. Sobol was directed to rest his inferiority complex against her lacquered blonde coiffeur.

Wilson looked on all this with a stony grimace (Stein Makeup No. 5, Juvenile) and Green opined the whole fantasy would set pictures back to Daguerre. No one remembered avant da Guerre, although Sobol once thought he saw him at the end of Memory Lane, in the company of Lola.

After more of this stunting in still photography, the group of beauty and some beasts went off arm-in-arm to Stage 2 to share in a rolling shot of Carmen Miranda singing a French oo-la-la number. She encircled the table at which Messrs. Green, Sobol and Wilson and their girl friends sat sipping.

Pulaski and the Beast

Up to this moment it looked as if the whole thing would have to be reshot, with Jack Pulaski dubbing for Messrs. Green, Sobol and Wilson in order to give some degree of pulchritude to the proceedings, but then Director Al Green (no relation) remembered what he had done in matching Larry Parks and Jolie in "The Jolson Story," so he matched Miranda's cabana with a song. Her figger was stuffed into a form-fitting flesh-colored piece of crepe de chine. Over this was hung a huge wreath of huge paper flowers that made her look like a filly which had just won the Santa Anita Handicap from three galloping geldings. It was quite an effective play at injecting s.a. into an otherwise restful scene, but the anonymous mugg who voted against hip-weaving on page 34 of the anniversary number of VARIETY may not like it, because Miss Miranda's singing was accompanied by beaucoup de bumps.

I thought Sobol fared best in makeup, but people who knew Wilson in the flesh tell me that Wilson got by far the best of a flattering deal.

The men had stand-ins, and because it is so hard to find males in California under 5 ft. 10 in., schoolgirls in slacks were used. There's a scientific explanation for this. The smog, fog, sun and sulphuric acid kill off all weak males in childhood. The rest grow to be giants.

Ordinarily the knowledge of a thing like this (having teenagers as stand-ins) could blight a man for life, and, before Freud, actually did. Naturally these happily married wolves in and out of their Uptown Forties think of themselves as mighty manly fellows, but when flatchested schoolgirls in dungarees are used as their stand-ins, it's not good.

Whether this was the work of Al Green, the director, who went around with a carnation (a flower, not a can of milk) in his buttonhole, a cigar in his mouth and a hat on his head, I can't say. I don't know why he wears a hat. He doesn't croon, and he has a bale of hair which looks suspiciously like his own. But after "The Jolson Story" you can't be sure that anything is real.

Indeed, Leonard L. Levinson, VARIETY Mugg Emeritus, a member of the cognoscenti (now growing a beard to prove it), told me that the set didn't look like anything he'd ever seen around the Copacabana. Another gent said it represented one of the rooms upstairs. Cognoscenti L.L.L. admitted he had never been to the powder room.

George Jessel, Skolsky and some others who wear junior sizes, looked in to see how the muggs in makeup were taking it, but I don't think they caught the columnists and their stand-ins together.

Groucho Takes a Powder

Groucho Marx, acknowledged star of "Copacabana," wasn't around at all during the filming of the press. Grouch has a pretty sharp tongue, and he knew these boys had pretty sharp pencils. He was not giving them a piece of his mind, only to discover later that they had rewritten the scene appropriating unto themselves his dialog and even his gestures. At any rate, Groucho felt that the boys should go to Canada until the whole thing blew over.

Being partisans of a free press, they certainly would not stop at quoting Grouch—insofar, of course, as he is quotable. Only the day before, Wilson referred to J. Atwater Kent as "an old geezer," and everybody knows how pointed his prose has become in matters concerning certain mammalary glands. In fact, his candor in this regard is sure to win him the Anatomy Award of 1946.

Just what these three threshold thespians expect to get out of playing their character parts in character, beyond so much per day and expenses, I don't know. Their notices, good or bad, can hardly be used to make cartridge cartons any longer, since there is a marked decline in scrap paper drives recently.

That they can ever square themselves with their wives by handing all the money over, I doubt. These are women of character, not the sort to take lightly the sight of good, or even bad, looking numbers necking their Notebook Nathans, merely because the show must go on.

Even I, a husband with a will of iron and a macaroni constitution, can't explain away photographs from down memory lane of some dame kissing me. My usual savoir faire simply won't do, so I know these poor wights are in for it when those stills marked "For Immediate Release" actually begin going the rounds. By then the money will have been spent by their wives and forgotten by same, and all the boys will have will be memories, and Sobol has an exclusive on those.
